ALLIES REPEL TWO NAZI THRUSTS AT BEACHHEAD

Germans Using Radio-Controlled Tanks in Assaults

Loaded With 1,000-Lb. Charges—Allies Explode 14 Within Nazi Lines

ATTACK STRONGER

By RICHARD G. MASSOCK
Associated Press War Correspondent

Naples, March 1—(AP)—German troops, armed with a new "secret weapon" tank loaded with explosives, have struck in force at the Allied beachhead, and Allied headquarters said this may be a third great offensive aimed at driving the invasion troops into the sea.

The Nazis opened a heavy attack midway between Carroceto and Cisterna Tuesday morning, and this was growing stronger.

Artillery duels thundered, and front dispatches Tuesday night said the enemy pounded the beachhead with the heaviest bombardment since the eastern front battles.

Headquarters disclosed the Germans had used new radio-controlled tanks, bearing 1,000-pound charges and designed to blast open within Allied lines, in their second major offensive against the beachhead. One such artillery explosion of 14 of them before they reached the Allied line. The blasts reportedly caused great damage to Nazi positions themselves.

The Germans struck at the beachhead at two points Monday morning and Tuesday night and continued to "exert pressure" without result, headquarters said.

There were no details on the counter-attack against the dent in the beachhead between Carroceto and Cisterna, but it is developing into a major offensive, it would be the third attempt yet to cut the strongly-held Allied sector.

Allied artillery and bombers lashed into the enemy lines and the hammering Nazi troops and tanks massed in the Cisterna area.

Seeking Soft Spot

The Germans were probing the beachhead lines, apparently seeking a soft spot, and Nazi tanks appeared in increasing numbers.

Artillery and mortars broke up a small but determined attack on British positions in the Ravine-cut Mediola area southwest of Carroceto, where close fighting continued.

This was the third attack thrust in three days of skirmishing in which four Nazi tanks were knocked out.

A British company on patrol captured prisoners in this area.

The Germans heavily shelled American positions southwest of Carroceto Monday night, and then two enemy patrols pressed forward, but were thrown back. Allied shells scored hits on what seemed to be two enemy ammunition dumps.

Artillery also repulsed a German patrol in the coastal area along the northern part of the Allied head.

The beachhead battle was developing in cloudy weather with showers.

On the main Cassino front to the southeast, British troops pushed back a German attack near Mount Ornito in the lower Garigliano river bend, and also turned back a mass-shelled German motor-borne troops on highway 6 near Cassino.

Along the Adriatic sector, 8th Army British troops pushed positions on a ridge south of Guardiagrele, and Allied patrols felt out the Sinello river line. Enemy guns were active.

Exploded by Remote Control.

An official announcement described the Nazi radio-controlled tank as having a low silhouette with a radio aerial for directing it and then explaining it is driven by remote control against a chosen target.

Used in the second offensive

Fierce Battles Rage on Frontier Say Marshal Tito

London, March 1 (AP)—Heavy fighting is raging along the frontier between Austria and Yugoslavia, where the Germans have launched a powerful offensive against Yugoslav Partisan forces, Marshal Josip Broz (Tito) announced today.

A communique from Tito's headquarters described a fierce battle in the Petrinja-Glina sector in Croatia, about 40 miles southeast of Zagreb.

The announcement added Allied bombers attacked German forces near Zagreb Feb. 26 in support of Partisan ground troops.

FORECASTS SURPLUS

Regina, March 1—(CP)—Premier W. J. Patterson, Provincial Treasurer, forecast a surplus for the current fiscal year ending April 30 in his budget speech Tuesday. He said "even greater" than the $546,000 surplus of the 1942-43 fiscal year when he delivered his 11th budget speech to the legislative assembly yesterday.

Mr. Patterson said that despite increased estimated expenditures for the next fiscal year there will be no new taxation levied.

MEAT RATIONING, MEATLESS TUES. LIFTED IN CANADA

Canned Salmon Also Has Been Removed From Ration List But Not Abundant

EFFECTIVE MIDNIGHT

By JAMES McCOOK —
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, March 1 — (CP) — Canadians today can buy all the meat they want following temporary suspension of the system of about two pounds a person a week in effect since last May. Meatless Tuesdays also are dropped for the time being.

Effective from last midnight, no ration coupons are needed for purchases. Canned salmon also has been removed from the ration list but it is not as abundant as meat.

The announcement was made last night by Douglas Abbott, Parliamentary Assistant to Finance Minister Ilsley, amid applause of members of the House of Commons.

He emphasized that rationing was being suspended temporarily. The action was made necessary by enlarged military liveships of production and shipping difficulties which prevented movement of sufficient meat to the United Kingdom.

Continue for Time.

The suspension will continue until "the congestion in both countries has been relieved and is cleared up," Mr. Abbott said. Answering questions, Mr. Abbott declined to be said he could give no idea how long that might be, but in his statement he noted that heavy livestock marketings are expected to continue for the next two or three months.

The Prices Board, as rationing authority, followed Mr. Abbott's statement by a notice that all machinery for meat rationing will be retained ready for prompt operation again as soon as the supply position requires.

Accordingly, all ration-book holders should keep meat coupons that have not expired and the meat trade is urged to retain coupons "after sale and other documents used in connection with meat rationing," said the board.

Not Limited by Quotas.

Meat slaughters with permits must continue observing provisions of a Prices Board Order covering the slaughtering and stamping of carcasses but temporarily they will not be limited by quotas and need not report to local Ration Boards as they have been required since slaughter for sale direct to any household consumer.

Mr. Abbott said the mere existence of surpluses would not be a sufficient reason for suspending rationing if the surpluses could be moved to the United Kingdom.

During the first eight weeks of 1944, compared with the same period of 1943, slaughtering of hogs, were up 80 per cent, cattle 50 per cent, calves 30 per cent, sheep and lambs 35 per cent. Packing plants have been able to handle this increased volume only with great difficulty.

...sery to Cold Storage.

More than 102,000,000 pounds of meat were in cold storage, almost twice as much as at the same time last year, and 65 per cent more than normal. There was no cold storage space to spare, and the government-seeking up due to unprecedentable demand for canned meat.

During the past eight weeks slaughterings have been at a record size, but any delay in shipments would cause a "very difficult situation."

"There are very real dangers of a backing up of supplies and equipment to a point where actual spoilage of meat might occur", said Mr. Abbott.

Belgian Banker Killed By Revolver Shots Says Berlin Radio

London, March 1 — (CP) — The Berlin radio said today Alexander Galopin, Belgian bank director and financier, died from revolver shots Monday. The broadcast did not say whether the action occurred. Galopin, 65, was a member of the Board of the Bank of International Settlements and of numerous commercial and indur rial companies.

Health Services to Cost Canadian Adults $12 Yr., Percentage of Income

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, March 1 — (CP) — Canada Health Services will cost Canadian adults $12 a year, or a percentage of income for those in the income-tax paying classes, under a revised Health Insurance plan submitted to the Commons Social Security Committee today by Pensions Minister Mackenzie.

Compared with the plan on which the committee worked last session, the new one provides a simpler financial structure, lower cost to contributors and a scheme Dominion Government assistance to the provinces which takes into account the unevenness of financial capacity in different provinces.

The charges also eliminate all contributions from employers and ceased the levy on married men.

The Health Bill submitted by the Social Security Committee last year called for contributions of $26 a year for all adults, with a plan for lower payments by certain persons of low incomes.

No Changes Were Original.

The new plan makes no change in the essential features of the original proposals for extensive medical, dental, hospital and drug services to all Canadians, regardless of which the provinces under provincial statutes and a Dominion enactment authorizing financial assistance in paying the services and also special grants for Public Health work, such as prenatal, infant, tuberculosis and mental illness facilities.

The flat contribution of $12 a year would be payable by every adult resident in a participating province over the age of 16 years. Thus, it is proposed that a person with no income would pay the flat contribution for them.

Previous to 1944.

The new draft also proposes the provinces make annual agreements with the Dominion for abatement of payments of this contribution in cases where unable to pay from the cost of such abatements will be borne by the provinces.

In addition to the flat contribution, single persons and incomes of not over $600 per year would pay three per cent of the income in excess of $300 and married persons with incomes of more than $1,-200 per year sent up to a maximum of $50.

Thus, the maximum payment for a man and wife with no adult dependents would be $62 a year, in addition to the income tax.

MOSQUITOS RAID WEST GERMANY WITHOUT LOSS

Attack Follows Heavy Daylight Assault on Brunswick and Pas-De-Calais Areas

EIGHT PLANES LOST

London, March 1. (CP)—R.A.F. Mosquito Bombers attacked objectives in Western Germany last night, an Air Ministry Communique announced today. The planes returned from their missions without loss, the communique added.

The overnight assault followed a heavy daylight attack by United States heavy bombers on the German seaport city of Brunswick and another American raid on the Pas-de-Calais area of France. These operations were carried out at a cost of one bombers and eight fighters.

It was the third assault in ten days on Brunswick and was a different story from the raid Jan. 11 when 60 heavy U.S. bombers were lost. At that time 152 of the bombers attacked the city and a battle with the bombers and escorting planes was on all day long. Yesterday the opposition was weak and only three German planes were shot down.

Weak Retaliatory Raid.

The Germans made a weak retaliatory attack on London last night and one raider was shot down.

The U.S. 8th Air Force attacks on Germany's Pas-de-Calais reminded out a month in which records after record for aerial warfare was established by Allied air fleets.

Yesterday's 2,000-plane R.A.F. Force carried out 19 missions against enemy airfields and other targets in northern France. At least 632 enemy aircraft were destroyed while 36 American fighters and 14 British fighters were lost. The bombers lost exceeds by far the previous record loss for the Americans set last November.

Blindered by Weather.

The R.A.F. was hindered by heavy weather last month but made seven heavy assaults, in company with R.C.A.F. squadrons, on a giant attack on Leipzig the night of Feb. 19, the record number of 79 planes—including 18 Canadian bombers—was lost in this send the month's debit total to 192.

Following up the night attack on Leipzig by 800 bombers, the air force hit the same city and other targets in the area and hammered the main planes in what was described as the most one-night aerial onslaught of the war.

Another aerial record was set up when the simultaneous smash on Regensburg, Feb. 25 by American bombers based in Britain and Italy.

Berlin Knows Out.

The American force participating in yesterday's assault were heavily protected by fighters but the heavy cost of the other blows against Brunswick and Pas-de-Calais and the destruction and knocked the back of German fighter defences since the start of the great combined assault against Nazi aircraft production.

Eight R.A.F. bombers were knocked out of the war by the R.A.F., Air Minister Sir Archibald Sinclair told the House of Commons yesterday.

Col. Duco Confers With Gen. Farrell In Buenos Aires

Leaves Regiment Camped 20 Miles Away, Does Not Move on Capital

NAVY'S DEMANDS

Montevideo, Uruguay, March 1 — (AP)— The Argentine Government announced today it had quelled a revolt by an army colonel and his 3rd infantry regiment, but its exact fate remained in doubt.

Gen. Edelmiro Farrell from the presidential palace in Buenos Aires in a palace coup engineered by the country's strongly nationalistic officials.

Lt.-Col. Tomas Duco, a close friend of Gen. Pedro Ramirez, who delegated his presidential powers to Farrell last Thursday, massed his 3rd infantry regiment on the outskirts of Buenos Aires, but did not move on the capital.

Instead, he visited the city himself on a government invitation for a conference with Farrell and War Minister Juan Peron, known as the man behind the throne in Argentina's turbulent politics.

The conference was held in the War Ministry.

Duco was arrested and held at headquarters of another regiment, a spokesman in Buenos Aires said this morning and his regiment was returning to its headquarters under command of officers loyal to Farrell's government.

Camped at Lomas de Zamora.

The regiment camped this morning at Lomas de Zamora, 20 miles from Buenos Aires. A Mad. Lloyd's heading sentry duty forces said "our commander left for the War Ministry, called by Farrell, who gave his word of honor he would release him after talking with him. As hostages, we are keeping here three colonels who came with the vice-president's (Farrell's) message. That is all. Now please disperse."

The newsman saw light artillery and several machine guns on both sides of the main avenue in Lomas de Zamora when the regiment was taken up combat positions.

Apparently the attempted revolt did not threaten the government's unit, but the Argentine navy has announced it has demanded that power be returned to Ramirez, who resigned supposedly because of ill health, or to the supreme court.

Strict Censorship Imposed.

Strict censorship is imposed in Buenos Aires.

A communique broadcast from Buenos Aires said:

"The head of the 3rd infantry division, Lt.-Col. Tomas A. Duco, acting in an inexplicable and unjustifiable manner, during the evening of Feb. 29 to raise some of the members of the garrison in rebellion.

"The officers and petty officers refused to follow him so he failed in his absurd purpose.

"Public tranquillity order reigns in the country. The news circulated by some broadcasters to the grou-ip regard to clashes between the armed forces and police in Buenos Aires in protest against the government which is solidly supported by the people, the army and the navy, which repudiates unanimously the attitude of the aforementioned chief, is absolutely false.

Investigation Begun.

"The Ministry of War has ordered the proper investigation made".

Last night's communique, issued in Buenos Aires followed close upon a day of tension during which elements of the Argentine Navy, long displeased with the chaos existing in the government, demanded either that Ramirez be permitted to resume his full presidential powers, or resign his power to the supreme court instead of to Farrell.

The navy leaders reported to be still before the Argentine ruling faction when Duco decided to march his troops from the arsenal to the capital.

Speculation on Action.

It appeared he acted either without the co-operation of the navy, or at least before the navy had completed its plans.

The navy had not shown any sign of activity by mid-morning.

The following picture was given of the hectic night in the political and military circles where several regiments were garrisoned:

Police chief Col. Filomeno Velazco arrived at the police department at 10:45 p.m. and 15 minutes later received Peron, who was closeted with Farrell and Duco until midnight.

Col. Peron left police headquarters at 11:10 p.m., refusing to make any statement, but at the same time the order mobilizing additional units was issued.

Warning to Newspapers.

When Velazco left headquarters at three a.m. today, he said, "tomorrow I will make a declaration on the events of tonight, but today all newspapers must abstain from publishing anything about which do will never appear again".

Peron has been carved out of his regular barracks on Caray Street, during the night, and is now living in downtown Buenos Aires at the home of Lomas de Zamora.

Meanwhile Peron went to headquarters of the 2nd division of the army inside Buenos Aires. There were also the commanders, but their import was not clear.

Police and military patrols were vigilant around military barracks and the docks.

Farrell assumed the executive post last Thursday night in a sudden move which apparently Perón interested here as a palace coup expected to be carried out by colonels' group headed by Gen. Juan Peron, who subsequently was installed as vice-president.

Ramirez, who is said still to have the support of the army, is authority to Farrell because of poor health, but there is no word as to whether arrangements ever since his government broke with the axis last Jan. 26.

Another report from Buenos Aires today said Gen. Arturo Rawson, who occupied the president's chair for 48 hours after the revolution which overthrew President Ramon Castillo last June, had been removed from command of troops and taken to the War Ministry, before which an artillery field gun was stationed.

Later Rawson was permitted to return to his home, this report said.

Forest Resources Commission Planned To Conserve Timber

Toronto, March 1 —(CP)—There is a real danger of a shortage of timber supplies in the province of Ontario, Premier Drew told the Ontario Legislature yesterday in opening speech debate. He outlined the government's plan to establish a forest resources commission to conserve the timber supply and "put cutting methods" would help to prevent lumbering communities from becoming ghost towns. He said, additional there was no reason why Ontario could not be as successful as Norway, Sweden and Finland in preserving and properly utilizing its forests.

The proposed commission would be non-political and would have full administrative powers, he said.

LIBERALS HOLD CAUCUS

Ottawa, March 1—(CP)—Liberal members of the House of Commons held their third party caucus of the session and the Prime Minister Mackenzie King said later there would be no announcement made following the meeting "very satisfactory."

Jet Propulsion Promises 100 More Miles an Hour for U.S. Planes

By ELTON C. FAY
Associated Press Staff Writer

Washington, March 1—(AP)—Jet propulsion promises to give United States fighting planes 100 miles an hour more speed, Capt. Ezra Kotcher of the U. S. Army Air Forces, in charge of jet propulsion for the official publication "Air Force," disclosed today.

Kotcher disclosed several points not contained in previous Army announcements concerning the new plane. The army has called it a "jet-propelled fighter," but Kotcher said it is less fighter, with high speed and long range, heavily armed and armored.

Kotcher reports the plane is in production "for training purposes," and that it begins to look as if it is ready for combat duty.

In talking of possible speeds, Kotcher said the standard, propeller-driven airplane begins to encounter "head winds" at about 45 miles an hour because at such speeds the tips of the propellers strike, and this compressibility is felt by the whole airplane. This is evidenced in the wings. There force, substitution of a jet propulsion unit eliminated the air drag created by the propeller.

Kotcher points for the two types of aircraft, Kotcher suggested that the future may only see the for the immediate future" of the "jet and propeller."

Reiterating that the plane is not a rocket plane, Kotcher describes it as a turbo-thermal engine.

The plane, he says, presents no new problem to a pilot "except how to fly a simpler airplane." Controls are standard and all instruments in the cockpit, files with twin engines and only one throttle to control both engines. Kotcher said the plane, with twin engines and tricycle landing gear, standard, and only one throttle to control both engines, that little space is needed for the swing of the propeller.

400 Nazis With General Killed As Greeks Led by Briton Derail Train

Cairo, March 1—(AP) — Greek patriots led by a British officer derailed a German troop train Feb. 22 near Mount Olympus, killing 400 men including a Nazi general, and members of his staff, it was reliably learned here today.

The train 11 cars plunged into the icy Pinios River when mines buried under a 300-yard stretch of track were exploded at night during a heavy snowstorm, it was said. The 400 men on 10 passenger coaches escaped. British reports said, but the general and a few survivors from the 11th, an armored car placed immediately behind the engine.

The patriots then attacked the armored car with automatic weapons, grenades and sticks of bombs. Many were killed. Of about 350 troops who were rushed to the scene, 150 were evacuated wounded, numbered by one British report at several hundred.

The train was on route from Athens to Berlin. It was learned in Cairo that several high army officers aboard were going to a conference.

Instructions were issued from Cairo for the carefully-planned attack.

Only three casualties were reported among the patriots. The name of the British officer who led the attack was not disclosed.

BRITAIN AGREES WITH RED TERMS OFFERED FINLAND

No Immediate Comment on Proposals as the Finnish Cabinet Meets

PRESS COMMENT

London, March 1. (CP)—It was reported in official circles here today that after consultation with Soviet authorities the British Government officials agreed to the peace terms submitted by Russia to Premier Ryti today.

To the question of whether Britain would still be at war with Finland if that country accepted the Russian terms, a reliable official source replied that under the terms of the Anglo-Soviet treaty a separate peace cannot be negotiated."

He explained that under the treaty one of the signatories cannot negotiate for peace without consulting the other. He added that Russian peace terms published thus far "jarred no foreign" stipulations rather than formal terms.

As a preliminary to any Russo-Finnish peace, Moscow has demanded, the Finns cease military operations at once and break relations with Germany, interning all German troops and ships in Finland, the Soviet aid if necessary.

The British press broadcast these armistice demands last night and said that if Finland accepted the conditions immediately the Soviet government is ready to open negotiations for a peace agreement" at once.

No Comments From Helsinki.

There was no immediate comment on the Russian proposals from official Helsinki. A Finnish Government held two secret sessions yesterday to debate the proposals for ending the bloodiest war with Russia. An official communique gave no indication a decision has been reached.

The British Press termed the Russian proposals "generous" and the Daily Mail said they "should be accepted without delay."

The Stockholm newspaper Morgon-Tidningen said the proposals "can very well be taken as a starting point for negotiations looking toward an armistice". The paper, which has close contacts with the Swedish Social Democratic Party, added: "Finland has been on record size, but any delay in shipments would cause a "very difficult position."

"There are very real dangers of a backing up of supplies and equipment to a point where actual spoilage of meat might occur", said Mr. Abbott.

AMERICANS LAND ON ADMIRALTIES, TAKE AIRDROME

Co-ordinated Navy - Army - Air Thrust Catches Japs Unaware

MANY JAPS TRAPPED

Allied Headquarters, Southwest Pacific, March 1. (AP)—Troops of the American 5th army have landed on the Japanese-held South Pacific defences with a bold landing on the Admiralty Islands, under the personal supervision of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, who assumed the operation today.

Powerful units of the first cavalry division hit the beach at Los Negros Island in the northeast corner of the Admiralty and quickly captured Momote airdrome, in a co-ordinated attack by land forces which caught the Japanese unaware.

Not a single enemy plane was disputed the operation.

Destroyers covered the troopers as the land through the Bismarck Sea, which a year ago was almost a Japanese lake.

The invasion, MacArthur said, was carried out by "overwhelming forces" and the Japanese were caught napping "clearly in sight", and "in many instances trapped in their Solomons some 50,000 of the enemy, largely in New Britain and at Rabaul, are now isolated."

MacArthur Inspects Dreme.

Gen. MacArthur went ashore at Los Negros aisland and inspected the captured Momote airdrome himself.

MacArthur, who directed the amphibious operations from the bridge of a warship, was accompanied by Vice Admiral Thomas C. Kinkaid and other high-ranking Allied officers.

Only 20 minutes before MacArthur arrived, Japanese snipers had been driven out of the area in the first light.

Fighting has often indicated his interest in returning to the Philippines, where he fought so long against fighting airships, and his communique announcement of the landing promptly reminded the Japmilitias are "almost due south of Mindanao, the most southern Philippines".

The Admiralties, former German possessions, are an Australian mandate under the Versailles Treaty, and were occupied by the Japanese in January, 1943.

The enemy has been using them as a refueling base on the line from Truk, 730 statute miles northeast, to New Guinea.

SPECIAL REGULATION RESTRICTS

Ottawa, March 1 —(CP)— Defence Minister Ralston said yesterday in the Commons that a special order in resolution forbidding the writing of articles, for the press without the consent of Defence Headquarters has been restricted, and that the order in King's Regulations and Orders, which forbids the writing of articles on military subjects.

The Minister made his statement in reply to C. G. Douglas (C.C.F.-Weyburn). C.C.F. members had objected to the censorship becoming "another Italy".

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

RAW NORTH WINDS OPEN MONTH OF MARCH

The month of March may not have come in like a lion in the manner in which the old seasonal adage calls for, but nevertheless residents felt a considerable difference in the weather this morning as compared with Tuesday's rather balmy temperatures. Lacking was the blustery wind driving blinding snow before it, but even with the traditional knee-high drifts in evidence. What was minded was the exceptionally raw north wind, which chilled to the bone as pedestrians made their way across open spaces.

Truly the weather presented itself as a mixture of the lamb and the lion on the first day of March, lending speculation on the part of the citizens whether the lion in his true nature will be in evidence at the month's close.

SOLDIER IDENTIFIED AS GNR. J. McKENNA

Unidentified in the group picture of the Belleville soldiers overseas which was printed in The Ontario Intelligencer on Tuesday, the unnamed soldier has now been identified as Gnr. J. McKenna, son of Mr. and Mrs. James C. McKenna, South Front St. Gnr. McKenna now appears in the top row second from the right, but unfortunately his name was not listed on the back of the picture forwarded from overseas. He went overseas with the 32-34th Battery, R.C.A., and is still with that unit.

MRS. EGBERT M. JOHNSON

Mrs. Egbert M. Johnson died suddenly at her home on Tuesday morning as the result of a heart attack.

The late Mrs. Johnson was born at Marmora and prior to her marriage was Miss Hannah E. Peterson, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Gabriel Peterson. All her life was passed in this district and she was highly esteemed. The sudden passing has brought much regret to her friends in Belleville. Mrs. Johnson was a member of the Alliance Tabernacle.

Besides her late husband; two sisters, Mrs. James Johnson, Marmora, and Mrs. Alexander Bunkon, Belleville.

The late Mrs. Grant Funeral Home, 68 North Front Street; the funeral announcement is made in this issue.

GERALD WAY
(Picton)

Picton, March 1 — Gerald Way, prominent Picton citizen, died in Prince Edward County Hospital yesterday afternoon. He had been ill for some there for ten days and last week underwent an operation. Earlier he had received treatment at Kingston where an operation was performed in an effort to halt an infection in the legs.

In his 58 years, Mr. Way had spent practically all his life in Picton. He had been a local post office for 38 years. In 1926 he was appointed postmaster, a position he held for several time when another appointment was made. For nine years he was collector of customs and in April, 1941, became postmaster. Always a busy citizen with the public as he did in these duties, Mr. Way was active in sports and at all times he was courteous and efficient.

He was a life member of the United Church and of the Oddfellows Lodge, of which he was the last war and was a member of the Canadian Club.

Mr. Way was unmarried and is survived by his mother, aged 91.

LATE MISS MARTHA HAZARD
(Plainfield-Trenton)

The funeral of Miss Martha Hazard, Plainfield, formerly of Trenton, took place from the Marsh Funeral Home, Trenton, on Tuesday afternoon to the United Church at Plainfield where service was conducted by the pastor, the Rev. George McKenzie.

Interment was made in Plainfield Cemetery and the bearers were Messrs. Ernest Merry, Fred Pound, Roy Pound, Harold Pound, Everett Hazard and Ernest Hazard, all of whom are nephews of the deceased.

WILLIAM ALEXANDER STEWART
(Tweed)

Tweed, March 1.—(Special)—The funeral of the late Alexander Stewart, who died on Feb. 26th, while visiting his son, Frank Stewart, at Salamanca, N.Y., took place on Tuesday afternoon, Feb. 29th., to St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Tweed, where service was conducted by the Rev. Alfred Larsen who also conducted the service at Victoria Cemetery, Tweed. Many friends were present at the service.

The bearers were Messrs. S. B. McOle, C. D. Morton, A. MacCrary, Charles Porritt, P. C. Barnett and Albert Johnson.

The late Mr. Stewart, who was in his 77th year, was born in Belfast, Ireland, and was a son of the late Hugh Stewart and his wife, Ann Ritchie. At one time he lived in Belleville for over fifty-two years he lived in the Tweed district. In the community he was highly esteemed and will be much missed by many friends. His death occurred a short time ago, after two weeks' duration, while he and his wife were visiting at the son, Frank Stewart, at Salamanca, N.Y.

In religion Mr. Stewart was a faithful member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Tweed, and was a member and the secretary of the church board.

Surviving him are his wife, who prior to her marriage was Miss Lillian P. Sills; two sons, Hugh W. Stewart, Belleville Falls, N.Y.; Frank S. Stewart, Salamanca, N.Y.; one daughter, Miss Lillian E. Stewart, Toronto; two sisters, Mrs. J. A. Lowden and Mrs. J. N. Sills, both of Tweed, and one brother, R. J. Stewart, Toronto.

WILLIAM H. HUNTER, 86
(Napanee)

Napanee, March 1 —(CP)— Wm. H. Hunter, 86, resident of Napanee for more than 50 years, died at his home today. At one time proprietor of the Royal Hotel here, he later engaged in the retail milk business.

Mr. Hunter retired a farm here on the outskirts of Napanee, where annual plowing matches were held for a number of years. He leaves two daughters, Mrs. Hemley Stacey and Mrs. Percy Sprague; and a son, William D. Hunter, all of Napanee.

NIPS GETTING SCARED

London, March 1—(CP) — The Vichy radio, broadcasting a Tokyo report, said last night that Allied-based United States reconnaissance planes had been over Japan itself in preparation for "an invasion from the north."

Kiwanians Hear Talk on Sea Cadet Corps

The benefits of youth training as a member of the Sea Cadet Corps was told to members of the Kiwanis Club at their weekly luncheon at the Quinte Hotel on Tuesday by Lt. C. O. Chamberlain, R.C.N.V.R., "Cataraqui." The meeting was in charge of Mark Vanner, representative of the Sea Cadet Corps and the boys over the regular business session of the club was completed under the direction of Mel Veligh. Clarence Jewell collected the fines and Harold Hutchinson led in the community singing with Leo B. Riggs as pianist.

Mr. Vanner explained to the club that the committee formed within the club had undertaken to study the applications made to the local Sea Cadet Corps by interviewing the boys themselves, their parents and inspect their homes so that all undesirables could be eliminated. All boys 14 to 18 are eligible to join but boys over 16 are given by the committee between 10 and 13 years of age. Each will be placed in the Scouts. "This is a wonderful opportunity for the boys," said the guest speaker, 'and will lead them to be Christian, law-abiding citizens." W. H. Hunter, principal of the R.C.I. and chairman of the Sea Cadet committee, complimented the club on their action and stated that the Kiwanis Club should have been a friend to the Sea Cadet movement and that was where Arthur Wesley had done considerable spade work on the opening of the corps.

Fine Officers at Head

Mr. Turner also stated that the corps had a splendid group of officers and that the cadets were receiving the finest of training and at the present time there are 75 becoming good citizens. Lt. Aubrey Coe introduced the speaker and Lt. Chamberlain stated that the cadet movement had been in operation since the last war but had died out until 1941 when the federal government, realizing the need of training youth that it be revived and from a corps of 2,500 sea cadets in 1941 the number has grown to one of 68 corps with a personnel of 15,000.

Lt. Chamberlain said that the juvenile delinquency was of the greatest concern but that when they were able to wear the full uniform of the navy, the discipline was derived that discipline was the greatest factor in the training of youth with the disciplined boys who went into the navy, soon recognized their responsibility and became the mainder of his crew.

The speaker went through the curriculum of the sea cadets, showing how they learned to tie a knot, signal, box the compass and many other things vital to a young boy. He spoke of the many corps now run along strict naval lines, which was a great incentive to the boys joining the corps. A film depicting the work of the corps was shown at the conclusion of the talk.

Trenton and District

Trenton, March 1 (Special)—Aubry J. Campbell appeared in Trenton Police Court on Tuesday afternoon before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd, charged with breaking and entering. He pleaded not guilty and was found guilty on the evidence. Geraldine Hanna was charged with a similar offence and as she had no part in the breaking and entering, according to the evidence, the charge was reduced to theft. Both were remanded for one week for sentence.

Campbell who is in the army, was represented by an officer from the military district. Detective Sergeant Bell has been a deserter since June of last year, and was arrested by Trenton police and Provincial police from Cobourg last weekend in Brighton.

A Mrs. Coe who lives on North Murray Street complained to the Trenton police during the weekend that during the night a quantity of meat had been entered and a case of silverware and a valuable set of china dishes had been taken together with other articles. After inquiries Provincial police have arrested the stolen articles where they had been sold in Trenton, the police stating to evidence received a receipt from Campbell which led to his and the Davies girl's arrest.

Two minors appeared also in court for receiving stolen goods, having been found in possession of an outboard motor which was stolen last November from a summer cottage near Trenton. Both stated they had found the motor and boy-like had wished to retain it so they could have some fun next summer with it. As they were both of previous good character and pleading guilty to the charge, the Magistrate discharged on the condition as to they might leave court.

Three were fined $10.00 each for breach of the parking by-law, one $4.50 for being parked in front of a hydrant.

T. McFadden, D. Elliott, E. Sullivan each paid $7.50 for breach of the Highway Traffic Act.

Harry Sadler on a charge of vagrancy, picked up about 4 a.m. Sunday wandering about the streets,

Revision of Building Construction And Repair Permits Announced

Mr. Charles Mott, City Engineer, states the announcement that several changes had been made by the Department of Planning and Development in limits above which licences are required under ambulance by-law, passed 1940 relating to construction, repair and alterations to buildings, or installation of equipment therein, and the limit of $2,500 for which licences formerly locally have been altered considerably, installation of equipment already been raised from $2,500 to $5,000; construction, repair or alteration of buildings (other than plants) and — or installation of equipment therein from $500 to $1,000.

Last August it was announced that applications for construction of houses would not be considered unless the area exceeded 700 sq. ft. for two-storey houses and 900 sq. ft. for one-storey houses, or for space-houses containing more than seven suites. A revision of this provision has taken place, and areas above which licences will not be necessary are: for normal circumstances have been raised to 1000 sq. ft. ground area for one storey and 1,200 sq. ft. for two storey houses and 1300 sq. ft. ground area for single-storey dwellings with flat roofs or space-houses on the exterior dimensions of the building. Attached single-storey work on the project is started.

garages or open verandahs or porches must be included in area, but garages having nacelle floor area over 1000 sq. feet shall be included in area. Installation of only one fireplace hitherto is permitted in most dwelling, but rough plumbing may be installed for more than one fireplace. Not more than one plumbing stack may be installed. Cost of building must be reasonable established by law and licences for luxurious dwellings will not be issued.

Provision planned to meet these conditions will not necessarily be licensed as the local conditions of the area in which the building is to be built must be considered. Difficulties arising in the supply of labor or materials might make it necessary to postpone and curb construction at any time.

Regardless of these conditions licences must be obtained for the construction of any dwelling or apartment house where the total cost will exceed $1,500, before any work on the project is started.

The War Today—
Series of Allied Successes Tightens Pincers Upon Japan

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press War Analyst)

The Allies continue to steadily tighten the great Pacific pincers which one of these days will seize and crush the Mikado's island kingdom.

Further successes are reported from the geographical extremes of the Japanese empire, Burma and southeastern Asia—the Bismarck Archipelago and New Guinea—in the far-flung Pacific theatre.

Progress in both instances represents vital preparation for the ultimate assault upon Japan. Each phase encourages other important operations which will follow in the future.

General MacArthur has brought home another handsome victory in the capture of the strategic airport of Momote on the Admiralty Islands, on the northern border of the Bismarck Archipelago. The same General watched the preliminary reconnaissance in force by air, and then followed his troops ashore, disregarding danger from Japanese snipers.

Cuts Japanese Supply Lines.

This operation severs the regular Japanese supply lines to their bases in the Bismarcks and also to the south, including the key base at Rabaul on New Britain. It greatly speed completion of the conquest of this whole vast zone from which the Japs threaten the East Indies and the Philippines. MacArthur, whose star has risen on his oath to free the Philippines, pointed out significantly in the was given ten days in jail. Harry hadn't worked for some time and realized from arrest yesterday that he would be put by the court to get out of this district and get to work.

William Sage charged with assault was allowed to go on payment of costs.

Two appeared on a charge of non-support, one case dismissed as the accused had been given an opportunity two weeks' ago to make arrangements for proper support of his wife and family, and the wife presented to the court how everything was being done to assist and encourage reunion by her husband. The charge was withdrawn on payment of costs.

The other case was enlarged for two weeks.

O. Anderson appeared on a charge of breach of his recognisance which he had signed about six months ago wherein he had agreed to support his wife and family. He was given a month in the county jail.

D. Newman appeared on a breach of the Motor Vehicle Act, to which he pleaded guilty. His case of illness was explained to the court by the police and he had turned over his uniform to the military authorities. His case was remanded for one week for proof of military discharge.

Two cases of breach of the oil control regulations were enlarged for one week.

Local Cpl. B. C. Donnan, K.C., County Crown Attorney prosecuted.

IN MEMORIAM

LLOYD—In loving memory of my husband Harold Lloyd, who passed away March 1st, 1943.

The flowing stream of life rolls on
But still the vacant chair
Will be remembered by him who once sat there;
His life was one long sacrifice,
Of many good and kind,
He toiled so hard for those he loved
That life grew dim.
Lovingly remembered by his wife and sons.

LLOYD — In memory of Harold Lloyd who passed away March 1st, 1943.

It is hard much with patience bore,
Promises were in vain,
Till God above in His great love
Relieved him of his pain;
He bade no one a last farewell,
He slipped away so still,
The Heavenly gales were open
A loving voice said come;
We watched him as he lay
And saw him pale and free,
Smiling calmly up to God
Where I have longed to be.
Sadly missed by Mother, Brothers and Sisters.

TILLEY — In loving memory of "Matilda Tilley who passed away March 1st, 1941.

A wonderful Mother, woman and friend
One who was better God never sent
A wonderful worker, loyal and true.
One in a million, that, Mother, was you
Just in your judgment, always right,
Honest and fearless in every fight
Loved by your friends, and all you met
A wonderful "Mother"; that, Mother, we, met.
Sadly missed by Peter and Lorraine and Grandchildren Harry and Kenneth overseas. M1.

HEALTH SERVICES

Based on Per Capita Cost.

Federal financial contributions to provincial Health Services under last year's draft were based on the principle of population. In the draft they are based on the average per capita cost of health services in all provinces multiplied by the population.

Thus in effect the Dominion assumes the cost of health services for children under 16 and the excess of the average cost of services to adults over the amount collected in contributions.

Mr. Mackenzie said:

"It is estimated that the costs of benefits would amount to about $250,000,000 a year, that the health insurance fees of $12 per adult would produce about $100,000,000 and the contributions of three and five per cent based on taxable income would amount to $50,000,000 leaving about $100,000,000 to be provided by the Dominion.

"The provincial governments would have to bear about one-third of the $13 fees abated, any excess of fees collected being used as estimated average for all the provinces and purely administrative cost.

"It must be emphasized that these estimates are intended only to present a very general idea of the probable magnitude of the sums that would be involved.

One Provision Dropped.

The original draft provided that in cases of persons employed on incomes too low to warrant their paying taxes upon it by the $20 annual contribution, the employer would be required to pay $1 per week per year was not paid by the employee. This provision has been dropped.

"It has been suggested that a completely free or non-contributory system should be adopted," said Mr. Mackenzie, "but it is considered that such a system encourages the pauper and malingering and that the delusion that the public purse is bottomless, thereby encouraging extravagance and maladministration.

"It is more consistent with the dignity and independence of many that he should purchase the necessary benefits with his own money."

Cheese Own Dealer.

As in the original scheme, it is proposed that "qualified persons"—those entitled to receive benefits—choose their own doctors and hospitals within their own localities.

Mr. Mackenzie said the financial committee whose recommendations were adopted found the $26 annual payment formerly proposed was too high and adjustment would be required for the majority of contributors. It also reported the provision for contributions from employers would fall mainly on small employers and in the case of those receiving unpaid labor would be "doubtful of collection in large part."

Veterans Return After Fighting In Sicily Drive

Picton, March 1.—"The only antidote to war is the gospel of Jesus Christ, for foreign missions are the means by which that gospel is spread. Foreign missions are a good investment," declared Bishop John Lyons, Kingston, in our address at the Laymen's Association here Monday night.

A great deal of the church and it was in the ever-present knowledge of this task that the General Synod held its session last year. The basic principles for which this war is being fought, are the same as those for which the Church stands."

"There will never be any security in the world without a deep-seated development of the spiritual side of life," said the Bishop.

That each day's work begin with worship, was urged by the Bishop. "That is the means by which vision is secured or clarified, and all things fall into their proper relation".

'F' Director Moved

Alf. Morris, who has been Y. M. C. A. representative at the Royal Air Force station, Mount Navoo, left for Debert, N. S., He is succeeded by Stan. Leverdge, who has been stationed at the R. A. F. at Kingston, and who has completed his course there.

Mr. Morris has proved a very capable director, fully organizing sports and amusements on the station and getting excellent co-operation from civilian organizations.

A fountain pen was presented to Mr. and Mrs. Morris by airmen who represent various organizations, and who arrange parties for the R. A. F. at Kingston, and who has completed his course there.

Light and Airs. J. E. Dornan of Aldershot, N. S., are guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Huff.

Soldiers Return

Two Prince Edward County soldiers are among those returning to Kingston today from overseas. They are Cpl. Herbert Cooper and L/Cpl. Oran Greatrix. Both were reported here to this effect yesterday.

L/Cpl. Greatrix, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Greatrix, West Lake, was wounded in the Sicilian campaign. He suffered the loss of an eye. Since last July he has been receiving treatment in a hospital in England. He has been overseas with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment since 1939, and a brother Victor is also serving overseas.

Cpl. Cooper went overseas with the local regiment in February, 1940, and took part in the Sicilian campaign before going to Italy. He was officially reported to be seriously ill with small-pox last September. He made a good recovery in an African hospital before being flown to England. He did not suffer any wounds.

The arrival of the men in Canada came as a complete surprise, though it had been expected that they would be invalided home.

Pte. Bertram Wounded

Pte. John Gerard Bertram has been wounded in action in Italy, a telegram received his sister, Mrs. Harold Soules. No details were given. He had been overseas with Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment since 1939 and served in Sicily and is fighting in Italy.

Though her son, Pte. Peter Cockburn was wounded in action in Italy on January 17th, Mrs. W. Cockburn had received no official information as to the native or extent of his injuries. A letter received from him yesterday and dated Jan. 27 stated he had been in hospital for ten days, but was then able to walk around though his side was very sore. "I did not know I was hit until the next day, I thought I had a stone in my foot. Then I found that I had a wound in the foot and leg and fractured rib. While advancing, the rifle I was carrying was cut right in two and it was then I was wounded. I was immediately taken to hospital," he wrote, adding that he was receiving good care and good food.

RCAF SPITFIRE VETERAN GETS REST

Veteran of descent fighting from El Alamein to Tunis, and of the Italian invasion from Sicily to the Anzio beachhead, Squadron Leader Lorrie Hyde, D.F.C., of Massey, Ont., has just finished a tour of operations with the City of Winnipeg Spitfire squadron. The 26-year-old fighter pilot drew the first blood in the battle of the Anzio beachhead where his squadron flew every day for the invaders, and here is shown poking a finger through a bullet-hole in his rear view mirror, picked up in a dogfight over Nettuno. In the same fight, one cannon shell exploded under his cockpit and another in the wing, but he came down safely. His score stands at nine enemy aircraft destroyed and more damaged. He got four in the advance through Italy, two of them in one combat. —(R.C.A.F. Photo.)

S. A. to Observe 60th Anniversary Of Founding Here

The work of the Salvation Army was officially started in Belleville with the appointments of Capt. Annie Hansen as the officer in charge, on Feb. 15th, 1884. The flag had already been unfurled in nine other cities and towns in Canada when the first open-air meeting began on the streets of Belleville. There were seven officers who had already heard of new 'Army' that had invaded Kingston along with, London, St. hThomas, Toronto and other nearby cities.

The curiosity that had in all other places greeted the beginning of the work by the women in the strange uniforms was not wasted in Belleville, but there are not so many stories of violent opposition as have been told of most openings in Canada, and in a short time the new form of Gospel work had taken root in the hearts' of many of the people. After sixty years during which time perhaps some of the early day lustre and zeal may have become modified, the Salvation Army remains a recognized and respected Unit on the city's religious life. The Belleville Corps will celebrate its sixtieth Anniversary this coming weekend, and many leading citizens will join in the celebrations on Sunday afternoon when the Worship of the Memory Hour will preside at a gathering at his Citadel where Lieut.-Colonel Best of Montreal will be the chief speaker.

Feb. Construction Totals $8,890

Vandals Smash Windows in Stores

Toronto, Feb. 28—(CP)—Vandalism flared up in Toronto early today and plate glass windows in a number of stores in the College-Manning-Dundas area were smashed in.

Inspector of detectives M. Moulholland disclosed that detectives and plainclothesmen of three divisions have been assigned to track down the gang of Hoodlums responsible. All of the damaged were owned by Canadian-born Jews or Italians.

Police believe the Hoodlums made a tour of the area in an automobile. Police said nothing was stolen from any of the premises.

WILL DEMAND COMPENSATION

Chungking, March 1.—(CP)—The Chinese Government announced yesterday it intends to demand compensation from Japan for all war damage to both public and private interests since the Japanese occupation of Mukden, capital of Manchuria, in September, 1931.

What Does Inflation Mean to You and Me?

"PLENTY BROTHER!"

Why, we couldn't buy enough food to keep our families healthy under inflation. For wages and salaries can't catch up to prices when they start to soar!

How would we like to pay $1.10 a dozen for eggs? You say it can't happen? Don't forget it's already happened right here in this Dominion, during the last war. And it will happen again . . . unless we're on our toes to keep the cost of living down. Every Canadian must face this challenge! It's our responsibility.

But be of good heart. Living costs have risen LESS in Canada than anywhere else. Canada leads the world in the fight against inflation.

HERE'S HOW IT'S DONE—

In 1941, Canada determined to control the cost of living. Price ceilings were established on wages, rentals and commodities; subsidies were paid on essential foods; goods in short supply were rationed . . . so that everyone could get their fare share at a price they could afford to pay!

But control of prices is a two-way responsibility. It needs your support if it is to continue working effectively.

So make this Pledge Today!

I PROMISE to give my support to keeping the cost of living down. I will buy only what I need—I will observe the ceiling whether buying or selling goods or services. I'll pay off old debts, save for the future, invest in Victory Bonds and War Savings Certificates—and will support taxes which help lower the cost of living.

Meeting Mr. Churchill

Canadian editors touring Britain had spent on Monday the great pleasure of seeing the British Prime Minister Winston Churchill at work in 10 Downing Street and also members of his cabinet. It is something to read about a man, to hear his voice over the broadcasts or just to see him, but to meet him, that is something quite different. One so fortunate in having this opportunity does not have to delve into the secret of the British Prime Minister's greatness but he feels it instinctively. To have met and had a few words with a notable figure is a liberal education.

Mr. Churchill radiates the British spirit in word and action. He inspires the whole nation and through the earlier days of the war he inspired the whole Free Nations' world in a peculiar time calling for the ultimate show of fortitude and courage and he has since been one of the great sources of British strength and Allied confidence.

These Canadians so favored on Monday came away from that meeting with the rugged Winston Churchill and his associates, inspired by his confidence and his comprehensive view of conditions making for Allied victory. These men had seen him in his stern suit, at work, and they had shaken his hand and they pay the highest tribute to the personality of this great man.

Heavy Japanese Losses

Authenticated stories of Japanese sea and air losses continue to grow in the swell the grand total. Secretary of the U. S. Navy Frank Knox on Tuesday gave the report of 14 more losses of ships suffered by the Japanese through the activity of American submarines. Add to these losses like these are built up the gigantic ship losses of the Nipponese, no fewer than 611 ships sunk, probably sunk or damaged since the war began.

This attrition of Japanese shipping took a heavy spurt in the last month, February, making for a total of 189 Japanese ships lost, probably lost or damaged and these figures do not include the latest 14. This list takes in 22 combatant and 167 non-combatant ships.

The work of the United States submarines is "increasingly skilful," according to the Navy Secretary.

As Japan has lost by sinking over three million tons of an 'estimated tonnage of seven and a half millions of merchant shipping before the war this loss alone figures out at forty per cent.

Recent offensives of the Allies in the Pacific Ocean, with consequent successes of great importance can be explained in the gradual strengthening of the Allied sea strength in that area with the steady wearing down of ships and airplanes.

February's heavy blows at Japanese shipping give indication of more and more sterilizing of the Allied offensives.

Japan must realize that the situation is growing most serious. In Burma a major victory has been won by the British in the Arakan jungle. This has a significance which Premier Tojo, Japanese dictator, will not overlook.

Allies to Pool Books

Rebuilding of the shattered school systems of Europe is one of the problems of post-war Europe that is discussed every six weeks in London by a miniature League of Nations. The Ministers of Education of the Allied governments have arranged for a pooling of their books and periodicals, published since the war started, to be made available to the national and university libraries of Occupied Europe. A plan has been established to collect not only British books, but those from other countries which trace the life and thought of the Allied Nations. A brief history of the war for use in all European schools is planned. A special commission has been set up to deal with the supply of scientific equipment.

Rejections

(Boston Herald)

The Associated Press item which says that "rejection of farm workers in the 18 and 19-year-old age brackets is running 62 per cent, above the average for other registrants and is higher than for any other major occupational group in the nation" is merely a fresh saddening reminder of an old problem. Doctors will not be astonished, even though they may not have known that the disparity was so great. The children in the country may be receiving medical attention which is as good, on the whole, as that of the past, but the urban boys and girls are attended to more carefully than ever before. This is so indicated by federal statistics, has widened accordingly, and probably it will not disappear for many years.

Tips to Gardeners

(Detroit Free Press)

Just as the seed catalogues begin to arrive, Secretary Wickard warns that we may face a tighter food situation this year. Overseas demands are increasing, while production has about reached the limit.

That is a hint to Victory Gardeners. If they want plenty of greensstuff this season they'd better begin now to plan to grow as much as they can. Seedsmen are short of help to get out orders. Also the supply of many seeds is limited. All of which adds up to this: If you are going to have a Victory Garden this year, don't you better wait, then it's time to begin getting the wherewithal.

Self-Heating Soups

(Kitchener Record)

A self-heating soup was exhibited recently before a group of workers of canning factories who had gathered at the British Ministry of Food to learn about the importance of their work to the war effort.

A senior analyst of the War Office turned "cook" to show how it was done. Holding up an ordinary can of soup, he lit a fuse running through the centre. Within five minutes piping hot soup was ready to be served.

Hot soup for troops and hot water for shaving make army life in this war that much pleasanter. It is unlikely the old veterans of the last war will think they were born 30 years too soon.

Betting on 92 Dog Tracks

(Janus in London Spectator)

I suppose an increase in gambling at a time like this is explicable by the fact that so many people have more money than usual in their pockets and fewer outlets for it as the result of various controls. The Churches' Committee on Gambling has just issued figures which show that totalizator betting alone on 92 dog tracks has increased from £36,000,000 in 1938 to £42,000,000 in 1942.

That Captain Randolph Churchill, son of Prime Minister Winston Churchill, has been conferring with Marshal Broz (Tito) of Yugoslavia, the guerilla leader, seems the natural culmination of a busy war, with the background of family which he possesses. His spirit of adventure and service he comes by naturally for his father the Prime Minister was early in life a soldier and also a war correspondent. Captain Churchill was the first member of the British Parliament to enter the paratroops. He has been with the forces in North Africa.

In the last war, Britain put into the field an army of 5,000,000. In the present war, her manpower effort as regards the Army, Navy and Air Force is very much greater. In addition, the output of her war factories today dwarfs production of 1918. This achievement has been possible only by mining the services of her women-folk on a scale which far surpasses that of any other belligerent—including Germany.

If you do not wish a man to do a thing, you had better get him to talk about it; for the more men talk the more likely they are to do nothing else.—Carlyle.

BLUE JAY

All winter long the blue jay stays,
When richer throated birds have fled.
About the cedar tree he plays
And waits our daily gift of bread.

The men who claim to know him best
Insist he's coutain to the crow,
A feathered robber, gayly dressed,
Not fit for decent birds to know.

Of morals he has none at all;
Of manners, really very few.
There is no music in his call;
His charm lies in his coat of blue.

And yet I like him just for this:
On many a dismal winter day,
When all the other birds I miss,
This fellow's brave enough to stay.

Sergeant William Black of the 94th Battery, left today for Ottawa, where he will take a course in physical training.

Mr. James Phillips of Montreal, an old Belleville boy, is home on a short visit.

Mr. A. A. Mark of Toronto, formerly of Belleville, is spending a few days in town.

40 YEARS AGO

March 1st., 1904.

March surely came in like a lion. It was the worst snowstorm of the season; the wind blew and the snow fell in large quantities. Last evening at six o'clock the car had become a regular blizzard and it was almost impossible to see across Front Street. At eleven o'clock there were sounds of thunder and flashes of lightning. The storm continued until an early hour this morning when it ceased snowing. The railroads are blocked and the roads leading to the city are impassable. It was one of the worst storms that ever visited Belleville.

50 YEARS AGO

Mr. M. J. O'Meara of Los Angeles, California, is visiting his father, Mr. M. O'Meara at the D. & D. institute after an absence of nearly 20 years.

The sleighing is disappearing fast.

March came in like a lamb; we hope it will depart in the same manner.

Mr. John Lewis, hardware merchant, is contemplating the construction of a three-storey block on Front Street.

Mr. J. J. B. Flint will give a lecture on astronomy this evening at the Y.M.O.A.

Mr. J. Parker Thomas is retiring from the book and stationery business.

Canadian Scene A Century Ago

By J. L. G.

Our forefathers had to do things the hard way. Their record shows us that a lot can be accomplished by hard work and wise planning, and should give us hope for the future.

Most pioneers started on the thin side of life not because they wanted to but because this seemed to will it. Those hardy souls who were stationed at the far-flung fur-trading posts of the West and North-West were probably hardest hit. It is recorded that 100 pounds was the sum total of flour available to three such men for a 12-month period. Most assuredly this meant cutting down on the family jacks, a real hardship in a region where everyone worked up a wonderful appetite in the daily grind—for the most cheerful sight in the world was a stack of pancakes piled high!

In the presence of difficulties the settlers' horses showed themselves as resourceful as their masters. For instance they far outdid cattle in their ability to obtain food in the winter-time. Even when snow buried the juicy grasses to the depth of several inches horses pawed successfully, uncovering many a meal. Cattle however seemed "muscle-bound" and always in the same vicinity that yielded a living to their stable companions . . . indeed they ran across young trees or shrubbery with tender shoots which gave some sustenance.

Ever see an inebriated horse? It's not a pretty sight the swaying from side to side, the shaky gait, the dipping and bowing. Settlers didn't blame the poor animal, for he's the victim of circumstances beyond his control. Not so with the cow—feed in his trawls and he is not responsible for his actions. Even the early settlers hated "loco-weed"! It poisoned their dreams of happy times on the prairies. It haunted the minds of horses, too; but rapturously once tasted it aroused a craving that made the animals browse always within its reach. Hence the discovery the whereabouts of the lush greenery!

BRITISH CRUISER LOST

London, March, 1.—(CP)— Loss of the British cruiser Spartan was announced by the Admiralty. No details were given. The Spartan is not listed in the latest edition of Jane's Fighting Ships, authoritative naval directory, and presumably was a new ship.

Vision of Impending Decisive Events in Field of Air Warfare Before Members of the House

Major Power Tells Commons United States Within Reach of Air Supremacy

ESTIMATES TAKEN UP

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, March 1.—(CP)—A vision of impending decisive events in the field of air warfare was before members of parliament as they prepared to consider the estimates in the War Appropriations Bill when the House meets again Thursday.

Last night Air Minister Power pictured United Nations air forces with powerful Canadian participation, as being almost within reach of "complete, effective, decisive and lasting air supremacy in every theatre of war in which the enemy can be found through the skies of any part of Europe unharmed and undefended."

Col. Ralston said it was not in his annual review of air force developments, the minister spoke of a "paucity of public information" about the Canadian air force, Canadian airmen in the British and United States press and in official communiques. He said he let the world know of Canada's air contribution which already was the 100 or more schools of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan in this country.

Mr. Power's statement came as the House passed the first major hurdle in the War Appropriation Bill, approving Defence Minister Ralston's army estimates after many days of discussion.

Assures All Costs

Announcement of the end of meat rationing came as the House broke down for the night. As the day's deliberations opened Agriculture Minister Howe was told of the government's decision to assume the cost of the meat rationing experiments in Northwest Airways, some of which have been financed in part by the United States.

"It is far from my wish to make any beneficial statement about the part which Canada is playing in the war," said Mr. Power. "It had been borne upon me, however, that the interests of Canada as a whole may be prejudiced if its part in the war, and the importance of the Canadian share in the great events which are unfolding."

The Canadian Government and our American allies have pooled their resources, he explained, and "there are seams of aircraft overhead, but not enough. There were powerful battleships of heavy armor, but these ships inside the breakwater and beyond it were all British ships.

"In the Mediterranean, aboard one of those little ships, and it turned out to be one of the finest abandon, in a great circle which took us in width. It was from France and the Ruhr. The coastline could be traced distinctly through the light haze and it was an odd thought that in a few minutes of our time we would also be within rifle shot of the enemy. Behind us were the ships of the white cliffs in their splendor, symbol of England and ever a solace to the seagoing world, now hidden to most people behind the blanket of war. Ahead lay the road back to the landing, mounted a rope-climbing ladder to the deck of the dock, and went off to tea in the Navy. It had been an experience."

British Army officers, of Coastal Defence, showed us about the area on the morning and afternoon of something of what goes on at Dover. We saw batteries, searchlights and large numbers of them. That is no secret to the Germans, because they cannot put a convoy or a ship into this narrowest part of the Channel without their knowing the fact anew—only last month those guns we saw picked up a Motor Torpedo Boat manoeuvring on a smaller ship, sank them at 30 miles an hour. Many days previously we were there in the morning for the Air Force Officers' Symposium. Such proof of a success is not always forthcoming. Sometimes many elapse between enemy attempts to put a convoy through the Straits of Dover. Sometimes, on the other hand, uses the route for a considerable time before it becomes active immunity. It is seldom there is more than one day—the darkest night's by the darkness of the darkest nights for his ventures, but it does not save him and he risks increasingly very.

We were taken to gun-posts, to magazines, to plotting rooms where operations take place, to see for the great annoyance of the Boche, and they are all and always busy. The Dover defence now are so strong that very seldom is a German aircraft over the town. The anti-aircraft power is something with which the enemy takes few chances. Formerly they were asked about the "duels" of big guns across the Straits. I don't know what happens is usually something like this: The British detect a movement in the enemy's gun-positions, sometimes crush a building and kill a few civilians. We have seen of course a few of these duels; they are used for specific and important objectives and are fairly discriminately.

Behind all this the old town of Dover carries on, battered but unbowed. Many buildings have been destroyed, many more have been damaged, and there are not as many people in Dover as five years ago, but they accept their risks and regard that treated Parliament now means much more than that.

There was lunch at a little inn in St. Margaret's, a suburb of the town, and in the afternoon we saw a fabled yellow poster headed "Dover. We are Proud of You." A day must seem very far in the past to Dover.

Hepburn Wants Private Office

Toronto, March 1.—(CP) — Mitchell F. Hepburn, former Liberal Premier of Ontario and now an Independent Liberal, wants an office to himself.

Mr. Hepburn said yesterday he had asked Speaker William Stewart for a private office so as he could dictate in privacy.

The ten Labor-Progressive members of the House, A. A. MacLeod, of Toronto West; and J. B. Salsberg, Toronto-St. Andrews, got the keys to a private office at Queen's Park during the recess and have already moved in.

But Mr. Hepburn is faced with the prospect of using the lounges and other services as a broadcast communique said Clifton had been assigned to the Parliament Buildings ago for the first time since the beginning of the war, before Wasis re-entered it in severe fighting.

Notes From Britain:—
Dover's White Cliffs

By VERNON M. KIFF
(Special to the Ottawa Journal and the Ontario Intelligencer).

London, March 1.—Dover Castle sits atop its great white cliff with its eyes turned to the Channel and the Boche-occupied coast of France only 21 miles away. There was a time when the view of France was mostly inward. German airborne craft used to come over regularly and they struck hard at the devoted and picturesque old town. German ships were always in sight in the Channel with more freedom than they have enjoyed since the heavy barbed wire strung about the Boche-occupied coast. Because of the precautions that had to be taken at that time, Today Dover Castle sees that traffic reversed, and the sight is good.

We had come through to Dover, guests of Coastal Defence and the Royal Navy, and this time came to take us any closer to the actual war than we had been in the London area. Dover is the chalk cliff and guard out towards the hazy line of the French coast, towards the Straits, and there were swarms of aircraft overhead, but not enemy ours. There were powerful batteries of heavy naval guns, and the ships inside the breakwater and beyond it were all British ships.

In the Mediterranean, aboard one of those little ships, and it turned out to be one of the finest abandon, in a great circle which took us in width. It was from France and the Ruhr. The coastline could be traced distinctly through the light haze and it was an odd thought that in a few minutes of our time we would also be within rifle shot of the enemy. NUGGETS OF KNOWLEDGE

Kicking public officials upstairs is not a new device in American politics. During the Civil War, President Lincoln appointed Secretary of War Simon Cameron to be Minister to Russia to get him out of the country.

Neither are rows between Congress and the President unusual. Under date of March 16, 1846, President James K. Polk wrote Mr. Adams, then a member of the House of Representatives, made the following entry in his diary:

"The Senate have expelled one of their body for the offence of the newspaper published in this city (Washington) called the Madisonian Times, for certain charges against certain nameless members of the congressional delay with the British minister, Parkenham, in the settlement of the Oregon question. A few days since, the House of Representatives expelled from their reporters' seat the correspondents of the New York newspaper called the Tribune, for exposing to ridicule the manners, and the moral character, of William Sawyer, a member of the House from Ohio. This shows a sensibility to the animadversions of the press, manifested by both Houses of Congress which is extraordinary. If left unchecked by judicial control, seems to be calculated to produce offensive assemblies, and always terminates in the destruction of liberty."

The first motion picture was shown in the White House in 1913 during the latter part of President Wilson's administration.

Kaiser Wilhelm opposed Secretary of War Simon Cameron to be Minister to Russia to get him out of the country.

Will be Canadian Property.

Mr. Howe said Canada is to pay the United States for all permanent improvements to northwest-ern Canadian air bases, making them entirely Canadian property. This will cover the Edmonton-to-Alaska northwest staging route, the Mackenzie River route and subsidiary routes. The total cost of wartime development of these airways to Canada will be $40,000,000.

Defence Minister Ralston said the responsibilities of all having anything to do with the administration of men to the Canadian army have been distinctly defined, the action having been taken in light of the death from diabetes at Fredericton some months ago of a soldier who had been admitted to the army as physically fit.

Speaking of the acquittal of several medical officers at a court-martial following the Fredericton incident, Ralston said it was not a case "of reasonable doubt which, in these cases, goes to the accused."

B.C.I. Forms Students' Council

Presented to the student body last week by Mr. Turner was the proposed constitution for the B.C.I.V.S. Students' Council. Drawn up by a committee headed by Mr. McGuire, it is intended to be a democratic one which a fuller constitution may be later built. The council is designed to give student control or and experience in handling extra-curricular activities, social and athletic, affairs; etc.; training in the procedure of business meetings and in the duties of the officers of a society; to handle and foster a spirit of loyalty and pride in the school, and enthusiastic interest and participation in school activities; to give training in the responsibilities of citizenship; and to co-ordinate and publicize activities of the various school clubs.

Headed by a Senate, composed of the Principal and Staff, the council will consist of an executive, a council, and an assembly. The executive will consist of a president, three vice-presidents, one from each of Collegiate, Commercial and Continuation classes, a secretary-treasurer and two staff representatives.

The council will be made up of representatives from various grades in the school and a representative from each form. The assembly will consist of the student body and membership will be granted only on payment of a 10c. fee. Among other things, the student who is a member of the assembly will receive a locker rent-free, free examination paper, and will have a 25 per cent. reduction on the school magazine when publication is resumed.

The president of the Executive must be a pupil of Grade XII or XIII and for the first year should be a member of a slate of candidates selected by the Senate. In succeeding years he must have been a member of council for at least one year. This applies also to the Vice-president with the exception that they may also be chosen from Grade XI. XII, and XIII.

The first meeting of the council will be held the first Tuesday in October, and will meet the first Tuesday of each succeeding month, following a regular order of business. It is left to the by-laws, regulate the duties of the councillors, to appoint committees to carry out the work of the council.

The executive will meet once a week and follow a regular order of business, and the duties of the executive may any student society receive a grant or loan out of the revenue from any activity sponsored by the council shall become property of the council. The staff representative will aid in an advisory capacity only.

Amendment to the constitution should be passed by a three-fourths majority of the council and then approved by the Senate.

This constitution was presented to the students and passed with a great majority. The elections for officers will take place on or around March. 10.

Framework For Students' Council.

The skeleton structure of a students' council was presented to the assembly by Mr. Turner and Mr. Guire. He has with the assistance of several others, formed the basic constitution of such an organization, and on Friday morning a few members were taken from the first period to allow the students to vote on this paper. The vote resulted in an overwhelming majority, for the students' Council.

Leap Year Tea Dance.

There are no doubt that an eccentric announcement is in the offing as Jack Muirhead drifts from the wings in outgrown garments to say that a short scene in the life of Dracula, formed the basis of the stage in the next few moments. Sure enough, the curtains part to reveal Sylvester Cavanagh and Wallace Mote in advanced student attire, pining away in protective custody with a bewhiskered Mr. Stern in the offing. Ah, but relief is on the way, for who should appear but Miss Moore, with the joyous news that a leap year tea dance, formed the order of the day. Chuck Ashley, Chib, is to be held in the girls' gymnasium on March 4th, and determined to enter into the happiness for all but Mr. Cavanagh seems inspired by the idea of such a performance. Consider his joy at finding out that he is such not a sou, for behold, the girls must ask the boys. This is the first recorded tea dance of the year and should bring a large crowd to the gym doors on Wednesday.

Form Parties Arranged.

A new ruling has been introduced about form parties. At assembly, Mr. Turner stated the conditions under which such functions may be held. Included in these were such rules as: Each form may have only one official party per year, to be held within the school and supervised by masters, and—NO wax may be used on the gym floors."

On the night of Feb. 9th the Parish Hall was the scene of the 3B form party. The students gathered at the hall at 7:00 and marched while Thurlow Ash led the body where they saw a very good movie.

Miss Morton and Mr. Maybee, the chaperones, joined during the course of the evening that understood that schoolroom manners with which we all are familiar, there jles a heart of gold.

Mr. Maybee proved he was an accomplished pianist and picked out the tunes of the times of the day, while Miss Morton led them in a grand march.

The girls of the form and their hostess served lunch later in the evening.

Being mindful of the saying that "there's no place like home" the participants parted with a appreciative cheer.

TRUCK TRANSPORT

Those brawny legs of the infantry used in the last war are still one of the greatest assets of infantry today. But now they are complemented with equally resilient rubber tires on big, troop-transporting trucks. The use of transport trucks for long hauls has turned the infantry into Storm Troopers, striking hard at one spot, shifting quickly and dealing a vital blow in another section of the enemy's defences.

Too, the trucks are used as a means of rapidly delivering a company of infantry across a wide front. The men disembark from the trucks at intervals while it lurches across the uneven terrain. They land ready to fight, preparing their advance under protective camouflage of artillery smoke clouds of smoke. Their attack will be deadly, equipped as they are with mortars, and light artillery. Then are Shock troops in every sense of the word.

A sound knowledge of First Aid as taught by the St. John Ambulance Association, is playing an increasingly important part in the lives of industrial employees. Many thousands of workers in every field of industry are now competent to render First Aid to their fellow workers in case of accident—as a result of instruction by the St. John Ambulance Association.

In Canada the basic First Aid course of St. John is taught not only to industrial workers and railway employees but also to the Armed Forces, Civilian Defence personnel and to Voluntary Aid Detachments. During the war this First Aid course, as well as the course in Home Nursing, is given by the St. John Ambulance Association jointly with the Canadian Red Cross Society.

DO YOU KNOW . . . that the Order of St. John which controls the St. John Ambulance Association and Brigade, initiated and organized throughout the British Empire the science of First Aid? The Venerable Order of St. John was founded in 1099 A.D. and is the oldest order of chivalry in the world.

HEALTH CHATS

Treatment of Granular Pharyngitis

Pharyngitis means the inflammation of the throat. Granular pharyngitis refers to a condition in which the lymphoid tissue which covers the back wall of the throat and the back part of the roof becomes increased in size. When this happens, an examination of the throat will show red, raised patches on the back wall of the throat. The side walls of the throat may contain small bits of tonsillar tissue and following removal of the tonsils, it is not unusual for this tissue to hypertrophy or increase in size. Persons who have granular pharyngitis suffer from frequent sore throat. The inflammation is not severe in most cases, but may be quite troublesome. Often there is a slight fever.

According to Doctors Robert E. Fricke and Peter N. Pastore, of the Mayo Clinic, there has not as yet been developed any satisfactory remedy for this kind of chronic throat inflammation.

In order to ascertain whether this disorder is present, an examination of the throat is necessary. The red, inflamed patches can be seen and there is usually some swelling of the tissues. There may be a gray secretion present, also.

Granular pharyngitis may occur in persons of any age, but tends to develop most often during the first forty years of life. Many times the overgrowth of lymphoid tissue may occur without causing any symptoms. Studies have shown that lymphoid tissue in general is quite sensitive to X-ray or the rays from radium. In other words, these rays tend to destroy the lymphoid tissue.

Doctors Fricke and Pastore have developed an instrument by which it is possible to easily apply radon. A form of radium, to the back wall of the throat in order to treat granular pharyngitis. The instrument consists of a metal rod which is passed through the nostril. It has a hinged end so that the radon tube can be pressed against the side wall of the throat. First a local anesthetic is given and then the metal applicator containing the radon is pass through the patient's nose and the end pressed against the side wall of the throat. One hour's application through each nostril furnishes the desired radium dosage. Most of the patients treated were given just one application of the radon. A few had two treatments, each a few months apart, and two patients were also given X-ray treatments.

All of the patients treated were observed for a number of months following the use of the radium and X-ray. All stated that they had fewer and less severe sore throats and had noticed improvements in their general health.

6,162 Patients Admitted to Belleville General Hospital During Past Year

Total number of patients admitted during 1943, reached 6,162 as compared with 5,804 in 1942, which has taxed the institution to more than capacity at many times.

At the annual meeting of the Board of Governors held recently, the report for the year 1943 was given by the Superintendent, R. H. Barclay. Many interesting facts were set forth, all showing increases over the previous years. It was stated that 30,000 meals per day were dispensed by the dietitian, plans and insurance which also has a bearing on the number of births in the city area. This has made it possible for the middle and lower wage earners to get many postponed treatments and operations cared for.

Maternity Division Sets Record With 1666 Births

Nearly 100 more babies arrived at B. G. H. during 1943. This section was over-taxed on many occasions and the hospital management congratulated the co-operation of the doctors and patients which made it possible to cope with the situation in these trying times. Not only in this division but in many other departments the shortage of nurses was carried on and did a fine job under trying conditions. It is not possible to secure the services of relief nurses or extra staff on-call. Only two maternity deaths occurred in the whole 1666 cases.

Average Patient's Stay in Hospital 18.1 Days

Evidence of patient and doctors co-operating to handle increased admissions was shown in the reduction in the average patient's stay in hospital which is the lowest and compares with 18.12 in 1942.

X-Ray Dept. Has Busy Year

Under the direction of Mr. R. G. Williams, 2902 cases were X-rayed, most cases the improvement occurred about one month after the treatment was carried out. In a few cases no reaction or injurious effects noted.

JOLLIFFE OWES APOLOGY SAYS PREMIER DREW

Claims Statement Made by C.C.F. Leader Was Far From Facts

NIXON IS HEARD

Toronto, March 1 —(CP)— the Ontario legislature today receives its first official balking of the political battle of the newest party to join its fold when A. A. MacLeod "Labor-Progressive for Toronto Bracondale, speaks in the continuing Throne Speech debate.

Mr. MacLeod is expected to tell the House what line he and his fellow party member, J. B. Salsberg (Toronto St. Andrew), will take in the legislature when party lines are clearly drawn. He may also make some reference to Premier Drew's speech yesterday in criticism of C.C.F. Leader Jolliffe.

At the outset of his continued address, Col. Drew referred to charges made in the legislature by Mr. Jolliffe that the government was responsible for evicting the family of Alfred Griffiths farm property near DeCew Falls, near St. Catharines, Ont.

He said that if the C.C.F. leader meant what he charged, there was a question whether Mr. Jolliffe was "fit for the responsible office he holds by apology" and avowed the House and if it was not forthcoming, he will not be further reason to look upon any further statements he (Mr. Jolliffe) may make as having any higher value.

Given $19,000 for Property.

Col. Drew said the facts were that the Griffiths family was given $19,000 for the property, assessed at $8,500 and sought by the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission for development purposes. The Griffiths house, he added, had been unfit for habitation, the family had made no serious effort at farming and there had been a fire on the property.

Liberal Leader Harry C. Nixon, who also spoke yesterday, was critical of the Progressive Conservative government mainly on education and said that the matter of financing schools had been unsatisfactory and that studies were being made prior to a full House discussion. He recalled that the ninth point in the Progressive Conservative's 21-point program during the election campaign had to summer had said that the government would take over at least 50 per cent of school taxation, now standing against only 20 per cent.

He added startlingly that this fact had almost caused him to vote for the Conservatives in the recent by-elections.

As for his own defeat as Premier in last August's provincial election, Mr. Nixon said he holds no post-election animosities. The people had spoken. He would assist the government in bettering any policy for perpetuation of the province's forests and in any move toward a more equitable hydro power rate.

He supported Premier Drew in his stand against Opposition Leader Jolliffe regarding the Griffiths house, saying he believed $19,000 was ample for the property.

Mr. Nixon criticized the government's proposal to take over the Toronto Harbor Board and the matter might well be studied by the agricultural committee of the legislature.

Smallest of Quads, Born in Derbyshire, Reported Very Weak

Heanor, Derbyshire, England, March 1 (CP)—The smallest of quadruplets born Monday to Mrs. Nora Carpenter, 22, was reported today in a weak condition and being given brandy to help maintain his pulse.

Of the boy, christened McDonald and weighing three pounds, the hospital matron said: "We will certainly have to take the greatest care of him if he lives alive."

She said the others and their mother are in fine condition. The father is a soldier.

So far the babies have not been baptized because attendants believe the risk would be too great.

The Heanor medical officer, Dr. P. H. J. Turton, said the confinement lasted two hours.

REBUILT, RE-RAZED

The heavily bombed German city of Magdeburg was levelled in the Thirty Years War and took nearly three centuries to rebuild.

Three Measures Are Introduced

Toronto, March 1 (CP)—A bill to provide for fewer Coroners' inquests and a measure providing for the setting up of an advisory committee to assist the government on Hydro matters, was one of the three measures introduced in the Ontario legislature yesterday. The others would amend the Superannuation Act and provide for the central filing and publication of regulations.

The legislature also passed through third reading an Order-in-Council and an amendment to the Justices of the Peace Act. John J. Kelso (CCF-Cochrane North) sought to have the latter bill repealed so that all persons seeking appointment as Justice of the Peace would have to be examined by a judge, not only those with legal training. He was ruled out of order by Speaker William Stewart.

The bill amending the Power Commission Act, introduced by Hydro Minister G. H. Challies, provides for an advisory council of five members appointed by the Lieutenant-Governor in Council to hold office for two years.

The bill to amend the Apprenticeship Act, introduced by Labor Minister Daley, would require all persons engaged in any designated trade to hold a current certificate of qualification.

Attorney-General Blackwell introduced the bill to provide for the central filing and publication of regulations. He said its purpose is to require the filing in a central office of all purported regulations and for publication in the Ontario Gazette.

Canadian Gunners Near Adriatic Pummel Germans

By DOUGLAS AMARON
Canadian Press War Correspondent

With the Canadian Corps in Italy, March 1 (CP Cable)—Canadian gunners Tuesday gave the Germans their heaviest pummelling of several weeks on the front near the Adriatic.

They concentrated a 30-minute barrage on Nazi defensive positions in the coastal sector north of Ortona and heavier calibre guns fired rounds of shells into a smoke-filled gully facing Canadian forward positions.

While smoke laid before the barrage began to turn black as shells churned up the earth.

The noisy flare-up followed a day and night of normal patrol activity. The Germans, on the alert during the night, swept all trails into their defensive positions with machine-gun fire and there was no close contact between the opposing forces. The weather was fair and warm.

RED ARMY ROLLS TOWARD PSKOV IN TWO THRUSTS

New Russian Offensive Gets Under Way

NOVOROZHEV FALLS

London, March 1—(CP)—The Red army rolled into Novorozhev today with one force just six miles north of the Nazi bastion guarding the approaches to Pskov and another approaching from the southeast while far to the south a new Russian Ukraine offensive was under way.

Stockholm, meanwhile, reported without confirmation that the Russians made a new westward stab into Estonia by crossing Lake Peipus and occupying Kallaste, on the shores of Lake Peipus in Estonia.

Aim to Cut Railways

The northern forces on the outskirts of Pskov got to within six miles of the key communications link taking Pogorelka. The Russians also took Kunyakino, 11 miles southeast of Malkovo, 26 miles southeast. Malkovo, 26 miles from the Latvian frontier, is regarded as the spearhead of a drive to cut the Pskov-Riga railway south from Pskov.

Moscow reported the Germans are putting up strong resistance in an effort to stem the Russian drive to cut railways. Both forces are reported to have thrown in fresh reserves and to have begun to commit their heaviest pummelling of several weeks on the front near the Adriatic.

Bruce Claims 'Discrepancy' In Army Figures

Ottawa, March 1—(CP)—Hon. H. A. Bruce (PC—Toronto Parkdale) said last night in the Commons there was a discrepancy in figures of army strength given by Defence Minister Ralston as compared with figures given by the Wartime Information Board.

The Board figures indicated that only about 37 per cent of the men claimed by the Minister had been taken into the army through the compulsory training law, Dr. Bruce said. It was hard to see why a government did not favor conscription for overseas should undertake a program that could not be fulfilled without conscription.

The limitation on having compulsory service troops sent overseas should be removed so the Army should be available as reinforcements for the men now overseas.

Farmers Removal of Hamstringing Clauses

"I am favoring the removing of the hamstringing clauses of the present-conscription act," he said, answering J. H. Leclaire (L—Shefford) who asked if Dr. Bruce was speaking for his party in asking "for conscription."

Dr. J. J. McCann (L—Renfrew South) said more consideration should be given to the statements of men themselves as to their condition on army examination.

"Any medical man can tell almost by intuition whether a man under examination is telling the truth," he said.

There were certain conditions which could not be readily tested. One was diabetes. Another was the condition of men commonly called "bleeders." If more reliance were put on a man's word as to such conditions it would be better for the service.

J. F. Pouliot (L—Temiscouata) said that if conscription were to be only for the army it would be one-sided. He cbbled progressive conservative members with speaking in favor of exemption for farmers and voting for conscription at every opportunity.

M. O.'s For Each Service

Answering a suggestion by Dr. McCann, Col. Ralston said it was not considered conducive, either to efficiency or economy, to merge the medical services of the Army, Navy and Air Force. It was better to have Medical Officers trained to handle the special problems and conditions in each service.

Replying to Dr. Bruce, Col. Ralston repeated his statements on reinforcements made when he introduced the estimates. There were that the overseas pool of reinforcements was up to estimated requirements for the anticipated scale of casualties that battle; that the pool was about 60,000 General Service troops in Canada available for overseas that it is proposed to recruit about 4,000 new men per month which is believed sufficient to maintain present reserves.

FORMER EDITOR DIES

Berlin, March 1—(AP)—Theodor Wolff, 75, former editor of the Berliner Tageblatt, an influential newspaper in pre-Hitler Germany died last November in a Berlin hospital where he was taken after his health had been broken by imprisonment, the German-English anti-Nazi Society Atlantik said today. He had learned yesterday. Wolff went to France after he was deprived of his German citizenship in 1933. When France fell he was taken by the Nazis and put in a camp.

Witness Says He Was Asked 'To Kill a Baby'

Kingston, March 1.—(CP)—Walter Haley testified yesterday in assize Court that Mrs. Annie May McCumber and Mrs. Reta Wagar both asked him to kill a baby which had been sent to Mrs. Wagar, Mrs. McCumber, mother of Mrs. Wagar, is on trial for murder in connection with the baby's death.

The 32-year-old Haley, who said he lived with Mrs. Wagar at Perry-sville, testified: "Reta asked her mother and me to kill it and Mrs. McCumber asked me to kill it. . . . Mrs. McCumber walked the baby after she told me to kill it. It was crying and kicking when she carried it out of the bedroom."

He added that in the kitchen he saw Mrs. McCumber, who is 46, stuff a cloth down the child's throat.

"I just watched a second and then walked again," he said. "I never was around when anything was being killed and I didn't intend to see it."

Haley related that the 34-year-old Mrs. Wagar's sister, Mrs. Hamm, who is serving overseas, had asked him to live with her. He said he ran away three times but returned "after each escape" at her request. Given Protection of Court.

Haley, who began his evidence Monday and completed it yesterday afternoon, testified under the protection of the court. He goes on trial at the conclusion of the McCumber trial on a murder charge in connection with the baby's death.

Mrs. Maude Harby, Haley's mother who occupied the other half of the backwoods shack in which her son and Mrs. Wagar lived, testified that Mrs. McCumber told her that if there was nothing of the baby to be seen her daughter would not be in any husband's army allowance.

She also said that when police found the baby's body last April Mr. McCumber and Mrs. Wagar "smiled right down and cried."

"Mrs. Wagar said, 'Oh, Lord, they'll find out just what happened.' Mrs. McCumber said Walter knows everything and will tell everything," Mrs. Harby continued.

H. L. Cartwright, defence counsel, said that Mrs. McCumber's first trial last September when the jury disagreed Mrs. Harby had testified that she was unable to remember anything about the case.

Haley, Mrs. Wagar sentenced last Nov. 2 to four months in jail on a charge of concealment of birth in connection with the case.

Planes Carry Out British Wounded From Mayu Front

By SAM JACKETT
Reuters News Agency Correspondent

New Delhi, March 29 (CP-Reuters) —During the just-concluded Arakan battle in Burma more than 500 wounded British and Indian troops were flown from the Mayu range front by British and Indian airmen, it was announced today.

The air-land method of pulling out casualties from under the noses of the Japanese was introduced into this area six months ago by a former organic chemist, Wing Cmdr. A. J. M. Smyth of Wolverhampton, England.

Types of planes used were the British Fox and Moth, and the American Stinson. The R.A.F. planes each brought back a single stretcher case and two sitting patients on each flight; the Americans had two types, one able to take two stretcher cases and the other transporting two sitting passengers.

Smyth said the ground troops reported the rescue craft were the biggest factor in keeping up morale.

Assistance of all branches of the Indian air force in the future which spelled a major defeat for the Japanese was officially described as "an almost perfect example of successful co-operation with the army."

Warrant Officer Phillips of Parlane of Sudbury, Ont., had an unusual experience during an air battle. He was shot down in a paddy field, climbed out unhurt, and a Japanese fighter stanted to machine-gun him. But the Japanese flew too low, hit a tree and his aircraft blew up. McFarlane walked to the nearest village of the enemy and carried him to base, as a prisoner of war.

Corvette Kenogami Rescues Crew After Collision at Sea

Ottawa, March 1 (CP)—The story of a collision in a blinding sleet storm at sea with a freighter crew fighting searing chemical flames before they were forced to abandon ship and accept rescue of the Canadian corvette Kenogami, was told today by naval headquarters.

Lieut.-Cmdr. Leslie Percy, 41, of Toronto, handled Kenogami "like a bicycle" to get close enough to put a tow line aboard after the collision. The other merchantman in the collision continued on to port, damaged but seaworthy.

The freighter crew skilfully lowered lifeboats and pulled over to the corvette.

It was Kenogami's third rescue exploit in 2 1-2 years and brought to 215 the total of persons she has saved

OFFICIAL NOTICE

MEAT RATIONING and MEATLESS TUESDAYS

TEMPORARILY SUSPENDED

KEEP YOUR UNEXPIRED MEAT COUPONS FOR FUTURE USE

Effective at once meat rationing and meatless Tuesdays have been suspended until further notice.

This means that ration coupons and other ration documents are no longer required by anyone to buy meat and canned salmon from dealers, and that hotels and restaurants and other quote users may obtain supplies so as to serve meat whenever desired.

Consumers should destroy unused meat ration coupons up to and including coupon number 40. All meat coupons on temporary ration cards should also be destroyed. Other coupons should be kept.

MEAT TRADE PERIOD RATION DOCUMENTS should be surrendered by the trade in respect of all deliveries of meat made prior to midnight February 29th. Those with ration coupon bank accounts will deposit all purchase documents. Those with no coupon bank account will surrender purchase documents to the banks in exchange for a bank transfer voucher to be sent to the nearest branch of the ration administration. Complete instructions will be contained in a special notice and food bulletin.

NOTICE TO MEAT SLAUGHTERERS. Because suspension of the meat ration is purely a temporary measure, slaughterers with permits will be required to continue observing the provisions of Board orders 231 (defotting) and 340 (slaughtering and stamping of carcasses) but temporarily need not report on Form R977, or be limited by quotas issued under the order. Farmers may now slaughter for sale direct to any household consumer.

Stirling-Marmora 'Combines' Win Group Title From Trenton At Hume Arena in Overtime

Score Two Goals in Two Minutes to Tie Score and Tally Two in Overtime to Win

SCORE IS 6-4

They came by bus loads to trek loudly to the war-time ice-less shrine to see their favourites win. Win they wanted, but win their favorites did not. True enough they came from behind in the last seven minutes of the second hockey final, but they WON.

That's what the Stirling-Marmora "Combines" gave their faithful followers in the Hume Arena Tuesday night when the "Combines" staged their greatest comeback rally seen in junior hockey this season to triumph over Trenton's blasé stars in overtime and move into a best-of-4 Intermediate "A" play-off with Kingston.

Until late in the third stanza the Trentonites had seemingly decided and settled their third period drive to be content with the extra period, when Ken Trumble literally cut the game on perimeter ice with an accurate shot. Not satisfied the "Combines" rallied in an all-out effort and in the overtime period to clinch the piece and now the Combines meet Kingston in their first O.H.A. playdown at Stirling Friday night.

Led in First Period

In the early stages the game proved disinteresting due to the fact players were continually out of position and chasing the elusive puck. The "Combines" commanded the territorial play in the initial frame and were scoring-wise slightly rewarded with the games first goal, when Ray Goodchild made little mistake on Dunc Rowe's end up play that gave the "Combines" a 1-0 advantage at 12:55 of the middle session.

Come the middle stanza when the Trenton kids moved out and to the fore. Jack McIlvee flipped the rubber over McIntyre on Howe's rebound shot to tie the score. Fred Hamilton galloped a length along to score a neat goal and Trenton led 2-1 at the end of the second.

On a solo effort Howe made it 3-1 for Trenton and it looked pretty well over for the Jackson-Bond charges. On a rapid exchange of the rubber Charles Dodds flipped and rapped it home with Goodchild and Patterson on the helping assists. Then came the same stand at 4 to 3 for Trenton and second safe.

Then came the fireworks, when Goodchild ran rampant, scored on Howe and tied it 4-4.

The overtime—it was a loose pack that Ken Trumble cut loose with—is what proved the winning counter after a scoreless drive by the boards, but the Combines just weren't satisfied with a draw. Struggling to score another goal, when a Counsins-McIntosh combination defied all the efforts on the Trenton net from a Trenton defence player's stick, but it was the final desperate rally and Trumble's overtime goal, that moved the Combines up, and they're a battling sextette.

The line-ups:

Trenton, goal, Massey; defence, Stojan and Howe; centre, McIlvee; wings, Marsh and Hamilton, subs, Scott, Taylor, Bangay, Churchill, Johnson, Rowe and Thomson.

Stirling's Marmora "Combines" goal, Mulcroy; defence, McIntosh and Cousins; centre, Goodchild; wings, Patterson and D. Patterson, subs, Goodchild, Deaths, Whitehead, Pite, Trumble and Lavender.

Referees, St. Louis and Holway of Belleville.

Camp Borden Plays Bombers Here Thursday

Boasting of an undefeated record and a fast-studded team of hockey players from a cross-section of Canada, the Camp Borden Flyers will move into the Hume Arena Thursday night, on Friday, March 3, a sudden-death game in the semi-final round of the Ont. No. 1 Training Command R.C.A.F. hockey playdowns versus the Mountain View Bombers.

The Camp Borden "Flyers" won their games in their section following which they eliminated the Uplands Army Cosmos of the Toronto group, to advance to the Command semi-finals. On the Borden team the "Bombers" went through a torrid series in the Quinte group to emerged champions over the Trenton "Flyers."

The Borden squad boasts of a strong team of named players, including Pete Langelle, formerly with the Montreal Victorias, Jim Muldoon of the Ottawa Canadiens and Jimmy Kingdon of the Ottawa Generals in 1941-42. Wing Commander Group-Leader Reilly also has Hub Reiley from the Mcn'real Canadiens and Benson and Vess from the Montreal Royals, as well as Grosmicher, who tended goal for Hamilton in 1942 and Brunt from Calgary.

Coach Coach "Mia" Moore is willing to rest on his laurels of winning the section title with such players as Claude Bourque, the Les Canadiens star, Frank Barker and Savard on the defence, to say nothing of Pat McKeaney, from the Barrie Flyers, Jack Cowley, Jube Puger, Boudreau and the rest of the championship six who eliminated Trenton on Monday night. All in all, it should be quite an affair at the Hume Arena Thursday night with such star-studded teams battling it out in a sudden-death game of the No. 1 Training Command playdowns.

Former N.H.L. Players Listed As Members Canadian Teams

By The Canadian Press

In the first of a best-of-three series for the hockey championship of the Canadian Army Overseas at Brighton, England, yesterday a reinforcement team defeated the Canadian Army Training Centre 3-2. The latter representing a Canadian division in the Central Sportsmen's Club series of both teams were a number of former N.H.L. players. Private Lionel Conacher Pollet, with Montreal Canadiens since the outset of 1941-42, who scored two goals for the winners.

Sgt. Terry Reardon, Lieut. Terry Reardon scored once in leading the Canadian Army Training Centre to victory. Reardon played prominently with the winning sextette. A former member of the Toronto Maple Leafs, Gordie Bruce of Ottawa, played for Canadian reinforcements and got two goals for the losers was Pte. J. A. Cassidy of Galt, Ont.

Hugh F. Glavin, 50, lightweight boxing champion of Canada, died of "ri yi" Erne, died at his Philadelphia home many from a heart attack. In the days of no-decision bouts in the states, he had fought 15 world champions and was unofficially credited with having won 11.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

By ALLAN NICKLESON

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Somewhere in England, March 1. —(CP)—Added by a couple of professionals just over from Canada, a team of engineers upset ratified calculations by winning the hockey championship of the Canadian Army Reinforcements Unit. The victims—Ordnance circus Falconers, who boasted a clutch to cop the title.

The engineers won the best-of-three series 2-1 and 3-2 and advanced into the playdowns for the Army crown. The team's newcomers, who had practiced in almost as they stepped from the boat, were Capt. Gordie Poirier of Maple Creek, Sask., and Lieut. Jimmy Bruce of Ottawa. Poirier played with Montreal Canadiens and was a member of Ottawa Commandos when they won the Allan Cup last season. Bruce was with Boston Bruins in 1941 and later joined the Commandos.

Poirier, despite the usual problem of finding combinations in a team combination, gained two assists on two of three goals scored by Lieut. O. N. Hall of Winnipeg, Pte. H. W. Proulx of Edmonton, also twice.

Lieut. Lex Chisholm of Oshawa, Ont., former Toronto Maple Leaf, tallied for the star-studded Falcons who didn't play a game during the regular schedule. Another Oshawa product who will play for the Canadian Olympic team before the war, Lieut. J. (Chappy) Chappell banged in two.

Other Falcon players included Lieut. Vance Kennedy of Regina, formerly of Hershey Bears and New York Rangers; Lieut. Brown of Medicine Hat, Alta., once of Kimberley, Manitoba, and Lieut. George Hood of Gananoque, Ont., Queen's University and Kingston hockey fame.

Top-notch soccer clubs in Canada are represented in the lineup of an Army reinforcement team and one which holds the area league lead. In 13 games since the season opened last October, the team has scored 62 goals and has been scored upon only six times.

Among the footballers are GSM. D. J. Walker of Montreal, who played with Royal Victoria Hospital and Montreal Carsons; Lieut. GSM T. Turley of Montreal Carsons, Royal Victoria Hospital and MacIntyre Falconbridge Mines; Pte. T. A. Williams, Shetland United; SYMS. W. T. Smith, Toronto Leaside; Pte. J. A. Hunter, Bridgeport United Weston and Dome Mines; Pte. J. R. Campbell, Regina Thistles, and Pte. J. R. Whent, Vancouver St. Saviours and Boeing.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By CHARLIE EDWARDS

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, March 1.—(CP)—Some persons regarded the bicycle as a somewhat archaic vehicle now relegated chiefly for use of drug store delivery boys. Anyone desiring an exciting half-hour and entertainment for physical well being, should express the afore-mentioned opinion to a sportsman cyclist.

Attention the world's outstanding sports without due reference to cycling and Bicycle Chief Gladish of Toronto, former secretary of the Canadian Wheelmen's Association, will gladly and cheerfully deliver a half-hour lecture. By that time you won't mention "cycling" again.

"In fact," says Bill, "with all the aces of sport shrines and halls of fame, I might as well crown in a suggestion for a memorial for the bicycle industry. You can make it either Montreal, where the Montreal A.A.A.A.) was formed in the Montreal Athletic Association, which was organized in 1862 by the late Dr. Perry Doolittle of Aylmer, Que."

Gladish gave out with facts of bicycling life. Among the first cycle clubs in Canada, in the early 80's, was the Wanderers Bicycle Club of Toronto. P. D. Ross was president until he moved on to Ottawa to become a newspaper publisher. There countin' on a jangle!

sponsored the Ottawa Bicycle Club.

First bicyclists in Canada were reputed to be the late Tom Lane of Montreal and Doolittle, both in 1876. The latter made the first recorded country trip when he pedalled 60-odd miles from Aylmer to Strathroy on his high wheeler. The old C.W.A. started the Goods Roads Movement with the slogan "We want good roads."

The first bicycle track was started at London, Ont., in 1879. Ed Thomas introduced the sport the same year in Toronto. Eventually the C.W.A. championships became an annual July 1 fixture on the banked track at Rosedale Field.

The late Ald. Louis Rubenstein of Montreal was a prominent bicycle dentist of the C.W.A. In 1901 he went by train to Vancouver to attend an important card, spending less than half a day in the city on official business. There were board tracks at Toronto, Montreal and elsewhere; some of the tracks were the "diamond row" at six-day races; prizes for road races, varied from a six-roomed house, thoroughbred horses, diamond-studded medals to five-foot silver cups.

An event to stir imagination was the early bicycle tour of Ontario made by such Toronto enthusiasts, as the late Harry Eyre, A. F. Webster and Howard Chandler.

Top! Chappie Gladish did his part in the days of yore.

Mel Ott, who went to work in a New Orleans shipyard at the close of the 1943 baseball season (to forget, maybe?) has announced his release so he can manage the Giants again . . . Although the build-up for Friday's Beau Jack-Bob Montgomery lightweight "title" fight includes minimizing Bob's recent knockout by Al Davis, Nat Fleischer told a correspondent on that one and claims Montgomery actually was down for 20 seconds.

Arrested, Sentenced For Dancing in Milan

New York, Feb. 29.—(AP)—The Geneva Newspaper La Suisse said in an article reported to the office of War Information today that the Germans-controlled police at Milan had arrested 100 young people for dancing and, when imprisoned there, had marched them across the city carrying a poster bearing these words: "While the country bleeds, we dance."

A widower, confronted by the sad task of looking over the clothing of his deceased wife decided that the only thing he would have any use for was a hat, which always admired and in which she always looked so "so sweet." He was placed carefully on a shelf and not disturbed until discovered by wife number two, who inquired about it and was told it was preserved in memory of his first wife.

After a time his second choice was gathered to her fathers, and again the bereaved man selected one of her hats in which she, also the first, had always looked "so sweet." This was placed beside the first hat.

Time healed the second wound and a third wife was introduced into his household. She, too, was inquisitive when she saw the hats, curiosity and asked questions.

The husband explained that the hats had belonged to his former precious sors and were kept as mementoes.

"That's all right," she replied, "but the next hat that goes up there is going in the bowler."

(Hope yet holds.)

It was at considerable expense the Mountain View Bombers' management prevailed upon the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association returning from the 1936 Olympic Games in Germany eight years ago yesterday, denied having protested the inclusion of Jimmy Foster and Alex Archer, Winnipeg players, on the Canadian Olympic team. The C.A.H.A. had suspended Foster and Allen.

(Did you know?)

Four of the 15 men now listed as major baseball league managers are less than 38 years old, hence subject to military selection. Each one of these, Manager Leo Durocher of the Brooklyn Dodgers, already has been rejected because of a punctured eardrum.

Mel Ott of the New York Giants is 35, Joe Cronin of the Boston Red Sox is 37 last October 12 and Lou Boudreau of the Cleveland Indians is 27.

The other big league pilots range in age from 43 years to Connie Mack's 80.

TORONTO LEAFS IN THIRD PLACE, DEFEAT BRUINS

Boston Suffers 12th Defeat In 15 Starts but Cowley Picks Up Three Points

GOALIE GIVEN ASSIST

Boston, March 1—(CP)—A berth in the post-season Stanley Cup series still was a distant mirage today for Boston Bruins.

Despite a three-point performance by Bill Cowley in the second game since Jan. 8, the defeat-ridden stiffened their chances but it starts last night by a 7-3 count on Toronto Maple Leafs, who thereby shattered a third-place deadlock with Chicago Black Hawks.

Ted Kennedy, stickhandling young centre from Port Colborne, Ont., scored two goals as Leafs drew eight points ahead of Bruins, who have only eight games in which to regain either Toronto or Chicago for fourth place, the league's last playoff berth.

Cowley, sidelined for several weeks with a shoulder injury and suspension, was the only Bruin who had dropped from first to 10th place in the individual scoring race prior to last night. Flashed by new linemates in youthful Norm Calladine and Jack Crawford, Cowley has he pumped one goal past Paul Bibeault and several plays for two others to vault into seventh place in the scoring point race, one shead of Carl Liscombe and Joe Carveth of Detroit.

Cowley former partners, Russ Boll and Herb Cain, were centred by Art Jackson with Flashy Hay mer

LESSON NO. 116

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

When you hanzer 'oo go slanmine, hang away from any shamsatne. What you need are kings and aces when you start for game high places. And expect to see a spaan if you gamble partner has ten.

In this day and age, the bidding of slams is what may be called an exact science. Here's where the staged gathering information you need on the way. And then you decide how high to go.

When one of the partners sees in their pair 12 tricks; knows what will be trumps; and has two aces and a king or better, he bids four no-trump.

That four no-trump bid is a convention signal for asking how many aces and kings he has. Partner responds with a convention signal, according to how many aces and kings he holds.

This is The Kibitzer's convention list of responses to four no-trump and their meanings:

5 C — No aces and no kings
5 D — 1 ace and no kings
5 H — 1 ace and 1 king
5 S —1 ace and 2 kings
5 NT — 1 ace and 3 kings
6 C — 2 aces and no kings
6 D — 2 aces and 1 king
6 H — 2 aces and 2 kings
6 S — 2 aces and 3 kings

When response to four no-trump is given, the four no-trumper knows the total number of aces and kings in their pair. So, he decides the final bid from that.

Make this you are the dealer in the south when this pair of partnership hands shows up:

SOUTH
♥A 7
♦Q J 6 2

NORTH
♠K 8 4 3
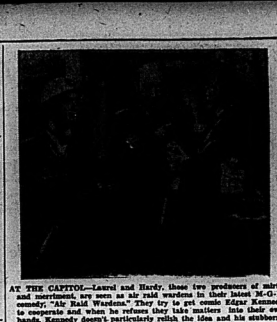
♣K Q 6 2

After a brief exchange of bids, south learns that north has at least six tricks and support for spades. With big own seven tricks, south sees a slam but is not sure if there is a grand slam.

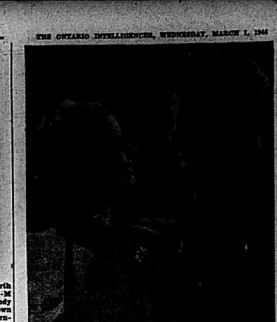
So, he bids four no-trump and north replies with a bid of six hearts. That is the convention signal for showing two aces and two kings. And it tells south that opponents have one king.

With a king missing, south is content to stop at six spades. A sensible rule is nobody's fool.

AT THE McCARTHY—A scene from "HIGH SIERRA" starring Ida Lupino and Humphrey Bogart now playing at the McCarthy Theatre. 2nd feature hit is "GALS INCORPORATED" with Leon Errol, Harriet Hilliard, Grace McDonald and Glen Gray and the Casa Loma Orch.



AT THE CAPITOL—Laurel and Hardy, these two predators of mirth and merriment, are seen as air raid wardens in their latest M-G-M comedy, "Air Raid Wardens." They try to get comic Edgar Kennedy to cooperate and when he refuses they take matters into their own hands. Kennedy doesn't particularly relish the idea and his reluctance results in plenty of laughs. The picture opens next at the Capitol Theatre. Also on the program is Western "Sheriff of Sage Valley" features Rocky Crabbe as "Billy the Kid".



AT THE BELLE—There is time for adventure and love in M.G.M.'s intriguing films. "The Adventures of Tarzu", Rhodesian co-open next at the Belle Theatre. At the moment, Robert Donat, star of the picture, displays his amorous weapons in Valerie Hobson, who also lends her talents to his adventurous escapades.

AT THE McCARTHY

Gals Incorporated

The girls are incorporated and so is the band.

That's a mutuhell summation of Universal's new musical comedy film, "Gals Incorporated which features America's only incorporated bandmaid, Glenn Gray and the Casa Loma Orchestra. The gay picture is the current attraction at the McCarthy theatre.

By way of making the production even more tuneful, Universal rounded up a collection of such top feminine warblers as Harriet Hilliard, Grace McDonald, Lillian Cornell and Margery Days, and for still measure added the Pied Pipers.

Only principals in the entire cast who do not contribute to the musical potpourri are Leon Errol, David Bacon and Maureen Cannon.

Betty Kean, a screen newcomer and one of the most talented comediennes of the Broadway stage, is spotlighted in a specialty dance with Casa Lomans.

Most of the action of the film takes place in an elaborate night club, operated almost solely by Leon Errol in the role of a playboy, on the grand scale. Such a setting affords Glen Gray and the Casa Lomans more than passing prominence as the film unfolds.

Second feature attraction is High Sierra starring Ida Lupino and Humphrey Bogart's The latest addition of British Associated News completes the program.

AT THE BELLE

"Girl Crazy"

The newest recruit to the famed aggregation of funny musicians is none other than the noted film personality, Mickey Rooney. One of the members featured by Tommy Dorsey and his band in M-G-M's "Girl Crazy," now in his final day at the Belle Theatre, is George Gershwin's "Fascinatin' Rhythm," the piano soloist for this number is—Mickey Rooney.

Known for Musical Ability

Rooney, who co-stars with Judy Garland in the film, is known for his musical ability and when he begged for a chance to play with Tommy Dorsey and his band, Director Norman Taurog immediately agreed. A scene was written in the film to make this possible.

Other famous Gershwin melodies featured in the film are "Ridin' My Time," "Embraceable You," "I've Got Rhythm," and several more. In a notable cast are Gil Stratton, Nancy Walker, "Rags" Ragland, Guy Kibbee, Allyn Joslyn and Freeman, Frances Rafferty, Robert E. Strickland and Henry O'Neill.

The Canadian Movietone News and a Metro cartoon completed the program.

"Adventures of Tarzu" Thrilling

Adventure and romance run rampant in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's newest picture, "The Adventures of Tarzu," which stars Robert Donat and with Valerie Hobson, Glynis Johns and Walter Rilla in the chief supporting cast. The way Tarzu opens next at the Belle Theatre.

Directed in London by Harold S. Bucquet, the picture depicts the adventures of a special British agent, Tarzu, who is assigned to go to Czechoslovakia, blow up the Danube, secure and bring back with him the formula the Nazis have been using for producing poison gas. The underground carries plenty in costume, after he sets out to fulfill his mission. Little did he think he would run into so pretty an ally as Valerie Hobson, who almost causes him to lose his life.

One of the highlights of the picture finds Donat in the acid test given Robert Donat before he is accepted into the league of the underground Czech forces.

"The Adventures of Tarzu" is stirring drama, replete with intrigue and romance and marks Donat's first appearance on the screen in more than a year.

New "Gildy" Frolic

Mirth and romance alternate in "Gildersleeve on Broadway," newest in Red Skelton's comedy series featuring Harold Perry, announced as the added comedy feature attraction.

Most of the hectic action takes place in New York, where "Gildy" goes to straighten out a romantic tangle in behalf of his niece. Instead, he finds himself involved in a three-way complication with his fiancee, an eccentric widow and a gold-digging chorine with hilarious results.

Billie Burke, Hobart Cavanaugh, Ann Doran, Margaret Landry, Richard Lecirand, Claire Carleton and Freddie Mercer have prominent roles.

A new Community Sing film will be exhibited on the same program.

AT THE CAPITOL

Laurel and Hardy

Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy play air raid wardens and rank fun at themselves, and at the same time teach a lesson in patriotism, in "Air Raid Wardens," their latest screaming adventure coming next to the Capitol Theatre. As wardens they go through trials and tribulations galore, mostly at their first aid "patients" and engage in a whipped-cream battle with Edgar Kennedy. But they redeem themselves when they blunder into a gang of saboteurs and capture them without outside aid.

Beautiful Jacqueline White and Horace McMahon provide love interest and some dramatic moments. Edward Sedgwick, a veteran at comedy, directed. Principals include Howard Freeman, Bela Lugosi, Donald Meek, Edgar Kennedy and Henry O'Neill.

"Sheriff of Sage Valley"

Playing the part of the reformed outlaw, Billy the Kid, Universal Rocky Crabbe plays his most colorful role in a dual assignment in which he also play Kansas, the bandit who turns out to be his twin brother. These exciting roles take place in the P.R.O. sagebrush thriller, "Sheriff of Sage Valley" which will open at the Capitol Theatre next as the added hit.

Kansas and his outlaw gang are out to take the town which is about to become the county seat.

Everything seems to be playing right into the hands of Kansas, who attempts to get rid of the banker-mayor, Hal Price. But Buster saves the mayor's life. The mayor appoints Buster as the sheriff, and then things really start to hum.

A colored cartoon and the 12th chapter of the serial "Secret Service in Darkest Africa," complete the grand double family bill.

London —(CP)— The wartime achievement of Britain's building industry: $5,000,000,000 worth of new construction for the government in four years; 200 new hospitals with beds for more than 130,000 persons; hostels for 300,000 transferred factory workers; $3,000,000,000 worth of air fields built in four years.

WOMEN TAKE OVER

Canberra — (CP) — Thirty-two per cent of the personnel of the Australian Postal Service now consists of women. They work as letter-carriers, motor drivers, machine telegraphists, mail sorters and post office assistants.

POSTPONE START SPRING TRAINING

St. Louis, March 1. (AP)— The National League champion St. Louis Cardinals and the Browns of the American League joined today in postponing the start of Spring training until March 20 to allow more time in getting their squads together.

The Brown's pitchers and catchers were to have reported at Cape Girardeau, Mo., today with the other players due March 13. The Cardinals had set March 15 for the start of their training at Cairo, Illinois.

Asked if the postponement indicated some doubt about baseball this season, President Sam Breadon of the Cardinals said: "No, you have to be an optimist in baseball business and I am optimistic about the prospects. We will certainly have a team on the field for the start of the schedule April 19."

However, Breadon and William O. Dewitt, vice-president of the Browns, agreed the action was in the dark about the number of players who would be available and of both said this uncertainty was one reason for the training delay.

LAST NIGHT'S STARS

Bill Cowley, Boston, who scored one goal and assisted the two others when Boston were defeated 7-3 by Toronto Maple Leafs, during his first game after about a month's layoff due to injuries.

Ted Kennedy, Toronto, who paced the Leafs' attack by scoring two counters.

Babe Pratt, Leaf defenceman, who drew assists on two Toronto tallies.

PURSUE RETREATING TROOPS

New Delhi, March 1.—(CP)—Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten announced today Allied troops have killed or wounded 4,500 Japanese soldiers since Feb. 4 in routing an enemy force of 8,000 men which attempted to encircle the 5th and 7th Indian divisions in Western Burma.

Mopping up of the remnants of the enemy force, part of which now is retreating southward toward Kayah, is continuing successfully, the announcement said.

JIMMY BIVINS DEFEATS MURRAY

Cleveland, March 1—(AP)—Jimmy Bivins' right to wear the duration heavyweight diadem was strengthened today after he had disposed of Lee Q. Murray in a return 10-rounder.

Lee himself paid homage to the Cleveland Negro with the assertion, "He gave me a good whippin' and I don't have any alibi."

A unanimous decision from Norwalk, Conn., had created some doubts about Bivins' superiority in the ranks of the active heavies when he almost triumphed by a technical knockout in their first tussle but Jimmy dispelled those uncertainties before a capacity crowd of 13,774 at the arena last night.

The 202½-pound Murray had an 11½-pound pull in the weights and also owned the advantage of reach and height but the Cleveland boy abandoned his usual style and carried the attack to his opponent.

Bivins' win was the more alert warrior and it paid off in the form of a nine-count knockdown in the ninth round.

CHAPTER 24

"Sure," grinned Tony, and dropped into the chair opposite her. "You're looking tops, but drinking alone—that's a dreadful habit, kid."

"I'm waiting for Rhino," she explained haughtily. "He promised to come right up from the office. And of course, I'm looking well, why shouldn't I? I got to bed at eight. I've settled down. I really have. So she went on, casting the snub: "So has Rhino. We had a long talk, and we both agreed it was silly to run all around town looking for what we've got right at home."

"There's something in that," Tony agreed.

"Of course it's not as exciting," Lily rattled on, "but my psychiatrist advises it."

"Is Rhino also taking psychic treatments?"

"Rhino doesn't need any treatments. He never did want to run around. It was only because I turned him down. Now you're laughing again."

"No, I'm not, Lily." Tony assured her. "I hope it's as well as it really do. Only I think it would be safer if Rhino had a few treatments. Who's the psychiatrist?"

"Dr. Otto Schwarz Gonzalo. And what he doesn't know about women! It's a treat just to talk to him."

"I'll bet it is—I only wish I could listen in. Did you ever go to Doctor Metcalf?"

"The one who shot himself? Yes. I went to him a few times. But he didn't take me seriously. He'd been to others, too, but Gonzalo is the McCoy."

"So they all have broad couches and blue lights?"

"Of course, and they sit behind you and put their hands on your head and encourage you to tell all. You don't know how soothing it is just to lie there on your back and relax and let yourself go and get rid of all the inhibitions. Mine are about all gone already."

"So I see," laughed Tony. "Well, why not, if it makes you happier? Oh, it does—and wiser, too. You remind me a lot of what I read about Jack McKibben!"

"Did he ever give you a key to his apartment, too?"

"A key to his apartment? I should say not. They never let him down. Why, Tony, who really did kill him?"

"The police say Metcalf did."

"I know, but that's too silly for words. Metcalf wasn't the sort to kill anybody, not even himself. Why, he used to use fur on hour once about the sacredness of life."

"That's interesting. Did Tony, fellow did Metcalf get to talking on that theme?"

"I'd been telling him about my accident, Lily explained. "You know what I mean—and he certainly gave me what-for. That's one reason I didn't think he was the same he didn't kill Jack McKibben. But I never told him about Herschel Schneider, who was mixed up in that, too."

"What made you think that of Herschel Schneider? He didn't have anything to do with your accident, did he?"

"Of course not. But don't you remember I told you that he stopped at the door? Maybe that night and told Mack he wanted to see him?"

"Yes, I remember. And you said McKibben said, 'Not tonight, Josephine' and Schneider went away."

"Mack said more than that. He acted real ugly and went on about how he never did any work after office hours except chasing women. I could see Schneider wasn't a bit pleased, but he saw Mack was drunk and let it go by. And I said, 'Mack, you oughtn't to talk to Schneider like that—he can make trouble for you.' And Mack said, 'Make trouble for me? If anybody makes trouble, it will be me. Why, I could blow him clear over the top, that's what I could do.' Those were his very words, and then when I started to ask him how he figured he could do that, he told me to shut up."

"Did Miss Tony hear all this?"

"Miss Terry—yes. Isn't that a dear girl? Sure, she was sitting right looking scared to death."

"That wasn't what scared her. She was afraid her brother was going to kill McKibben."

"Yes, I read about it. Quite a lot of folks seem to have had it in for Mack. Well, one stockbroker more or less—what does that matter in this man's town?" Then she looked up and her face brightened. "Oh, here comes Rhino!" she cried. "Here I am, darling!"

"Hello, baby," said Rhino, and patted Lily affectionately on the cheek. "Sorry I'm late, but the traffic was terrible. Hello, Tony. Glad you've been entertaining Lily. Have a drink?"

"Thank you, Rhino," said Tony, "but I've got to be moving on. Good luck to both of you!" and he made his way out of the bar, marveling at the strange things which can happen to the human spirit. Lily and Rhino in love! If it lasted no more than a week, it would still be a miracle.

That night, about 9 a.m., Tony left his flat and told the driver of a taxi to take him to the Newark airport. He had decided that he would be leaving at 10:30 and reaching Washington at 12:06. He would have been the one that Schneider had seen there, if he had been at all. He had Schneider's picture in his pocket.

At the airport, the columnist made straight for the office, gave his card to the man at the information desk and asked to see the transportation agent. He was shown in at once.

"Sit down, Mr. Bigelow," the latter said. "My name is Foster. What can I do for you?"

"My inquiry is a little unusual," said Tony, "but I assure you that it is not idle curiosity. I understand you have Thursday night—night before last—when the 10:30 plane took off?"

"Yes."

"Did you see the passengers?"

"Yes. It's my duty to place them aboard the plane, and I always look them over."

"You have a list of them, I suppose?"

"Certainly. The dispatch sheet tells all I need to know. I'm pretty much thy weigh."

"Would you let me look at Thursday night's list?"

"Certainly. There's nothing secret about it."

Foster touched a button and in a moment the dispatch sheet was brought to him.

"Here it is," he said. "There were only six passengers on that flight." Tony looked at the list. There were three men and three women. One of the men was a Thomas United States Senator, another was at the head of a government agency, the third, Herbert Schneider of Stockbridge, attorney-at-law, 2335 Bancroft Place, Washington. His weight, 183 pounds, was just about right.

"Do you happen to remember if Mr. Schneider looked anything like his picture?" he asked, and drew the photograph of Herschel Schneider from his pocket.

Foster took it and looked at it. "Yes, not at all," he said decidedly. "I happened to notice that man because he looked a little eccentric. He was wearing a cape overcoat, for one thing, which is unusual these days, and a hat, a black soft hat, such as Southern statesmen and bohemians used to wear."

"What was his face like?"

"I don't remember much about it. His hat shaded it, for one thing, and he had a mustache, too. But I'm pretty sure he had a mustache. I think his face was fuller than this man's."

Tony returned the photograph to his pocket, thanked Foster, and was driven back to New York. At seven he reached his apartment, he telephoned the manager of the Resort hotel in Washington.

"Chris, old boy," he said, when he had the man on the phone, "this is Tony Bigelow. I've got a little job I want you to do for me."

"Delighted, Tony. Fire away!"

"Did you ever hear of a lawyer down there named Herbert Stockbridge?"

"Never, did."

"Well, I want you to find out if any of that name lives at 2335 Bancroft Place."

"Okay. I've got it."

"There's a plane from New York gets to Washington a few minutes after midnight. I want you to find out whether any passenger on that plane last Thursday night was driven from the airport to the Union Station."

"I can do that all right, I think."

"If somebody was, get a description of him, if you can."

"All right. What next? This sounds exciting."

"And then," Tony went on, feeling decidedly foolish, "ask that man in charge of the baggage lockers at the station if anybody rented one at about 12:30 Thursday night, and if so, what its number was and whether the key had been turned in yet. And that's all for now, I guess."

"I'll get after it right away," he said. "You'll have a report by noon."

"Thanks!" said the columnist, "I knew I could count on you!"

The week had been cold and rainy, but Saturday dawned up in noon next day he found the sun shining brightly, and the weather warm enough to open the windows making them open the sunsets. It was with an unusual feeling of well being that Tony sat down at his desk after his breakfast and started to go through his mail. Suddenly he came to a telegram from Chris Johnson, manager of the Resort-by-the-Washington. It read in part:

"Bancroft Place number as 2335 Bancroft Place. Herbert Stockbridge not in directory or phone book. Not in telephone of bar and no lawyer quoted ever heard of him. Passenger from Thursday night's plane driven from airport to Union Station. Description: tall, dark, heavy, under fleshtan hatgift, wearing cape overcoat, broad black hat. Locker 103 rented at Union Station at 12:30 by man answering above description. Key returned next day. Name was same. That was a point, certainly a small one, but nevertheless a point. Probably the bag Schneider was carrying had his initials on it.

It was easy enough to see what Schneider's procedure must have been. He had left the apartment about eight o'clock, taking care that the doorman saw him and announcing that he was leaving on the 10:30 plane. He had driven to the Pennsylvania station, gone into one of the booths, put on his disguise, packed his ordinary clothes in his bag, checked the bag and returned to the apartment house. He had reached there in little before nine—perhaps in time to see Joe, the house boy, start for the cinema—and then had mounted to Metcalf's suite, secure in his disguise—perhaps he had gone up by the service entrance unseen by anyone. Perhaps he had rung the bell, and Metcalf had let him in. Perhaps he had a key. At any rate, he had passed Montague, and with that little automatic concealed in his hand, had managed somehow to approach Metcalf as he sat at his desk.

Then Tony suddenly remembered what he had been trying to remember ever since the moment when Duffy had opened the magazine at the picture of Metcalf, and found that it contained only four cartridges.

He had pointed out to Herschel Schneider that there were two powder stains on Jack McKibben's hand, and that this was the weapon in all attempted murder with firearms. And Schneider had asked him how he would get around it.

"I would slip on a pair of gloves, wipe the pistol clean, prop the dead man's hand around it and fire a second shot into the floor or somewhere," he had answered.

What a fool he had been! He should have seen that bullet, embedded in the floor beside Metcalf's chair.

All right—Schneider had slipped on his gloves, wiped off the pistol, pressed Metcalf's limp hand around it and fired a second bullet into the floor. There was no chance of its being heard. There were always heavy doors between Metcalf's office and the hall, and, besides, it was at the end of the hall where few people passed. And then what? Then he had typed off the fake confession, left it in the machine, planted the suitcase containing the bullet, the gloves, in the closet of Metcalf's bedroom.

But where had the ladder and gloves and towel been hidden since Thursday night? Undoubtedly in Graham's apartment, stuck back in a closet somewhere. They would be safe there and Schneider, of course, had the key to the apartment—the same key which he had slipped into Metcalf's vest pocket. Oh, he had thought everything out in advance, carefully, deliberately. Lawyer Schneider was like that.

And within perhaps twenty minutes of the time he had arrived he was on his way back to the Pennsylvania station, where he would change and pick up his bag, bus to take him to the airport. But he did not have time to change his disguise until later.

At Washington he had driven to the Union Station, rented a locker and changed back to his ordinary attire, again in one of the pay toilets, made a bundle of the brass hat, the cape overcoat, the dark glasses, the moustache, placed it in the locker, joined the crowd of passengers getting off the 12:06 train, and had driven to the Du Mayflower. Next day he had retrieved the bundle from the locker and returned to New York on the New York with him or got rid of it somewhere in Washington.

That at least, Tony told himself, is what he would have done. But how to prove it!

He cast his mind back over the train of events, as he had worked it out. It certainly held together. There was one detail that did not—the gloves. Schneider could not have left them Monday night that it would be necessary for him to kill Metcalf three days later. He could not have had Metcalf's gloves then. He must have got them at the same time he took the old suitcase from the storeroom, after Metcalf's murder. But in that case, the blood on one of them could not be Metcalf's.

In a moment he was dialing Detective Duffy.

"Hiim," he said, "have you had that blood on Metcalf's glove analyzed?"

"Yes! It's human blood."

"Did you have it typed?"

"Sure, it's Type A."

"Will you, and let me know the result?"

"Sure," said Duffy. "You mean you think it isn't McKibben's?"

"That's the idea."

"All right, my boy. I'll go after it."

"And another thing, Jim." Tony went on, with a thought of it! What was the fingerprint report on the baby automatic pistol?"

"I'll look it up right away," Duffy promised. "I'll be able to stop in this noon," he added. "Too busy."

What To Do With Germany After War Subject of Discussion in Britain

By SYDNEY GRUSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)
London, March 1 (CP Cable)—An editorial suggestion in the Times of London yesterday that Germany must be an important member of the Post-War European Consultative Council in order served to point up recent British discussion on what to do with Germany.

The editorial created no immediate stir or political discussion. In effect it was what British leaders have been saying all along. It is perhaps not what the British public is feeling in the midst of battle, but there has been an evident warning in government speeches on the post-war set up in Europe that while Germany must be stripped of power to wage war, her economy must not be thrown into the chaos that followed.

As recently as last week Prime Minister Churchill disclaimed any desire to "starve the German people among the nations of Europe" and Foreign Secretary Eden has repeatedly stated that "Germany must not remain the object of embarrassment to her neighbors and the world by suffering economic collapse."

Both Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Nelson declaration setting out how Germany's economy is to be controlled or how a beaten Germany will fit into the post-war European political picture.

However the joint statement by Mr. Churchill, President Roosevelt and Premier Stalin after the Teheran conference made clear that "devised problems of the future", Germany's future economy formed part of these.

Public discussion of the question has been comparatively light until recently. The Daily Mail published in January a map of Europe with Germany after the war, written by Commander Stephen King-Hall, Conservative Member of Parliament, and "we are fighting to destroy Nazi tyranny, not to enslave the German people . . . to control permanently the political system of Germany and remodel that of the German people" is a task beyond the powers of the United Nations.

Reader reaction was plentiful and varied. It ranged from suggestions that "the germinating ground for Hitlers can only be removed by a generous gesture" of providing food, work and clothing for the German people to the heretical proposal to take away every scrap of German but manufacturing anything and turn the dismembered land into a vast sheep run.

Sydney J. Carroll of the daily Mail says it should be made clear to the Germans before the invasion that Allied bombers will be over to wiping out of all German industry, culture, happiness and power for ever.

Govt. Supporter Wins Election

London, March 1 —(CP)— Maj. E. M. Eastings, National Conservative candidate supported by Prime Minister Churchill's government, won the Bury St. Edmunds House of Commons by-election from Mrs. Cornett Ashby, Independent Liberal, by 21,705 votes to 4,134, it was announced today.

The by-election, which closed when voters went to the polls yesterday, was of such a bitter nature that one Conservative newspaper it might be necessary to change the name of Bury St. Edmunds to "Bury St. Hatchet."

Major Eastings, a farmer, now engaged in war service, Mrs. Ashby resigned her post as vice-chairman of the Liberal National Federation in order to contest the seat.

It was the first parliamentary contest in the little Suffolk farming constituency since 1931 and attracted attention all over Great Britain as the first test since the Conservative party split declared open sponsored by Mr. Churchill at Blackpool in the West Country two weeks ago.

Shortly said after the result was announced, "I won because I supported the Prime Minister as right man and the electors of Bury St. Edmunds agree with me."

Mrs. Ashby lost because the old register disenfranchises the young and civil workers who have had to leave home."

Lonergan Trial Going Slowly

New York, March 1. (AP)—Counsel for Wayne Lonergan, 24-year-old son of Arthur Lonergan today to show any other prospective buyers of the 1,000 shares which the 36-year-old Toronto-born broker bought on margin for R.C.A.F. offered no reasonable claims to a $1,000,000 estate of the late father, dead wife, Patricia Burton Lonergan.

Samuel J. Freschl, announcing the ruling at the resumption of the embezzlement trial, said it was prompted by the fact that contents of the letter published in newspapers during yesterday's one-day recess.

The letter was read aloud when he permitted a copy of the letter to be given to reporters after hearing of the trial Monday he realized that "with a self-serving declaration" and that he would have so ruled had it been offered at the trial.

However, he said, it was customary for the trial judge to refuse in examination of prospective jurors to introduce evidence that were prejudiced.

The jurist said he would permit counsel to continue to question talesmen to determine whether they had formed opinions as to the letter's contents which might prejudice them in rendering a fair trial.

A defence request that the prosecution produce records of banks, advance a list of its witnesses was denied by the judge.

Costume Pageant With 24 Actors Staged to Stimulate Interest Of BCIVS Students in School Library

Presented by members of the Library Club under the direction of Miss Helen Bunting, as a measure to stimulate interest in library life, a tercet in school library books, students of Belleville Collegiate and the colorful costuming of many world nations of war and peace in the Library pageant was seen Wednesday morning on the platform of the auditorium during assembly period.

Twenty-four actors, representing as many countries, appeared on the platform, each depicting and the names of the books they represented being announced by Mary Martin before introducing each character by way of introduction. Costumes for the pageant were made by pupils of the Collegiate and Vocational School, from Bridge Street United Church during the Christmas holidays, under the Czechoslovakian costume was procured. A description of each of the costumes was expressed by Theda Mourcroft.

Colorful representative of China, of Greece, of the Queen Victorian era, the Elizabethan age, India, Turkey, Norway and many others, appeared before the student body as the different characters were announced by Kaye Jeffrey, secretary-treasurer of the library club in the school library.

A story of the prehistoric ice age as wierd as the boys portraying it added a touch of humor to the pageant with two skin dressed youths presenting a mock battle with relastic stone age clubs. Billy Jeffrey and Harry Abbott were the actors. "Mein Kampf" was represented by Jack Muirhead as Hitler.

Aside from the pageant, the Wednesday assembly period was featured by two Irish solo numbers, "Silver Wings in the Moonlight," by Ethel Smith, with the student body joining in the chorus of the song. A comedy stage skit representative of the typical family life of a mother preparing her four daughters for school on a Monday morning was also seen, while Mr. Kenneth Hill read the weekly collegiate stamp sales report.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, March 2 (CP) — Small gains marked the first hour trade index in the early session stock market today, with 1,000 shares the afternoon on Toronto exchange.

Gold mine and papers were moderately active groups in the trading, while weak groups in the mining list were Kirkland Lake Gold, Pamour and Preston East Dome.

In golds Teck Hughes, Malartic Gold Fields and Kirkland Lake were the quietest minor losses for Consumers, Central Patricia and Dominion Tar. Noranda and Steep Rock were slightly weaker base metals.

WALL STREET

New York, March 1 (AP)—Rails, airlines and specialties had a fair following in today's market session as other key groups remained in the background.

Bidding for the favored issues resulted in only fractional gains for the most part. The list was a bit mixed near the fourth hour but the markets tone was improved over yesterday. Dealings were slow, after a moderately active first hour.

Making a little headway were Santa Fe, Southern Railway, Delaware & Hudson, Southern Pacific, Texas Co., Goodrich, Chrysler, Studebaker, United Air Lines, Pan American Airways and United Aircraft. Continental Baking reached a new year's high on a substantial turnover.

Canadian issues were uneven with Brazilian Traction, Montreal Tramways gaining fractions and Hiram Walker yielding a fraction. Canadian Pacific was unchanged.

Rail bonds lost ground in the Bond market. Commodities were steady.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

Toronto, March 1 —(CP)— Cattle trade was very dull on the Dominion market today with prices weak on all grades. Veal calves, hogs and sheep were steady. One car of Western lambs was unsold.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Marketing Service were: Cattle 300, calves 100, hogs 1,000, sheep lambs 300. Unsold from yesterday were 800 hogs and 100 lambs.

Prices in the trade included:

Cattle: A few Butcher steers and heifers at $11.25; Butcher cows $7.25-$8, a few red yearlings $12-$12.50.

Calves: $16-$17 for choice, other grades unchanged at $14.

Hogs: Generally $17.15 dressed-weight, now $13.25 drawn.

Sheep: A few at $10.

MONTREAL LIVESTOCK

Montreal, March 1 —(CP)— Receipts: Cattle 400, calves 200, hogs 1,000, sheep and lambs 300. Unsold from yesterday were 800 hogs.

Cattle: A few Butcher steers and heifers at $11.25; Butcher cows $7.25-$8, a few red yearlings $12-$12.50.

Calves: $16-$17 for choice, other grades unchanged at $14.

Hogs: Generally $17.15 dressed-weight, now $13.25 drawn.

Sheep: A few at $10.

HOGS

Toronto, March 1 —(CP)— Prices were unchanged in the hog markets reporting early today.

Dressedweight: Chatham $16.60 per hundredweight, Brantford $16.85 plus transportation, Hamilton $16.85 plus transportation, Hamilton $17.85 delivered, Hull $16.85 plus transportation, Peterborough, Barrie, London $17 delivered.

Two Leap Year Babies Born In Hospital

Although for a time on Tuesday it appeared as February 29th no babies were going to ignore Belleville General Hospital, two new arrivals did put in their appearance on Wednesday. One of it was announced today by hospital officials. Until late afternoon yesterday there still had been no births at the hospital but between midnight and noon today hospital officials announced the birth of two baby girls.

The first arrival was the son of Cpl. and Mrs. Lloyd Robinson, 141 Church Street, Belleville, who arrived well before the midnight deadline and his father is with the R.C.A.F. stationed at Trenton. The second boy was born to Belleville parents and was born during the vernacular "got in just under the wire," being born at the late hour of 11:30. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. John Wilson, 7 Meyers Street with the attending physician being Dr. R. S. Gibson.

WILL LUFTWAFFE STRAIN ITSELF TO FORCE NEW FIGHT

Possibility of New Aerial Battle of Britain Is Discussed

By ROSE MUDRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

London, March 1 (CP Cable) — A new aerial battle of Britain may be waged before "D-day" for the forthcoming western European invasion as the German Air Force seeks to disrupt invasion preparations.

Indication that the Allied high command knows the Luftwaffe may strain itself to the limit to force such a struggle was provided in Sir Archibald Sinclair's press commencement yesterday that a new air offensive against Northern Britain had been created. The new group will operate under Air Marshal Sir Roderic Hill, former air officer commanding No. 2 fighter group.

Presumably Sir Archibald, air minister command, the new force revives in name the old "A.D.G.B." organization of early blitz days in which Spitfire and Hurricane fighters and night fighter pilots served. Recent London Baker Street area bombings in raids are likely only a curtain raiser for the gigantic air battle to come as a thunderous prelude to a continental invasion. Such a battle will continue the principal target as the Luftwaffe seeks to knock out communications, key factories and military installations. The enemy knows might and main to destroy morale by carrying out as much indiscriminate bombing of residential districts as possible.

Argyll Carnival Opens Tonight

The stage is all set for the opening tonight of Argyll Light Infantry spring Carnival and Variety Show in the Armouries tonight. A full program of stage performance will be presented by the Argyll's and the Queen City Amusement Company as master-of-ceremonies.

Some Notes on Problems of Poultry Raisers

Farm "Cost-Figures" Are Not Much Sense

By BEATRICUS
In Stratford Beacon-Herald

A week or two ago we made an article in the "Canadian Farm Press" by a farmer. Well, perhaps he is not quite a farmer, because he does have considerable income aside from his farm operations, but he does have considerable interest for the average farm operator in this day of high prices, labor shortage, and much discussion about farm prices being too low. Mr. Mason (that's the writer) referred particularly to the prices of eggs, and broke down the floor levels at about 26 cents per dozen average to the farmer. There are many who claim this is too low. The Free Press writer claims that it ate not ruinous and bases his argument on figures something like this: If 100 hens are laying 60 per cent. the gross returns will be $36.00 per month. Against this he charges 375 pounds of mixed grain at 3 cents, or $11.25, and 100 pounds of meat at $12.12, leaving a net income of $8.31 for the month. Suppose that flock was producing 60 per cent. that would mean a gross income of $42.00. The hens would eat slightly more, but Mr. Mason figures on a net profit of $17.13 for the month.

We agree that Mr. Mason's figures are quite fair. There are such things as oyster shell, green feed, etc., that are omitted, but his feed costs are high enough, we believe, to cover these items. What Mr. Mason overlooked was the replacement cost. Last fall pullets were selling at $3 each. These Leghorn pullets will have a salvage value of about 50 cents next Fall. Which would give us a replacement cost of about $125 for the flock of a hundred birds. The farmer who raises his own pullets from baby chick growth probably has a replacement cost of about $80. Now supposing those pullets laid at the rate of 40 per cent. the year round; according to the London man they would produce a profit of about one hundred dollars or, according to our figure, about $30 to cover the cost of labor, interest or investment and repairs to equipment. On labor at least a money loting proposition. The 60 or cent. flock would, of course, yield a fairly nice profit, but 60 per cent. is perhaps slightly above the production of the average Canadian hen. The fact that produces at the rate of 60 per cent. or 219 eggs per hen, per year, is a rarity as yet.

There are two reasons why we have referred to Mr. R. C. Mason's article. In the first place he says that "the exaggerated statements on the blue yarn befalling the hog and poultry raiser are bunk—no month, no less". We agree, he submit that Mr. Mason's figures on poultry profits are also bunk—no month, no less.

What farm people need today is a reliable set of cost figures. Figures every day on the farm, based on hundreds of Canadian farms—yes, hundreds of farms in Ontario alone, for every other province. We hear a great deal about "a floor price" for farm products in post-war years. "What is a fair floor price?" Mr. Mason asks. "One based on low production, a bonus for poor management?"

Where does poor management end and good management begin? In our time it may be correct to bonus poor management so that production of food stuff may be maintained, but we do not believe that it will be practical in post-war years when we again meet the competition of Denmark in bacon production, New Zealand in dairy production and the many other countries in meat and grain production. What is a fair price indeed! Why not some farm organization launch a survey on a large scale to have that question answered?

Then Mr. Mason has this concluding paragraph: "Let's not let the wailers wail too much, unchallenged. If we do we shall find real and urgent grievances ignored when we call attention to them because 'Wolf' has already been cried too loudly and too often."

We are certainly entitled to a fair price for our products, but there is a danger that higher prices will cause a greater reaction once normal world production and demand return. We agree with Mr. Mason. Mismanagement should not be bonused.

Oh, oh, we have just been informed that Mr. Mason's "egg" figures have been seriously challenged. In fact, at his own figures poultrymen have set out to prove and have proved on paper at least that even his best flock was a money-losing proposition. Moral:—There isn't much sense in writing down a lot of figures on farm costs. They vary so much from year to year and a bit of luck around the place does too. The answer lies in a well-stocked farm, cattle, hogs and poultry, hard work, long hours, good management and a likely profit. If it isn't too big we can assure ourselves the headache of filling out income tax forms—and that is something, too.

For Those Planning To Raise Chickens

(Fort Arthur News-Chronicle)

Anyone who is at all interested in chickens will be interested in everyone—for who does not like chicken fare?—knows that, when prices are high, the dual purpose fowl. There has been long search for the kind that would lay the eggs and at the end of its egg laying career make a good milk fed chicken roast.

The search has brought many varieties to the fore—white, black, blues, reds, browns, mottled, large and small. But in the main sense, there are two principal varieties—the white leghorns and the barred plymouth rocks.

Now the novice knows that the white leghorn is an egg producer and the barred rock is the dual purpose. The barred rock has been brought to a high state of perfection as an egg bird and table bird at the same time but the poultry fancier is too much settling in these days when there are incubators to assure the maternal privileges, to be too regarded as a waste of time. The biggest poultry farms in Ontario and Bay district incline to the white leghorn, for its eggs.

What has been wanted is a fowl that would include the good qualities of the white leghorn and the barred rock and none of the imperfections of either. The white leghorn, besides its shortcomings as a table bird, has been too temperamental. It is highly nervous. But its white eggs have had the difference in the markets over the brown of the barred rock.

A Canadian in California claims to have found the answer. The story goes back a number of years to a Canadian born Scotchman named James Dryden who went to the Western States around the turn of the century and, after heading poultry departments at different colleges, wound up with his own poultry farm at Modesto, California.

In all his years in the poultry business Dryden has been asking questions, experimenting, breeding and studying. He raised the first fowl that laid the eggs the first and the first to lay 1,000 eggs in her lifetime. He is a Rhode Island Red associated with him recently. All these years the Drydens were looking for the dual purpose hen. Said Horace Dryden: "For the breed in mind we wanted a mild and pleasant disposition, like the barred rock. We wanted other things, too, no cannibalism, for example, good body type, sound broodiness, high production of white eggs. We decided to cross barred rocks and leghorns."

After that it was a matter of selective year after year, picking out the birds that looked like the right direction, for some of the cross breeds inherited the characteristics of one parent breed and some of the other. Finally we produced a hen that wore barred rock feathers on a leghorn shape body with a head like a leghorn and white eggs of the leghorn. It was the feathering and broodiness of the barred rock ancestors, plus the body shape of the white leghorns. The new breed hasn't been named yet.

Incidentally the Drydens have found out a lot of other things about poultry, including disease-resistance, effects of feed on production and so on. They think the average hen should be laying 200 to 300 eggs per year instead of the present 130. For those who still have ambitions to retire to a chicken ranch in the sunny sky is the limit for progressive poultrymen. "The business is one for people who have imagination and like to use it."

Japanese Troops At Rabaul Keep Close to Foxholes

Allied Headquarters, Southwest Pacific, Feb. 29 (AP) — Japan's troops at Rabaul, New Britain, most heavily bombed and shelled spot in the south Pacific, kept close to their foxholes today while they counted up new damage.

During late last 24 days 2,305 tons of bombs and hundreds of high-explosive naval shells have crashed down on Rabaul's five airports, docks and supply areas and docks.

One of the heaviest raids, reported today in an Allied communique, took place Saturday, when 70 Allied planes dropped 164 tons of explosives, chiefly on the Vunapope airdrome and the harbor area.

It was the 12th consecutive day of heavy pounding for the Japanese base, and for the seventh straight day the Japanese failed to get a single protecting plane into the air.

The communique also reported 36 tons of bombs were dropped on enemy airports and installations in the Admiralty Islands, west of New Ireland; Airdromes in the Wewak area of New Guinea, were hit by 40 tons of bombs and Vunakanau airdrome at Alitape, west of Wewak, caught 72 tons of bombs.

Charge of Theft Is Dismissed

North Bay, Ont., Feb. 29—(CP)—Dismissal of a mail theft charge against a German prisoner who escaped three times within 18 months from a barbwire Ontario prison camp has been granted by Magistrate J. G. Gould on the ground that the prisoner removed articles from a mail bag while seeking means to facilitate his third escape.

After 13 Crown witnesses testified yesterday at the trial of 23-year-old Erwin Reinbrecht, a charge against him of stealing several packages of clothing, food, tobacco, perfume and a package of chewing gum from a mail bag in a Sprucedale camp and Northern Ontario railway train near North Bay last December was dismissed by Magistrate Gould, who expressed hope the case might be carried to a higher court.

"If anyone but a prisoner of war had committed this crime, it would have occurred when he removed the parcel from the mail bag," said the magistrate. "But I consider Broad removed them while still looking for something to aid in his escape."

SECOND CAVE-IN

Pittston, Pa., Feb. 29 (AP)—Mrs. Elizabeth Xatus opened the door of her home yesterday—and found that part of her back yard had disappeared. A section three feet square had sunk 15 feet in a cave-in, second here since two-year-old Jule Ann Fulmer was buried alive this month.

Von Mannstein Must Answer For Kiev Cruelties

London, March 1 —(CP)— Field Marshal Fritz von Mannstein, German army commander on the Russian Ukraine front, must answer for the destruction of Kiev and the deaths of more than 190,000 Soviet citizens during the Nazi occupation of that city, the Moscow radio said.

A Soviet Investigating Commission has found the citizens were "tortured to death, shot or poisoned in murder vans" by the Germans during the occupation of Kiev, said a broadcast recorded here by the Soviet monitor. The centres of death in the city was demolished and 1,742 communal buildings, 11,600 private homes were destroyed, the commission says quoted as reporting.

Von Mannstein, according to the broadcast, hundreds of thousands of Soviet citizens were sent to Germany along with factory equipment, while 200,000 persons were made homeless and nearly 1,000 state institutions destroyed.

The commission held that Erich Koch, German commissioner for the Ukraine and other Nazi officers shared Von Mannstein's guilt for "deliberately perpetrated against the Soviet people."

PROFESSOR CRITICIZED

Halifax, Feb. 29 (CP)—W. Kent Power, K.C., Calgary barrister and editor of the Western Weekly Law Reports, told a combined meeting of men's and women's Canadian Clubs here last night that "long hatred" of Soviet citizens was "stultifying the youth of western Canada in their depressive and dangerous ideas."

600 RAF PLANES DUMP 1,900 TONS ON STUTTGART

Diversionary Raid Made on Munich, Targets in France

Daylight Sweep by U.S. Bombers Also Aimed at Stuttgart Sector

NAZIS OVER BRITAIN

By GLADWIN HILL
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, March 2 (AP)—A force of 600 R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. bombers blasted the German industrial city of Stuttgart last night and the raid was followed up today by a strong force of United States bombers hitting at points in southwest Germany.

The American target was not announced immediately, but the direction of the attack suggested an R.A.F.-U.S. double night-and-day punch in the Stuttgart area, just like those hitting Berlin last week's powerful aerial drive.

More than 600 R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. bombers participated in last night's operations with a relatively low proportional loss of only four planes. Air Vice-Marshal Bufton turned daily Mosquito bombers staged a diversionary raid on Munich, said formations of attack targets in France and the low countries.

London newspapers estimated 1,- 000 to 1,900 tons of bombs were dumped on Stuttgart last night.

Head Out at Dawn

The daylight formations headed out toward Europe at dawn, with medium bombers and the U.S. 8th Air Force bombing "military objectives" in northern France, perhaps on the "rocket coast".

More than 1,000 bombers flew over the Reich this afternoon.

German raiders shook 100 miles, retaliated against Malta last night, killing several persons and causing damage at the supposedly-separated Vittoriosa-Senglea area.

Five were knocked down. Many planes were reported on the southeast coast, but only a few bombers penetrated to London.

Two of the Germans fell to Wing Cmdr. Geoffrey Goodman, leader of an R.A.F. Mosquito night fighter squadron.

Get Two in 45 Minutes.

About to go on leave, Goodman "spotted the evening star", decided there would be something doing and went up. He exploded two of the enemy planes in the air with cannon fire inside of 45 minutes.

Loss for 600 bombers was a real testimony to the effectiveness of the defenses of the war against Nazi air defenses, and of the British fighting Red Army South Pacific at ground level on the continent also was a factor, keeping many fighters grounded.

The assault on Stuttgart, transportation junction on the route to Italy and centre of the Daimler-Benz engine and Bosch ignition Works, was the 15th major blow against Nazi war facilities in 13 days.

Attack Nazi Ship.

During the night an R.C.A.F. Wellington bomber on coastal command patrol met the full force of attack in 24 hours on a German merchantman off The Netherlands Coast. It had first been shot up by cannon fire from Beaufighters. Both ships opened each set afire. Its escort ships abandoned it.

An R.C.A.F. Wellington of Coastal Command bombed and damaged an enemy submarine depot at Gravelines and a mosquito on intruder patrol in northern France destroyed an enemy aircraft.

A German broadcast recorded here said that Field Marshal Hermann Goering in an order of the day on the anniversary of formation of the present German air force, declared: "You have again excelled yourselves both in attack and defense, doing your duty well. He praised the "magnificent bearing of the German people" under air attack.

Stuttgart, site of important German aero engine and motor vehicle and man aircraft factories, was last bombed Feb. 5, when it was hit in daylight by a large formation of United States heavy bombers which also struck at Mannheim and Augsburg.

The city, in southwest Germany, is approximately 45 miles from the nearest coastal base in Britain.

London Attacked

Berlin acknowledged southwest German was bombed during the night, but did not name the target.

A German broadcast said the raiders ran into heavy clouds and dropped their bomb loads aimlessly.

The German Air Force attacked London today, and although the raid was on a small scale a tremendous barrage was put up in some districts, while raid flares and searchlights filled the sky.

Chinese Troops Capture Makaw In North Burma

New Delhi, March 2 — (AP) — Chinese troops have taken the town of Makaw, north of the Tanai river in Northern Burma, and West Allied forces driving south on the Kaladan valley met stiffened Japanese resistance north and northwest of Apaukwa, Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten announced today.

British troops yesterday stormed Japanese positions east of Ringdet on the eastern slopes of the Mayu mountain range and killed many of the enemy, the communique said.

Other Allied forces met strong opposition when they attacked enemy positions east of the Kalapanzin river and continue to defend.

The column which occupied Makaw moved south to take Lammyo- ung On, 4 1-2 miles away near the Tanai river.

R. A. F. and U. S. fighters and bombers attacked Akyab north, and south Burma since Monday, attacking Japanese communications, transports and troop concentrations.

Japs Bloodily Repulsed At Momote Airdrome

Allied Headquarters, Southwest Pacific, March —(AP)—Japanese troops launched a bloody attack on the pre-dawn counter-attack yesterday against Americans encircling the Momote airdrome in the Admiralty Islands, an Allied communique reported today.

A headquarters spokesman said the Japanese attack apparently was "pretty sharp." The Japanese possibly are receiving reinforcements from Manus island, 200 miles away, a narrow strip of shallow water east of Los Negros.

American heavy and medium bombers blasted Japanese war positions in support of the ground operations.

No reports have yet been received on the Japanese aerial attack against the invasion which has pin the Americans deep inside the perimeter of their South Pacific defenses.

Allied aircraft continued hammering the weakened Japanese base at Rabaul, New Britain, and other enemy air installations in the northeastern New Guinea coast.

Five German planes were reported shot down.

A church spa set ablaze by incendiary bombs in this district and there were some casualties.

Bombs fell only few raiders succeeded in breaking through London's balloon barrage, the heaviest being followed a pattern established Tuesday night, when R. A. F. night bombers attacked Berlin for the first time in daylight.

R. A. F. coastal command Beaufighters destroyed enemy vessels off the Netherlands coast yesterday.

LEAVES $185,176 ESTATE

Winnipeg, March 2 (CP)—The will of J. W. Dafoe, editor-in-chief of the Winnipeg Free Press who died Jan. 9, disposing of an estate valued at $185,176, yesterday was filed for probate in the surrogate court here. The beneficiaries are members of his family, including Mrs. Dafoe, widow; Mrs. Dafoe, two sons and four daughters.

Allied Military Policy Respecting Rome and Property Defined

Washington, March 2. (AP) — The Allied military policy respecting Rome is to avoid house-to-house fighting in the city which the Germans themselves refrain from using for military purposes, and thus to preserve civilization said today. But he emphasized that soldiers' lives must be safeguarded, "whatever the cost in material things".

Asked by a question of the destruction of the Abbey of Monte Cassino, Stimson told a Press Conference, "the policy of the War Department is to destroy only when every possible precaution is to be taken against the destruction of cultural, historical and religious property.

Stimson said it became obvious, however, that the enemy is making use of the monastery for military purposes, and that the lives of our soldiers are thereby endangered, there can be no alternative".

So far as is now known, the Secretary said, there are no large concentrations of German troops in the vicinity of the Abbey, but "two days ago" the Anzio beachhead and the main front in Southern Italy.

JAPANESE CARRIER PROBABLY SUNK BY BRITISH SUBS

Torpedo Hits Scored On Japanese Cruiser Also Reported by British Admiralty

OTHER SHIPS SUNK

London, March 2. (CP)—British submarines in the Pacific "in eastern waters" torpedoed and probably sank a Japanese aircraft carrier of 7,000 tons, and scored torpedo hits on a Japanese cruiser, the Admiralty announced today.

A Royal Navy submarine first sighted the carrier, escorted by the submarine chasers, in the northern approaches to Makassar Strait, and fired a salvo of torpedoes. No hits were observed, and the sub chasers drove the attacker off to counterattack.

The British ship returned to the attack, scoring a hit and stopping the carrier.

"A further torpedo which struck the enemy amidships caused a violent explosion. The ship heeled over, and is believed to have sunk", the communique said.

The cruiser was successfully attacked in the same area. Three hits results were not observed.

British submarines have torpedoed and sank a medium-sized supply ship and destroyed a smaller supply ship by gunfire.

Submarines which carried out these successful attacks commanded by Lt.-Cmdr. R. M. Favell, R.N.R., Lieut. H. L. Bush, D.S.C., R.N., and Lieut. Campbell, D.S.C., R.N., and Lieut. D. G. Bayly, D.S.C., R.N., the Admiralty reported.

These successes provided fresh evidence that British sub. are able to bring increased forces to bear against the enemy's communications in the Far East, perhaps using craft freed when the U-boat campaign eased off from the Mediterranean.

Today's announcement followed three other claims of British submarine successes against the Japanese.

Feb. 13—A Japanese U-boat chaser in Malacca Strait was left "stopped and silent" following an encounter with a submarine.

Feb. 19—Submarines sank two enemy vessels in the aerial and naval craft.

Feb. 21—A submarine sank a number of the same class in approaches to Malacca strait.

Bulgarian Premier To Broadcast

oLndon, March 2—(AP)—Strong reactions in both Bulgarian and Russian circles to reports Finnish-Russian peace negotiations were suggested today in British Broadcasting Corporation from the Middle East, with both Axis satellites being regarded as the most fearful to see Finland out of the war.

At the same time, Berlin broadcast a O. N. S. Radio quoted as saying Bulgarian Premier Dobri Bozilov had made an "important" radio speech Sunday; the Hungarian M. T. I. said a speech delivered at Premier Nicolas Kallay would "mark a turning point in Hungarian ance" today in the Hungarian parliament and the Budapest radio said the premier's speech "would be of great importance to the Hungarian parliament and the Budapest radio said the premier's speech "would be of great importance" today in

THREE CHIMNEY FIRES

Stovepipes and chimney fires have made it rather a busy time for members of the local fire department during the past day, with no less than three having been answered since Tuesday, Yesterday firemen were called to 84 Catherine Street and 119 Victoria Ave. for stovepipe fires, while this morning overheated pipes at the corner of Frank and Pinto Streets resulted in more water than usual to extinguish. Firemen reported it is one of the worst blazes of its nature, to be seen in the city although only small hand pumps were needed to control it. Very little damage resulted from any of the blazes, it was stated.

TRENTON HAS TWO LEAP YEAR BABIES

Trenton, March 2 —(Special)— This town had at least two Leap Year babies, it was learned this morning. First reported was the birth of a son at Belleville General Hospital to an address in Cpl. Cyr and Mrs. Lloyd Robinson of Trenton, while today it was learned Mr. and Mrs. Frank Dewan Archibald, 76 Heber Street, also had a son born to them on the last day of February. Their fourth son, the new arrival weighed six pounds, with Dr. Johnston being the attending physician.

FLT.-SGT. M. A. POTTER PRISONER OF WAR

Previously reported as missing following aerial operations overseas, Flt.-Sgt. Marwood A. Potter, son of G. R. Potter of Warkworth, is now a prisoner-of-war in Germany, according to notification from headquarters at Ottawa.

TWO AWARDED EFFICIENCY MEDAL

The Canadian Efficiency Medal has been awarded to two district members of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, it is announced today by F. H. Woodley, Public Relations Officer, for Military District No. 3. The men, both over-seas, are Lieutenant C. A. Van Dalegleissel of Madoc, and Pte. W. J. H. Vandeal of Picton. Since the recommendation for the award of the Medal was made for Lieut Van Dalegleissel, he has been promoted from company sergeant major.

CUSTOMS RETURNS SHOW INCREASE

A considerable increase in customs and excise collections for the month of February is reported as compared with the same month during 1943 was reported today by Lieut.-Col. R. A. Caen, collector for the Belleville office. Returns for the past month totalled $368,946.34 as compared with $160,232.21, showing an increase of $183,019.87.

WINDOWS IN CRUISER BROKEN BY YOUTHS

Robert Dawson, 90 Camilton Road, complained to city police yesterday that his cabin cruiser boat had been damaged by mischievous boys. Windows in the craft were shattered and accessories broken off the boat. The damage is estimated at nearly $75, Mr. Dawson told police. Investigation revealed the work of several teen-aged lads who reside nearby and were seen in the vicinity of the craft this week. The boat is beached at the rear of Mr. Dawson's home near the Moira River bank.

McNichol of Marmora graduated from No. 15 S.F.T.S. at St. Hubert, Quebec, as a pilot officer. Sgt. Johnston, Trenton flying officer, pilots wins pinned on his tunic"at No. 18 S.F.T.S. at Gimli, Manitoba.

Number of Men Of This District Back Home

Again back in Canada after serving four years and three months overseas, Pte. Harry J. Crossen, Madoc Road, Belleville, was greeted by his wife and family Wednesday afternoon as he stepped off the train at Belleville. T was assigned to get him and he stated to the Ontario Intelligencer. Granted a furlough, he will report back to Kingston at the conclusion. Pte. Crossen enlisted in the Hastings & Prince Edward Regiment in October, 1939, and went overseas with the unit in the same year. Since that time he has been employed for the most part in Scotland but served for one month in the east. With the exception of a lasting rash he had experienced little action, he said.

Among the group of soldiers returning to Canada were members of the R. & P. E. Regiment during clashes with the enemy in Sicily. Quite a number of them were from Belleville district.

Wounded in Sicily

L. Cpl. Cran Greatrix, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Greatrix, of Picton, who lost his left eye and suffered shrapnel wounds when a high explosive shell landed near him at Nissoria, Sicily, said "It's good to be home after four years." He praised the work of the medical units serving on the fighting fronts saying they were the best possible." He enlisted in January, 1940 and joined the R. & P. E's at Aldershot.

Pte. G. J. Vieau, of Trenton, who stepped off the train wearing the "Crusader" patch of the 8th Army, received wounds during shelling mortar at Assoro on the morning of July 21, 1943. He was a member of a demolition squad and was moving toward the front lines at Assoro when the enemy opened fire. His muscles were severed in the right arm.

Recuperated in N. Africa

Another Belleville soldier returned was Pte. A. Herbert Cooper, son of Mr. George Cooper, King St. He went overseas in February, 1940 and took part in the Sicilian campaign. He took part actually in last September, but made a good recovery in a North African hospital, England.

Other district soldiers to return to their homes were Pte. H. Barry Deserino; Sgt. J. F. Burtt, Norwood; Cnr. E. J. Bush, Madoc; Pte. S. Claus, Deseronto; Spr. G. G. Conger, Napanee; Pte. E. E. Cowan, Picton; Spr. S. C. Finch, Warkworth; Pte. M. H. Gasbel, Bancroft; Cpl. R. M. Leavens, R.R. Belleville; Gnr. R. A. N. Sharpe, Stirling; Pte. C. C. Thompson, Bloomfield; Pte. D. W. Vesterfelt, Marmora; Cpl. J. D. Whitley, Trenton and Sgt. T. H. Jordan, Deseronto.

Precipitation on 22 Days Out of 29 as Compared With 18 Out of 28 Last Year.

Taking everything into consideration the month of February, 1944, was just average with no records of any nature being established, although the average temperature was just a "trifle" colder than the same month one year ago.

Maximum temperature for the month was concluded was 43 degrees with the thermometers dropping to 16.4 below zero. One year ago the extreme were 42 degrees and 26.2 below zero. Despite the indication of the extremes during February, 1943, according to records kept at the Belleville Water Purification Plant the weather really was a trifle colder during the past month.

That very little rain fell during the past month is indicated by a rainfall of only 1.35 compared with 1.15 inches last year while the snowfall was put at 21 inches as compared with 16.3 in February, 1943. Total precipitation was 2.86 as compared with 2.45 last year. Possibly the colder weather last month was responsible for the fact that the absence of the sun as precipitation was received on 22 days out of the month as compared with 18 days on which precipitation fell last year.

Local Reaction To Discontinuance Of Meat Rationing

The Ontario Intelligencer conducted a survey of the city's meat markets and butcher shops following the announcement of the discontinuance of meat rationing and learned that it is by no means safe to come to any conclusion about it. One meat dealer expressed the opinion that there would be more evidence during the week-ends before housewives prepared for their Sunday meals. He said that there would be larger roasts and cuts of meat ordered now that the precious coupons were no needed. Another butcher said that it would be a good thing in one respect, if in no other way, that it would mean that a man who worked all day and came home in his own wagon, would now be able to come by a cut of meat for some meat to take home for his supper whereas, before, he had been unable to do this because his wife usually had the ration book with her when she went to buy. Increase in purchases has been noted. A third butcher, however, declared that this might be due to the fact that Coupon No. 48 had just expired on Tuesday when the Government Order came into effect and housewives had used it before they knew about the lifting of the rationing order.

A sum total of $7,338.94 has been received by the I.M.C.S. "BELLEVILLE" Fund since the opening of the campaign on February 2nd, to date. Further contributions have been promised as the result of private efforts and 25 per cent of the profits of the Argyll Light Infantry Garrison now in process at the Armouries, will help swell this figure before the close of the week. The thanks and appreciation of the committee have been expressed many times and again in this final public acknowledgement, the committee will meet in their final financial meeting on Thursday, March 2nd, to discuss matters and means of purchasing of the equipment for the "BELLEVILLE". Overseas Letters Should Be Correctly Addressed

Despite frequent reminders from the postal department for the general public to make sure of all mail, over 250,000 letters for overseas had to be held over last year for attention by the redirectory section of the post office, and as a result of delay in delivery and causes great disappointment on the part of soldiers to receive appreciate their mail from home. Last year a total of 28,000,000 pounds of mail was despatched from Canada overseas.

Now more than ever before misdirected mail or that carrying insufficient or illegible addresses, or our only is mailed for overseas. In addition to the misdirected overseas mail, there was put over one half million items of ordinary domestic mail received at the dead letter office for the same cause. It is estimated at the base post office more than 22,000 letters per month required redirection while during the same period 2,000 parcels require redirection or reconditioning due to inadequate preparation.

With the resources of the entire postal system taxed as never before in handling the tremendous volume of mail, the department urges the public to make sure the address on mail is clearly and correctly written; write a return address in the upper left corner of the envelope, and affix the correct postage and mail as early in the day as possible.

Pte. R. Towns Of Ormsby Killed

Member of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment for approximately three years, Pte. Raymond Towns of Ormsby, Hastings County, has been killed according to information received by the 47th publication this morning. Pte. Towns was killed during the fighting in Italy. It was stated Although formerly of Ormsby, Mrs. Towns, with her small son, is now residing in Belleville where she is employed at a local restaurant.

Traffic Cases Feature Court

Traffic cases featured Thursday's County Court held before His Honor Judge J. L. Lloyd at the Court House.

Charged with speeding under the War Measures Act, resulted in Gerald Way, Belleville, and Gordon Parsons, Omemee, being assessed $17.50, including costs, following pleas of guilty.

Fred Carter, Holloway, paid $12.50 including costs after pleading guilty to a charge of driving a motor vehicle with improper lights in a restricted area, Donald Wilson, Belleville, contributed $7.50 to the fund. Convicted of driving a motor vehicle with improper lights, Cpl. Floyd Urch, Belleville, $4.50, while Donald Purdy, R.R. No. 2, Belleville, paid the court coffers by virtue, entitled the court coffers by $7.50 upon being convicted of a careless driving charge. Having liquor in an illegal place proved costly for Howard Hamilton, R.R. No. 7, Belleville, as his folly cost him $12.00, which included costs.

Two Charges of car theft were heard by Lloyd Billow, of Kingston, but as the accused was not present, Assistant Crown Attorney S. O. Robertson requested an enlargement for the week. Billow, if he will be recalled, was in a stolen motor car last November 30th when Constable McKeown of the R.C.M.P. was shot in the hand during a running gun fight. As the car, a Roy Weaver, of Belleville, was sent to prison, Billow's case will be heard next week.

Canadian Legion To Collect Fats

The Canadian Legion, Local Branch 95, have been taken over the job of collecting waste fats from the citizens of Belleville during the campaign started by the Legion. The slogan of the campaign is aptly: "Every Day Every Kitchen an Arsenal."

The need is still urgent. War is the more than has disrupted Canada's normal supply of oils and fats from the Far East. Fats make glycerine, and glycerine is required in explosives to help the enemy war factories, to down their planes, to sink their submarines. Canada needs millions of pounds of fats and Canadian housewives can help all of them. Save every possible drop of used cooking fat—bacon grease, meat drippings, frying fats —every kind you use. After all the cooking fat has been obtained from them, pour them through a kitchen strainer into a clean, wide-mouthed can and keep in a cool place.

This Fats Campaign must be sustained for the DURATION of the war. Expolsives are needed in ever increasing quantities and the branches of the Canadian and British Legions in all areas as well as the Allies push toward victory.

The local branch of the Canadian Legion has a systematic campaign plan mapped out for the collection of fats in the city which will be explained at a later date. Anyone having waste fats now for the time when the Legion will call at your home for it.

The War Today— Bulgaria Might Desert Hitler Should Finland Capitulate

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

The Finnish press today is talking a hostile view of Moscow's Armistice terms, and Press in Stockholm expressed the opinion that their country isn't likely to accept the Red proposals, mainly because she couldn't afford to withdraw her troops from their present positions as a preliminary to further talks. However, Helsinki presumably is sparring for position. Finland's alternative to making peace now is a futile disaster by continuing as an Ally of Germany.

It's a curious moment not only for Finland but for the United Nations since her intimation she doubtedly would act in motion great events favorable to the Allied cause. As the signs read, capitulation by the Finns might impel Bulgaria also to desert the Axis. Realizing all this, you get an added significance from Marshal Stalin's statement to President Roosevelt that he believes the final defeat of Hitler is near.

Axis Satellites' Position

Stalin's Red armies have set the German battle line in Russia, rocking until even its extreme flanks are being shaken. Those flanks are Finland in the north and Bulgaria in the south.

These small countries were seized upon as Buttresses by Hitler when he attacked Russia. Forced Bulgaria joined the Axis more than nine months before the attack on Russia began, and German troops entered the country the next day. Finland, for her part, was living with the idea of deserting the Nazi master, but fear has kept her in line. Observers in Washington feel that Bulgaria would be forced to safeguard them from Hitler's wrath, by Finland's capitulation.

Occupation by Nazi Troops

One of the most terrifying conditions Finland and Bulgaria face in such a move lies in the fact that they are occupied by Nazi troops. The crash of German hob-nailed military boots upon the pavements of Finnish and Bulgarian cities has an ominous sound. You can't blame Finland and Sofia for trying to safeguard themselves against retaliation.

There is a strong possibility that both countries would become temporary battle grounds, until the Germans were cleared out by force, or were threatened with being cut off and annihilated. It would be well to prepare Hitler to abandon these positions voluntarily.

Flt. Lt. Payton Heard by Y.P.U. Of Holloway St.

A very interesting and helpful program in charge of Maude Burns and the fellowship group was enjoyed by Holloway Street Y.P.U. at the meeting on Tuesday evening.

Taking part in the worship service of which the theme was "Lenten Meditations" Miss Mae Allen, Marjorie Hitchon and Maude Burns. Special music of a sacred nature by a group of young people from the Salvation Army, consisting of a solo, duet, and group numbers, was well received and greatly appreciated.

The guest speaker of the evening was Flt. Lt. Payton, Padre at No. 5 T.T.S. who chose a very timely topic during this the Lenten season "Prayer." Speaking for a few moments on "Lent and its Meaning", Flt. Lt. Payton stressed the fact that truly keeping Lent does not in merely denying ourselves some pleasure, as many believe, but rather in spending much time in study and earnest prayer.

"Prayer may be defined," said the speaker, "as communion with God", during the contributions made by great Christian leaders and saints of the church during the past ages, Flt. Lt. Payton urged that we take more time as they did to observe strength and guidance from God before beginning each day and the problems confronting us.

Three Important Things.

"In these important things about prayer", he continued, "are (1) Our attitude—that we be humble as the publican, not proud like the Pharisee—(2) Persistence—that we pray without ceasing concerning what is troubling us and (3) expectancy—that we realize that God will answer our prayer in the way which He knows is best for us."

Mrs. Wills remarked Flt. Lt. Payton in concluding this inspiring message, "how things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of."

A vote of thanks was tendered the speaker and musical talent by Nora Farrell, following which the meeting closed with the Mizpah Benediction.

Bill Garden Show, Carnival At Armouries Entertaining

Games, Dancing Enjoyed and Children Swarm to Matinee

FAIR ATTENDANCE

The first - nighters in Belleville, who came out Wednesday night to the Belleville Armouries were more than pleased with the stage show they saw presented by the Garden Troupe under the auspices of the 15 Argyll Light Infantry Battalion on the opening night of the Carnival. Several hundred people were present at the performance, and many more came late to take advantage of the dancing and the games of chance provided for their entertainment.

The consensus of opinion was unanimous in agreeing that the stage presentation was more than worth the price of admission. It is a fast moving, streamlined musical production capably guided by a smooth-operating Master-of-Ceremonies, Joe Murphy, who also gave a number of impersonations which included Reveral G. Robinson, Cleo Arliss, Baby Snooks, Ned Sparks and Adolph Hitler. The dancing and musical numbers were smartly dressed and well done by a troupe of dancing girls who appear on the stage in dance routines, the "Paper-Doll Dance" and a "Highland Fling" done in swing-time. The girls are good as dancers and good to look at as girls. Doris Beauty dancer, was greeted by the audience for her second appearance after she had proven herself an attractive asset to the stage by her first number. A "One Man Band" act done by Clair Rouse, brought much applause. He is a versatile performer, who has a more than better idea of what is entertaining. Bill Garden's Band, a better than average prestidigitator, or magician if you will, and his assistant gave a good performance. If not mystifying, was entertaining. The acrobatic team, The Lowell's, amazed their audience with their demonstrations of head-balancing and sense of equilibrium.

Matinee Big Success

During the afternoon the armouries was opened to the school children of the city through the courtesy of C. H. C. Ponton and over seven hundred children filed into the building in "organized disorder" to almost fill the floor space allotted to them in front of the stage. When the last day almost filled the space allotted to them, it is meant that they did not stay in the one place for long. The balcony was barricaded and marked "out of bounds", but this meant nothing to the youthful commandoes, who decended in force shortly after four o'clock. First the barrier was dispensed with and a hundred or more smiling and shouting faces were seen looking down upon those who had not yet found their way upstairs. They overflowed the floor outside the roped-off area and clambered on tables and chairs and depleted the stock of hot dogs that the first half-hour. There was no doubt in anyone's mind that they were enjoying themselves. The stage show was put on for them with a few special juvenile numbers done by those not included in the night's performance and the building was cleared of the last child in ample time for them to be home for their evening meal.

Games Enjoyed.

During the night, preceding and following the stage show, games of chance were operated for the amusement of the people who wished to try their luck. Two mammoth bingo games were in operation and attracted most of the crowd. Other games such as "Keno" game, crown and anchor, darts, over seven and under seven and a variety of wheels, which dispensed cigarettes as prizes to the winners were in full running order until late in the evening, and the finale of the Carnival was the Biney-dancing to the music of the Bill Garden sextette, which also played for the show. Their music was good and the dancey apparently enjoyed it as many of them stayed until the end and did not miss a single dance. In anticipation of a larger crowd tonight, the armouries staff and general chairman of the Carnival, Lieut. Orliff A. Lloyd are arranging to provide more dancing space and seating capacity for the stage presentation.

Obituary

LATE THOMAS E. NEAL

Marmora, March 2 — The funeral of the late Thomas Ervin Neal was held on Wednesday afternoon and was one of the largest to be seen locally for some years. Many were present to pay a tribute to Mr. Neal. Interment was in Belleville Cemetery. Rev. Andrew's United Church where service was conducted at 2.30 p.m. by Rev. W. F. Woodger of Cobourg, assisted by Rev. A. B. Chadwell. Out of respect for his memory the late Mr. Neal having been school trustee for the past ten years, Marmora public school was closed for the afternoon. The service was under auspices of Springbrook L.O.L. 417 and the late Mr. Neal was a member of Committal was made in Mt. Nebo cemetery, services of the Orange Order were taken by Allan MacCombgard Everett Cook. There were many beautiful floral emblems, testifying to the high regard in which the deceased was held.

LATE MRS. MARGARET HANNAH BULMAN

"The organization which we now are reaching is that which is best calculated to meet the tremendous task which lies before us in completing the defeat of Germany and reinforcing the armies against the enemy in the Far East."

Sir James added:

"Equipment of the forces for overseas now has reached a very high degree of perfection. Training is working up to the climax. We think everybody is ready.

"I have said nothing about that vast but important organization which is charged with the work of assembling them and bringing them on their appointed task.

With Sheer Heelf.

"My confidence is that what has been done in the past and in those spheres will best meet assuredly show itself on the bodies of the enemy. The task of conquest is complete and rests upon faith that the right cause and the cause of the great tribulation is the best way to victory."

Sir James said far too little is said in praise of the British soldier and merchant seaman. He concluded, "fortunately there will be many opportunities of giving credit and respect in the coming months."

Sir James said that plans for preliminary military administration of Burma as it is reoccupied have been worked out by the British and British possessions in the Far East are under consideration.

Far Europe plans to deal with various territories in return have been concerted or are being discussed with all concerned and a great deal of study has been given on problems of administrating conquered Germany.

Few to Return Home.

Discussing demobilization he said it was no good thinking hint the whole army or even the greater part of it would return home as soon as Germany is defeated. Japan would still be in the war and Britain is in honor bound to see through the job of defeating her.

"Perhaps the only certainty is that for many years we will be forced to call for service, where the interests of world peace to maintain considerable armed forces and that land forces will have to play their part," he said.

Of the postwar army he said, "we must never return to the situation as we knew it for 10 years preceding this war when every unit of the British army was short of peacetime establishment and supply officers were not merely inadequate in numbers but in some cases quality too."

Farm Conveniences

(Editorial in The Financial Post.)

Farmers are the backbone of Canada's economic life and their troubles hurt every Canadian.

Keeping the young men and women with brains and energy in the business of farming is, therefore a key Canadian problem. One factor which would undoubtedly help to reverse the nationally dangerous trend from farm to city would undoubtedly be better living and working conditions such as would be provided by electric power, running water and other conveniences, of furnaces, flush toilets, bathtubs, sinks and the other conveniences which city dwellers take for granted.

On Canada's farm 83 per cent of the dwellings are of wooden construction.

Only 12 per cent of our farm homes have hot air furnaces.

Only 20 per cent have electric lighting; 7.3 have a bathtub.

There is a refrigerator in 22.2 per cent; and only one farm home in 25 has mechanical refrigeration which we find in nearly a third of the urban homes.

There is an automobile on only 43.7 per cent of our farms and a telephone in 29.2 per cent.

Only one farm home out of 36 has an electric vacuum cleaner.

Every Canadian has a vital interest in converting the potential market into an actual market, for economic reasons, and particularly for social reasons.

Fortunately rural electrification is likely to make enormous strides during the postwar period. Real farm purchasing power has practically doubled since the depression level of 1932. Our measure of success in maintaining reasonably high levels of farm purchasing power will be of enormous significance in shaping the Canada of tomorrow.

Twin Heifer Calves Born Leap Year Day

Possibly bossy Holstein was "in the know" regarding the Ottawa announcement Tuesday night that meat rationing would be discontinued for the time being and as a result was taking precautionary measures against the future when and then again possibly it was just coincidence that twin heifer calves were born on the farm of Mr. Roy Clarke, 2nd concession, Thurlow, on Tuesday.

But then heifer calves are not uncommon among bovine circles, although this is the first time that this department has heard of Leap Year heifer calves being born. What that might mean among Holstein's can only be conjectured. Both the mother and the twin calves were reported as doing fine.

Deaths, Elections May Cost The Control of House

Washington, March 2 (AP)— Deaths and special elections to fill vacancies in Congress today menaced the Democratic majority in the House of Representatives this session and reduce their membership to its lowest in more than 10 years.

Today's division stood at 116 Democrats and 71 Republicans, with five Democratic vacancies and one Republican. While four seats are held by minor party members.

Democratic representation started in the present Congress at 222, four more than an actual majority of the 435 members when all seats were filled.

The Republicans started with 209, the same number they now have and four fewer than they expect to have when special elections are held to fill current vacancies.

The Democratic strength, which dropped to 216 with the death of Rep. Leonard W. Schuetz of Illinois, Feb. 13, rose to 217 this week with the election of James H. Travers to the seat vacated by the resignation of Rep. Joseph A. Gavagan, of New York City.

But the same day it fell to 216 with the death of Rep. Thomas H. Cullen, of New York. Cullen's death was the 11th among House members of the 78th Congress. Four others have resigned. Nine of the 15 vacancies have been filled, seven by Republicans and two by Democrats, with the Republicans scoring a net gain of one seat in the three special elections.

In the forthcoming six special elections, Rep. Charles A. Halleck of Indiana, chairman of the Republican Congressional Committee is conceding only one seat to the Democrats.

ART TREASURES SALVAGED

London, March 2 (CP)— Art treasures valued at more that £226,000 (about $1,000,000) were salvaged by rescue workers from the debris and wreckage of a building bombed in a recent German raid on London. They were part of a great collection in the building.

declared flatly "Peace cannot be reached on the basis of the announced conditions."

"We cannot abandon our essential natural rights and expose ourselves completely without protection," the paper declared. "Responsible organs of the state must decide. It is their duty to find an honorable peace. The announced conditions give no hope in this respect."

Moscow Accused

Unit Suomi accused Moscow of publishing the terms in order to "gain a political and moral advantage so that the Finns will be unreasonable and stubborn if you insist upon accepting."

The Liberal Hufvudstadsbladet, leading Swedish-language newspaper in Finland, said the Soviet terms "do not open those perspectives in which we so eagerly wanted."

"Real peace," it said, "must create a state which permits the people in return to peaceful work and live without any anxiety in the near future. Such a state hardly would be reached if we accepted Moscow's conditions. Acceptance would expose ourselves to the risk of becoming involved in another war and would transform our own territory into a war theatre."

Great Disappointment

It said Moscow's proposals were "a great disappointment" because they were "not so moderate as had been expected."

Finnish sources in Stockholm expressed similar views and said they believed the persons in Helsinki it is unlikely that Finland would accept the Russian proposals —mainly because she cannot afford to withdraw troops from their present positions as a preliminary to further talks.

Reports from Helsinki said the Finnish government was planning to send a delegation to Moscow, but these were wholly unconfirmed.

Confident of Early Victory

Premier Stalin's reply to President Roosevelt's greetings on the 26th anniversary of the Red Army is optimistic for he sees the defeat of the Nazis near. Here are his own words, "I am strongly convinced that the time is near when the successful struggle of the armed forces of the Soviet Union, together with the armies of the United Nations and Great Britain on the basis of the agreements reached at Moscow and Teheran will lead to the final defeat of our common enemy, Hitlerite Germany."

The Associated Press writer's view is that while politically and militarily the campaign seems to be behind schedule, yet there are many ominous nature are at work among which he mentions some that could speed up the campaign, such as possible ending of the war between Finland and Russia with the Finns withdrawing out of the conflict and so exposing the northern flank of Germany, the Balkans where Bulgaria and other Axis satellites are said to be watching Finland's attitude very anxiously and the Allied fronts in Italy where "a break-through at Cassino" by the Allies "would threaten Rome which stands as a symbol to all of Nazi-conquered Europe."

Russian armies are getting close to the source of the evil, they are nearing Germany and are delivering heavier blows at the Hitlerite power. On the sea lawn is the air-Germany's ally. Her ally, Japan, is showing the wear and tear of the struggle with the British, Americans and Chinese.

"Glittering Prize"

Sir Archibald Sinclair stated Tuesday that "the glittering prize" of Allied air supremacy, which is capable of clearing the way to Berlin, is in sight, though he has warned against the belief that Germany has used all her air strength. This air supremacy is a talisman which he says can paralyze German war industry and war transport, that will clear the way for Allied armies. The present time of February and March he sees as likely to be counted in history as one of the decisive stages of the war. For the future, the air force is preparing to play its part in combination with army and navy and Britain has made her dispositions. One of the striking statements was that a million buildings have been completed as part of the preparations. Sir Archibald showed by citing figures of operations and losses of British aircraft in bombing operations in 1943, namely that 2,500 aircraft engaged on bombing had not come back, resulting in the loss of nearly 18,900 men "the flower of our manhood", killed or taken prisoner, what the might of these raids has meant against Germany. This indicates in the air war the United Nations' reasons for confidence.

Meat Rationing Lifted

Canadians can buy meat as they like now after about nine months of rationing. Shipping problems have helped to build up a great surplus in the jammed storages and as an outlet the restrictions of rationing have been temporarily lifted. Increased production in livestock has also been a factor in the congestion and Canadians can feel happy that this increase in production has been achieved.

For a considerable time it has been known that there is a heavy congestion and appeals have been made to have the restrictions lifted. When the situation in the matter of congestion improves and if the overseas demand for the British market and the needs of the armed forces require, rationing will be resumed.

Whether there will be much lowering of the surplus only time will tell. A good many have felt that in the matter of meat rations Canadians have been quite generously dealt with and some meat dealers state that a good many persons have not used up their coupons to the full extent.

It was last May when rationing was imposed and rationing has meant that meats have received a more even distribution than prevailed just before the rationing order went into effect. Everyone can recall the time when there were complaints that metropolitan centres were not securing their share of meats.

Everyone feels that rationing has served its purpose well in this respect.

There has of course been a little more extra labor with meat rationing owing to the great variety of cuts and the different coupon value of these cuts. This some consumers have not managed to master thoroughly though charts have been issued to help them. In consequence meat dealers have had to tear out the coupons from the ration books of many for there has been so great variety in the purchases possible. So the meat dealer and his staff will feel relieved at the lifting of rationing because it removes the necessity of so often answering the buyers' queries and of tearing out coupons necessary for the sale and also because the lifting of the rationing means that he will not have to keep account of coupons and paste them up as hitherto.

The public however is advised to preserve their unused coupons because they may be required should there come a change in the present situation.

Rationing while it has been imposed on meats and other commodities of food has been cheerfully accepted because it is one of the steps of preserving supply and guaranteeing fair distribution. Now distribution of the meat surplus in storage can be effected by the lifting of the ban.

Since the situation demands the removal of the restriction for the time being at least everyone is pleased but just the same everyone will gladly return to them of coupons if and whenever the situation requires.

Finland

It seems likely that Finland will shortly pass out of the war as there are signs according to dispatches that negotiations may soon begin between Finland and Russia. Nothing has been given out concerning the discussions of the Finnish Parliament's special sessions.

According to a Russian dispatch Soviet authorities realize the difficulty of the situation with German forces in Finland and the problem of clearing them out. As a Moscow dispatch states in this regard, it is going to be difficult for the Germans to withdraw to Finland in the event of Finland's acceptance of the terms without the Germans paying heavily because the Russian armies' northwestern campaign has brought the Red forces some excellent bases from which they could bomb the German communication lines to Finland.

The terms as submitted to Finland are that the Finns cease "military operations," break relations with Germany, re-establish the 1940 boundaries and intern all Nazi troops in Germany with or without Soviet help.

Short Words

It has been said repeatedly that what makes Churchill's speeches great is his use of understandable language, made so by the short words he employs to make up his brief, crisp sentences, says The St. Thomas Times-Journal. Take the closing remarks of his speech reviewing the war in the Commons the other day. He said:

"One thing we agreed at Teheran to which we all are bound in a solemn pact is to fall upon and smite the Hun by land, sea and air with all the strength that is in us in the coming spring and summer.

"The task is heavy, the toil is long and the trial will be severe.

"Let us all try to do our best, to do our duty.

"Victory may not be so far away and will certainly not be denied us."

ABSENCE

'Tis strange, but when my friend was here
In life to walk with me,
Not always could I hold him near Absent he'd often be.

A mile afar was full a mile;
A month away I'd feel.
Then absence, short or long, the while,
Was always very real.

But now the tasks of life are o'er
And he has left me here.
Though he may walk with me no more
I have him always near.

Now that he lives in memory,
He's never far away.
I've but to think of him, and he
Is with me, night or day.

Balloon Barrage

Balloon testing was started in Britain about two years before the war began, a cover of two pilots and three scientists says British Information Service.

Before the experiments it had not been decided whether the balloon barrage should be adopted as a form of defence. The testers began by dropping a ball of string on a parachute attached to the upper end of the string, then wheeling round and flying into the length of string. The aircraft used were Hawks, which had wooden wings.

The first thing discovered was that before the string could be sawed into the leading edge of the wing. An important further discovery was that the depth of the cut depended on the length of the string. The longer the string, the deeper the cut.

Before starting each flying experiment the whole thing had been worked out on the ground mathematically, so that the pilots did have an inkling of what to expect, and on every flight one of the scientists flew with them. Later the string stage they started using steel wire of various lengths and thicknesses. The fliers were padded crash helmets and their cockpits were protected by a screen, leaning with a peephole so that they could see clearly in aim at the particular point of the wire that they wanted to hit. This spot was marked by a black flag.

For this wire testing stage they used single-engine bombers with metal-clad wings. They did their flying over gunnery ranges, so that the falling wire should land where it would do no harm to the ranges or ground.

Sometimes the wire got tangled round the propeller and its hub, or became lashed round the cockpit or tail, and severed them in places. After each contact with the wire they would head to inspect the damage and measure the depth of the cut in the leading edge of a wing. They never had a wing cut right off, but that was because the experiments ended before them exactly how far through a wing the cut could go without this happening. The third and last stage was flying into still more cable with a real balloon at the top. The effect on an aircraft of hitting a cable in the air the machine round and down, it was then decided to blow the balloon barrage.

Laying Booby Traps A German Fine Art

Extracts From Letters from Wounded Men, Published in U.S. Infantry Journal.

"I lost my right hand by sticking up a German pineapple. I saw lying on the ground, with its pin apparently out. Feeling satisfied that it was, I went right ahead and picked it up. It hadn't occurred to me that a fine piano wire might lead from the other end of the pineapple and stuck into the ground differently underneath so that when I picked it up the pull on the wire would set the grenade off.

"Something much worse happened to a British squad leader. The squad came upon a German machine gun (semi-automatic pistol) lying on the ground, just waiting to be picked up. The squad leader was wary. He said, 'It's probably booby trapped.' I want all you men to stand aside and watch carefully while I show you a safe way of testing it.' He tied a cord carefully to the trigger guard and to the other end of the string over to a foxhole, which was about 15 or 20 feet away. He said 'Now I'm going to do', he said, 'I'll crouch in the foxhole and give the cord so that the Luger will move and everybody will duck.' The squad leader was the one who got the bullet.

"The squad leader jumped into the foxhole and instantly there was an explosion. The Germans, apparently, had booby trapped the foxhole with a hand grenade. 'Safe' was the word for pressure. Incidentally, they hadn't bothered to booby trap the Luger at all.

"When the Germans abandon a gun position, they are likely to leave the machine unmanned in order to stumble over later on. They think ahead. They try to anticipate what we'll do under every circumstance. If our fellows take this fact into account every minute, and move as surely and as carefully as Indians, they aren't going to be caught unaware."

"The Germans lay Teller mines on the shoulders of roads, especially on turns where vehicles are likely to swerve off. I was the guard in a Jeep that got blown up that way. Two men were killed and I lost my right leg and my left foot. I'd been over the road once before but it was in daylight the first time. There's a possibility that the mine had been laid at night by a German digging back from our territory, but of course it may have been there all the time. We went over on the shoulder as we rounded a curve, going a little too fast".

"By and large we won't find booby traps in places that are inaccessible. If you make your own path, you're likely to be a lot safer. We soon learn to leave suspicious looking objects alone and notify the engineers. Once my platoon worked for the better part of a day on a little clearing, paying absolutely no attention to a beautiful silver watch that lay in the center of right smack in the middle of it. When we finally left the clearing the engineers hadn't come up. Then we saw, by jan, the watch. And there. Don't think we didn't arrive at this state of discipline through experience, though.

"In paths and defiles the Germans used antipersonnel switches that they had captured from the British. An antipersonnel switch is a pressure release device, and it is the kind that usually is sunk in a path or narrow defile and is three-quarters buried and covered with mud, dirt or leaves. It shoots a bullet upward. They go up through your foot or through the tire of a vehicle".

BELLS ON SHIPS

Time on shipboard is announced by striking a bell every half hour.

This system dates from the days of the half-hour glass, when the ship's bell was struck each time the glass was turned over.

Bells are used because seamen are naturally conservative about changing established customs and because it is a convenient method of communication at night, when others are often scattered about the ship.

To be able to tell the time of day by bells one must know what watch it is.

According to the system used in the U. S. Navy, the 24 hours of the day are divided into six watches, which are: First watch, 4 p.m. until 8 o'clock p.m.; second, to midnight; midwatch, midnight to four a.m.; morning watch, four a.m. to eight a.m.; forenoon watch, eight a.m. to noon; afternoon watch, noon to four p.m., and the dog watch, four p.m. to eight p.m.

Watches are changed at eight bells; that is, at noon, four o'clock p.m., midnight, four a.m. and eight a.m.

The dog watch, however, is subdivided into the first dog watch, from four p.m. to six p.m., and the second dog watch, from six p.m. to eight p.m.

The dog watches have the effect of changing every night the hours during which the starboard and port watches are on deck and prevents the same men from always getting what is the easiest or hardest watch at the same hours.

The bells are struck as follows: Twelve o'clock noon, eight bells; 12.30 p.m., one bell; one p.m., two bells; 1.30 p.m., three bells; two p.m., four bells; two thirty p.m., five bells; three p.m., six bells; three thirty p.m., seven bells; four p.m., eight bells; four thirty p.m., one bell, and so on through all of the six watches of four hours each.

This system is uniform on all ships of the British Commonwealth of Nations and is in use on merchant ships, with slight variations in cases the details, such as the method of dogging the watches, depending on whether the vessel is sailing on an easterly or westerly course, but as railroad time changes in the United States from east to west or vice versa.

Each ship's bell is struck by grasping the clapper tightly in the hand and making the strokes in pairs. For instance, suppose the time is 1.30 p.m. The bell is struck twice in quick succession and the hand then placed on the bell to stop vibration. A brief pause follows, when the bell is again struck twice. After another pause the bell is struck only once, making five bells.

Canadian Scene A Century Ago

By J. L. G.

Our forefathers had to do things the hard way. Their record shows us that a lot can be accomplished by hard work and wise planning, and should give us hope for the future.

"Make a sod stable then." This was the advice given to you were the settler plowing to farm and a wooden barn was put up your self. Many pioneer farmers took this suggestion to heart. Wood was hard to get, sods were to be had for the gathering. After a heavy rain, even furrows, if sod were ploughed, the number and weight pieces of earth were hacked into two-inch lengths and carted to the proposed site. The idea was to peg the corners and line the first sods from one corner to the next, one layer along the direction of the proposed wall and the next across, bonding the layers much the same method used by bricklayers. No two joints were supposed to be above one another, and the walls were built around thirty loads of sod for walls, and a couple for each gable to carry the layers of sod for the roof. Door and window frames were built in as the walls went up. Finished, stables were far from handsome but protected shelter of a sort, they did not last as long as wooden structures.

Up in the Peace River district, where a wooden shelter is served even every meal, the fertility of the land is—and was—something to be thankful about. The 1910 century when settlers were flocking to the Canadian West, wheat was the yield to the acre. Over 100 bushels of oats was not a not-so-rare thing in this area of this same region. Homesteaders who began on a shoestring soon worked up to ownership of land, equipment, cattle and horses in quantity denoting prosperity.

WEDDINGS

PARKINSON—KEENE

Dr. A. J. W. Myers officiated at the marriage of Ila Muriel Keene, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Keene, to Pilot Officer Russel Parkinson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Parkinson, of Toronto, at the home of the bride's parents on Wednesday, March 1. The wedding was solemnized "with a bower of pink and white streamers against an impressive floral background of evergreen branches, roses, sweet peas and carnations. Quiet wedding music was played by Miss Helen Wedden.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was particularly striking in an ensemble of heavenly blue silk georgette accented with panels of lace. She was wearing a matching blue lace hat and accessories, tourmaline stone set with pearls, gift of the groom. Her corsage was of white roses.

Mrs. Harvey Murkett was her sister's only attendant, attired in rose silk georgette with hat to match and corsage of red roses.

Constable M. McMairn, R.C.M.P., was groomsman.

Following the ceremony, a dainty buffet lunch was served by Mrs. M. McClelland, Miss Helen Wedden and Miss Dorothy Greiner. The bride's mother was wearing teablue crepe with corsage of deep pink carnations, and the groom's mother in navy blue silk crepe and corsage of pale pink carnations.

On the wedding trip to Toronto, Hamilton and Montreal, the bride selected a beige silk ensemble with chocolate brown accessories and muskrat coat. On their return the bridal couple will reside in Barrie, Ontario.

NO CURE FOR BABY'S COLDS

... But You Can Help Nature To Fight Them Off

Medical Science denies there is any such thing as a cure for colds—only Nature herself can do it. So when baby's restless, or when coughing wears you out, a cold's presence is apparent at once with Vicks.

See that baby is kept warm, gets plenty of sleep and take extra care that the room is thoroughly cleared of stale, cold air. Then rub Vicks VapoRub on baby's throat, chest and back—the time-tested "external" way to relieve coughs, colds and other simple baby ailments. Vicks VapoRub is "external" because it's not taken internally. It's applied to the skin, and stimulates chest and back surfaces like a warming, soothing poultice. Used by thousands of Mothers for over 30 years, too, for tired, restless children, Vicks VapoRub is a time-tested help in thousands of homes. Remember, Vicks VapoRub is only for use as directed in Baby's Own Tablets Booklet. Only 25¢. If baby's Own Tablets Booklet. Only 25¢. If baby's cold is stubborn, call your physician at once.

Stately Old Home Sacrificed for Coal

By William K. Ellis in the London Sunday Express

Wentworth Woodhouse, Yorkshire seat of Earl Fitzwilliam, is the largest private house in England, and one of the most lavish, in the days of wealth—population from open-cast mining.

Its amenities are being sacrificed to the war effort and the need for coal.

Already much of the surrounding parkland has been ruined. Acres of fast-advancing workings will soon approach the front of the mansion, and coal will be scooped out only 150 yards from the famous pillared portico where kings and queens have been welcomed.

There is no house in the country to equal Wentworth Woodhouse in size. It is several acres in extent, with a frontage of more than 600 feet, a thousand windows, 365 rooms, and five miles of underground passages.

In more spacious days 200 people sat down to dine off gold plate, and Queen Victoria on one of her visits admitted the style was too extravagant for her.

King George and Queen Mary were also visitors there, and also King Edward VIII when Prince of Wales.

The place is so vast that it was said to be less trouble at any time to give guests packets of warfarin to strew along the corridors so they could find their way back to their rooms.

There is a story of a butler (pedometer tested) walking 56 miles in four days during Doncaster race week, and a more apocryphal one of a guest staging his bell on Saturday and having its answered on Monday.

More than 450 acres in the immediate neighborhood of the mansion, gardens and village are being torn to pieces by the horrors of the mechanical scraps that are advancing like a serpent of destruction, leaving a hideous trail that will be more than a mile and a half long.

A farm, finely woodland and parkland and roads have already been obliterated by it (though the standing still stands), and the next advance of the brewers closer to the famous house will wipe out plantations, sand farm, paddocks, fish pondry for young trees, the stately avenues, a metalled road, and the broad slopes close to the front of the house.

It is a picture of destruction that would have broken the heart of the seventh earl, who died early this year, and who gave much time to the mines.

The coal will yield no mining royalties to the present owners. For the state acquired all royalties of the mineral, in the future will get payment for surface rights, compensation for damage, and for a promise that the ground will be restored.

Few people at Wentworth, however, believe that the land will ever be the same again. They think that when coal-getting is finished there will remain a vast quarry that will take generations to heal. The years are eight to ten feet thick and 15 to 70 feet down. "It would take," one local man said, "a year's rainfall to fill it."

Coal getting is now in full swing. Rails have been laid for sidings to be uncovered, and all day long trains pass through the village bags taking the scooped-out coal to the shaking dumps and railways.

In the village pub, where the seventh earl's keeper and the Home Guard detachment for a pint 90 years ago, everything the locals discuss the development mournfully and indignantly.

There have been wider and more official protests.

Mr. A. J. Hall, president of the Yorkshire Mineworkers' Association, believes the coal is costing three times as much as normal opencast getting, and he and others believe that most of the coal could have been got on the ordinary mining methods without disturbing the surface.

To all these criticisms the Ministry of Works and Planning replies that the main job at the present time is to get coal, and Wentworth Woodhouse is their biggest open-cast scheme. They have voluntary evidence also from farmers that land is improved by this disruption, and in the case of Wentworth Woodhouse orders have been given that the task of tearing up the earth in front of the house is to be postponed till the last possible minute in the hope that peace will save it.

THOMASBURG

J. Clayton Porter Elected Director Bank of Detroit

Thomasburg—Friends of J. Clayton Porter in this village will be glad to learn of his election as one of the three newly elected officers of the Board of Directors of the National Bank of Detroit, at a recent meeting. The National Bank of Detroit is the twelfth largest bank in the United States, with 30 branches maintained in the city of Detroit. For the past seven years Mr. Porter has been manager of the largest downtown branch. Before going to Detroit he was associated with the Bank of Montreal in Stirling and at Windsor. He is the youngest son of the late Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Porter of Thomasburg, a brother of Mrs. Wm. A. Morton and Miss Emma Porter and a brother-in-law of Mrs. A. C. Porter.

His election to the Board of Directors is a compliment which has been well earned and his many many friends here will join in congratulating him on the achievement.—News Briefs.

AVOID LOOSE TALK ON WAR MATTERS

Advice Given by Col. Ralston, Who Praises Canadians' Silence on Kiska Project

Ottawa, March 5.—(CP)—Defence Minister Ralston in the Commons last night appealed to Canadians to continue to avoid loose talk which might aid the enemy, but he praised the silence observed in respect to the sailing of the Kiska expedition last year, known to many on the West Coast.

The Minister spoke after Gordon Graydon, Progressive Conservative House Leader, referred to an Associated Press dispatch which quoted a United States intelligence officer as saying loose talk in the United States had resulted in the Japanese in Kiska being forewarned about the expedition.

Mr. Graydon said he was pleased Canadians had not been mentioned as having any liability. As at no other time in the war it was important that Canadians realize the winning of the war still was a long way off.

Rawdon Couple Have Close Escape From Severe Burns

Rawdon (Special)—Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Brodsworth had a narrow escape last week when they were spraying their brooder house and chicken house with lime. Mrs. Brodsworth was severely burned about her face and hands and Mr. Brodsworth received minor burns. The brooder house burned to the ground.

L.D. Wilgress Presents Credentials in Moscow

London March 1—(CP Cable)—L. Dana Wilgress, Canadian ambassador to the Soviet Union, yesterday presented his credentials to President Michael Kalinin and afterward called on the president, the Moscow radio reported. Wilgress had been Canadian minister to the Soviet Union but presented his credentials again when the legation was raised to embassy status.

A. C. Smith and J. A. McCordick, both of Toronto, secretaries at the embassy, accompanied the ambassador and were presented to Kalinin.

Women Are Charged With Receiving Liquor

Windsor, Ont., March 1—(CP)—Provincial Police here said today two women employees of Hiram Walker and Sons, Limited, were arrested as they were leaving their work yesterday and charged with receiving liquor illegally from the premises. A Windsor man is also jailed in the charges.

Charged were Mrs. Hazel Cook, 36, Ida Lucy Gignac, 38, and Oren Mather, 43. Police said more than 100 bottles of rye whisky were uncovered from the premises of the three.

NOT CONSIDERED MINISTER

Toronto, March 1—(CP)— In a test case believed a precedent in Ontario, Chief Justice McRuer in court here yesterday ruled that a minister of Jehovah Witnesses can not be considered a minister in the accepted use of the term and therefore is not exempt from military service under the National Mobilization Provision for ministers. The case, an appeal from a judgment by Magistrate Gullen, contested a conviction against Twp. Derwood, sentenced to 20 days in jail for refusing to comply with National Mobilization Regulations.

RAILWAYS BUSY

VAN CAMP'S QUICK-SERVE BEANS

1 HOME-BAKED BEANS WITH TOMATO SAUCE

3 slices bacon or 2 tbsps. bacon dripping
1½ cups boiling water
1 to 2 teaspoons dry mustard
2 tablespoons sugar
1½ teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
¼ cup catsup
1—15-oz. pkg. Van Camp's Quick-Serve Beans

METHOD: Fry bacon and remove from pan. To the bacon fat, add water. Blend mustard, sugar, salt and pepper in catsup. Add to boiling water and fat, and bring just to the boiling point. Turn Quick-Serve Beans into a casserole dish, pour in boiling-hot liquids and stir. Arrange bacon on top. Cover and bake in a slow oven, 300° F., for 25 minutes. Remove cover and cook an additional 5 minutes. (Remove lid earlier if you prefer beans with less sauce.) Serves 6. For a meatless dish, omit bacon dripping.

2 QUICK-SERVE BAKED BEAN LOAF

1 recipe Quick-Serve Beans with Tomato Sauce
¼ cup finely-chopped celery
¼ cup finely-chopped onion
2 cups (lightly packed) day-old bread crumbs
1 slightly beaten egg

METHOD: Prepare Quick-Serve Beans ahead of time so that they may be cold. Mash and add celery, onion, bread crumbs and egg. Mix thoroughly. Form into a loaf and place in a greased baking dish. Bake in a hot oven, 400° F., 30 minutes. Serve with hot tomato sauce. This makes a tasty, economical, meatless main dish your family will enjoy.

Leftover Quick-Serve Beans make hearty sandwich fillings. Add chopped pimento for spreads or salad dressing.

For other interesting, appetizing Bean dishes, see recipes with every package.

A Grand Milk for Babies

Millions of babies have been raised on Carnation Milk formulas that their doctors have prescribed.

There are three big reasons . . . First, Carnation Milk is so scientifically uniform and is fortified with the extra "sunshine" vitamin D. Second, Carnation's is really digestible, because heat-treatment gives it a valuable soft-curd quality.

You don't have any milk worries when your doctor says the baby on Carnation. Write for free book "Your Contented Baby". Carnation Co. Ltd., Toronto, Ontario.

Whitehall Notebook

By SYDNEY GRUSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, March 3 —(CP)— Prime Minister Churchill's government, so the word goes around Whitehall, is almost ready to unlock the pigeon-holes where three massive reports on post-war Britain have been gathering dust and criticism.

Officialdom is as silent as ever, but the word has come seeping through the White hall grapevine that the government's views about the Beveridge (presented in 1942), Scott (1942) and Uthwatt (1942) reports will be made known shortly in the form of White Papers.

The Beveridge, Scott and Uthwatt recommendations have received little publicity outside the country though they will play a vital part in the shaping of post-war Britain.

When the White Papers reach parliament as government bills they likely will produce some of the bitterest wrangling of any wartime session in the Commons. The reports have been subject to heated wrangling among the various factions concerned in the recommendations.

Here, briefly, are the main recommendations of the reports:

Beveridge: Advocates restrictions of the uneconomical drift of industry to towns, particularly in the south and around London. Location of industry to be controlled as a social, economic and strategic problem that must be solved.

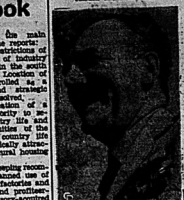
Scott: Suggests creation of a town planning authority to supervise village and country life and to preserve the amenities of the countryside. Proposes country life be made more economically attractive and calls for rural housing improvements.

Uthwatt: Makes sweeping recommendations on the planning use of the land for housing, factories and so on. To prevent land profiteering, suggests compulsory-acquired land be paid for at price levels prevailing at March 31, 1939.

The reports take their names from commissioners who conducted the investigations—Sir Montague Barlow, Lord Justice Charles Kennedy Scott and Mr. Justice Andrew Augustus Uthwatt.

What They Are Saying:

ASIA AIR-CHIEF



This genial officer is British Air Marshal Sir John Baldwin, commander of the southeast Asia command tactical air force. The air force played a big part in the recent Allied successes in Burma.

Lord Vansittart — (on how to treat Germany after victory): "Punishment must be reserved for the handful that have actually committed the crime, but don't assume that the German nation is guiltless. The nation has been the accomplice of its misleaders."

Sir Richard Acland, Common Wealth Leader — (On the post-war world)—"I believe there will be a revolution in this country within 10 years and it is up to us to decide whether it should be a revolution in our minds or in the streets."

Air Commodore Howard Williams—One thousand years hence the people will look back and say 'my word, but the 1940's must have been terrific times' and they will quote Winston Churchill as they quote Caesar.

Briefs From Britain

(By The Canadian Press)

Nottingham, England — (CP) — Herbert Robinson, charged here with ill-treating his two-year-old son, told the court he was responsible for all his children to be commander and the two-year-old had to have the same treatment. He was fined $14.

London — (CP) — The Royal Norwegian Air Force destroyed recently its 150th German plane since the force was reformed in Britain in 1941.

Kingston — on Thames, England — (CP) — Hundreds of fashionable Londoners unable to find homes in London and the surrounding counties are living on the Thames in boat houses.

London —(CP)— One of the five women pilots in the British Air Transport Auxiliary, which ferries airplanes for the R.A.F. and the R.C.A.F., Jean Winston, of Wingsaut, New Zealand, was killed in a crash.

Whitley, Surrey, England —(CP) —John St. Helier Lander, portrait painter, died at his home here. He had painted portraits of many prominent people, including the Duke of Windsor.

London — (CP) — Nutrition expert Sir John Orr says it "a proper standard of health facilities were adopted," the expectation of life in England would be increased by about five years, and in Scotland by about ten.

Oxford —(CP)— To assist the Oxford crew in training for the annual boat race with Cambridge, a Yorkshire admirer sent them an orange, carefully wrapped in sheet upon sheet of paper.

London —(CP)— Prince Chula Chakrabongse of Thailand has been granted a commission in the British army cadet force.

London —(CP)— Athanase Gartzonis, who recently escaped from Greece, says there are 90 different guerilla organizations in Greece than 40 underground newspapers in that German-occupied country.

Leicester, England — (CP) — It may be local pride, but Chief Constable O. J. R. Cole produced such figures as 64 convictions for drunkenness in all 1943 to prove his contention Leicester is the most sober of the 20 largest cities and towns of England and Wales.

London —(CP)— Capt. Philip Gardner of the Royal Tank Regiment, who was London's first V.C. of the war, has been reported safe in neutral territory. He had been a prisoner of the Italians and Germans since July, 1943, and escaped recently.

London —(CP)— Requisitioning of private motor cars in Britain has been halted, though the Ministry of Supply warned it would be resumed in an emergency.

The Experts Say

(By The Canadian Press)

Ottawa (CP) — BAKED POTATOES in the skin, not boiled, are not any time of the year, but especially so in winter weather. And they're especially nourishing too, Nutrition Service says. If the crisp crackly skin is left on. For it's there that most of the potato cleavage to the skin that contains minerals and vitamins so necessary to health. So the value of the skin of boiled potatoes is to keep the protective elements from dissolving in the cooking water. In a baked potato the value of the skin is in the eating.

BAKED POTATO SURPRISE: Vary baked potatoes with stuffings. Here's an interesting one from recipes from the Consumer Section of the Agriculture Department:

1 cup medium cream sauce, ¾ cup chopped bologna, 6 medium baked potatoes, 2 tablespoons butter, ¼ cup milk (approximately), ½ teaspoon salt, pepper to taste, paprika or parsley (optional).

Combine cream sauce and bologna and heat. Cut a thin slice from the top of potatoes. Scoop potato carefully out of shell, mash and combine with butter, milk, salt and pepper. Beat until fluffy. Pour creamed bologna into potato shells, pile potato on top, sprinkle with paprika or chopped parsley. Brown lightly in a moderate oven, 375 degrees Fahrenheit, for 10 or 15 minutes. Serve with fried apple rings.

KEEP THEM FRESH: Do you find it hard to keep dried apples, raisins and figs? Leave them in paper bags and they'll develop mould, attract weevils and dry out as hard as rocks. It's easy to keep them fresh in glass jars, with the lids screwed on tightly. Good for crystallized peel, glace cherries or prunes, too.

DUST CATCHER: Dust settles in the most exasperating places::: book tops, baseboard crevices, wood carving, bric-a-brac. An ordinary two-inch paint brush is just the thing to whisk it away.

USE TOMATO JUICE for the next mouth and a half, the Prices Board advises, since 10 per cent more tomato juice will reach retailers' counters during that time. After April 1, there will be less available, as a result, but other foods containing similar values will be more plentiful.

PAINTING POINTER: A paper plate a piece of cardboard glued to the bottom of a paint can will catch the drippings from the can and will also serve as a rest for the paint brush.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

On Making Calls.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

Will you please answer for me two questions concerning making calls? To me these are very important questions, and I know that many people are important to many people, for I have often heard them discussed by people who are perplexed as to what is expected of them.

1.—If one accepts an invitation to a dinner, even a dinner of the informal kind, is a call followed by this entertainment obligatory? Would a note of appreciation be a permissible and proper substitute for a call after attending a dinner?

2.—I know that some years ago good social form required that a friendly call upon a newcomer in the neighborhood or a newcomer in the church, required a return of the call. Now, however, when, for example, the membership of a church is scattered over a large area, is the return call considered obligatory?

E. P.

1.—Yesterday this formality of calling a day or two after one had been entertained at dinner was obsolete. But today this formality is vanishing. Indeed wherever it is most communities, for these days are too full of other social responsibilities ,such formalities presuppose time and leisure, and today most of us have neither of either.

But anyone who has accepted hospitality should make some gesture of bow of appreciation of hospitality. This is a most useful custom which may have social sense, which means any sense of appreciation, either telephone or a note to a hostess a day or two after her party, even if the party was formal. This is not only a kind and polite bow to make, but it is a cent to thank your hostess for her goodness and thoughtfulness to you. And it has been my experience that the busier a person' is, the more punctilious he or she is likely to be in paying by this amenity. Making a call takes some planning and time , a note of thanks takes only a minute or two.

2.—However, there is more than a formality involved in the making of calls, as to whether or not a newcomer should make a return call made on her by a neighbor, or a member of her new church. In the first place it is important, very important, that the newcomer establish her connection in her new community, and that she should welcome, and show that she welcomes the thoughtfulness and friendliness of her new neighbors and members of her new church. For the newcomer not to return the kind and cordial welcoming call would be an affront to her caller, would imply that she doesn't welcome friendliness, doesn't appreciate thoughtful gestures. She must show her new neighbors what kind of person she is. . they can't know until she does show them.

If the newcomer has a real reason for not being able to return the call. . if, for example, she has small children and cannot leave them, or if she is in the country and there is gas-rationing to be coped with, or if she is not well . . . then she should write a note to the caller explaining her reason, thanking the caller for her welcoming call and saying that she is looking forward to the pleasure of calling on her visitor as soon as possible.

TELEPHONE COURTESY.

(By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman.)

Give a thought to the person to whom you're telephoning. If she she may be busy, he may be dashing to an appointment. she may bust, be popping a soufflé into the oven, his or she may be dining. So if you're about to embark on a long telephone, conversation, find out if it's convenient for the telephonee. For instance, "Are you busy now, or may I talk with you a minute?" Or "Is this a convenient time to call you, or may I call later?"

BEAUTY

By Helen Jameson

Deleting the Spare Chin.

Chin, chin, double chin! It is the beauty burden of many a woman who has plied too well the fork at good things of the table. With less butter on her bread, maybe ne'put-ter at all, and "scrupulous" by occupation of collecting fat cells. "It's all wire," you'll say and you know of the rest.

Remedies that pouch is due to the habit of not keeping the head balanced. Bunch the shoulders, let the head fall forward, and the fullness of flesh will be more apparent than it is when the neck is stretched full length, shoulders have an easy pose, and the chin is slightly lifted. The first position makes the demands on the muscles of the neck to carry on as they should. They relax, get lazy, and adipose tissue. Let's a few fat cells get on location and, the first thing you know, you have a pouch of them. They have a talent for raising funds, calling in friends.

At the first sign of the coming of a second chin, put up a fight for your facial rights. To prevent change two chins into one is no great accomplishment for the skilful facial operator; it is being done all the time. But you have to catch the newcomer when it is young, before the skin has stretched and lost tone. The plastic surgeon can take tucks in it, but home treatment won't shrink the surplus flesh after it has expanded beyond a certain point.

Here is what must be done: after washing the face at night with warm water and soap, rinse with warm water, dry gently, and apply a heavy emollient to one of such consistency that the fingers will not slip and slide. Place the flattened fingers just under the ear lobes, thumbs together under the centre of the chin. Keep the fingers stationary, bring the thumbs up to them, following along the jaw line. Throw the head back, sweep the fingers up and down between chin and collar bone.

Third movement: pick up the flesh between thumb and first fingers, roll firmly. By this means you will be rubbing and disolving fat cells. Finish with a brisk tapping and slapping while the head is on the level. Massage is not effective when muscles are tense.

Stand erect, hands on hips, chin lifted. Throw the head backward, open your mouth wide, dropping the lower jaw, forcing it up with determination to bring the muscles of the throat into play. This is an excellent exercise for toning tissues, strengthening fibres. You'll feel pretty silly when doing it, but what of it?

The extra chin will soon be doing the disappearing act. After the massage treatment, and five minutes or more of facial exercises, wring a small towel out of cold water, bind high on the throat, covering the chin well, go to bed. The cold compress will hustle up the blood streams.

The Marry-Go-Round

Remodeling a Man

Reformers—professional reformers —are out of favor, these days. But the little reformer in the home is still on the job.

Half the women in the world spend their lives in spoiling some man—and the other half in trying to reform some man. One of the greatest sorrows in the average man's life is a woman's refusal to accept him "as is", and to love him just as God made him—boyish ways, old hat, little habits and everything.

When a man starts out to "reform" a woman, he has a chance of success; because a woman in love is as flexible as a rubber band. But by the time he has succeeded, he may find that he has robbed her of her charm, her sparkle and all the things that made him fall in love with her.

Why marry ANYBODY, expecting to reform or remodel him or her? There are lots of other ways of wasting your life—but none more effective. Why not wait until you find somebody, who is absolutely to your taste—or are you in search of a hurry?

Nearly every woman is born with the crusading complex and the conviction that she can alter her man completely regenerate any man she marries. She is never so happy as when she is "curing" a man of one of his pet habits or his favorite little weaknesses, such as hurling his clothes on the floor or raiding the ice-box at midnight, or overeating in bed.

I know! I tried it once, and never in ten years got so far as to make him close the kitchen door after himself, or put out the light in the butler's pantry. Habits are the man! He is a creature of habit, completely surrounded by perversity and shiftlessness. He has a one-track mind—and he never gets off the track!

"Woman's influence" (His hat) over a man is just one of the ways ready and willing to "admit" them. In fact he likes to boast about them—even laugh at them.

He regards a few pet vices eccentricities as a sign of manliness, just as a bark may indicate fighting blood or a broken arm, good "sportsmanship". And his weaknesses run all the way from wasting his money to wasting his time; from wild parties to wild yachts; from cocktails to crap games.

But trying to separate him from them is about as foolish and futile a thing to undertake as he says or trying to separate a small boy from a lollipop. So, if you're planning to straighten out the arm of an elbow-bender or to stay the feet of a girl-chaser, just remember that you were ever fussed by man above the eyebrows! Just try to love him "as is", and save your energy.

12 Branburgers from a pound of beef

All-Bran "Branburgers"

1 egg
2 teaspoons salt
2 tablespoons sugar
2 tablespoons melted shortening
1 cup milk
1 cup All-Bran
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
½ cup onion
½ cup Kellogg's Rice Krispies
1 pound ground beef

Mix well and slightly, add salt, pepper, onion, milk, parsley, catsup and All-Bran. Let soak until most of moisture is taken up. Add beef and mix thoroughly. Shape into 12 patties. Bake in hot oven (450°F.) about 30 minutes, or broil about 20 minutes. Yield: 6 servings (12 2½ inch patties).

Note: All-Bran is chosen because it helps prevent constipation due to lack of "bulk" in your diet. Try them today! All-Bran is made by Kellogg's in London, Ontario, Canada.

BOSTON BRUINS PLAY VITAL GAME AGAINST HAWKS

Loss Would Practically Eliminate Team From N.H.L. Playoffs

CHICAGO COMING

(By The Canadian Press)

Boston Bruins, whose National Hockey League fortunes have suffered almost fatally during the last two months, meet Chicago Black Hawks in a game which may be vital bearing on their chances for a place in the Stanley Cup series.

Bruins now trail the fourth-place Hawks by six points and a victory there is the mathematical obstacle to overcoming that six-point margin in their remaining eight games most hockey followers are inclined to dismiss Boston, if they are reckoning. Despite the return of centre Bill Cowley, Bruins now are a makeshift hockey machine.

Chicago, on the other hand, has shown signs of also acquiring defenceman Joe Cooper. It's just about an even money proposition the fact, that Hawks will out Toronto Maple Leafs from fourth place in the season; ends March 19. Leafs hold a three point lead, but have only six games to play compared with nine for Chicago.

Not even Detroit Red Wings, a game ahead of Leafs in second place, are safe from Chicago pursuit. But the Red Wings have a chance to stretch their margin when they meet the tallend New York Rangers at Detroit in the only other N.H.L. game.

DOUG RUNIONS LEADING SCORER IN SENIOR O.H.A.

Kenny Smith Heads the Parade in the Junior Series

SCORES 53 GOALS

Toronto, March 2 (CP)—Doug Runions of Hamilton Majors and Kenny Smith of Oshawa Generals are individual scoring champions of the 1943-44 Ontario Hockey Association season, official records released today.

Runions won the Senior "A" crown by scoring 73 points on 53 goals and 34 assists, edging linemate Johnny Conkell by two points. Conkell had 36 goals, 34 assists for a 70-point total. Smith led the lower-packed Generals to a new all-time scoring mark in the O.H.A. Junior "A" series by chalking up a terrific 53-goal total, coupled with 36 assists to gain him 89 points. Trailing him by four points with 75 was team-mate Bobby Love, the league's leading playmaker, who scored 26 goals and 49 assists.

Third place in the Senior "A" scoring derby went to Dillon Brady of Hamilton's point Conick-Runions-Conkell line. He totalled 62 points on 35 goals and 27 assists. Fourth, fifth and sixth places went to St. Catharines Saints' personnel. Hank Bellinger had 58, Red Reynolds 54 and Paul Mundrick 50 to round out the top six in a league that was crippled by the mid-season withdrawal of Toronto R.C.A.F. Flyers.

Bill Ehrlicki of Oshawa made the first Senior "A" scoring team not monopoly in the junior circuit by scoring 39 goals to gain the slot behind Love. Bobby Schnurr of St. Michael's College was fourth with 36 goals and Joe Sadler of the Majors and Johnny Uhrlace of Galt shared fifth place with 35 each.

New York, March 2 (AP)—Don't hold your breath waiting for this latest Dodger story to go through. ...The word is that the prospective purchasers won't make up their minds whether they're interested or not until they see all the figures—and it will require a big one indeed with a dollar sign in front that scared Max Meyer out.....Ted Muncrief, who only one whose name has been mentioned so far, is the same radio-telegraph expert champ who recently was awarded the Marconi Medal in Rio. Ted also might not go far wrong in guessing that one of his associates is Wilson J. Halligan, who is in the same business and received the same award.

Jack Sharkey, en route from the war zone, told service men in Puerto Rico that manoeuvring through Times Square on New Year's Eve is a more dangerous undertaking traffic in Italy....They're busy over there in Italy, you've been, no mixin traffic," said Jack....Wonder if he remembers how thick the one-way traffic is around Times Square?

By Any Other Name.

Ed Stagles, Branch Rickey's handy man, was lunching in a Brooklyn restaurant when he drew a disagreeable distinction at considerable length on the Cardinals....As he rose to leave, Stagles admonished, "Excuse me, suh, do you coms from St. Louis?"....Rickey admitted the charge....The waiter grinned: "Is your name by any chance Dean—Diny Dean?"

Free Transportation Back to Place Outside Canada Announced

Ottawa, March 2. (CP) — Free transportation on retirement or discharge to Canada from soldiers who came from countries outside Canada to join the Canadian army was announced today by Defence headquarters.

Previously, army personnel upon retirement or discharge were entitled to free transportation only to the place in Canada where they were appointed or enlisted, or to any other place in Canada provided the cost did not exceed that to the place where enlisted.

Now, provision is made for transportation to the place outside Canada from which the individual came for the purpose of enlisting or being appointed, or any other part of that country or any place in Canada provided the cost is not greater than to the place where he was last living.

JUNIOR PLAYOFFS ALL SQUARE AFTER RETURN GAMES

Oshawa Trims St. Catharines, Galt Takes Mikes and Whizzers Beat Tigers

REVERSAL OF FORM

(By The Canadian Press)

Reversals were recorded in all three return games last night in the O.H.A. junior playoffs of the Ontario Hockey Association and, as a result, the teams stand all-square in their separate duels going into the third games later in the week. Generals turned the tables 14-3 in a smashing blow against St. Catharines at Oshawa, after bowing to the Falcons 8-3 last Monday. Galt Gunners took out St. Michael's College 4-3 on Toronto ice after bowing 4-2 in the opening game of the series. Hamilton Tigers, after bowing 4-2 with scoring reversal the result of the previous engagement at Brantford, trounced Brantford Lions 8-2.

Hamilton held the advantage throughout the evening Jack Brantford Lions 8-2, leading 1-0 and 3-0 in the close periods and 4-0 in the third period. Chief marksmen for the winners were Bobby Comfort and Stan Wilkinson, each scoring two goals, while Ernie Bellisimi, Jimmy Peters and Enio Sclanzi, notching one goal. Turner scored both for Brantford. Galt Gunners held the lead in the third period at Toronto to win over St. Michael's after the academ noticed two crucial errors in the second stanza, as Gunners took a 2-1 advantage. Galt came through with two more in the third, however, to double the count. Bill Cowley of the visitors were Johnny Ubriaco, Mc-Arthur, Gus Kyle and Bernie McCarthy. Ted Lindsay was a double-scorer for St. Mike's and Dave Bauer got one.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By CHARLIE EDWARDS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, March 2 —(CP)— For years, National Hockey League officials tried to coax Doug Bentley out of Alberta American ranks without success. Only when fight is a place in the big time was proved this week when he moved into the former Chicago star and Byng Trophy winner. Bentley, for the record, was on the Alberta Services Senior League's all-star team. Bentley was third in H. L. scoring last season and has been a high-scoring centre in Alberta but, with 36 players who chose the all-star team rated behind Gordie, 35 points to 46 in a possible 108. . . . All other first team choices were former Major leaguers: Goal, Jim Henry; defence, Mac Colville and Pete Jakubosky; centre, Calmo; right wing, Alex Kaleta; left wing, Dave Schriner. All but two of the second team also played under the big top: Goal Bernie Lindquist, defence, Eddie Wares, Tom Anderson; centre, Murray Armstrong; right, Bob Carse. Derlell and Sawyer are those who had not played N. H. L.

Coaching Tip:
Herb Cain, N. H. L. scoring leader, says it's tougher for him to play against Toronto Maple Leafs or Detroit than against Canadiens because Dit Clapper, Bill Mosienko and Joe Carveth, all right-wingers and Herb's scoring rivals, are opposed to them, are pressing him for the scoring lead. "When I play against Toronto or Detroit I can't concentrate on getting goals myself. I'm busy trying to protect my lead by keeping them from scoring." Cain (Herb, Detroit Gazette) Carroll. Dink quips: "which is one way to make a guy backcheck."

Incidentally—

It's unlikely to become known as the year of the great football scandal. Joe Ryan, one-time college fireball, attended the C. N. U. championship game in Chicago, 25 years ago and didn't see a single play because he was too busy getting autographs.

Art Chapman, scouting in Winnipeg for Eddie Shore's Buffalo Bisons, says Shore keeps himself in great shape and adds: "I'll bet he's got the best defenceman in the National League if he wants to get back." Chapman says the American League may reach major league status after the war with St. Louis included in the league.

LOCAL JUVENILES LOSE TO WHITBY IN SECOND GAME

Defeated 7-5 in Game and 11-5 on the Round

MUCH TOO GOOD

Belleville's Juveniles passed out of the O.H.A. picture last night at the Home Arena, when the Kids were laboring under a four-goal deficit going into the third. Juveniles in the initial game of the round.

The Rear-led Whitby kids added to their prowess by winning the local ice 7 to 5 which naturally gave them the round score 11-5.

All was even at the end of the initial frame after Harden scored for Whitby and Meagher whipped home one for the locals. In the middle session Whitby counters found the range twice to two and in the final stanza it was even in the scoring category with both getting a brace of counters.

The line-ups:

Belleville—Goal, Fitzpatrick; defence, Holway and Samanski; centre, Gordon; wings, Lyall and Bishop; subs, Samak, Day, Meagher, Boyd, Valentine, Hall.

Whitby — Goal, Heffering; defence, Hall and Wilson; centre, Samanski; wings, Harden, Pascoe; subs, Pilling, McCleary, Litner, Gates and W. Lowe.

Referee, St. Louis, Belleville. Summary:

1st Period

Whitby, Harden (Samanski, Pascoe) 16.11

Belleville, Meagher (Semak) 19.01

Penalties—None.

2nd Period

Whitby, Harden (Samanski) 2.31

Belleville, Bishop (Lyall) 12.41

Belleville, Lyall (Coleman) 13.41

Whitby, Samanski (Harden) 15.04

Whitby, Samanski (Pascoe) 19.20

Penalties—Bishop, Lyall and Valentine.

3rd Period

Belleville, Semark (Holway) 1.00

Whitby, Samanski (Harden) 7.33

Penalties—Litner (2), Valentine) 13.10

Penalties—Litner 19.31

Penalties—Samanski and Valentine.

New York, March 2 — (AP) — Racing contributed $6,520,980.56 to the war effort during 1943 and Sherman Duryea, president and general chairman of the Turf Committee of American Racing announced today. The 1943 donation of $5,326,262.44 was raised through "war days" and other special occasions at 22 tracks. The 1942 contribution was $3,194,718.38, Duryea said.

Toronto, March 2—(CP)—Cooney Weiland, coach of Hershey Bears in the American Hockey League, has said night Eric (Doc) Prentice and Ken Richards will be released today from Toronto Maple Leafs, but added the deal is contingent on approval of the National League clubs waive on the players. Prentice, former Timmins, Ont., juvenile and Schultz, from Kitchener, Ont., farmed out last year Providence Reds of the American League early in the season but have been getting into with Leafs for several weeks.

Hamilton, Ont., March 2—(CP)— Officials of Hamilton Majors Inc., Senior "A" group said last night they have been advised by the O. H. A. and the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association that Bobby Bellow and Jack Laycoe can not be used as military reinforcements in their Allan Cup battle against St. Catharines Saints. The club was informed it would be unable to use Barlow and Laycoe, members of the Canadian Navy team, because a member of the armed services is permitted to compete in Allan or Memorial Cup play-offs.

Paterson, N.J., March 2—(AP)— Approval of a scheduled 10-round championship match March 10 at Boston between Phil Terranova, bantamweight champion, and Sal Bartolo was announced yesterday by Abe J. Greene, president of the National Boxing Association. Greene said he has sent his sanction to Samuel O. Taylor, Massachusetts Boxing Commissioner, approval of which clears the way for the championship captures the crown.

St. Paul—(AP)—First-baseman Howie Schultz, purchased from St. Louis Cardinals, Dodgers signed summer for $40,000 and several players, yesterday after a conference during which became of his height. He stands six feet seven inches. Schultz has not signed the 1944 contract but said he would take it with him to the Dodgers' training camp in some of the important stakes races, but was so badly injured in a spill at Pimlico that it was decided to retire her to the stud.

The city editor, an alderman and cigar store proprietor conferred to frame up stories for the St. Catharines-Oshawa Junior playoffs and left that to them for the long drive home after the second period with the score 12 to 2 in favor of Oshawa, the Generals winning by 14-3. What a reversal of form after St. Catharines had kicked the Generals around in St. Kilts by an 8-2 count, last night's play St. Catharines had no licence to be in the same rink yet they won their group. It looks kind of fishy and Georgie Stroughill may have a lot of explaining to do. Generals should win four in a row from here in but it would be St. Catharines may need another win at home to get out of the hole after the season's play. Incidentally St. Michael's got knocked off by Galt in Toronto and Hamilton took Brantford.

CASUAL COMMENT

by K.J.C.

"Number please."

"Double three, one, double two."

"Double two, one, double three?"

"Yes . . . is that the Mikes?"

"I beg your pardon, but what did you say?"

"Is that Mike Howe?"

"Your cow—what do you mean?"

"Don't you understand, plain English?"

"I wouldn't be in this job if I didn't. Who do you want to speak to?"

"I've told you twice already — Mike Howe."

"You'd better try the Cattle Market Exchange. This is not a cowshed."

"Don't try to be funny, mike. I've asked for Mike Howe and I want Mike Howe."

"Well, we haven't got your cow. If it has strayed you should get in touch with the police. Good morning."

(All-out game.)

The winner of tonight's Camp Borden-Mountain View Training Command hockey combination meets the winner of a series now being played in Western Ontario. On the other end it's St. Thomas and Centralia finishing the schedule, the winner playing the Brantford "Flyers" over the weekend, the team to meet Guelph in the series meets in night's winner here.

Sergeant Lander Caring-Kelly moved into town this afternoon with a couple of former Junior "A" stars, studded with seven senior players of note. However, the "Borden Flyers" had a couple of fine ex-professional players such as the remarkable McKeown and goalie the calibre of Claude Bourque. Getting back to the line-up, there you'll find Don Taylor, and Hardy from the Montreal Royals, Rob Hardy from Niagara Falls, who played with the Niagara Cascades two years ago and Groombridge from Calgary minding the nets.

(Remember when.)

Max Schmeling, leading heavyweight boxing challenger by virtue of his knockout victory over Joe Louis, arrived in New York from Germany seven years ago today to challenge Jimmy Braddock for the world's heavyweight championship. Braddock, however, met Louis and was dethroned by the negro. Schmeling received his chance to fight for the title in 1938, but he was pitted, off by Louis in one round.

(Mel's chagrinned.)

Umpire Bill Klem once called a third strike on Mel Ott against Mel Ott of the Giants and set the slugger back, however, and Arthur Fletcher of the New York Herald-Tribune, who was standing close left for the dugout, Klem called after him:

"I told you you couldn't hit 'em without swinging at 'em, you Missouri mule!"

"Now, that hurt me," Mel said later, recalling the incident. "Everyone ought to know I come from Louisiana."

(Fillies don't win.)

Fillies played such valiant parts in the 1942 and turf dramas of 1943, that many astute horsemen feel that one or another may come up a real threat to any colts whose path they may cross in the 1944 "Run for the Roses" and the 70th running of the Kentucky Derby on May 6th. Regret of 1941 and the fifty filly that won the Derby. In the history of the race, only 30 have gone to the post through the 69 years. The last to win was Gold Seeker , which finished 9th in 1936. In the previous year—Nellie Flag was 4th and 14 to 1 for Omaha. The latter won, while Nellie finished third. Twilight Tear generally was rated the top filly 1943, with Stymie close up. Boolgana, a bit on the in-and-out side, won some races by large gaps of open daylight; in others, she rated below expectations. Maybe she won't like distance—but it will take springtime training to furnish the answer. Mrs. Ames and Crompton's sensations in the early summer of 1943, but did not do so well through the autumn. Keeneland may develop into a great rout-running course. Whirlaway was fast and stout-hearted as a 2 year old in 1941. Probably the best filly of that year was Bee Mac, bred by E. R. Bradley, and which raced in the colors of Miss Beatrice Macomber, daughter of one of the officers of the Empire Gas and Fuel Co. Bee Mac whipped all the best colts and fillies

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 317

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Hey Mike, Let's go to work on another deal. Let's assume you are the dealer in the south in this pair of partnership hands:

SOUTH
♠ A 8 3
♥ K 4 3
♦ 6 5 4 3
♣ 10 9
NORTH
♠ K Q 9
♥ Q x 7 2
♦ K 7 x 2

Pick up your hand. Separate your cards into suits. Take a gander at what you have. Now, start off by telling your partner as best you can what your hand contains. Don't go at it as if you were a Philadelphia lawyer trying to confuse a jury. Get down to cases and talk in a language that your partner can understand.

What is the first thing you will want to tell your partner? Tip him off if you are strong enough to start a fight with the two bozards who are playing against you.

If you think you are unable to put up a good fight, don't start anything. Tell him so in the only way you are permitted to talk in bridge game. The way you tell him so is with the word "pass."

Now, listen. Maybe you would like to chuck a bluff with your enemies. Even if you are not strong enough to put up a battle, maybe you would like to throw a scare into them.

Okay. Toots. It's your funeral. But, if you do, you are likely to have your block knocked off. So, things have before you start anything. And don't say I didn't warn you.

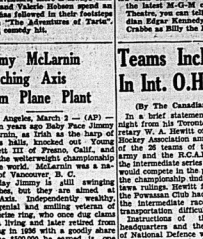
If you have any sense, you will not open bestilittes unless you can stand up under the competition. To do that, you and your partner need more than the strength of your opponents.

Thus, what should you look for before making the first bid? A holding that is better than average in tricks; in high cards; in suits in tricks; and in the suit you bid.

If you have a hand better than average in all the needed items. If so, you can safely bid. Ketchon?

AT THE McCARTHY—A scene from "HIGH SIERRA" starring Ida Lupino and Humphrey Bogart now at the McCarthy Theatre. Also feature hit is GALS INCORPORATED with Leon Errol, Harriet Hilliard, Grace McDonald and Glen Gray and the Casa Loma Orchestra.

AT THE BELLE ... No matter what the adventure, there is always time for love. And to prove it Robert Donat and Valerie Hobson spend an evening away from the excitement that has followed in their footsteps since they first met. The scene is from "The Adventures of Tartu". "Gildersleeve on Broadway" is the added comedy hit.



AT THE CAPITOL—By the looks on the faces of Laurel and Hardy in the latest M-G-M comedy, "Air Raid Wardens," now at the Capitol Theatre, you can tell they aren't entirely sympathetic with what comedian Edgar Kennedy is doing for them. On the same program Buster Crabbe as Billy the Kid in "Sheriff of Sage Valley."

AT THE CAPITOL

'Laurel & Hardy"

Laurel and Hardy are air raid wardens!

This gives them opportunity for one of the funniest adventures in their career, in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Air Raid Wardens", coming next to the Capitol Theatre. The redoubtable comedians manage to get into and disentangle themselves while blundering through their duties. In addition there is a love story, an inspiring lesson in patriotism embellishes the laugh situation as Hardy holdings in a whipper cream battle with Edgar Kennedy and are involved in a nest of saboteurs and capture the gang single handed.

Fyvee Armed Forces Right

Edward Sedgwick directed the latest hilarious adventure of the two. They are turned down by the armed forces, and prove the armed forces were right when they go into civilian defence.

Beautiful Jacqueline White and Horace McNally are teamed as the romantic interest. Laurel and Hardy are aided and abetted in their funmaking by Howard Freeman, Henry Walker, Donald Meek, Edgar Kennedy and Henry O'Neill.

"Billy The Kid"

One of the most exciting fight scenes ever recorded in a western is to be seen in the U.S. Color production thriller, "Sheriff of Sage Valley", starring Buster Crabbe, which comes next to the Capitol Theatre as the added bill.

Charles King, the principal heavy, puts up the main scrap with Buster Crabbe, who, as his opponent.

And this fight is not all in favor of the hero, either. King handles Crabbe in a terrific knock-down-and-drag-out fracas as if the star is going to come out victorious. But he is not done with King finally taking the count.

Meanwhile there are five other combats taking place with cowboys and cattle rustlers. That is not one of the most exciting scenes you will find in any picture this season, starting with a set of fighters paired off, all slamming each other around the saloon and wrecking it something awful. They literally tear the place apart. The wheel crashes first, then the faro table, and finally the bar itself is toppled over in a mass of ruins.

The serial "Secret Service in Darkest Africa" is a colored cartoon complete the big double family bill.

AT THE BELLE

"Adventures of Tartu"

With vivacious Valerie Hobson playing opposite him, Robert Donat returns to the screen in "The Adventures of Tartu," the M-G-M British-made picture which is now on the Belle Theatre screen. In the supporting cast are such notable players as Glynis Johns and Walter Rilla.

Authenticity Predominates

With an eye toward authenticity in all details, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer produced this stirring war drama in London. Harold S. Bucquet directed "The War Against Mrs. Hadley" and a number of other outstanding films, made a special trip to England where he guided the various principals in the cast.

The story of adventure and romance and intrigue concerns Donat's assignment to investigate his own past. Next time into Czecho-Slovakia, where he is to destroy the Skoda works. That first he must accomplish, through whatever means necessary, the secret formula of a poison gas the Nazis are manufacturing at the plant.

As an expert in chemist, Donat finds little difficulty in convincing the Nazi authorities of his office, but it behooves Valerie Hobson, in a moment of fury, to give him the tip off that leads him off in time to save his neck, which means also save his own for herself.

There are many breath-taking scenes as Donat works feverishly against the actual deadline and is included in the early sequences; also the Florence Nightingale Nurses' Home, which was bombed by the Nazis and left in ruins.

"Giddy" on Broadway" Fanny Brice is the funniest of "Giddy's" exploits to date, RKO Radio's "Gildersleeve on Broadway," the added comedy which revolves around a trip to New York which proves to have woeful consequences for the retired furniture.

Although he has just become engaged to a home-town girl, "Giddy" soon finds himself involved with two other women, one of whom are fast and furious, Harold Peary again plays the title role, and the supporting cast includes Billie Burke, Robert Cummings, Ann Doran, Claire Carleton and Margaret Landry.

A new Community Sing film completes the program. "The Adventures of Tartu" will be exhibited once nightly.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Gals Incorporated"

Novel comedy situations, gay music and a screen full of glamorous Hollywood notables are the entertaining elements of Universal's latest fun film, "Gals Incorporated," which is now playing at the McCarthy Theatre. The picture described as a sparkling cinema frolic, headlines Leon Errol, Harriet Hilliard and Grace McDonald.

Errol, the famous "rubberlegs" comedian, has the key role in the production, which appears as the fancy-free sponsor of a swank nightclub where the entire proceeds is made up of beautiful girls. When straight-laced relatives attempt to "reform" him, he becomes involved in a masterplan how which he hopes to set several high records in movie hilarity.

David Bacon has an important featured part and among the other talented players are Jean Parker, Maureen Cannon, Lillian Cornell and the well known Fleet Players. Outstanding musical highlights of the picture is the appearance of Glen Gray and his celebrated Casa Loma Orchestra.

Three dazzling specialties are presented during the cabaret sequences and the film's musical score, includes twelve numbers. Visited during the new times are "All The Time It's You" "Here's Your Kiss," and "Hep Hep Hooray". The old time favorite, "What Can You Say In Dear After I Say I'm Sorry" is presented in the Hot Lips Pipers.

2nd feature attraction presents Humphrey Bogart, Ida Lupino in "High Sierra" with a notable addition of the British Associated news rounds out an excellent program.

MOUNTAIN VIEW READY FOR TILT

A brilliant week of hockey in local circles will be in the offing tonight with a sudden death game between Camp Borden and Mountain View Bombers here at the local rink for finals of the Training Command in Toronto next week. Both teams will be at full strength with officials at the rink reporting the ice in almost perfect condition. The sale of tickets for this game has been the greatest of any game in the local annuel of the Mountain View Stadium, purchasers to the tune of 1,000 pasteboards for the battle.

Mountain View has in their defenceman Parker, who has been posted by "Artie" Mooney as his replacement will be satisfactory. A number of named players are on the squad of the Bombers and the team has visions of winning the Command title in Toronto. Carthage-Kelly is bringing down a strong squad and although there are not as many named players on the team as the Bombers boast of, yet they have a well-drilled club and ready for a stiff battle. The visitors came in early last night and are being entertained at the Mountain View Station and at Trenton, many of the boys having been in this district before going to Camp Borden.

Senator Davies Praises Part Played by Welsh

Montreal, March 2 —(CP)— The part played by the fighting men from the Welsh in the present war and the First Great War was praised last night by Senator W. Davies, publisher of The Toronto Whig-Standard, in a St. David's Day address to the Welsh Society of Montreal.

In the last war "Wales contributed more men to the armed forces per unit of population than any other part of the British Empire" and while no figures are available for this war, Welsh soldiers will be found on every fighting front and distinguishing themselves wherever they are."

The civilian population has also supported the war effort and at "tremendous personal sacrifice" has invested £128,508,439 in national savings certificates since the war began.

Senator Davies commended a movement to join the 17 Welsh societies of Canada in the Welsh Cymmrodorion Society. Its 74,663 persons of Welsh origin in Canada, "have a right to be heard as a unit" and if united could be useful to the Welsh people of Canada as well as their native land.

Corbyville Beats Centenary and Will Battle Zion Hill in Semi-Finals

TWO GOOD GAMES

Coming from behind in the second period Corbyville battled their way into the playoffs of the Central Hastings Rural Hockey League at Stirling on Wednesday evening, when they beat the crowd of the season and they defeated Centenary in a closely fought game to go into the league semi-finals which open this coming week. The winner of the determine the tail-end slot in the league playdowns. The winner of the other half of the doubleheader West Huntingdon shut out the fast travelling Zion Hill sextette to earn a bye into the finals.

The league setup now is for Corbyville and Zion to play a sudden death game at the Stirling rink this evening with the winners to enter the finals against Huntingdon. Previous to Tuesday night's encounter Zion and Huntingdon have split the first place and Centenary Corbyville for the cellar slot.

After the scoreless first period the West Huntingdon boys went out in front in Tuesday night's first game when Thompson and Grant scored once each the second period sway. In the third period Huntingdon's defence counted for the only other goal of the game when L. Sills and Wright combined. Final score was 2-0.

Lineups:

Zion Hill: Goal, Gifford; defence, Sills and Guay; forwards, Brough, Thompson and Jarrell; subs, Simms, A. Tummon, G. Tummon, Ketchen and Ray.

West Huntingdon: Goal, Parge; defence, Thompson and Wright; forwards, L. Sills, R. Sills and Wright; sub, McCurdy.

Come From Behind.

Corbyville had to come from behind to emerge victor in the second game which saw Centenary dominated for further seasonal play. Bellis and Frost combined in the initial canto to sink the boobies behind G. Martin in the Corbyville nets, but then on the Corbyville net minder was invincible. His teammates swung into action in the second period when Ritz took a pass from Sheffield to go with "Wimpy" Gay in the Centenary nets to sink the rubber for the equalizer. Martin turned the winning counter in the final period when he batted in the same minute mark for the last counter. Only three penalties were out were D. Sills and Carleton.

Lineups:

Corbyville: Goal, G. Martin; defence, Gray and Sills; forwards, Bellis, Frost and Sheffield; subs, Carleton, Walker, Huffman, Sills and Haynes.

Centenary: Goal, Gay; defence, Woods and Ritz; forwards, Wilson, Waite and Donnelly; subs, Countreau, Frost, Bellis, D. Harder, C. Harder, Hall, Latta and Marshall.

Jimmy McLarnin Punching Axis From Plane Plant

Los Angeles, March 2 — (AP) — Eleven years ago Jack Pierce Jimmy McLarnin, as Irish as the harp of Tara's halls, knocked out Young Corbett III of Fresno, Calif., and won the welterweight championship of the world. McLarnin was a native of Vancouver, B. C.

Today Jimmy is still swinging punches, but they are aimed at the Axis. Independently wealthy, the genial and smiling veteran of the prize ring, who once dug clams for a living and later retired from boxing in 1936 with a goodly share of the $500,000 he earned, is one of the men behind the man behind the gun.

McLarnin works for an airplane specialties concern in Hollywood. Days in a full day but whatever spare time he finds usually is devoted to his new love-golf. Not a four handicap man.

McLarnin whipped 13 past and present world champions from 1924 until his retirement, but the best man he ever fought and couldn't doesn't hesitate an instant in this connection. He was Barney Ross. There aute Ind., Terror, Bud, says Barney Ross is the best of all ageles' Henry Armstrong the battle of his life if they had squared off in the prime.

McLarnin is still within a few pounds of his best ring weight. He is married, the father of a young daughter and lives modestly on his ring earnings and the investments made since he gave up boxing.

BARONS CERTAIN TO FINISH FIRST

(By The Canadian Press)

Cleveland Barons, now certain of finishing the American Hockey League season as leaders of the western division, were held to a 1-1 tie last night by Hershey Bears, leaders of the eastern division, but Indianapolis Capitals whipped Providence Reds 5-3 in the only other scheduled game in the circuit.

In the first period which between the leaders, Barons' Tommy Burston scored late in the first period and Hershey's Bob Brownschidle tied Peg O'Neil, Ross Knowles and George Patterson scored three straight within three minutes and seven in Bears's lead.

Cleveland rallied when Pete Horeck flipped a counter in the Bears net just 18 minutes after the opening of the third period, Lou Trudel tied the counter four minutes later and neither team scored throughout the remainder of the period.

Indianapolis Caps scored five goals in the final period to overwhelm Reds 7-2. Reds' Yank Boyd scored in the second period and Bill Whittet added their second counter in the final frame.

Rod Morrison led Caps with two tallies, Alex Shibicki, Dick Rowinski, Kenny Kilrea, Johnny Sorrell and Ken Reardon each accounting for the other Indianapolis goals.

Teams Including Army Personnel In Int. O.H.A. Out of Playdowns

(By The Canadian Press)

In a brief straight game limed last night from nils Toronto office, Secretary W. A. Hewitt of the Ontario Hockey Association announced none of the 26 teams of the Canadian army and the R.C.A.F. entered in the intermediate series of the O.H.A. would compete in the playdowns for the championship under recent Ottawa rulings. Hewitt further stated the Pervaxian Club had retired from the intermediate race because of transportation difficulties.

Instructions of the Air Force headquarters and the Department of National Defence which resulted in the withdrawal of the teams and personnel from organized hockey had stated the order affected local participation in competitions leading to the Allan cup or Memorial cup. Teams in the Intermediate O.H.A. do not point to either of these trophies but to championships of "units" have now been included under restrictions against entry into playdowns of that series after finishing compact group schedules.

The undersigned reinforcement unit last night won the hockey championship of the Canadian army overseas and will play games by defeating the Camerons 8-2, after winning the first encounter 5-4, Rocky Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, commander of British and forces in the invasion, presented medals to players of both teams before a crowd of 6,000 soldier-spectators.

AGNES MACPHAIL RAPS PACKING PLANTS IN HOUSE

Legislature Continues Night Sessions to Speed Legislation

SOME BILLS PASSED

Toronto, March 3—(CP)—Already well ahead of schedule on a heavy agenda, the Ontario Legislature today noters its first double sitting of the session, convening in the afternoon and again tonight in an effort to speed the throne speech debate and progress of bills.

Routine business and bills are expected to occupy most of the afternoon before A. Kelso Roberts (PC-Toronto-St. Patrick) continues the Throne Speech debate in which A. A. MacLeod (LP-Toronto Bellwoods) and Agnes Macphail (CCF-York East) spoke yesterday.

The debate will continue at night but who will follow the Toronto independent member was not immediately indicated.

Miss Macphail, member of the Commons for 19 years and former farm woman and teacher, dealt with farm problems and criticized packing companies. She noted the government's intention to take over the Toronto stockyards and said it might do well to "socialize" packing plants as well.

Miss Macphail said that Canada Packers were able to maintain a substantial rate of profits even during the worst depression years. The facts were that the capital assets and reserves of the packers represented profits made out of the farmers.

One solution might be to organize buying cooperatives of the province under existing legislation so they could negotiate with the packing houses for "a more reasonable deal". The government might also assist hog farmers to form small packing plants.

She believed that the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph and the Agricultural School at Kemptville should be taken from the Department of Agriculture and placed under a Board of Governors. Farmers should have a say in appointing the governing board.

The York East Member also called for government assistance in forming "power co-operatives" through which farmers might have the use of modern machinery.

Mr. MacLeod told the legislature the Toberan Conference should be regarded as one of the most important in history and he criticized a publication (Canadian Forum) which he said had belittled the conference and delegates. He was critical too of people who saw the prospect of peace after the war.

Asked to Implement Promises.

He called on Premier Drew to implement his re-election "promise" to take over 50 per cent of the cost of education in Ontario and called for a 40-hour week with two weeks' holidays instead of legislation for a 48-hour week and a one-week holiday as forecast in the Throne speech.

The Labor-Progressive member defended the C.C.F. against those who would term "the movement "National Socialist," and charged that Gladstone Murray, Toronto policy counsel, was "running around the country saying he knew that the Labor-Progressive party had in its pocket a plan to stage a general strike next summer. That statement, he said, was a blatant lie.

Throughout his address, Mr. MacLeod linked certain phases of the C.C.F. program with that of his party and called for collaboration between the government and the C.C.F. opposition to end the classy-signed house.

Four Bills Read Second Time.

The legislature yesterday gave second reading to four bills, including an act to set up a Department of Planning and Development and its companion measure amending the Executive Council Act to make setting up of the new department possible.

The other would amend the Apprenticeship Act to require apprenticeship certification in 21 trades requesting it, and provide for the central typing and publication of provincial regulations.

No minister has yet been named to take over the new Department of Planning and Development which will co-ordinate the post-war development and rehabilitation plans now in hand by a number of bodies in the province. It was reported at Queen's Park that Labor Minister Charles Daley might assume the new portfolio temporarily.

The legislature also gave first reading to the Sugar Beet Subsidy Act, 1941, under which sugar beet growers will receive bonus payments on contracts will get a subsidy of $1.50 instead of the present $3 cents between April 1 this year and March 31, 1945.

Opposition Introduces Bill.

W. J. Grummett (C.C.F.-Cochrane South) gave notice of motion today he plans to present a bill to amend the Mothers' Allowances Act to extend its provisions to other than "orphan" children—the first Opposition bill to be introduced at the current session.

Mr. Grummett said his object was to take care of children whose mother is either deceased or confined to an institution and whose father has deserted them. Such children are not at present included for benefits under the act, Mention Raised Out.

Speaker W. J. Stewart yesterday ruled out of order a motion by Agnes Johnston (C.C.F.-Cochrane North) amending the Justices of the Peace bill when it came up for third reading. Mr. Kelso's motion asked that all prospective justices of the peace go through a judge for examination, except those with legal training.

Previously the Speaker had ruled J. B. Salsberg (LP-Toronto St. Andrew) out of order when he attempted to discuss a bill introduced by Labor Minister Charles Daley to amend the Apprenticeship Act.

SHRAPNEL WOUNDS IN LEG AND NECK

Maj. T. S. Ketchenson's Wounds Described In Letter From Padre Maj. F. A. Smith

Trenton, March 3—In a letter to his father, Mr. Walter Ketchenson of the Continental Inn here, Major T. S. (Stan.) Ketchenson wounded in Italy recently, is said to have suffered shrapnel in the leg and neck. The letter was from Major Ketchenson's padre, Major F. A. Smith, who was formerly pastor of St. George's Anglican Church, Trenton, where Major Ketchenson attended before enlisting. The padre stated that though Ketchenson was wounded he was able to return to his base without assistance and is now progressing favorably.

Major Ketchenson went over with the First Battalion, Hastings & Prince Edward Regiment, in December, 1939, and after much training and courses in England he returned to Canada about a year ago and spent nine months as an instructor in various camps throughout the Dominion. He returned to England last September and joined his regiment when they entered Italy.

Two brothers are also overseas, J. Horace Ketchenson, who enlisted with the signalling Regiment, going over in September, 1943, on the same boat as his brother, Major Stan and Lance Bomb. Douglas Ketchenson, who enlisted last August and is with the Provost Corps in England.

E. W. Henderson Dairy Instructor

Picton, March 3—Ernest W. Henderson has been appointed Dairy Instructor for Prince Edward County, and will commence his new duties on April 1st. He succeeds George Sherriff of Bloomfield. Mr. Henderson has been one of the leading cheesemakers in Prince Edward County, and for some years led all makers in the production of first grade cheese. Last year, at Black Creek, cheese he manufactured graded 93.864 per cent first grade.

His father, Joseph D. Henderson is Dairy Inspector for Spencerville district and for many years was a maker in Prince Edward where he won the title of champion cheese maker.

Previous to going to Black Creek factory nine years ago, E. W. Henderson operated the Dairy factory. Born at Kingston, he learned the butter making industry in that district.

Canada to Join In Post-War Plan To Preserve Peace

By ALAN RANDAL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, March 2 —(CP Cable)— Canadian co-operation in the establishment of any post-war international system which will keep the peace can be taken for granted, George V. Ferguson, executive editor of the Winnipeg Free Press, told the people of Britain.

One of a party of eight Canadian editors touring Britain for the past few weeks, Ferguson spoke on the BBC postscript program after the evening news broadcast.

Canada as a small nation is fortunate in grasping the fate of many small nations in this war, Ferguson said, adding:

"We do not want another war for we know what would happen to us, and hence our greatest interest is not creation of an imperial policy but creation of a real international system which will keep the peace. And co-operation in such a system can be taken for granted."

Canada's policy always would be directed at bringing Britain and the United States closer together, he said, because "only thus can we resolve our difficulties."

One consequence of this policy is that it is difficult for Canada to fall in with local ambitions for what he called a common imperial foreign policy.

Canadians are likely to feel that the dominant voice in framing a common imperial policy is bound to be the voice of Britain, he said and will ask if British policy is running square with or country to American policy. If Anglo-American agreement is solid, then Canada's difficulties are overcome. If such agreement does not exist, then Canada's difficulties will be greater and greater with the passage of time.

Canada as a small nation knows that its future safely lies ultimately not inside any imperial orbit, not inside any American sphere of influence, he said. "It lies in creation of a larger system of international law and order inside which special ambitions and policies of even the greatest powers will be worked out not in opposition to but in collaboration with all neighbors."

Fred Barnum Seriously Hurt In Runaway

Allan's Mills (Special)—Dragged for a considerable distance behind the farm horses when the lines of horses he was driving ran away, Fred Barnum, 70-year-old retired farmer of Allan's Mills district, R.R. Campbellford, is in Belleville General Hospital in a serious condition. He had hitched the horses to the sleigh to do morning chores about the farm when they became frightened and he was dragged when he held to the reins in an unsuccessful effort to control the team.

After an X-ray examination at the Belleville Hospital it was determined by the attending physician that Mr. Barnum had suffered a fractured skull, fractured leg, and several fractured ribs. His condition was termed by hospital attendants as being serious.

Grandma's Cooking Was on Grand Scale

(By R. F. A. in Windsor Star.)

Because my mother, who considered herself rather a bit more modest than her pioneer mother, never cooked on any such scale, one of the bright memories of my early life is that visits to a visit to Grandmother Pooley's kitchen on a Saturday forenoon, especially if the weather was bad and outdoor activities not so pleasant.

Almost always I would find Grandma making doughnuts, or sether fried cakes, which was our name for them. Grandma's family was rate large; just herself and my aunt and the inevitable "company", usually somepody from the very large Hurst family connection which numbered into the hundreds 40 years back. But she always made doughnuts like she did anything else in the food line—on a magnificent scale.

Always, on the stove of a Saturday morning, there would be a huge quantity of lard in a black iron kettle, and on her breadboard would be the spicy dough—enough for eight or 10 dozen doughnuts. In addition there would be cookies in the making, and preparations going forward for a hickory nut cake. That is, my aunt would be cracking and picking out the nut meats, and if I was not careful, I would be invited to help.

Hickory Nuts

Or it might be an angel food cake. If Grandma was expecting a special guest for Sunday outside of the regular company, and there would be a good deal of egg-beating going on, with the whites of eggs piled down egg going into the one cake, while still other varieties of cake had to be made to suit the folks.

Procedure on the fried cakes followed pretty much of a fixed pattern for me. In order that I might be busy at something I liked instead of more monotonous business of picking out tiny fragments of hickory nut meats from the hard-to-crack shells, I would offer to drop the fried cakes in the kettle, turn them when they were browned on one side and then fish them out with a fork when they were done. I usually got what I wanted, much to Aunt Lil's disgust, and then I would tease Grandma to make me a friend cake "man".

The first request for the "man", would invariably be turned down, but it was a persistent tease, and Grandma an easy mark, so pretty soon I would be beating the batter to see her cut out strips of dough for arms and legs, a short piece for the head, and stuck all to a bigger and wider strip for the body. Then the "man" would be dumped into the hot lard, and if everything turned out well, I had something special to take home with me and eat, for by the time it was done I would have eaten my fill of hot friend cakes, they being much better when only cooled to the point where they did not burn your mouth.

As for the cookies, they would usually be in two varieties, molasses and sugar, and as there was never any shortage of shortening butter in those days, they were bound to be good. In addition, bread would be under way. In those days, housewives like Mother and Grandma considered it somewhat of a disgrace to buy bread at the baker's. As for serving any such to company, that simply wasn't done. In our home, the only excuse for eating baker's bread was sickness or house-cleaning or something like that, and even then it always seemed to be none. It was not until she was past 75 years old and the baker had vastly improved his product that the bread-making ceased at Grandma's.

Hickory Nut Cake

Of all the cakes that came out of her kitchen, I think that the hickory nut cake was the best. Native walnuts were used occasionally and sometimes Grandma had butternuts, very rich and strong. But the hickory nut flavor was the smoothest.

Hickory nut cakes were hard to destroy, in whose store at any period of the fall, when the first front came. You got out and went to the woods and found a tree. If you were lucky, you found plenty of nuts on the ground, but you might have to climb the tree and then the man who owned the nuts was liable to catch you taking them and he would make it very unpleasant for you, even going to the trouble of demanding pay from your father. But, anyway, you got the nuts.

Next step toward a hickory nut cake was getting the nuts home and after that they had to be shucked. A hickory nut has a tough fibrous covering which grows in sections and it will come off easily if the nut is picked at the right time when it is fully ripe and after it has been touched by frost. But if you rush the green nut and shuck and get to become one, and drying them in the sun does not help a great deal. I have put in a great many hour at shucking nuts in my day, just simply because I was too impatient about gathering them.

A nut that is still more difficult for a boy to take care of is the walnut. When you gather these, you pick up green nuts. The put inside is completely covered with nearly half an inch of pulp and fibre which holds a dark brown dye. Shucks on a butternut are thinner, but the dye is even stronger and the shuck is harder to remove. You have to let them rot away, but the walnut will yield to mass production methods when the shuck is fairly pulpy.

Preparation

Here is how that is done. You go to the wagon shop and beg the boss for a large wooden tub (will do as well) about 18 inches long by an inch and a half thick and about four wide. Then you beg him for an inch-and-a-half bit and bore a hole through the board. You then have a device which will shuck walnuts. This is done very simply by laying the board on two bricks. You then place the unshucked walnuts over the hole in the board and pound the nut through with a claw hammer. The shuck, most of it, stays on the board and the nut goes through, with only a small bit of pulp to be removed. But I never put any of the walnuts away like that and not stain his hands much to the annoyance of the merchant in the family.

And so, after all that work, was it any wonder that we boys liked to have our women folk do the work of picking out the nuts for the cake? We might consent to cracking them, which was quite a trick, as all nuts which are native to these parts have hard shells, and it is a too often that when you crack one you mash the meats and thus make them hard to pick.

Nothing used to be slower, in my estimation, than the rate at which hickory nut meats would accumulate when you got pinched to the job of picking them out of the shells. The rich cake, with a flavor that was like nothing else on earth, used to go down very fast indeed. One often sacrificed, was it worth all that bother?

Unexpected Results.

Eating at grandmother's was very apt to have results on which one did not calculate. I do not remember much for fried cakes, even to this day because one Saturday night grandmother never let me all I could eat of it, and when it came midnight Dad had to go for Doctor Slocum and he and the folks thought they were lucky to get over a spell of acute indigestion. Which did not prevent me from repeating on strawberry shortcake the next June but fortunately for me, overeating did not turn me against that grandest of all desserts.

Grandma always believed on cooking and eating on a grand scale because of her pioneer background. When she was a girl, lots of food on the table was a symbol of success, because food and shelter and the clothes one wore and even the furniture had been wrested from a wilderness where that had been trees and more trees when the pioneers came from New York State to our country in Southern Michigan around 110 years ago.

Grandma and Great-grandmother Snow regularly cooked for 15 to 20 the year around on their backwoods farm, and everything but coffee and tea and spices and raisins came off the farm.

Sometimes I believe, they couldn't get coffee and used a substitute. Long before Postum ever came on the market, Grandma used to make a cereal drink that tasted much like it, only better. It was made from molasses and graham flour, baked very hard, almost burnt, in fact. And Grandma could make crackers as well. I have never bought any that equaled those which came from her oven in the old days.

INVASION BOUND

Alas Poor Robin Redbreast

(By B.O.B. in Gananoque Reporter)

If the robins, among the first harbingers of Spring, appear to be fewer in number in Gananoque next Summer, one reason may be attributed to the disgraceful massacre of these birds recently in the act, joining State of Georgia, details of which are recorded in the following press dispatch:

A mob of some 70 persons, on a weird turkey-shoot for robins, killed hundreds of the small birds to death before sugges took up the wildest group of "sportsmen" in Georgia's history, the game and fish commission reported today.

Thirteen persons were arrested after the Brunswick County hunt last week and will be prosecuted by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife service. They face penalties up to a year in jail and $500 fines.

Wildlife Ranger J. W. Harrell said the robin hunters were "white and blacks and children, men and blinded and demoralized the birds at a southeast Georgia robin roost with 'lighters' knot torches. They flailed the birds out of low-hanging evergreen boughs and bushes with sticks and brooms."

State game officials called the hunt the most flagrant violation of conservation laws ever recorded and said the wanton destruction of hundreds of the valuable birds was carried out apparently to use only a few birds in "robin pies".

Horses, lalpies and even a school bus formed a caravan for the "infamous torch hunt" reminiscent of the old-time "passenger pigeon" hunts—when thousands of big doves now extinct as a result, were dynamited.

The Georgia robin free-for-all took place near Swainsboro, where an "outrageous" pond-cutting and fish-fest occurred last August, when scores of "sportsmen" used everything from pitchforks to buckets to scoop up fish from a drained pond, the state game department said.

When Rangers Harrell and Jesse Smith arrived at the robin roost in the sparsely populated lowlands on the night of the hunt the "torches scattered through the woods like rats in a sedge field".

The 13 who were arrested, including one negro woman whose flight was stopped only after the rangers drew guns, were confined in the school bus they had used as their hunting wagon while the two rangers gathered up the dead birds.

The state game department said the "culprits did not have their robin pie." Only hundreds of local hospitals where the birds were distributed got a taste of Georgia's most cherished migratory songbird".

The Red Carnation

By Burton Stevenson

CHAPTER 28

"I'll try to see you later on," said the columnist. "Will you be out there all afternoon?"

"Yes, except lunch."

"All right, I'll call you."

Tony turned to his mail and after that, finished it, took a shower and then, following his usual custom, went to the office. Afternoon, however, found him at his little laboratory, slipped on a white kitchen coat, and been absently over his microscope. So he spent the afternoon, making slides and labeling them and was just slipping out of his coat when Clarence tapped at the door.

"There's a lady wants to see you, sah," he said. "Says her name is Miss Scott."

Tony strode into the study with "Oh it's you! I've been hoping you would come. I need your help."

"I only hope I can help!" and she rose to take his outstretched hand.

The columnist saw that she was looking more like herself. Her face had its delicate color back and there were no shadows under her eyes. She had regained her self-control, "Sit down," he said, "I'm glad to see you looking so much better than you did yesterday — feeling better, evidently."

"Yes, I'm feeling better. I hadn't been able to sleep, you know, and I did—after I decided to come to you today. I have not the slightest idea about what I ought to do. But I have made up my mind that I want to help you solve this mystery. I want to clear Dr. Metcalf's name and punish the man who killed him."

Her eyes were shining, her voice husky with emotion.

"But if he murdered McKibben—"

"He didn't!"

"You say that as though you were sure."

"I am sure." She took a rather long pause. "Mr. Hayslop, I am going to tell you something which I never thought I would tell anybody. Dr. Metcalf was in love with a woman, and she with him. She had dinner with him Monday night. She was with him long after the time Mr. McKibben was killed. She is ready to come forward and testify to that, if necessary."

Tony looked at her for a moment in silence. Her eyes were raised to his and he saw that they were a color he had not noticed. The Pan-like lift of her brows, the tilt of her nose, the curve of her lips. He had never seen a more provocative face. Tony, who had often been with Metcalf Monday night?

"You can take my word for it, Mr. Hayslop," Miss Scott added. "What I have just told you is true."

"Dr. Metcalf's boy could verify it, I suppose?"

"He knows that she had dinner there, but he would probably deny it unless he thought Dr. Metcalf would want him to accord one."

"He told Duffy that Metcalf was alone Monday night. He phoned the cook," Tony said. "Duffy was lying when he said it."

"We were very devoted to Dr. Metcalf."

"Perhaps you could persuade him."

"Perhaps I could," she interrupted, "but it isn't a question of verification, Mr. Hayslop. I have told you to believe that I know that Dr. Metcalf did not kill Mr. McKibben."

"Tony opened a box filled with cigarettes which stood on his desk, but she shook her head. He got out his pipe, loaded it, lighted it, and took three or four contemplative puffs.

"I've been curious about Metcalf," he said, "I have heard of his methods referred to as unorthodox."

"Of course they were unorthodox," she retorted. "What scientist ever accomplished anything unless he invented methods of his own?"

"That's true, Tony nodded. "I think he could really cure people of mental obsessions."

"I know he could. I have seen people's lives made over. Of course there are a lot of women who go to a psychiatrist merely because they want to talk about themselves—you know, to some man. Dr. Metcalf never wasted time on them. He told them the truth about themselves and sent them away."

"I was talking to one just yesterday," Tony said.

"That would be like him. He never took a case unless there was something about it that interested him, and also unless he really wanted to help bring about an improvement."

"How long have you known him?"

"Nearly four years."

"Tell me something about your-self, Miss Scott."

"There isn't anything to tell," she answered shortly. "My father is dead. I live with my mother."

"You admired Dr. Metcalf evidently."

"Of course I did. Anybody would who knew him. I was proud of the fact that he trusted me. He had absolutely no reason to suicide, Mr. Bigelow," she went on. "And I would be willing to swear that he never had a pistol. He had a horror of firearms. He would never kill anything."

"His boy said something of the sort," Tony agreed. "Why didn't you say all this when the police questioned you Friday?"

"I will tell you why," she said earnestly. "I did not say that, nor any of the other things I am telling you because I want the murderer found and him and who murdered John McKibben to think the case is closed. I want him to feel safe. Then he may betray himself."

"You speak as though you know what you are talking about."

"I know that he must be a very clever man."

"Yes, I think he is." Tony agreed. "As I understand it, you believe that not only Dr. Metcalf, Mrs. McKibben and Metcalf, but also that it was she who was working with Mr. Kibben in that blackmail racket."

"I am sure of it."

"You are probably right. You know, of course, that Dr. Metcalf kept records of many of some of the things his patients told him?"

"Of course. Psychiatrists often do that."

"Here's some diffidence of opinion as to whether it is an ethical procedure," Tony pointed out. "You must realize, Miss Scott, that some of these records would be the best possible basis for blackmail."

"In the hands of an unscrupulous person, perhaps," she conceded. "But why should Dr. Metcalf have to do anything like that? Where could you have got such an idea?"

"It isn't just an idea. One of his dictographic records was found in McKibben's safe. I told him about it Thursday afternoon."

"You let him, Miss Scott, "he told me. He was so furious. He looked like a maniac! He was so sure you left and found the original in the cabinet where it belonged. So he knew it must have been copied. That would be easy to do."

"Easy for Metcalf—not for anyone else. To make a duplicate, one must have the original, and the original was locked up in Metcalf's cabinet, to which he had the only key. Moreover it would take time and make considerable noise. How could anyone be sure he wouldn't be overheard or interrupted?"

"But Metcalf was away a great deal. It could have been done then. I don't imagine going into the cabinet would have been so difficult to anyone who understood locks. Of course," she added, "there aren't any records in the cabinet now."

"Oh," said Tony. "You know about that, do you?"

"Certainly I know about it. As soon as you left, Thursday afternoon, Dr. Metcalf got rid of the patients who was waiting and called me into his office and told me about the stolen records. He was so angry he could hardly speak. He said he wasn't going to risk having any more copied and he had me take all the records out of the cabinet and run them through the reconditioner one by one."

"And that's how it was," Tony commented. "Duffy and I found the blackened ashes last night when I saw the pile of shavings in the reconditioner. You're supposed to did it because he was getting ready to kill himself."

"He did it to protect his patients."

"I see that now. And it's also pretty evident that he didn't know about McKibben's death or he would not until I told him."

"Of course he didn't know."

"He would have known," Tony added severely, "if you had told him about Boyd's threat." Bradford's visit to the office Monday afternoon."

"But I did tell him, as soon as he came in. Mr. Bradford said he nothing about any record. He was drunk and excited and hardly knew what he was saying. He made some vague threats and waved a pistol. That is all."

"And then you bounced him out. He told me so."

"Bounced' is hardly the word," she protested. "I simply got him to get rid of him. After all, he's a gentleman."

"That's quite a compliment," said the columnist smiling. "I shall have to tell him. He'll like it."

"At any rate," Miss Scott said, "I hardly think that is what makes his real complaint was."

"But Bradford also told you that he was going to see Jack McKibben at Max's that night."

"Yes, he told me that."

"And you told Metcalf that too?"

"Yes."

"And he wrote me that anonymous letter?" Tony asked Miss Scott.

"I suppose so."

"But why?"

"I don't know. Perhaps to keep Mr. Bradford out of trouble."

Tony went on, after a moment, "But destroying those records may have been just wasted effort. If one of them was duplicated, they all would have been. Did you have the key to the office?"

"Certainly."

"But not to the cabinet?"

"No. Dr. Metcalf always gave me his key when it was necessary to fill the magazine of the dictograph, and then he completed records and file them."

"Then he left the office ever been out of your possession?"

"Only Saturday afternoon."

"What do you mean by that?"

"I mean that a little while after you had left, Herschel Schneider, Mr. Metcalf's lawyer, came in to see him. They were together in the inner office for perhaps half an hour. After Mr. Schneider had gone, Mr. Metcalf came out and gave me a month's salary and said he wouldn't need me any longer and asked for my key."

Tony looked at her thoughtfully. "How do you explain Dr. Metcalf's having the key to the Graham apartment?" Tony asked.

"I can't."

"It has been suggested to me," went on Tony slowly, "that Mrs. McKibben and Dr. Metcalf were very friendly and that she gave him the key."

The girl's face went crimson. "Ridiculous!" she flashed. "Dr. Metcalf would never have looked at that silly woman. Where could you get such an idea?"

"In the hands of an unscrupulous person, perhaps," she conceded. "But why should Dr. Metcalf have to do anything like that? Where could you have got such an idea?"

"I'll isn't just an idea. One of his dictographic records was found in McKibben's safe. I told him about it Thursday afternoon."

Little Benny's Note Book

Mary Watkins was sitting on her front step in a blue coat and her blue hat to match her eyes, and Pudd'n Stanton went along and started to talk to her and say different things, but nothing seemed to make her laugh and Pudd'n just saying them to get her to, and he said, Hey, Mary, do you know what day itis is?

Its Tuesday, Mary Watkins said, and I said, I know, but I mean do you know what day it is? Its Washington's birthday. Feburary is only suppose to have 28 days but this is the twenty ninth, so that makes it leap day and it's legal for a girl to propose to a boy and ask him to be engaged to her. Do you know that? I said.

Yes I know it, but she dont have to if she dont feel like it, Mary Watkins said, and I said, I know she don't, but Sure, G, its a free country, Pudd said. Who do you think you'd propose to if you felt like it? Have you decided? he said, and she said, Well, I've almost decided.

Me thinking, Gosh, I wonder if she means me?

Pudd probably thinking the same thing, and he said, Well believe me any girl that decided to propose to me would be lucky if I was willing, because I'm going to make a million dollars and she could have a diamond ring as big as a egg. I have many different clothes everybody would always be thinking she was somebody else.

Well I'm going to make a billion dollars, I said, any girl that got excepted by me could have her own picture to fly to all the different places I'd buy her, and I'd fly it for her and teach her how to cast when I was always around, I said, and Mary Watkins said, Well anyway I'm not interested in you, and I'm almost decided I'd propose to a certain movie actor, I wont say who, providing he's still young enough by the time I'm old enough.

Being a bum answer and the end of the subject.

Enjoy Meals Since Syntona Relieved Stomach Troubles

"Free of Gas, Heartburn and Sour Acidity," Says Local Man. Also Relieved Rheumatic Aches, Headaches and Dizzy Feelings.

MR. C. BROWN

MR. C. BROWN, 26 Caroline Street South, Hamilton, Ontario, is glad to give his experience about to others, because he knows what it has meant to him to get relief after long suffering from stomach disorders that ruined his appetite and made him feel tired, worn out and fatigued, as well as with rheumatic pains, frequent headaches and dizzy spells.

"For years I suffered with bad stomach disorders. I would be bloated with gas and couldn't sleep even if I did get a full, heavy feeling and a sensation like there was a lump in my throat. Dizzy spells came over me and then I would feel so tired, worn out and fatigued that I could hardly drag around. Sometimes my head would run down. Rheumatic pains came in my arms and shoulder muscles and my nerves were so on edge I wondered if I would go to pieces. I felt tired and fatigued all the time. My appetite was poor. Gas, heartburn and dizziness and I cannot begin to tell you all this medicine has done for me. The first time in years I am able to sit down to a meal and enjoy it. I sleep fine, have no gas, heartburn and dizziness and rising and I am entirely free from headaches and dizzy spells. The rheumatic aches and pains are gone and my nerves are calmed down. As a person who has suffered so much I can say more than I have said, that Syntona is a wonderful medicine."

Syntona is sold and recommended in Belleville at DOLAN THE DRUGGIST. Find out how it will help you, too.

Gauthier Radio Store, Apartment Damaged by Fire

Trenton, March 2 (Special)—Fire of an undetermined origin early this morning at 11 o'clock completely destroyed the Front Street upstairs apartment occupied by Mr. Reginald Gauthier and caused unestimated damage to the Gauthier radio store beneath. Starting in the upstairs apartment, the fire is reported to have made considerable progress before being noticed and only prompt work by the town fire department saved a serious fire in the downtown section.

Mrs. Gauthier was about her housework when the fire started but could offer no suggestion as to the probable cause of the blaze. It was suggested that the fire may have started from an oil stove used to heat the apartment, or from faulty wiring.

Damage to the apartment and to the household furnishings was principally from fire but considerable water damage resulted to equipment and stock in the radio store beneath. Damaged were radios, refrigerators, washing machines and other stock being offered for sale in the store. Some equipment in the repair section of the store was also damaged.

Besides Mr. and Mrs. Gauthier, the apartment was occupied by four Gauthier children. Estimate of the damage resulting from the blaze had not been estimated by fire insurance adjusters by early afternoon.

RUMORS DELIVERY SUPPLIES HALTED

There is No Confirmation of Stories in Ankara That Britain Has Taken This Step

By WILLIAM B. KING
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Ankara, March 2 (AP)—Reports were current here today that Britain has halted delivery of both military and civilian supplies to Turkey as a result of the recent collapse of British-Turkish military talks.

While there was no confirmation from Turkish officials, it was obvious that they were disturbed by the reports, which were interpreted in some quarters as part of the campaign to bring Turkey into entering the war on the side of the Allies.

(Dispatches from London said official British sources declined to comment on the Ankara reports but declared there was a disagreement between the two powers might be true. The London dispatches said Foreign Secretary Bevin might make a statement in the House of Commons shortly on relations with Turkey.)

It also was reported without confirmation that American lend-lease material was included in the embargo.

Some quarters held that if Britain has stopped shipments of war material to Turkey it might mean she now has written Turkey off as a lost picture as a possible military ally and is planning a campaign against Communism in Europe as an alternative.

It seemed unlikely in any case, that Turkish policy could be influenced by concerted stoppage of what were Britain's intent.

London, March 2 —(CP)— Reported that Britain has halted shipments to Turkey had been stopped by interpreted today as meaning Allied efforts to obtain Turkish military support "are finished" and had come in an unsuccessful end.

"Arms had been sent to Turkey by the Germans," one responsible source said. "They haven't been paid for that and we have no further use for them."

Diplomatic sources said Mr. Bevin may make a statement in Commons shortly on relations with Turkey.

Woman Librarian Found Beaten, Dead in Cathedral

Washington, March 2 (AP)—While police called murder in the Washington cathedral provided them with a mystery yesterday today as they sought to solve the death of Catherine Grogan, 56-year-old church librarian.

Held up in a slip, the battered body of Miss Reardon was found early today in the stacks of the library where she had worked for eight years.

Miss Reardon had been missing from her home since yesterday when she left her mother that she was "going out for a while."

Police officials were called immediately to the library, which stands on a slope about 40 yards from the Episcopal Church of the 000,000 Episcopal institution.

Detectives investigating the body was found, police arrested two men for questioning.

They are library employees — Miss Helen A. Young, archivist, and Miss Ruth Rusiss, curator of the library.

Inspector Ira E. Keck said Miss Reardon had been "brutally beaten" and that investigators believe by the circumstances in which first word of the murder reached police. An anonymous informant called reporters as police headquarters by telephone, saying:

"A young woman has been murdered at the Washington cathedral. You fellows had better get busy."

$867,437 Realized In Red Cross Appeal In Three Days

Toronto, March 2.— (CP)—Headquarters of the Canadian Red Cross Society here announced today eight per cent had been realized in the organization's national appeal for $1,000,000 which campaign began Monday and will conclude March 16.

National total from the few provincial reports received showed $867,437 had been subscribed up to last night.

Ontario returns were $347,765 of an objective of $6,000,000.

Premier Drew of Ontario, urging citizens to support the drive, said in a statement today "the continuation of relief to the sick, the comforts and medical supplies to prisoners-of-war and the work of unselfish devotion"

The Toronto office announced today that British prisoners of war interned in Germany have received 1,000,000 parcels from the Red Cross and expressed gratitude for the food parcels sent to them.

In part, the cable said "we are living in the shadow of the Canadian Red Cross parcels and they are a tremendous help to us".

Lonergan Trial Adjourned Day

New York, March 2. (AP)—General Sessions Judge Nicholas Hirschberg today adjourned the first degree murder trial of Wayne Lonergan until tomorrow to determine whether he had legal authority to decide a mistrial.

The unexpected adjournment came after Assistant District Attorney Jacob Grumet demanded that the special panel of jurors be discharged and a mistrial granted because of the testimony of Edward V. Broderick, defence counsel.

At the beginning of today's session Broderick conferred in his office with Judge Frescht, after which the court announced that he was asked to reconsider a ruling he made Saturday when he denied a defence motion for dismissal of the jury panel as unfair to the defence.

SUFFER SEVERE CUTS IN FARMHOUSE FIRE

Orangeville, Ont., March 2 — (CP)— Martin Lenisk and George Baanna, both of Mansfield, are in hospital here with burns and cuts suffered when fire destroyed home of John Lindsay, near here, was discovered. Mr. Lenisk escaped from an upstairs window when smoke and flames prevented their escape by the stairway.

HUGS MOTHERS TOO TIGHTLY BREAKS TWO OF HER RIBS

Lynn, Mass., March 2 — (AP)— Ogli Normand, 4-year-old daughter on a United States Army plane transport, was so glad to see her mother after 10 months in the South Pacific that he cracked two of her ribs in a fraction of a hug, when he gave his mother that great big hug all servicemens' mothers wait for when their boys come home.

YUGOSLAVS ROUT HUNS

London, March 2 (CP)—German armored units fleeing from Greece in their way into Klina, a Croatian town 40 miles south of Sarajevo, yesterday were routed from their positions by Yugoslav Partisan troops after a fierce battle, Marshal Josip Broz (Tito) reported today.

The Yugoslav commander, broadcast by the Free Yugoslav radio and recorded by the Associated Press, said that the Partisans also captured a large number of guns at the 18 miles northeast of the Dalmatian port of Split.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, March 2 —(CP)— Price changes were narrow in the early session and trading was quiet. Turnover totalled only 264,000 shares for the first three hours. Base Metal and Western Oils were narrowly higher and the other group held steady.

Utility, Food and Bank stocks were a bit higher. Western Canada Flour Pfd., Winnipeg Electric Pfd., Rice Ribbon Pfd., and Aluminum added 1 to 2½ points.

Some of the higher-price Golds, including Malartic Gold Fields, Sigma, Kerr-Addison and Proprietary Mines firmed 5 to 10 cents and in the Base Metals Chromium was up 10 cents to 1.40 and Noranda and Smelters added fractions.

British-Dominion, United, Norden-f and MSL-Continent gained slightly and other Western Oils were firm.

WALL STREET

New York, March 2 —(AP)— Buyers took an active part in scattered specialties in today's stock market, lifting some of them to new 1946 peaks, but the list closed heavily.

New highs for the year or longer were posted for Western Union "A" and "B," Interlake Iron, Continental Motors, Texas Gulf Sulphur, Outdoor Advertising, Foster Wheeler and Brewing Corp.

Dealings Corporation Seagrams and Lake Shore Mines were the only exceptions to the general activity, each strengthening, the former by ¼ and the latter by ¼.

N. American Livestock Eats Wheat Bushel for Bushel With Humans

Ottawa, March 2. (CP)—The Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported that the livestock population in North America is consuming wheat bushel for bushel with the human population. Wheat, hitherto the mainstay of animal feeds, has been "pinch hitting" for oats, barley and corn, which have not been made possible the maintenance of record numbers of livestock on North American farms.

In a review of the world wheat situation, the Bureau said it is estimated that a total of 590,000,000 bushels of wheat will be fed animals on this continent during the crop year ending July 31, which is double the home military requirements of Canada and the United States may total only 300,000,000 bushels.

In Canada, the use of wheat for livestock feed in the year ending July 31, 1944, is expected to be 2 1-2 times the quantity fed during the crop year 1939-40. But Canada's wheat is moving in large quantities to the United States to be fed livestock there, and so that the quantity of Canadian wheat used by animals in both countries might easily reach a total of 315,000,000 bushels.

The bureau said transportation will be the chief determining factor in the ultimate figure.

Should maximum delivery of 560,000,000 bushels be realized, the Bureau said, stocks of wheat remaining on prairie farms will be down to "almost normal" proportions, which would be about 100,000,000 bushels.

NAZI ATTACKS ON ANZIO BEACHHEAD COLLAPSE

Defence Positions Remain Intact, All Ground Regained

Blistering Raids From Air Deterrent To Nazis to Regroup For Another Drive

NO NEW ATTACKS

By RICHARD G. MASSOCK

(AP War Correspondent)

Naples, March 3 —(AP)— A strong German drive into the centre of the Anzio beachhead this week was described officially today as "a costly failure." Allied headquarters said defence positions remained intact with all lost ground regained.

The enemy offensive, the third large-scale attempt to drive Anzio's American forces into the sea, now has collapsed. Two final German assaults, with tanks and infantry Wednesday were repulsed, it was announced, and no further attacks developed yesterday.

American troops of the 3rd Infantry Division bore the brunt of the attack and scored "a complete defensive success," a headquarters spokesman said. Less than a week ago, this fatigue-hardened unit, chiefly of troops from the Pacific coast, was officially commended for previous exploits on the beachhead.

Whether the enemy is regrouping for a continuance of the offensive in some other sector is unknown, but a blistering attack delivered from the air yesterday by heavy bombers and other aircraft served as a deterrent.

Heavy Losses Inflicted

"It's jacket German failure to wipe out the beachhead, other officers said, meant heavy losses have been inflicted on the three divisions which spearheaded the assault, centred on a 1,000-yard front midway between Carocete and Cisterna.

The Mediterranean Allied air forces, hurling almost their entire strength today against German armies around the beachhead, dropped 40,000 fragmentation bombs from some 1,600 planes—a record for this type of attack in this theatre.

Heavy, medium, light and fighter bombers all participated, the attack being concentrated on the Carroceto-Velletri-Cisterna line. The German air force made no attempt to intercept the Allied formations. Ten enemy planes were sighted on one occasion, but they did not fight.

In the first attack late Wednesday in the two-day offensive the Germans were forced to cross open country under Allied artillery fire, huge holes in their ranks even before they neared the Allied lines. Subsequently, American troops, who had cut via few minor inroads.

"Everywhere our lines remain intact as before the offensive began," said Allied North Africa commentator said.

Enemy losses included nine tanks knocked out by one American anti-tank unit at the height of the attack and an entire company of possibly 100 men ambushed by the British during a directional counter-attack near the Moletta river headquarters south of Carocete.

Twelve Company Wiped Out.

A strong Allied patrol ambushed and killed or captured all the entire German company that attacked in the coastal zone southwest of Littoria Wednesday morning.

Snow, rain and heavy winds remained hampering factors yesterday in the main 5th Army and British 8th Army sectors respectively, but artillery duelling and patrolling continued. Canadians of the 5th Army took a number of prisoners and killed several Germans in fierce engagements, Douglas Amaron, Canadian Press War Correspondent, reported.

The Allied Air Forces, with strength to spare from the beachhead bombing, sent Spitfires and Thunderbolts in sweeps along the Yugoslav coast in direct support of Marshal Tito's forces and they had a field day in knocking out 70 troop trains, four locomotives, 18 motors and numerous vehicles, staff cars and some horse-drawn wagons.

The Spitfires sighted one motor convoy of at least 50 three-ton trucks which one of the pilots said "we couldn't miss." About one-third of the trucks were left burning and others were damaged.

One formation of fighters bagged their second enemy E-boat in two days and set a small Schooner afire near Corfu.

AMERICAN HEAVY BOMBERS MAKE DAYLIGHT SWEEP

R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. Formations Hammer Aircraft Factories Near Paris, Albert

RAIL CENTRES HIT

By AUSTIN BEALMEAR

(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

London, March 3. (AP)—American heavy bombers pounded Germany for the fourth straight day today, concentrating on undisclosed objectives in the northwest section while medium raiders slashed at German airfields in Northern France.

R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. formations, taking to the air last night for their second successive night, hammered aircraft factories near Paris and at Albert in northern France without losing a plane. It was their most than half the 600-plane force was made up of Canadians, it was announced.

The U.S. bombers were escorted by fighters in both the 8th and 9th American Air Forces as well as Allied fighters, in addition, that one operation was of considerable size.

The Mediterranean Allied air forces also included stabs at the French "rocket gun" sector by the R.A.F. Middle East command.

The R.A.F. operations last night included Mosquito attacks on eastern Germany and mine-laying in enemy waters.

An Air Ministry communique today said two medium bombers and one fighter-bomber and two fighters were missing in extensive sweeps by the Allied Expeditionary Air Force yesterday.

A communique announced 11 bombers and three fighters failed to return from the heavy bomber operations. All Canadian planes returned. The fighters destroyed two enemy aircraft, but the number shot down by the bombers was not immediately known.

American medium bombers raided the rail centre of Amiens yesterday and other attacks were carried out on the invasion coast of France, it was announced. Persons watching the Cross-Channel battles during the day estimated between 2,000 and 3,000 A...led planes of all types were in action from dawn to daylight.

The Air Ministry announced last night R.A.F. night bombers had dropped 1,000-pound and other bombs during February and another 1,790 tons were dropped on Berlin. Seventy-nine aircraft and 8 R.A.F. plane losses during the month, the ministry said, and these planes were destroyed over Europe by British-based R.A.F. units.

45,000 Sq. Miles Area Of Territory Torn From Japanese in Pacific

(By The Canadian Press)

Allied forces have captured approximately 45,000 square miles from Japan's bloody-gutted empire in the Pacific, but there's still a long way to go before the ouri down to the size promised by United Nations leaders—her own homeland territory.

The whittling process began with the invasion of Guadalcanal and continuing islands in the Lower Solomons in August, 1942. The biggest cut was made in this week's landings in the Admiralty landings in the Bismarck Sea some 1,100 miles to the northwest.

Between dates of those two invasion three major allied offensive daggers have been thrust over near or the Japanese homeland—one up through the Southern Pacific Islands, another through the Gilbert and Marshall Islands, and a third to the Japanese-mandated Caroline and Palau Islands.

From Guadalcanal and adjoining Tulagi the advance was island by island up the Solomons to Bougainville, while a simultaneous offensive by Australian and American troops was driving west from about one-third of New Guinea and leaped over to the Admiralties which now have been about one-sixth freed.

The Gilbert-Marshall thrust, involving amphibious operations exclusively, first knocked out Makin and other islands in the Gilbert group and more lately established a base through such Marshall Island Atolls as Kwajalein and Majuro and outlying islands of Kwajalein, part of the Pacific Island groups mandated to Japan after the First Great War, was the first strictly Japanese territory to fall.

The conquest of Kiska and Attu completed the high points of the northern advance through the Aleutians.

From both the Marshalls and the southwest Pacific bases American forces now are poised for a leap one of these days, possible from both directions against Truk, Japan's major Pacific island fortress which air and sea power already has given one sound drubbing.

All these successes have neutralized numerous other enemy island holdings and given Allied planes and virtually undisputed control of thousands of miles of sea area, but the Japanese could at the start of the gigantic task Britain, the United States and China assumed at the Cairo Conference last December.

Then Prime Minister Churchill, President Roosevelt and Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek pledged the peoples to wipe out Japanese domination over some 3,000,000 square miles of territory and 500,000,000 persons—about one-third of humanity and his followers to the original Japanese Island territory of 148,00 square miles.

Before that goal is attained Japan must be driven from islands as The Netherlands East Indies, Malaya, Burma and other Allied force now is making progress, Siam, Indo-China, Hong Kong, Guam, all the Caroline and other Japanese-mandated Islands, Formosa, Korea, Manchuria, Inner Mongolia, Kwantung, Japanese Indo-China, Occupied China, Manchuria, Korea and Formosa.

SPRING-LIKE THAW HAMPERS RUSS DRIVE IN NORTH

More Ground Captured Between L. Peipus And Finnish Gulf; Fighting in Pskov

HEAD FOR OSTROV

Moscow, March 3. (AP)— Despite a freakish, spring-like weather that is hampering military operations, the Red Army is continuing its smashing offensive to liberate the Soviet Baltic frontier area and to recapture several its positions, dispatches from the front said today.

Temperatures were reported almost as high as they usually are in late April or May, and melted ice and snow was said to be making many roads impassable.

Russian forces, nevertheless captured more territory between Lake Peipus and the Finnish Gulf and tightened their hold on Narva's communications, while in the sub-Arctic Murmansk region tommy-guns inched forward in fierce fighting, frontline advices said.

Front reports said meanwhile, other Red Army forces were reported driving down the 15-mile Pskov-Ostrov highway from captured Sozhitsa toward Ostrov. The latter city, 37 miles south of Pskov, is a junction of the Pskov-Warsaw-Berlin railway.

Ostrov is also believed to hold Pskov were favored for defensive operations, the Red Army's Velikaya and the smaller Pskov, run through the Pskov region to the northern sector and offering a natural barrier to the attacking Russians.

Military Leaders To Take Back Seat in Argentine

Buenos Aires, March 3 (AP)—Return of Argentina to constitutional responsibility with the inauguration by ballot and military leaders taking a back seat, was the word today in expecting President Gen. Ridelmiro Farrell to name civilian successors to his cabinet.

President Farrell told an Associated Press interviewer all government house rumors that a departure from his policy would remain unchanged, but emphasized that foreign policy would be handled as a consequence of domestic policy and not merely pleasing factors or inadmissible concepts.

8th Army 'Proud to Go Into Assault On Europe With Canadians'—Leese

By DOUGLAS AMARON

Canadian Press War Correspondent

With the Canadians in Italy, March 3.—(CP)—The British 8th Army is "very proud to go forward into the assault on Europe with the Canadian corps," Lt.-Gen. Sir Oliver Leese, 8th Army commander, told Canadian soldiers to whom he presented awards for bravery in battle during the fierce Sicilian and Italian campaigns.

"I know the whole world and the whole Allied effort are watching what you are doing and what you have done by the Canadian corps," Sir Oliver said during the conclusion of the presentation ceremony held in the main square of Canada Adriatic coast town of Ortona from the Moro valley where many of the awards were won.

The first of many battles leading up to where we now are, he said, was the battle of Ortona, said the General.

One Bar to a Distinguished Service Order, eight D. S. O.'s, 18 Military Crosses and four Distinguished Conduct Medals were presented to soldiers whose ranks ranged from brigadier to private. Lt.-Gen. H. D. G. Crerar, commander of the Canadian Army Overseas, and Lt.-Gen. Chris Vokes, commander of the First Canadian Division, took part in the presentation, while Maj.-Gen. E. L. M. Burns, commander of another Canadian Division, was among the large gathering of spectators.

The first presentation was a D. S. O. and Bar to Brig. B. M. Hoffmeister, Winnipeg, Brig. Hoffmeister won his D. S. O. at Agira, Sicily, while commanding the Loyal Edmonton Regiment. He received the Bar for his work as brigade commander during the Moro valley battle last Autumn.

Many of the men decorated cannot as yet be released because some of them have yet to be gazetted.

At the end of the ceremony the General gave a talk to the men as a group.

"I experienced pleasure that many of the citations were for battles in Sicily which the General said was "not just mere names but terrific events in our lives."

"These names are part of the history of Canada," he added.

Gen. Leese said he wanted to more recent fighting and expressed the belief that Ortona, captured by Canadian troops last Dec. 28, will come as famous in Canadian and world history as was Vimy and Sanctuary Wood of the First Great War.

Greek Guerillas End Civil War, Jointly Fight Huns

Cairo, March 2 — (AP) — An agreement ending Civil War in Greece has been signed by the Two Warring Bands of Greek Andarte, it was announced officially here today.

The rival factions have agreed to turn their joint energies against the Germans, it said.

The pact was signed in a Greek mountain retreat where leaders of the Tzevas, or Kolos, and the Elas Guerilla factions have been negotiating since Feb. 10 with aid of British and American liaison officers, who also signed the agreement.

The pact calls for immediate and continuous cessation of hostilities and for release of all prisoners and hostages within 15 days.

Japanese Counter Near Kyauktaw In North Burma

New Delhi, March 3.—(CP)—The Japanese have counter-attacked in the Kyaktaw Valley near Kyaukta, 46 miles north of Akyab in Burma, while North African paratroop southward in the valley are meeting stiff resistance near the village of Apaukwa, a southeast Asia communique said today. Apaukwa is 20 miles north of Akyab.

Meanwhile, British forces in the Ngakyedauk area continued to mop up stray Japanese units left from the recent defensive enemy offensive to the north.

A large body of Japanese troops discovered in a valley northeast of Ngakyedauk village are being liquidated, the communique said.

In the Hukawng valley in Northern Burma, Chinese troops advancing on Maingkwan have surrounded a small Japanese force on the Tawang River bend.

Allied patrols are busy locating scattered enemy units in the Chin Hill through which the Japanese were driven in recent fighting. Sporadic Japanese shelling of Allied positions in the neighborhood had little effect.

Enemy supply dumps at Prome were blasted by bombers of the strategic command last night and Spitfires rocketed and shot up their left the target area.

Meanwhile, bombers started large fires in Japanese supply areas in Rangoon, Burma's capital.

TEN-TON ENEMY CARGO VESSEL SUNK

Chungking, March 2 (AP) — American medium bombers sank a 750-ton cargo vessel near Moncay, French Indo-China, yesterday and started fires in an attack on railroad shops and coal plants at Campha Mine, the United States headquarters announced today.

War Cabinet to Consider Increase In Pay, Allowances of U.K. Forces

London, March 3 —(AP)— A rebellious House of Commons on the issue of war cabinet last night for immediate consideration of increased pay and allowances for enlisted men and women after an angry debate which veterans declared was aimed without parallel in their experience.

The debate reached its climax in a vote on a government-opposed motion to increase pay, which was defeated by a count of only 63 to 61.

The government majority was the smallest the Churchill Churchill has received since he assumed office in 1940, and would have been even smaller but for a hurried call which went out for members to leave their beds and for ministers to take their seats for the vote.

At that the vote cost the Churchill government some prestige, but even if the motion had been carried it would not necessarily have forced the government to fall. Resignation of a government normally follows only a lack of confidence vote from a full House or defeat on a major government policy.

There were just a few more than 100 members in Commons when the vote was taken and the question of increased pay for the enlistment was not involved.

The government vote only saved the embarrassment of an adverse vote, however, after Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden had announced the appointment of a royal commission of pay increase by the war cabinet, soon to be the case of Prime Minister Sir James Grigg.

Eden said the matter subject to constant heckling, earlier had flatly refused to consider the question of pay, which on the ground that it would involve inflation.

The storm centred chiefly on questions of the pay of British soldiers with that of the United States and Canadian forces, with also the pay of men in British industry.

British army base pay is about 8c cents a day, the British Information Service said. Also Australian 52, New Zealand $1.50, Canadian $1.30 and American $1.66.)

Eden agreed there were cases of families and servicemen living on subsidies and charities, but replied that the cost of the pay of British soldiers be brought up to United States standards, saying the cost—about £400,000,000 ($1,200,000,000) annually would mean inflation on the widest scale.

FINNS MAY OFFER COUNTER TERMS TO THE SOVIET

Parliament Gives Finnish Govt. Vote of Confidence at Secret Session

PRESS COMMENT

Stockholm, March 3—(AP)—Indication that Finland intends to offer counter-proposals to Russia's armistice terms came today from the Helsinki newspaper Social Demokrati, mouthpiece for the Finnish parliament's strongest political party.

Declaring that at first glance the conditions appeared "extremely severe," the newspaper expressed the opinion that they were meant only to form the basis for further negotiation and that Finland will have a chance to express its own views.

The article, informed Finnish sources said, was inspired by the Finnish government which gave the Finnish Government a vote of confidence at a secret session Tuesday. It was understood it speaks authoritatively for the Social Democrat party.

"It is to be believed we will try to move along the road of negotiation if there is even the slightest possibility to do so," the paper said. "Honesty and independence preserved," the newspaper said.

Expect Finland to Accept

(These expressions dovetailed with opinion in informed London quarters, where it was believed Finland probably to accept Russia's prize, although reluctantly and only after the most determined resistance. Diplomatic sources were subject to constant heckling, earlier had flatly refused to consider the question of pay, which on the ground that it would involve inflation.

The Social Democratki noted that "German reaction will have an influence on some points," an apparent reference to the German troops remaining in the country.

Another Stockholm article appeared a Finnish Foreign Office spokesman said the Finnish cabinet was giving the peace difficulties much thought, indicating there was no official indication that any decision had been reached. He denied a peace delegation was on its way to Moscow.

Radio France at Algiers quoted an unconfirmed Budapest report that Premier Nicholas Kallay of Berlin had arrived at Stockholm, and that John Kosti Paasikivi, Finnish minister to Moscow, had visited the 1939-40 "winter war" capital of Russia, also had returned to Stockholm.

Appeal Will be Made to United States Supreme Court

TWO ARE EXECUTED

Ossington, N.Y., March 3 (AP)—Louis (Lepke) Buchalter, assured of at least two more days of life by a last-minute reprieve, died in the electric chair at Sing Sing prison in this State, today looked hopefully to the United States Supreme Court to save him from the electric chair.

Buchalter, czar of the New York cartel of crime, who was to have been executed before dawn today for two slides for a 1936 slaying, was told in the Sing Sing prison death house that he would not die until tomorrow—pending an appeal to the United States Supreme Court.

Warden William E. Rupp notified Lepke, whose assorted rackets netted a syndicate handled anything from extortion to murder, that he apparently pleased at the news, although it was reported he had been coolly confident all along.

A similar stay also was obtained for Louis (Pep) Capone and Emanuel (Mendy) Weiss.

Synder said unless he received word from the U.S. Supreme Court he would put the three to death at 11 p.m. Saturday.

Supreme Court Refused.

The Supreme Court at the stay followed by a few hours a surprise visit to the prison by Manhattan District Attorney Frank S. Hogan who said he had conferred with Lepke—at Lepke's request—for 90 minutes.

Lepke's Attorney, J. Bertram Wegman, filed a petition for review by high court of a U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals decision in New York City refusing to grant a writ of habeas Court denial of a writ of habeas corpus application.

For Lepke, Capone and Weiss, it was a stay of only a few hours. They received several reprieves during the long dispute between state and federal governments over custody of Lepke, who finally was moved to Sing Sing from Atlanta penitentiary to face serving a 14-year term on a narcotics conviction.

Convicted in 1941.

The three were convicted in 1941 for the slaying of Joseph Rosen in Brooklyn.

The last-moving developments, however, did not affect the fate of Joseph Palmer and Vincent Rizzuto who were executed on schedule for killing a policeman.

Lepke's wife paid what thought would be her last visit with him Wednesday, and left the prison a few minutes before the stay was announced, apparently unaware of it.

Present Question Is Number of Ships To Be Turned Over

Stettinius to Go To London to Talk Over Dozen or More Matters Says F.D.R.

SOME SHIPS IN USE

By D. HAROLD OLIVER

(AP Staff Writer)

Washington, March 3 (AP)— President Roosevelt said today that discussions were about half completed for transferring roughly one-third of the surrendered Italian fleet to Russia.

The President also told a press conference that Edward R. Stettinius, acting Secretary of State, would go to London soon to discuss with British officials a dozen or more questions awaiting solution.

He disclosed that the United States and Great Britain already were using some of the Italian tonnage that was surrendered to Russia, and that Italy and that efforts now are being made to determine how much of the Italian merchant equivalent can be turned over to the Russian Navy.

Question Raised by Stark

He said this was the question he had told previous press conferences that Marshal Stalin had brought up with Ambassador Harriman and Ambassador Standley, the Soviet ambassador. He described it as a rather big question, but related to ships ships or their equivalent would go to Russia.

He emphasized that so long as the war lasts the Allies will use everything afloat to the utmost to any but that after the war that was something else.

Asked whether the ships would be manned by Italians, Mr. Roosevelt replied some may and some may not. As for Italian ships which escaped to the Balearic Islands, the President said that was a British question.

He said that since Italy surrendered to the United States, Great Britain and Russia, it was thought advisable to distribute the Italian ships roughly on a one-third basis to each. He would not say how much tonnage was involved.

CANADIAN-MADE TRACTORS IN FIGHT ON RUSSIA FRONT

Ottawa, March 3—(CP Cable)—Canadian-made tractors are in the thick of the fighting on the Red Army front, Premier Stalin declared in a week ago. "None of us want to stay here a single minute more than necessary."

President Farrell told an Associated Press interviewer all government house rumors that a departure from his policy would remain unchanged, but emphasized that foreign policy would be handled as a consequence of domestic policy and not merely pleasing factors or inadmissible concepts.

Negro Mother, Six Children Burned to Death

Owen Sound, March 3—(CP)—A Negro mother and her five children died from smoke suffocation early today in a fire which broke out in their home here.

The dead are Mrs. Norman Green and her five children, Thelma, 13; Herbert, 12; Jacqueline, 6, John, 3, and Joel, one year old.

Mrs. Green is employed at the William Kennedy and Sons Co. plant, and was at work when the fire was discovered. By the time the fire brigade reached the scene all of the occupants of the house were dead. The house was badly damaged. Cause of the fire is unknown.

Paul Lucas, 48, Jennifer Jones, 24, Win Oscar Awards

Hollywood, March 3.— (AP)— Motion picture coveted "Oscar" awards for the best acting performances of 1943 are held today by Hungarian born Paul Lukas, 48, and Oklahoma-born Jennifer Jones, 24, while "Casablanca" has the acclaim as last year's best film.

The famous little golden statuettes, given each year by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences for outstanding in the industry's top laurels, were awarded last night before a glittering audience of their hopeful acting candidates and 2,048 fans who paid $11 admission apiece.

Miss Jones won the prize—on her 24th birthday—for her dramatic performance in "The Song of Bernadette." Previously she had appeared in only a few minor roles.

Lukas' award was for his portrayal of the Austrian anti-Nazi leader in "Watch on the Rhine", a part he created originally on the stage.

The monocled veteran actor, who has been character, won the honors for the best supporting role by an actor by his performance in "The Moon and Sixpence".

Zasina Paxinou was adjudged the best supporting actress for her work as Pilar in "For Whom The Bell Tolls."

The best-direction accolade went to Michael Curtiz for "Casablanca."

Hal. B. Wallis received the Irving Thalberg memorial award for consistent high quality of production.

Allied Airmen In Mediterranean Down 137 Nazis in February

Naples, March 3—(AP) — Allied airmen in the Mediterranean theatre destroyed 137 German planes during February, the majority of them in the air, Allied headquarters announced today.

Another reported 26 of the victories and the remainder are credited to anti-aircraft fire.

Constable Mackey will fill the vacancy resulting after Provincial Constable Stoker was transferred to the Campbellford de-tachment, Inspector Harry Stoner announced.

POLICE LOOKING FOR LONE ROBBER

Police are looking for a lone rob-ber, who is believed to have been responsible for a break-in and rob-bery at a Brockville service station yesterday, reported stolen were 15 packages of cigarettes, a number of the fifty boxes of matches and $11.50 in loose change, that had been left in the cash register.

SIX BELLEVILLE AND DISTRICT BOYS ENLIST IN R.C.N.V.R.

Six Belleville and Belleville dis-trict boys have enlisted in the R.C.N.V.R. Exhibition recruiting unit and have reported for training at H.M.C.S. "Cataraqui" which is re-ported by naval officers from Kingston. Several visiting in the naval services are: Stoker II Vin-cent F. Doran, 31 Grove Street; Ordinary Seaman Ross E. Stinson, 36 Hoecker Avenue; Stoker M Albert E. Brown, 236 Foster Ave.; Supply Assistant Frederick D. Short, 155 Front Street; Supply Assistant Findlay J. McArthur, Elizabeth st., Picton, and Stoker II Leo B. Dunn, Picton.

WATER FLOWS OVER ICE IN MOIRA RIVER

Pedestrians using the lower vehicular bridge as well as the residents of Belleville generally were rather surprised to see water flowing over the ice at the east and west banks of the Moira river. Origin of the water remained somewhat of a mystery as above the foot-bridge the ice was firm. Office contemporaries reminded that it was eight years ago the Moira suddenly went on a rampage to pile huge cakes of ice in the river course with the result that the lower downtown section was flooded for deep and days, with total disorganization of business. There was no comparison with this appear-ance of water above the ice yester-day, was the formation of the annual spring breaking, as the river ice was still strong and firm, firmly in the grip of King Winter.

CAPT. WALTER EXLEY WOUNDED IN LEGS

Details of wounds suffered late in January by Captain Walter W. Exley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Exley, of Napanee, formerly of Belleville, were learned by relatives of the family, in the city this week. According to word received from Captain Exley's wife in Kingston, her husband has been wounded in both legs, one of them is still in a cast.

A brother of Captain Exley's, Lieut. Douglas Exley, is also in hospital in the Mediterranean area it is learned. The latter however was not wounded in action, but hospi-tal as the result of an ear infection. The wounded brother is formerly C.T.A. inspector at Belle-ville.

DORAN BROTHERS POSTED TO FR. DAVID

Belleville can claim a brother act aboard the new Canadian National cruiser ship the "Prince David," now retired for peacetime duties in amphibious operations, it has been learned by relatives here. The ship is posted aboard the "Prince David" are Ab. Jerry Doran and Stoker II Ted Doran, sons of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Doran, Grove St.

Veteran of naval boarding opera-tions during the Allied invasion of Sicily, Jerry Doran's experience in combined operations work fits in admirably with the qualifications necessary for service on the "Prince David." He had taken intensive training on the Royal Navy for all his part in the landing. Stoker Doran was for a year and one half aboard a minesweeper on the west coast prior to his being posted to his present ship.

Fat Salvage Time When Bell Rung By Collectors

The local branch of the Canadian Legion B.E.S.L., Wm. Ross, has been requested by the director, National Salvage in Fats, to start the collection of fats in the City. This is one angle of the salvage campaign that has not been attended to as its importance warrants, in Belleville with the result that there is much valuable material being lost to the war effort and especially to the manufacture of explosives in the form of glycerine.

The coming offensive will require a huge quantity of ammunition for all services and glycerine is very necessary. The Legion intends to do a very thorough job with the collection campaign, each street, in fact, will be canvassed, and it is asked that the citizens support the move just as thoroughly.

Elsewhere in this issue will be found a notice giving the names of the streets and the dates when the collections will be made. These no-tices will appear regularly until the whole city has been covered.

The Legion has adopted a novel manner to warn of the approach of the salvage truck by the ringing of a bell so, when the sound of the bell is heard, Mr. and Mrs. Citizen will know it is Fat Salvage time.

It is pointed out that the collec-tion will be made in the morning but this does not mean that any-one should have to stay home; just place the containers at the front entrance of your house and watch from the street and they will be collected.

For the convenience of any of the rural population who may want to help fill this need, a number of collecting arrangements have been made whereby they may leave their donations of fat at Brickman's Feed Store on the Market Square.

All financial matters from this undertaking will be applied to the local Legion's post-war rehabilita-tion and relief fund.

Carnival Crowd At Armouries Continues to Grow

The second night of the April Light Infantry Battalion Carnival held in the Belleville Armories was a greater success than the first night when almost 1,000 persons were present to see the stage show and take a fling with Lady Luck on the various games of amusement and chance provided by the carnival committee. Members of the Riwanis and Kinsmen Clubs of the city are in charge of the booths and stage scenes and assisted in a gen-eral way in the conducting of the carnival.

Last night's crowd were even more enthusiastic than the opening night as the vaudeville acts presented by the Bill Garden performers and the fast moving, smooth stage show programmed for the opening night to the finish is the satisfaction of everyone. The show is well planned and packed by specialty clonal dancers and performers.

As a special feature during the purpose of the carnival, Col. R. G. Dondon, M.C., officially announced at the carnival announced Thursday night that all men and women in uniform will be admitted into the Armouries free of charge. Many hundreds of men and women attended from the R.C.A.F. Stations in the district in addition to those attending as a result of this Open House.

Designs all Costumes.

As a sidelight on the stage per-formances, Bill Garden, who himself interviewed the girls of the chorus, designed the costumes worn by the Pathick. This attractive troupe of dancers did give favorable re-minded for particular attention and have led interesting lives in the show busi-ness. Miss Pathick was born in Orleans. While playing the Michi-gan theatre at Detroit they were on the same bill with movie stars and Bob Hope, Morton Downey and Buddy Rogers all broke in New York, at the Paramount theatre they were with Hollywood stars. Miss Pethick has been in the profession since childhood, making her first stage appearance at the age of six. Her ambitions were originally directed toward the ballet, but, as she puts it, "Fate made it otherwise." Marjorie has a brother in the 48th Highlanders who has recently returned home after four years overseas. She is very proud of him. Miss Pethick says that there is much questionably the tall, attractive blonde, Thelma Frackelson, who has been with Marjorie Pethick for several seasons and made the tour through the States. She has been a radio commentator and fashion model, as well as having produced her own fashion shows. Like her producer, Thelma has been in the profession since childhood, and has had a step-brother who has taken prize-fighting.

Comes From Show Family.

Anita Clarke, the lovely red-head on the end, comes from a show family. Anita's father was also in the world's greatest hoop-jiggler and her grandfather was on the stage for most of his life. Her hus-band, Jack Clarke, is also in the show business and they have brothers in the ser-vices, one who is a prisoner-of-war in Germany, another in the army enemy territory, in which he was the sole survivor of the bomb ex-crew, another brother is with the Canadians in Italy and the third brother is in the R.C.A.F. in Can-ada.

Described as the "baby" of the troupe, Jolyne McDonald, a fresh looking brunette, comes from also a family of show people, her mother was a dancer and singer and her grandfather was Ruthven McDonald a well known stage singer of by-gone days. Jolyne has been en-cognised by many of the old-timers. Miss "Jo" has been a member of the troupe for only a short time but she has been in show business ever since she can remember. Before joining Pathick Girls she made a very fine-lance work in Toronto. She was further described as the jitterbug of the troupe and likes to go dancing after the show is over.

Other two members of the chorus, Honor Cullen and Irene Chittenden have been with Marjorie Pethick for quite some time, Honor doub-ling with Marjorie in double-canto numbers. Irene, a Belleville girl, was taught dancing by Miss Pethick and has been with her ever since.

Find Clerks Courteous.

The girls have spent the first two days of their stay in Belleville visiting the shops and stores on Front Street and say they like the shop in Belleville. They said the merchants and store clerks are the most courteous they have met in many years and that is a pleasure to be waited on with politeness for a change. There is no use trying to pick them out from any certain position in the line, fellows; the girls insist that they be chosen from one show to the next. Maybe they have learned about "Gypsy" from someone who has something to do with Air Force Shows? When asked what it was they liked most about their profession they all re-vered unanimously, to play to a good audience.

Ten Trains With Children From Finland Cross Swedish Frontier

London, March 3 —(CP)— Ten-trains with Finnish children have crossed the frontier into Sweden, the Finnish radio said today, and a total of 4,000 children now have been sent to Finland's neutral neighbor.

Bay of Quinte Area Delegation Loses in First Step to Have Sanatorium Built in This District

Although delegate committee-men from the Bay of Quinte area meeting in Kingston on Thursday afternoon heard proposed construction of a 100-bed sanatorium temporarily lost out in their efforts to have the hospital built in Hastings, the matter will still be facilitated by the Ontario Department of Health it was reported today by Mayor Harry Rollins, who was ac-tively discussion as to the site of the proposed hospital, assured-ment to have the Sanatorium built in Hastings just out by a vote-of 13-9.

Representatives of county and district councils, municipal councils, areas which the proposed sanator-ium is expected to serve were present at the Kingston meeting with Mayor Rollins presiding the discussion re having the hospital being built in Hastings. Mayor Rollins contended that Hastings was the logical site for the hospital owing to its central position in re-lation to other sanatoriums in the province.

Eastern delegates held for the building being constructed at the Kingston however and a motion was put forward to that effect. Alderman Fred G. Cham-berlain, Belleville's delegate, moved in favor of an amendment to the motion, which was lost when the vote was taken. Representatives from Northumberland and Durham from Prince Edward County, Hast-ings and Belleville supported the amendment. Hasting delegates were T. F. Fleming and Dr. S. S. Lumb, with Prince Edward con-tingent including Reeve Wm. Hen-donk and Councillor Cleaver.

"We still have the right to petition the Department of Health to have the hospital built in Hast-ings," stated Mayor Rollins, "and this we certainly intend to do. Hastings is centrally located and would be an ideal location for the proposed hospital."

Dr. R. F. Irvine, health minister, announced last night that the Ontario government will contribute $136,000 toward the erection of a 100-bed sanatorium in mid-eastern Ontario. Municipalities from which the hospital would serve will be expected to assist in financing of the construction.

ACTORS DISPLAY UNUSUAL GIFTS IN FINE PLAY

"Don't Darken My Door" Presented by Friendship Group of Bridge Street United Church

The Friendship Group of Bridge Street United Church presented a three-act comedy, "Don't Darken My Door," to a large audience in the church Sunday School rooms on Thursday night. The play was flavored with a bit of drama, much fun, suspense, love and adventure which all combined to make a very pleasing entertainment. Besides numbering eight in all, five local girls and three boys from Mountain View Bombing & Gunnery School, enacted their parts well and dis-played unusual talent in acting ability. The program proved that the performers had given their time, untired time and effort and fullest co-operation to the play which, under their excellent director, Miss Helen Sulman, towards making the play a success.

The Plot

The entire three acts of the play take place in Roger Kent's living room. In his home there lives his niece, Rosemary Kent, the maid, Poppy Peake and a caretaker, Alec Stubbins. A boy by the name of Tom Garrick is in love with Rosemary and Alec Stubbins with Poppy. But Rosemary and Poppy, in fact, all the other girls love Tom's attentions, because they have been filled with romance books they have read where he has been written by authors.

Everything runs along in this fashion until one day Jane Perkins herself, who is on a spree, four, accidentally bumps into the tree in the Kent front yard, suffering from a sprained ankle and is brought into the Kent household to recuperate from the accident. She poses as the secretary of Jane Per-kins, and immediately tries to mend the love affair between Rosemary and Tom. She plans a plot to make it appear that Tom is a typical hero of one of Jane Per-kins' novel, the only ones who know about this being Jane Per-mary's uncle and Tom. In the end it all proves successful and Rose-mary finally realizes and admits her love for Tom. On the night that the play leaving in Uncle Roger senses that something is going on and comes down to see what he is pursuing on by Jane who is waiting in the living room to watch Rosemary and Tom. Uncle Alec rushes down with a gun, and Poppy's eyes, he immediately assumes the role of one of the novel heroes also. So all is well between them too. Making the story complete, were the frequent visits of the old maid who live next door to the Kents and who are always calling over to pay a visit on their neighbours. The play ends with Rosemary admitting to Jane and admitting that he knew all along that she was in reality Jane Perkins.

The Players

Muriel Hibbard was perfect in the role of Rosemary Kent and lived the part well. Ralph Hall as Tom Garrick played the part so well. Harold McNich, as Rosemary's stern opportunistic uncle, played an actor of his role as did Jean Meyers as the novelist Jane Perkins with the old maid and young heart. As a modern, light-hearted youth who tried so hard to win Rosemary's love, Allan Thompson was "top." Muriel Sem-ple as the fruitious and romantic maid and her yokel suitor, John Wessel, Alec Stubbins, in their blunt and impetuous ways, spiced the play with humour. Mrs. Wilson, Peggy Woollard, as Susie Feather-stone and Eleanor Sanderson as Louisa Featherstone, two old maids, the former with an eye for ro-mance and the latter hating it, added the lovelight in her heart, the effects of which romance could not have been complete. They were truly two typical old maids with stern-faced Louisa continually scolding and reprimanding her sis-ter.

The master-of-ceremonies was Ken Bateman, who capably took Mr. Taylor Franklin. Musical in-terludes were rendered by the quartet, Sgt. Roy Fowler, and the part as prompter taken by Kath-leen Wesse.

Ontario Cheese Producers' Assoc. Meets March 7

Attendance of more than 400 cheese producers and other guests is expected at the 11th an-nual meeting of the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association which will be held in the Royal Yorke Hotel, Toronto on March 7th and 8th, it is stated by Secretary H. A. Joss, of Belleville. Scheduled is the largest annual meeting pro-gram in the history of the associa-tion since its inception back in 1924.

Matters of vital interest to the dairy industry will be discussed at the meeting by dairy and live stock breeder association officials. Special guests at the meeting will be mem-bers of the various cattle breeding associations. Mr. Joss, while other dairy association members are also being invited.

Highlight on the one-day program will be discussion of the subjects "Artificial Semination," the latter which is gaining wide interest throughout Canada as an ideal "cattle improvement." It is believed that the dairy industry, because of its delivery units is an ideal medium of the dairy industry through which work on these two projects can be carried out. President of the asso-ciation, Mr. W. H. Montgomery of Carrying Place will preside at the meeting and will also preside over the annual banquet to be held Tuesday evening will be Hon. Harry Dewy, Minister of Agriculture. He will be introduced by Hon. T. L. Kennedy.

Delegates from the Belleville dis-trict who attend the meeting will include cheese factory representa-tives from the approximately 16 from each county are eligible to attend. At the meeting a complete financial statement for the past ten years will be presented by the secretary, Mr. Joss.

MANY NATIONALITIES SHARE IN VICTORIES ON BURMA FRONT

British, Indian, Chinese, West African and U. S. forces share in the recently announced victories on the Burma front. At the right are a couple of typical British jungle fighters wading one of the liver laden streams of Burma. At the left are an American and Chinese soldier with Lieut.-Gen. Joseph Stilwell's forces in Burma and Assam who have become buddies. The American is Sergt. William Hancock of Rockhill, S.C. They, too, are typical of the men who have brought about victory on the Burma front.

Recently repatriated Canadian prisoners from enemy hands state emphatically that if it hadn't been for the Red Cross food parcels they would have starved to death. To date more than seven million such parcels have been packed in Canada and shipped overseas and here a group of United Nations' men behind enemy barbed wire are unloading a recent shipment.

7 Million Parcels Shipped By Red Cross Since War Began To Allied Prisoners of War

A startling array of facts could be displayed of the work that is being done by the Red Cross Society in all were known. Divisions and branches all across Canada have done a magnificent job of work. Women volunteers have made 15 million surgical dressings, packed in the fire packing depots in the Dominion, have been sent over to feed the hungry in enemy hands. From the repatriated it has been established that without these weekly food parcels many of our men would not live to return. This year over half the Canadian Red Cross budget will go to provide these necessary food parcels.

Dried blood serum has increased in importance with the progress of the war, $750,000 must go, this year, to the maintenance of this vital service for saving lives. There must be no battle-front...land...sea...or air...without an adequate supply of dried blood serum. It is an "extra service" for a wounded man to live. Before the war, a man who was severely injured, was said to be living on borrowed time...after the war there will be thousands who will be living on borrowed blood.

$3,000,000 will be the minimum required to purchase material used in making hospital supplies, clothing and comforts of all kinds for service men and civilians. Fighting men of the Army, Navy and Air Force must be looked after.

Under the Conventions of Geneva, Red Cross must be supported by voluntary subscription. It is the only body that vast organization can carry on its humanitarian work.

Last year the appeal was oversubscribed. This year the need is infinitely greater. Give to the Red Cross, to keep faith with those who need your help.

Washington Spotlight

By C. R. BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, March 2 — (CP)— President Roosevelt today enjoys wide power in the United States and has since the United States entered the war, as have Prime Minister Churchill and Prime Minister Mackenzie King since the early days of the war.

Few informed persons would dispute the necessity of the Allied powers being directed by those who have authority to act almost as quickly and decisively as the dictators who precipitated and conduct the war for the Axis.

But Mr. Roosevelt had been in office nearly nine years before the Japanese attack at Pearl Harbor forced the United States into the shooting war and had already set up some powerful bureaus which the new deal considered necessary to fight depression.

Now the sincere anti-Roosevelt groups fear that his long enjoyment of wide power has become a habit and that, if he is given a fourth term in this year's elections, he will assume the complete mantle of autocracy.

There is still Congress which wields considerable power even in war times and it demonstrated last week in over-riding the President's veto of a taxing bill. Mr. Roosevelt maintained the bill would have provided insufficient money to meet mounting war costs.

There is still the Supreme Court of the United States which can and does over-ride the decisions of both the legislature and executive branches of government.

A fear that is gnawing at the vitals of those who are apprehensive of a Roosevelt dictatorship is that his long career in the White House has enabled him to fill so many judicial offices that today 70 per cent of the Federal judges owe their appointments to him.

Unhappy newspaper: The Patterson-McCormick Washington Outlet, The Times Herald, counts the day lost that does not see an anti-British crack in its columns. Recently it mourned editorially that the price of Allied victory will be preservation of the British Empire and urged that immediately victory is assured Canada must join with the United States and other western hemisphere countries for defence, so that the tail will not wag the dog—the tail being the Empire and the dog we western hemisphere lands.

Putting Your Diamonds 'If Any' To Work

(By Robert M. Yoder, in the Chicago Daily News)

If I don't get down to the office for two or three days, and am marked missing in the soup line, it will be because I am taking a diamond inventory around the house. If you are smart, you will do the same thing.

The chance that many of us may be overlooking useless diamonds was brought to my attention by an ad, in one of the Sunday papers in case others have been careless in this respect, I reprint it.

"Turn idle diamonds you don't use." was the suggestion, "into cash you can use."

You will get a little hot under the collar at the assumption that you haven't kept a very good score on your diamonds; but, friends there is a message there for us all.

How long has is been since you went over the diamonds, and I mean critically? You get them out now and then, you notice that that one needs polishing and this one looks a little smoky, but when have you sorted them for usefulness?

It could very well turn out that you have a fortune or two tied up in diamonds that could just as well be put to something else. It could be very well that you are selling house room to diamonds that aren't earning a dime.

I for one am going to take this warning to heart. Tomorrow, or if not tomorrow, then the day after tomorrow, I am going to start through all the diamonds in the house and throw out all the idle ones I encounter. It is going to be a little tough to tell an idle diamond from a producing one, and I think the safest plan is to throw out every second one. That way you may throw out a few deserving ones, but you are pretty sure to catch the sluggards.

What I would do if I were you is to get two baskets, and mark one "Good," marking the other one "Bad." Then when you get the diamonds classified, you can put the good ones away like the Christmas lights.

Incidentally, you can tell diamonds from emeralds or rubies by the color. The diamonds are the ones that look lighter.

There is one obvious drawback, of course, which is that when you cull the excess diamonds, and turn them in cash, you may find you have the problem of idle cash on hand. Probably the best thing to do in that case is to put the money in barrels, which will keep it in good shape until you have time to decide what you want to do with it. That's what I'm going to try, anyway, and if it works out all right I'll let you know. Remember, we've got an ace in the hole. If we can't get all the money into barrels, we've got that basket that we won't need any more for diamonds.

Modernizing China's Armies

What will Japan think when the Chinese armies, redrilled and refitted under the gigantic plan of the Allies and bearing the latest weapons and armor that modern science has been able to forge, start on their way to the dooming of Japan? China has performed marvels which the world can not yet understand in all their fulness for she was the object of Nippon's rapacity on several occasions and for several years before Hitler slipped the leash on his blitzkrieg forces against the Western World. In spite of this China has not fallen to the little brown men.

Help is beginning to flow in, which the Chinese have needed.

Japanese pride in everything Japanese will suffer a severe shock when the brave Chinese armies with their well-merited strength of armament and with the benefit of modern training begin that series of blows which will help to deprive Japan of her ill-gotten gains in the Pacific.

China surely is encouraged with what she has been doing in Burma, although victories over the Japanese so important as to merit special mention in announcements.

China's glory will be intensified as she helps to chain the savage Japanese. Out on the islands of the Pacific China can already see the true rising sun of Allied supremacy and victory, and of freedom, eclipsing the false sun of Japan, the Mikado and Tojo forever.

China has won great glory by her indomitable stand, which proves her capacity for bearing the burden of helping to set the world right.

Hitler Paying for Aggression

Hitler, with the natural instinct of the criminal, saw the glittering wealth of Russia's wheat fields and her oil wells and at the same time ignored the signals of history that the way of aggression leads to death and destruction. He saw the riches of the Ukraine and desired it for his own glory and the greater might of Germany. He neglected to remember that such rich lands have been worked by a steady people for many generations and that its richness is due in part to the labor of the people. He ignored the rights and the rights of those people and thought he could rob their wealth.

But the very ownership of those rich lands on which the people had expended their energy made the Russians love their country's territory and led them to fight for their land against the German thief and gangster. Hitler thought and acted from the standpoint of matter and as a result today the roused nations of the world are going to set that aggressor in a place where he never more can raid, steal and butcher defenceless children.

He has fought against every development and every step of progress which he would discard, but he has to pay. Today his punishment is coming in every sphere where the United Nations are pounding his unrighteous Reich and tomorrow it will be ruins.

So will right be triumphant as Hitler the evildoer pays for his misery in the air, on the sea and on the land. He surely now fears the fury of Allied victory, in the advance of the Russian armies, in every bomb that drops and in every forced retreat his armies must make in Italy.

Allied Pacific Scene

Let the Japanese try to wear the grin they wore on December 7th, 1941, when they broke every law of nations in trying bandittike to gain a world empire. That treachery has become a byword for everything that is ignoble and dishonest, their act was one of the foulest in history. But even the Japanese must come to the day of settlement. They can make no plea that will exempt them from the severe law of retribution.

To the great glory and honor of the world, world of humanity as a whole, risen in condemnation of the foul deeds of Nippon and nations have joined ranks to bring the Japanese militarist class to judgment not only in the decision of war through victory but also in courts set up to try enemy war criminals.

The treacherous Japanese should have learned already many lessons. Their mad faith that they could in themselves suffice to do what they liked feeling that there was no law over them and no lash to punish them is weakening. At least their leaders see ahead the inevitable final collapse of their own might and their western Axis ally, Germany. Not only is their own stolen "empire," looted in 1941-42 in quick stabs across the waters of the Pacific, shrinking and their military power weakening but also their ally, the Hun, is approaching his Waterloo or Sedan.

It is the justice of the conscience of the world and it is the justice of heaven that are bringing these evil men and their nations to the bar of right and truth in the courts of this world and in the courts of history.

Nippon and Germany can have no solace that history will justify their awful course. For history, reflecting human and divine law and eternal law, will condemn them as the most backward and barbarous nations that have passed over the page of history.

Sign in the Sky

A strange and wonderful little story has come out of Italy, sent by a London paper's correspondent with the Mediterranean fleet. Above the port of Anzio, he declares, Allied sailors saw a German plane being chased by its own glider bomb.

"When last seen," the dispatch concludes, "the Nazi plane was taking evasive action, grimly pursued by the glider."

Only the very obtuse mind, we feel, would choose to disbelieve this story.

If it were contrived by the London correspondent then he deserves to rank with James Shelley, who invented Frankenstein and his monster, or Goethe, who told the tale of the sorcerer's apprentice who set the broom to carrying water and then could not stop the job.

But, without disparaging the correspondent's ability and imagination, we prefer to believe that he really saw the incident.

We cannot help feeling that a portent to Hitler appeared in the sky over Anzio. The rather amusing spectacle of his bearer of destruction being pursued, fury-like, by his own weapon seems to us the perfect allegory of Nazism.

Padre Cycles Africa

After a 4,000-mile trip that took him four months, a padre recently cycled into Cairo, Egypt. The Rev. Charles Roach, Anglican civil chaplain in Bagdad, says that a miniature shovel driven on the crossbar amply protected him from roving elephants as he wheeled north from his starting point at Durban, South Africa. "As for lions," he said, "the only one I saw I passed at a speedy 13 miles per hour without any trouble."

Queen Mary recently sent to the chairman of the British Red Cross Society in British Columbia, an old toll-book tells us that rates were: 1c per pound for freight; 2 shillings a head for horses and 6d. a head for sheep. Sometimes the travellers paid cash dollars and cents instead of in sterling. A record of 1861 reveals that $3,835 was gathered in at one toll-gate in July of that year, a still larger sum was realized in August.

BOOK LOVERS' WIVES

If one could see three days ahead,
Then some, perhaps, had never wed,
And others who had single stayed
Long time ago their vows had made.
But Time, much wiser than are we,
Beyond the hour won't let us see;
So no maid living ever knows
To what it is she forward goes.

Suppose her fortune could be read
And she could learn what lies ahead;
That seer wise could truly say:
"For books he'll be in debt alway!
For books, delightful and profound,
In cloth or red Morocco bound,
For books, one volume or a set,
He will forever be in debt!"

Suppose in palm or cup of tea
The future one could plainly see,
And she were told: "It surely looks
As though his pay will go for books.
The cash you'll need for things to wear
He'll spend for first editions rare."
Would any woman fond of dress
To such a fellow answer, "Yes?"
Yet such a fate, her lifetime through,
Is what my patient Nellie drew.

The roof on Mr. T. E. Ketcheson's barn on Bridge Street collapsed under the weight of the snow this morning. It fell on a carriage and the horses remained under it. Canadian editors who visited him at his secret headquarters.

His Axford views are not secret, however. He has long been convinced that our war against Germany can be shortened by hard and sustained pounding of her ability to make war, and everything that has happened to Cologne, to Hamburg, to the Ruhr, to Berlin, must have confirmed his belief. At another place we saw dozens of enlarged photographs of bombed Germany, pictures magnified many times and studied them through an electrical stereoptican machine, and certainly they convinced the Harris view, Vast areas in the great German industrial cities are reduced into rubble or burned out so that only ghosts remain. Often the photograph had caught tiny pinpoints of light in a roof beside a shattered wall, and explained that this meant the roof and floors had been torn away and the shinhol through unimpeded.

Harris might have fought with Cromwell—he is that kind of a man. He has, one imagines, deep-seated hatred of war and its fantastic waste, and an even deeper and more bitter hatred of the evil principles which brought this war into being. He remains calm when told that the wounds on Britain and would have been much more had ability marched with desire.

Germany lost the war when she lost the battle of Britain. In this historic affair the Germans for the first time came against effective resistance, and suffered enormous losses in aircraft and in trained aircrew personnel. They could not risk an invasion while the Royal Air Force remained unbeaten, and when the invasion never was attempted. Beaten in daylight battle, the enemy then turned to night terror raids. He did deep into their water barrels. Some districts were not able to secure the services of the water-carts, which pedal barrels of water to the dwellings. These fortunate ones had to rely on water from ice cut from the rivers . . . or from cisterns. So-called "scoop . . . or from cisterns. So-called "scoop-up" were made by damming some lowland to retain rain-water or the flow of creeks and brooks. Ice was usually stored under sawdust and kept well

Everywhere one saw fire-guards, consisting of furrows ploughed up around fields and buildings, with more furrows a dozen feet distant and perhaps a third series farther away. Burn space in between meant that the entire section would be invulnerable—too great a distance for even a prairie fire to jump. Such fires were the early settlers' greatest danger, threatening to destroy their crops as well as the buildings that they had put up with difficulty. Everything, in fact, that they possessed.

Sometimes the travellers paid cash dollars and cents instead of in sterling. When prairie fires raged, the settlers had to dig into their water barrels. Some districts were not able to secure the services of the water-carts, which pedal barrels of water to the dwellings. These fortunate ones had to rely on water from ice cut from the rivers . . . or from cisterns. So-called "scoop-up" were made by damming some lowland to retain rain-water or the flow of creeks and brooks. Ice was usually stored under sawdust and kept well

London, February (By Mail)—Air Marshal Sir Arthur Harris is a great grey man of a man, a big head on a big sturdy body, the lines of his face cut in granite. He appears softly but with they convicted. Sir Arthur is chief of Bomber Command and he gave half an hour the other day to the Canadian sensitive of his newspaper.

"We got hardened to most of it, but when it strikes at some personal acquaintance you really stop and wonder where this world of ours is heading," he said. "I'm going to visit Toronto soon, and I have an invitation to call on a certain home there. But I am not going on to P. I can help it, for that home is filled with tragedy."

"Romance" Reprieved.

He said the home contained the remnants of a family from Singapore who had been imprisoned with the last group of Canadian nationals returning on the liner Griphoden.

"I have recently talking to my Toronto friend, and he told me that Japs broke into his apartment when they entered Singapore. They saw his little daughter, Dorothy, age 11, standing in the living-room. They attacked her before her father and raped her to death.

"The father lunged to protect his 7-year-old daughter. They battered him with rifle butts, and he fell unconscious on his little child. The Japs did not molest this girl, who lay under her father's unconscious body.

"This is another tragedy of the war in the Far East, and it is a reason why I haven't the courage to talk it back again."

Capt. Impey said he had seen 800 Chinese girls, kidnapped from a village in the early days of the Manchurian war for sexual purposes. He had later seen some of their bodies discarded in the snow after they had been raped by a score or more of troops.

"We don't hear these stories in our despatches in those days", he said, "but we have got to learn what this kind of copy. We are doing nice business with the Japs, selling them gas, oil and metal, and our economic interests were against this type of story being published".

Capt. Impey spoke of the postwar co-operation and said that Britain and the United States were to continue to work as they did economic sphere they must retain port like Hong Kong. Canadian Girl, Aged 11, Dies of Jap Mistreatment

Ottawa, March 3. (CP)—The rape and murder by Japanese soldiers of an 11-year-old Canadian girl whose father is recovering in Toronto from wounds suffering in pushing on another daughter, 7 years old, from similar fate, was described here today by Capt. Lawrence Impey, former Southwest Pacific war correspondent for The London Daily Mail.

The family was not identified.

Addressing a Canadian Club luncheon on "The Battle for the Orient," Capt. Impey said the girl's butchery had accompanied the progress of Japanese arms since the Manchurian campaign of 1931. He had seen evidence of it during his long stay in the Orient as a repre-

DOGS AND MUSIC

Almost everybody has known of dogs that know when certain musical instruments are played.

Thunder, train whistles, bells and other unusual sounds sometimes produce the same nervous excitement in dogs.

Whether the howling under such circumstances is the expression of pleasure or pain has long been a subject of controversy and the question is not yet definitely settled.

All dogs are not affected in the same way by instrumental music.

It is obvious in some cases that dogs do not enjoy high-pitched musical instruments, because they not only howl, yelp and otherwise show discomfort, but also attempt to withdraw beyond the range of the sound.

After all music is a succession of sound waves so arranged as to affect the vibrations strike the human ear in harmonious rhythm.

Ears are fashioned differently and there is much disagreement as to just what constitutes discord and music.

Dogs possess exceptionally sensitive ears, which are attuned to catch sounds unheard by human ears and which are able to discriminate more nicely between various noises.

It is obvious in some cases that dogs do not enjoy high-pitched musical instruments, because they not only howl, yelp and otherwise show discomfort, but also attempt to withdraw beyond the range of the sound.

After all music is a succession of sound waves so arranged as to affect the vibrations strike the human ear in harmonious rhythm.

Ears are fashioned differently and there is much disagreement as to just what constitutes discord and music.

Dogs possess exceptionally sensitive ears, which are attuned to catch sounds unheard by human ears and which are able to discriminate more nicely between various noises.

Many a dog is soothing music to the human ear may be a violent discord to that of the dog.

The sound of certain high-pitched notes impinges upon the dog's delicate auditory apparatus in such a manner as to produce actual pain. The sound, as it were, gets on the animal's nerves and sets its teeth on edge.

But this explanation is far from adequate for all cases. Some dogs seem to enjoy certain instrumental music. It seems to have a peculiar fascination for them and they sit down and point their noses toward the sky and howl when certain pieces are played, but they show no evidence of pain or discomfort and no inclination to slink away.

Howling in dogs as an emotional manifestation is not yet understood by science. When a dog is hurt physically it usually yelps rather than howls. Perhaps the howling dog experiences emotions in nature and arouses, in the animal's herd or pack, feelings similar to those in wild progenitors.

What has been said about dogs is applicable to many other animals. The effect of various musical instruments on the lower animals is still a subject not well understood by science.

RECREATIONAL THERAPY HELPS SOLDIER PATIENTS RECOVER

Recreational therapy is not being overlooked in helping Canadian soldiers in military hospitals back to health. These scenes illustrate the remarkable scope or the hobbies that patients can develop while convalescing. Taken at Rideau Military Hospital in Ottawa, where the project is under the supervision of the Canadian Red Cross Society, they are duplicated in other hospital establishments both in Canada and abroad. Planned to relieve boredom, patients take enthusiastically to recreational therapy and turn out hundreds of beautiful, useful and valuable articles, and at the same time learn hobbies they can follow and develop throughout their lives. In the picture, top left, for instance, Pte. Leandre Turcotte, of Disraeli, Quebec, learns cord weaving, from which comes intricately designed bags, belts and many other useful articles. Teaching Pte. Turcotte is Mrs. Edmund McCall of Ottawa, one of the volunteer workers. Top right shows a delightful Habitant scene being worked by Gunner Clifford McManara, Royal Canadian Artillery, Ottawa, while with a colorful wall or living room decoration, Bolton, a group of the attractive and valuable articles made by the soldiers. — (Canadian Army Photos.)

Canada's Fighting Men Need New Goal to Shoot at When War Ends, Rather Than Promises, Says Power

Urges Emphasizing of Spiritual Rather Than Material Things

MUST BEAR SHARE

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, March 3. (CP)—Canada's fighting men need a new goal to shoot at when the war ends more than they need promises that each will have what he wants on a "all-ver platter", Air Minister Power said yesterday in the Commons.

Stating the problems of demobilization and rehabilitation, he said the government has a blueprint but is not sure it will work, and he asked for suggestions from the House.

The Minister spoke on air force estimates in the War Appropriation Bill, continuing an address started Tuesday night when he discussed performance of the R.C.A.F. in the war.

After the First Great War, he said, too much emphasis was placed on the materialistic side of what men could expect on their return; not enough on the spiritual side. Emphasize Spiritual Side.

"Let us emphasize the spiritual side of the peacetime task as much as the material side", he urged. "When these boys return to Canada this country will be theirs to mould to develop, to build and to make capable of fulfilling its great destiny as a nation.

"The true glamor of peace must be made to replace the transient glamor of war. We have told our boys what a noble and heroic thing it is to apply themselves to the science of war. Let us tell them what a noble thing it is to apply themselves to the arts of peace. . .

"Let our boys understand that when the last gun is fired and the last bomb has been dropped their task will have only begun. Duties and responsibilities as heavy as those they now bear await them on their return; duties and responsibilities and opportunities, too, if we make them for them, limited only by the vast extent of their country and by its potential resources, industrial, natural and commercial".

No First Great War.

Maj. Power, who fought through the First Great War and returned wounded, spoke from knowledge, of both war and post-war conditions as they affect servicemen. But even the wars he served on numerous House committees studying pensions and returned soldiers' problems and presided for a time over the Pensions Department of Pensions and National Health.

While the emphasis on the air force discussion for the day turned to demobilization problems, Hon. Ian Mackenzie (L—Vancouver Centre), Minister, that the proposed industrial development bank is one of a series of measures planned with a view to creating maximum employment after the war.

Finance Small Projects.

The proposed bank would ensure "adequate financing . . . for desirable projects" — particularly small ones—after the war and would be a $100,000,000 subsidiary of the bank of Canada with a president and board comprising solely bank of Canada personnel, Mr. Abbott said.

"This bank is intended to supplement the activities of existing lending agencies rather than to displace them", he said.

Capital stock of the bank will be $25,000,000, all to be subscribed by the Bank of Canada with $10,000,000 or more to be paid-up when the act goes into effect.

The bank also will be empowered to borrow up to three times the amount of its paid-up capital stock and reserve funds, by the issue of bonds and debentures, thus providing the bank with total resources of $100,000,000.

President of the bank will be the Governor of the Bank of Canada. Its board will comprise 15 members —the Bank of Canada board of directors and the assistant deputy governor.

Debate on Bill Adjourned

A second reading debate on the bill was adjourned by Hon. R. B. Hanson (PC—York Sunbury) who expressed belief there would be sufficient money available for industrial development without it if taxation were eased.

From Rodney Adamson (PC—York East) came the suggestion that every member of parliament be taken by the Air Force on a few operational flight against the enemy to teach them what the airman is up against.

Maj. Power said he is looking for an overseas air officer of high calibre to head up the job of pre-demobilization planning in the Air Force. Already he had appointed a number of "persons" concerned whose job was to talk to airmen about their post-war plans and help guide them into the right kind of training.

There were different opinions on which men should be discharged first, Maj. Power said, and on that question he expressed no opinion. A Civilian Job.

He was convinced that rehabilitation was a civilian job and not one for a war department, although the services themselves could help prepare men for it and work out a plan of demobilization. He did not like the idea of keeping men in the forces until jobs were found for them because he feared boredom and a breakdown of discipline were the supreme objective which made them accept discipline and work was returned.

On priorities of demobilization, he said, two principles could be accepted by all: that no man should be demobilized as long as he was essential to the service; and that personnel desiring delayed demobilization could be retained as long as they could be usefully employed.

Feared Mutiny.

After the enemy was defeated, he feared mutiny such as happened after the First Great War, feared development of state of mind which might distort men's whole future outlook unless some new objective were found for them.

Promises of so many dollars and such and such treatment might serve only to develop selfish instincts and create a rush to get out of the service and cash in on promised benefits.

"In other words," he said, "we cannot and should not promise every individual that everything he desires will be handed to him on a silver platter."

Frederic Dorion (Ind-Charlevoix-Saguenay), an airman with the R. F. C. in the First Great War, said Canada could not be wholly proud of her air contribution overseas since thousands of Canadians were not in Canadian squadrons. It was obvious Canada "had to fight" to get the Canadian squadrons now overseas, he said.

Member Asks Questions.

Mr. Dorion asked if it must be believed that there is an "unknown agreement" under which the R. A. F. must keep its standing at the expense of Canadian airmen.

"Why always have Canadians in all the services perform the most difficult task, when others keep to their fireplaces?" he asked.

"Why must we furnish the men to do the real fighting when every day, from press dispatches throughout the world, we are told that it is the Britishers who do the job?"

Mr. Dorion said he wondered why British ground crews were not incorporated in Canadian squadrons instead of Canadian airmen being trained to form British squadrons.

"Does not the answer reside in the fact that we are always, and must always be the colonials, basically only to pay tribute to the mother country?" he asked.

Gordon Graydon, Progressive Conservative House leader, and Mrs. Dorise Nielsen (Unity-North Battleford) suggested that members of the R. C. A. F. Women's Division should receive pay equal to that given men of comparable rank.

Trenton and District

3 MEN RETURN FROM OVERSEAS

Fire Destroys Residence, Some of Contents Are Saved

Trenton, March 3. — Corporal James D. Whitley and Pte. Gordon J. Vieau arrived safely home from overseas today making three arrivals in as many days. Sergeant Kenneth Craddock arrived early in the week.

Whitley has been in England for some time and it is understood was returned due to an injury which he had received some time during his childhood and from which complications had set in recently. He is the son of Councillor R. J. Whitley and his wife and small daughter reside in town.

Pte. Vieau, who wears the Crusader patch of the Eighth Army, went over with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment and was first wounded in Sicily in July last, having suffered injuries to his right knee. His wife and several small children, also his mother, Mrs. Harry Vieau reside in Trenton.

Fire Destroys Residence.

Fire completely destroyed the home of Kenneth Westlake, 11 Water Street, on Wednesday rendering the Westlakes and their family of several children homeless. Thought to have started from overheated stoves the fire gained considerably headway in just a few seconds and though firemen were quickly on the scene they were unable to save the frame dwelling though some of the contents was removed.

Air Force Cooks Still Subject To All Terrors Modern Warfare

Although possibly termed a "non-combatant" whose job is merely that of keeping the mess tables of the operational unit personnel replenished that the "timer man" may be satisfied, the Air Force cook is still subject to all the terrors of modern warfare.

At least that is the story of Flt. Sgt. P.C.A. "Bud" Rogers, of Ottawa, R.C.A.F. cook who has returned to Canada after four years in Britain and behind the fighting lines in the middle east, in Sicily and in Italy. Twice he has had his canvas kitchen totally disrupted by enemy bombs, and once had his life saved when he was actually "bombed" by a cactus plant. But that is a story in itself.

"They term me only as ground crew," stated Flt. Sgt. Rogers as he spoke with a reporter from the home of Mrs. G. Frost, Trent Rd., Belleville, where he is spending furlough with his wife, "but I've sent many pots and pans on plenty of flying, when the cook tent was blasted with German bombs."

Member of the Air Force since 1935, the Ottawa boy went overseas four years ago and went through the London blitz. Early in 1942 he was posted to the middle east with his unit and while in North Africa saw his kitchen tent go down about his ears when the Germans tried to wipe out the Allied fighter plane base. Fortunately none of the kitchen help was injured.

It was a different matter, when the unit went to Sicily, however. That is where he was "bombed" with the cactus, although the Germans were actually using the real thing. During a sweep of German planes over the Allied air base, Rogers and his kitchen help took refuge beneath several large cactus plants which were in the cook tent. Bomb splinters went through the tent and into the cactuses which in turn were crushed down atop the unfortunate airmen, needle-sharp barbs and all.

Barbs Uncomfortable.

"Those cactus barbs were really uncomfortable," said the airman as he recalled unpleasant memories, "but they actually saved our lives, at that some of the men were wounded, when the tents were flattened."

Enjoying a 30-day leave of absence, Flt. Sgt. Rogers will report back for duty at end of his furlough. He expects to be stationed somewhere in Canada.

2-Minute Speech By Stewart Record

Toronto, March 3—(CP)—A record for brevity in a formal debate was made in the legislature last night by H. A. Stewart (P. C., Kingston, who spoke for less than two minutes. The Kingston Mayor said the Ontario was going to have the finest and most progressive legislature in its history, as forecast in the speech from the Throne.

"This is a record for brevity that is going to be hard to beat," remarked Mr. Stewart as he sat down.

Young Women's Guild Plans Aid To Various Funds

The Young Women's Guild of Tabernacle Church met Monday evening at Mrs. A. D. Archibald's home, Dufferin Ave., the business part being taken by the reading of donations to the United Church Chinese Relief Fund, the Red Cross and to the Greek Relief.

The worship service conducted by Miss Joy Nichols set the keynote of the evening. Her readings were from various parts of the New Testament recalling the stories of Zaccheus, the Good Samaritan and Zacchens, the Good Samaritan and Zacchens.

Miss Josephine Tickell was in charge of the evening's subject, with the assistance of Mrs. R. G. Sprague, she provided a large amount of material for thought with the topic "Racial Tolerance." The races were grouped under seven headings, the first being North American Indians, who were described, among other things, as most faithful friends. The article in a recent Canadian magazine was brought to attention, showing the serious infant mortality rate among this race in Canada.

French Canadians were next studied and a lively discussion followed, they also provided a large amount of material for thought with the topic "Racial Tolerance."

First Major Skirmish in Legislature, Throne Speech Debate May Be Long

Arthur Williams, C.C.F., Attacks Provincial Labor Policy and Liberal Hits at Packing Plants

Toronto, March 3 —(CP)— A spirited attack by Arthur Williams (C.C.F.-Ontario) upon provincial government labor policies last night provoked a crossfire of comment between government and opposition benches in the Ontario legislature, marking the first major skirmish between contending parties in the closely-aligned House.

As indications strengthened that the Throne Speech debate might be prolonged well into the third week of the new session, Mr. Williams touched off sharp debate at the first night sitting of the House by asserting Ontario had "brought refuge" in the new Dominion labor code and by challenging Labor Minister Daley to produce any labor legislation the Progressive Conservative administration might have.

Bluntly, Mr. Daley declined and Premier Drew rose to express hope that Mr. Williams would move a want-of-confidence motion at the end of his address. No such motion was introduced by the C.C.F., which commands 34 votes in the legislature compared with 35 for the Progressive Conservatives.

Williams' Jew.

Mr. Williams said the new labor code "neither meets the demands of organized labor nor fulfils the pre-election promise of Premier Drew who promised model collective bargaining legislation . . ."

and added he believed all parties in the House should weld themselves together to fight for a better code.

There were lively scenes in the chamber as Col. Drew and several of his ministers interrupted the debate from time to time to insist on points of order. C.C.F. Leader Colliffe also rose to defend Mr. Williams and object to the government interruptions which he termed "explanations" rather than legitimate points of order. Speaker W. J. Stewart called several times for order.

The debate was adjourned by J. R. Salsberg (LP-Toronto St. Andrew), who may resume the Throne Speech debate today if the short afternoon sitting permits. Bills and other routine business will be handled first and there is a strong possibility the Throne Speech debate may be deferred until Monday. The lengthy slate of speakers, scheduled to take part in the debate, indicates that it may last well into next week, and possibly longer.

Packing Plants Charged.

Mr. Williams spoke after F. R. Oliver (L.-Grey South) charged "monopolistic control" exists among Canada packing plants and asserted co-operatives may be the answer to the problem of control. Mr. Oliver urged establishment of packing and storage plants in Northern Ontario, centres of new industries in rural communities after the war and said Liberals in the legislature would support any legislation "for the good of Ontario."

Mr. Oliver termed the government's decision to take over the Toronto stock yard, as "an election promise," which would not make a "plugged nickel's difference to the farmers of Ontario. He suggested the agricultural committee of the House should study the matter.

Mr. Oliver said representatives of packing plants "make or break the market." They stopped buying to force prices down and then bought at their own prices. Cattle breeders and hog shippers should organize so they could say to the packers "you can buy at a certain price or leave it alone."

Farmers had to sell their products in a world market of stiff competition, but bought their own wants in a highly-protected market. A floor should be put under farm prices but it must be one that would provide a "decent standard of living for the farmers."

Mr. Oliver urged the government to distribute new industries in smaller centres after the war.

Predicts Future for Co-operatives.

Predicting a bright future for co-operatives, which he described as the answer to "the breaking of monopolistic control," he said he visualises a day when co-operatives will enable farmers to make their own machinery and process their own products in their own plants.

At the afternoon session, Col. Drew said "it is most unfortunate" that the retired Federal Health Insurance plan was presented without prior consultation of the provinces. Premier Drew Cheered.

Amid applause from both sides of the House, the Premier said "this government intends to insist on the constitutional rights of the Province of Ontario" although his administration had no desire to place obstacles before the Federal government. Such matters as the Health Insurance plan and Family Allowances should be dealt with by a request a Dominion-Provincial conference, but he had been notified officially that it was not now possible to fix a date for such a conference. He told Mr. Judith Health Insurance was only one of a number of matters in which the province had taken the initiative in approaching the Dominion.

Premier Drew said presentation of the Health plan to the Social Security Committee left it merely "in a state of suspended animation" and therefore it was impossible to comment. No one could say whether the plan would come back as it was presented.

Province Has Rights Says Drew.

"This government has certain rights under the British North America Act. It is not merely a subsidiary government. There is a field of authority for us, and for the Dominion Government and some overlapping. If there is to be effective co-operation, it must be co-operation."

The House sat in committee to report ten bills for its third reading during the afternoon, and also heard A. Kobo Roberts (PC-Toronto St. Patrick) move the Throne Speech debate. The other address in the Throne Speech debate was made by H. A. Stewart (PC-Kingston), who termed his address a "record for brevity". Mr. Stewart said the government was going to give the people progressive action.

Mr. Williams then took the floor to attack treatment of Ontario labor by past administrations back to 1923, mentioning specifically the dispatch of tanks to Stratford, Ont., during the strike there in September, 1933, and threats against the C.C.L.O. during the Oshawa, Ont., strike in 1937.

In criticizing the Labor code, the Ontario member noted it had been denounced as unacceptable to workers by George Burt, regional director of the United Automobile Workers of America (C.C.L.O.).

If the Globe and Mail said today that Labor Minister Daley and General Blackwell will leave for Ottawa tonight to confer with Dominion authorities on certain sections of the code which the province feels should be changed.

Kobo Roberts Suggests Commission.

The formation of a separate, non-political commission to deal with Ontario soldiers discharged as unfit for duty and possibly headed by LL-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, was suggested by Mr. Roberts. "It was critical of treatment received by Canadian service men returning wounded from the front.

Ninety-Four Japs Permitted to Live In Prohibited Area

Ottawa, March 3 —(CP)— Ninety-four persons of Japanese origin are permitted to live, work or do business in the prohibited area on the British Columbia coast, Labor Minister Mitchell said in a Commons reply tabled by C. G. Power (PC-Peterborough West.)

Since 1942, he said, 130 persons of Japanese origin were removed from the prohibited area have been permitted to return for short periods to attend to personal business, receive special medical care and hospitalization, or for other reasons.

A total of 304 radio receiving sets without short-wave bands are in use in camps according to Mr. Mitchell of Japanese origin, the return said. All settlements occupied by the Japanese have schools handled by Japanese teachers.

Youth Given Jail Term on Charge Laidby N.S.S. Bd.

Alfred Ferraro, 18, of Belleville, was sentenced to serve two months in the jail yesterday on each of three different charges preferred under the National Selective Service Board when he was convicted before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd in police court here today. However the sentences are to run concurrently.

Ferraro was convicted of unlawfully terminating his employment with the Allied War Supplies, Project 58, without giving the Selective Service Board the required seven days notice of leaving his employment. The second charge was that of while being an accepted employee of the Allied War Supplies, he did unlawfully terminate such employment without the written permission of the National Selective Service and thirdly that the accused did apply for, accept or enter the employment of the Uptown Billiards, operated by James Trakas and James Yeates, without having obtained written permission of the Selective Service Board. Ferraro pleaded guilty to the first by behalf and was convicted on the first charge. He pleaded not guilty on the two subsequent charges.

The case was prosecuted by R. E. Powell, special government prosecutor, the latter part of Magistrate Lloyd that Ferraro had been given considerable leeway taken on under the National Selective Service as a priority worker. It was established during the proceedings that Ferraro's application for deferment as being in a physical condition had been rejected last June.

E. C. Naylor of the Selective Service Appeal Board and Chas McDonald of the Unemployment Insurance Commission in Belleville reviewed the history of the Ferraro case.

"It is too bad such cases come into court without the accused consulting a lawyer," stated Magistrate Lloyd as he meted out the two months sentence on each charge to run concurrently.

22 Divisions Of Nazis in Italy

By WES GALLAGHER

Associated Press War Correspondent.

London, March 3 (AP)—Hitler's furious attempt to smash the Anzio beachhead has elevated Italy to a major battle front, with the latest authoritative estimate placing the German forces pitted against the Allied troops at 22 divisions.

The German high command is following the same strategy used last winter in Tunisia, when it poured reinforcements into that battle line in the hope of salvaging a victory. The Nazis have made one decision from as far away as Calais to the beachhead and apparently are willing to take whatever losses in an effort to drive the Allies into the sea.

March will be a critical month in the Italian fighting and it may end without any decisive ground fighting by the Allies, who are in the same position as they were last February and March in southern Tunisia where they had to build up their forces for one overwhelming attack.

Strategically the beachhead with its more difficult to hold than mountainous Tunisia, but Gen. Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, commander-in-chief in the Mediterranean, Gen. Sir Harold Alexander, LL-Allied commander in Italy, LL-Gen. Mark W. Clark, commander of the Allied 5th army, and Prime Minister Churchill all have expressed confidence not only will be held but will be pushed forward.

It seems unlikely, however, that the Allies will be able to push as far until the battle of attrition has worn down the German attacking strength now engaged in a furious assault on the beachhead position.

This probably will take weeks of the bloodiest fighting because the Allies, too, will have to replenish losses.

Allied Action Disrupts Jap Coastal Shipping

Chungking, March 3. (AP)—Allied air and submarine action which has sunk nine ships totalling 75,000 tons has forced the Japanese to suspend shipping service between Formosa and Hong Kong and disrupted service between Japan and Formosa, a Japanese war prisoner has informed the Allied Command.

ROME'S RAILROADS HIT

Naples, March 3—(AP)—United States heavy bombers again attacked Rome's railroad installations today, the Mediterranean Allied Air Force announced.

"Flying Fortresses attacked Littorio and Tiburtina freight yards," the announcement said, "while Liberators bombed the main Terni-to airdrome 35 miles north of Rome."

FORMER FOOTBALL STAR DIES

Hamilton, March 3 (CP)— John McKelvey, 51, one-time famous football star, died at his home here today after about two weeks' illness.

Mr. McKelvey, known to his friends and fellow sports as "Chick" en" broke into the big four in 1911 when he played with the championship team of Hamilton Tigers. He played until 1922 when he retired

POLICE COURT

Michael Korzyniewski, formerly of Niagara Falls and now residing in Belleville, appeared before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd in city police court today charged with failing to notify his National Selective Service Board registrar of a change in address upon being a person eligible for military training.

Korzyniewski asked for an enlargement in the matter as he had only been acquainted with the charge when court opened today. Previously he was questioned on a vagrancy holding charge. His Worship granted the enlargement until March 14th.

"This man has been notified to report to the conscientious objectors' camp at Chalk River not later than March 10th and if he does we will gladly withdraw this charge," pointed out T. R. Pollard, special Board prosecutor. The accused man refused to make any reply to the statement.

"However, if he doesn't report by the 10th of the month he will be up another charge facing him when he appears here on the 14th, I can promise him," concluded Mr. Pollard. Korzyniewski was admitted to $5,000 bail and asked for a copy of the charge preferred against him. "I want to consult a Toronto attorney," he stated.

Charged with overtime parking in the Campbell building on Front St. Kelly one dollar and costs, while Ernest Lewis was fined one dollar for proper driver's licence saw a fine of $10 and costs imposed on him.

Assault For Sliding.

Leslie McEwen, 17, of Trenton, was sentenced to three months in the county jail after being convicted on a charge of boy riding when he appeared before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd here today. Lloyd's sentence, 30, and also of Trenton, was given a year's suspended sentence after pleading guilty to the same charge. McEwen and Gencreau were arrested in the former's car when found in possession of a motorcar, belonging to Gordon Sine of that city.

C. O. Bosier appearing for the accused young man pointed out that Gencreau cannot even drive a car and had been recently called to the armed forces. His Worship ordered that Gencreau must report weekly to Chief Constable Wm. Bain in Trenton during the year of his suspended sentence.

When McEwen appeared for sentence His Worship reminded him he had been before his court on two previous occasions during the past year. The three months' term was then imposed on McEwen.

Following the introduction of the charge against Gencreau Crown Attorney R. C. Donnan K.C. asked for the withdrawal of the original charges of car theft and the fair has been held for the past few days.

Mr. Bosier informed the court that Gencreau had obtained suitable employment in Trenton.

Berne, March 3. (AP)—The German News Agency D.N.B. said today 11 American fliers had been rescued out of the more than 100 claimed shot down in the snow-clad Alps of Eastern Austria last week while raiding Germany.

The German agency said the men parachuted to a lower level than their companions, most of whom landed at altitudes where they could not be reached.

Woman of Low Mentality Doctors State in Trial

Kingston, Ont., March 3 —(CP)— Psychiatric authorities at Provincial House expressed belief yesterday that Mrs. Annie MacQuarrie is of low mentality as the murder trial of the 46-year-old woman continued with the first witness from the court room.

Dr. Cyril Hincks, superintendent of the Ontario Hospital at Brockville, and Dr. W. Crawford of Rockwood Hospital at Kingston gave the testimony before Judge F. H. R. Cherrier while arguments continued as to Mrs. McCusker's ability fully to understand the seriousness and possible legal implications of statements which Provincial Police say she made voluntarily.

The jury was withdrawn Wednesday when argument started on admissibility of the statements said to have been made by Mrs. MacQuarrie to police on the 14th, 21 and the infant son of her daughter, Gertrude, 24.

Mountain View "Bombers" In Training Command Finals By Beating Camp Borden 10-2

More Than 2,000 Fans Witness All-Round Display of Winners

FLYERS OUTCLASSED

Mountain View "Bombers" advanced to the finals for the No. 1 Training Command, R.C.A.F. (Overseas) hockey championship by eliminating the Camp Borden "Flyers" by a 10 to 2 score in the Arena Thursday night. Well over 2,000 fans saw Group Captain R. C. Ripley, commanding officer at the Mountain View Bombing School and Group Captain Carling-Kelly commanding officer from the Camp Borden R.C.A.F. station, officially open the game as they met in centre ice for the pre-game ceremonies. Actually the Bombers rattled home seven goals before the Camp Borden "Flyers" beat Claude Bourque in the Mountain View net for the period opener at 3-2 and finally 10 to 2. Muldoon scoring both of the Flyers' goals in quick succession in the dying moments of the middle session. The score just about indicated the play as the Bombers were never extended from the initial face-off.

Lon Boudreau, Gene Bauer and "Speedy" Robbillard each scored two to pace the Bombers into the No. 1 Training Command finals, as Pat McKeown, former Boston Bruin star, set up plays all night and managed to get most of the assists, while Robbillard picked up five scoring points in all with an additional three assists.

Checked to Standstill

The Borden "Flyers" were literally checked to the powerful attacking of Coach "Mo" Moore's three front lines clicked in a convincing manner with some clever all-round combination play, that left the visitors bewildered. On the attack the Bombers' sextette was guilty of continued blind passing and only when they managed to get into position they only beat Bourque twice all night, as the forward line checking was outstood and in the last half entertained 3,000 fans with some fancy hard stops took soft.

Bourque made some sensational saves in the first few moments as the Borden Flyers moved in to test Mickey Moore's goal, but the opening but his shot hit the post with Pearce out of the picture. Robbillard opened the scoring by taking Auhe's pass out of the corner and Dan Gardner put the puck by the Borden on a three-way combination play late in the period. It was Bauer out on the attack to open the middle session but Bourque was there to the occasion with one again rise to the occasion with some of the best goal tending seen locally this season. Borden crowd soon faded, however, and the Bombers began to smother the accurate goals with retaliation.

One Goal a Thriller

Gene Bauer's solo effort for the fifth counter in thriller. A moment later on end the Bombers hemmed the Flyers in their own end with great effect but Auhe broke away two minutes to go in the frame Muldoon netted a long shot from Bourque, that had the Bombers' goalie beaten all the way. Bauer, for good measure Muldoon beat Bourque again at close quarters on a scramble in front of the net, missing out.

In the final stanza the Bombers rattled home a trio more goals in a period of rather loose hockey as the locals more clearly went through the motions of protecting their lead. Boudreau, Bauer and Robbillard Bourque's work when the Flyers' attack slowly permeating the Borden Flyers to move in on the Bombers' net, but it was little relief as Bourque gave the fans something for their admission fee with some brilliant exhibition of the business of puck stopping.

The Mountain View "Bombers" meet the Western Group semi-finalists in the No. 1 Training Command finals at Varsity Arena in a sudden-death series next week.

The line-ups:

Mountain View, goal, Bourque; defence Brock and Savard, centre, McHeavy, wings, Bauer and Pregent; subs, Boudreau, Copley, Auhe, Robbillard, Michanik and Duguette.

Camp Borden, Flyers, goal, Groombridge; defence, Vanbrugh and Danychuk, centre, Taylor, wings, Benson and Muldoon, subs, Nicholson, Tremblay, Hardy, Foss, Byers, Bugg and Dick.

Referees, St. Louis and Holway of Belleville.

Beau Jack Rates 2-1 Favorite Over Bob Montgomery

New York, March 3 (AP)—Third and final episode of the Beau Jack-Bob Montgomery serial for the featherweight title of the world's light-weight title is tonight's feature at Madison Square Garden.

And everyone wondering if the all-star cast will do an about-face this time and follow the script.

They took turns playing hero in the two previous installments. Each winning when the betting boys thought he wouldn't. Last May, at now, Beau Jack held the crown and was a 5-13 favorite. Bob beat him and took off the title.

Last November Bob was quoted at 7 to 10, so Beau won and got back the buckle. For tonight's heat Beau Jack is favored at 1 to 2.

They'll be shooting at three targets. One is the championship, the second is a March 31 shot at Sammy Angott, holder of the NBA title, and third is a share of the more than $60,000 gate. The Angott match with the winner figures to up the lightweight title muddle which has existed since 1942, for both the NBA and the New York Commission have refused full recognition for the victor.

'All He Did Was Talk Baseball' Said Mack of Talk With Bobo

By The Canadian Press

The colorful Bobo Newsom yesterday held a conference on baseball generally with Connie Mack of the Philadelphia Athletics in the Quaker City but when the conversational approach was concluded, the veteran head of the club confided to the press he has not signed a 1944 contract. "All he did was talk baseball," sighed Mr. Mack cold-manager.

Newsom, weighing 206, confided he's willing to work for Mr. Mack than anyone else but there was a chance of he might get more salary.

the nature of which he did not disclose. Newsom left and Chief went to St. Louis Browns, where Washington, before he was traded for Roger Wolff of the A's. He won 20 games and led the World Series title in 1940. Since then he's been around.

The California State Athletic Commission yesterday announced postponement of the N. B. A. lightweight championship fight between defender Sammy Angott and Juan Zurita of Mexico scheduled for Monday night until the following Wednesday because heavy rains had drenched the Hollywood Baseball Park, scene of the bout.

Army headquarters at Ottawa said last night Jimmy Orlando, former Detroit Red Wings hockey player now under prison sentence in the United States for alleged violations, draft regulations, will have to apply to his commanding officer for permission to return to the United States when his appeal from the sentence is heard at Cincinnati. Orlando enlisted in the Canadian unit at Montreal yesterday.

At Detroit, Kenneth Wilkins, Assistant U. S. Attorney, said Orlando's enlistment in the Canadian Army would make no immediate difference in the status of his case.

As long as Orlando remains in Canada, however, he cannot be arrested because of his conviction, he said. Wilkins added: His $2,000 bond would be declared forfeit only should the circuit court of appeals in Cincinnati sustain his conviction and should he then fail to appear to serve his term, the government attorney said.

Orlando was allowed to go to Montreal to attend his mother's funeral. He remained there with his father and brought a share in a business.

ESQUIRES LIKELY TO REPRESENT MANITOBA PROV.

Canadians and St. Boniface Still Left in the Play-offs

LAKEHEAD READY

Winnipeg, March 1 —(CP)— Interest in the Intermediate hockey play-offs, will be Manitoba's defenders of the Dominion championship this year.

Three teams are left in the fight to keep the Memorial Cup in the province.

The Junior Canadians, champions of the Manitoba South Division league, eliminated Winnipeg Junior Lacrosse Club in three straight games of a best-of-five series while Winnipeg Rangers, Memorial Cup holders last Spring, only won one game in 13 starts in the series.

Canadians will meet either Winnipeg Esquires or St. Boniface Athletics in the Provincial finals.

Esquires gained a two-one lead in the best-of-five North Division series by defeating Athletics 10-4 last night. Esquires won the opener 5-4 and St. Boniface the second, 6-3 in overtime.

Lakehead Juniors, Port Arthur West Ends and Port Arthur Flyers will meet in a best-of-three series opening next Monday, with the winner entering Provincial finals against Esquires. The series also is the Lakehead League semi-finals for victor meeting the Fort Garry for the league crown later. The winner will enter the eliminations leading to the Memorial Cup.

In the Senior finals, Manitoba's only challenger this season for the Allan Cup, Thunder Bay representatives will be either Port Arthur Shipbuilders, an all-select team coached by Hugh O'Leary or Fort Frances All-stars.

ST. CATHARINES WINS FIRST ONE

(By The Canadian Press)

The Saints of St. Catharines moved into the finals series in the O.H.A. senior championship with a 4-3 victory over Toronto Dodgers last night on St. Catharines ice but the visitors forced the issue into overtime, thus giving promise of a tight play-off series which will continue Sunday night for best-in-seven games.

Hamilton led 2-1 in the first period only to have Blink Bellinger and Bill Mosienko tie the count at the second stanza. Mosienko, who scored 31 times during the season, headed the winning goal when he batted home the bell once more to bring a 3-3 deadlock before the overtime period was over. In overtime play it was Red Reynolds who counted the winner for Saints after 4:35 minutes. It was his second goal of the evening.

Only four players figured in the games summary as goal-getters. In addition to Bellinger's important pair for the Saints, the other two scorers for this winning team were vouched by Reynolds. Johnny Mitchell, who counted twice as brave for Hamilton, the odd goal being chalked up to Bill Dillon of Toronto. All of these snipers had figured among the first five in the O.H.A. senior scoring race during points during the regular season. The second game in the playoffs is scheduled for Saturday night at Hamilton.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 218

By SAM GORDON
NEA Service

On the straight suits A jump bid is not forcing to slam. It is merely only until a game is reached. But the information you get from the bidding may help in playing in a slam-bidding mood.

Of all the contracts none are more cockeyed than an unsuccessful one-jump shoot. It should be a trick with plenty of sure tricks, and a biddable suit.

Take another look at this pair of partnership hands:

SOUTH
♠ A 6 3
♥ A K 8 3 2
♦ A K 3
♠ K Q 2
♥ Q 10 9 5
♣ 10 3

Your partner in the south is strong enough to start with an opening bid of one heart. With his six suit tricks, five high cards, four sure tricks, a biddable suit. More than enough.

But he says he has no rebid. Your first response should be a one-heart takeout to three diamonds. You have all the needs for such an immediate reply. And more, your partner can admit you have six tricks. The fact, that you contented yourself with a raise, not you also have two sure tricks. And not show your diamond suit biddable.

You also have very good support for your partner's heart suit. Why not show that first. Because he did not show the second suit in T-A-N-T, that means take-out, first; next; no-trump, last.

A one-jump is a signal that says the hand is stronger, not weaker than a game contract. So, you know your partner has a big game. You know you will get another chance to bid.

When your partner bids again, you can show him your heart support. With all that information, he can decide how soon the bidding should stop. If he sees a chance for a slam, he will reach beyond game.

Partner should swap as much dope as possible. Their bidding should continue until they learn enough from each other. All some partners learn from each other is what they think of each other.

Sports Roundup

By RUPH FULLERTON, Jr.
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

New York, March 3. (AP)—Southern Association Baseball bosses have just given their official word that they intend to go into the pro football business after the war. The American Association made the same decision a few weeks ago, . . . but big fat chance of that . . . so sure it will work. . .they point out that most small league parks aren't suitable for football because they offer too few seats on the one yard line. . .Curly Lambeau, for one, says that pro football is a swell idea but that salaries would be so low that the players would have to hold down jobs . . . that why not investigate soccer as an off season attraction . . . It's a fast entertaining game, salaries are low and there wouldn't be any competition from colleges such as Minnesota or Georgia Tech.

Season Enough.

Dorothy Lee, pastor of the largest church in Jewell, Iowa, was married and his flock gave him a reception to hold a big reception for him and his bride. The date was announced as Monday, Feb. 28. Then someone discovered that the Iowa State and Oklahoma A. and M. Cagers were playing the deciding game of the season that night so the reception was postponed until the next day.

Another Shortage.

Cutler High School in Illinois has no substitutes on its basketball squad because it has only five boys enrolled. . . .The other night the boys were a bit rough in a game against Willisville and four went out on personal fouls. . . As each Cutler boy fouled out, Coach Genny Love of Willisville, withdrew one of his boys, so when the final gun popped there were only two players on the court.

P.O.L.E. Goodkey Reported Missing For Second Time

Bancroft, March 2. (Special) — Pilot Officer Leonard E. Goodkey, 23-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Goodkey of Bancroft, is reported missing for a second time.

Leonard enlisted December 30th, 1941, training in Canada as a navigator. He received his "Wings" at a presentation ceremony at Malton Airport and went overseas in 1942.

He was first reported missing on an operational flight over the European continent September 7th, 1942, when he and the remainder of his crew bailed out of their damaged aircraft over the North Sea. Five out of the seven members survived but under trying conditions. Their damaged rubber raft was only kept afloat after four hours of hard repair work. The boys were on the water nineteen hours before being sighted by Allied aircraft and later picked up by patrol boat. Leonard was the only Canadian in the crew. He was admitted to the hospital for a period of three days and in another ten days he was released from hospital and back on operational flights.

The last report of Leonard's being missing comes as a shock to his family and-also his brother, Pilot Officer John Goodkey as John just arrived in England from Canada just several hours late of seeing Leonard, which he had so much built up on having a reunion together. Leonard had nearly, if not already, completed his thirty operation flights, which would have entitled him to an extended leave.

Pilot Officer John Goodkey enlisted January 5th, 1942, received his commission just prior to going overseas. Another brother Gordon is also in the R.C.A.F., taking up a pilot's course at the R.C.A.F. station at Centralia, Ontario.

Of the original seven man crew of which Leonard was a member, only an Australian pilot remains, as far as is known.

Held Bridge, Euchre.

The Ladies of Oakwood Lodge L.O.B.A. No. 370 at Bancroft, held a bridge and euchre party in the Orange Hall, Tuesday evening which was well patronized. Following cards the ladies excelled themselves by serving a very delicious lunch after which prizes were awarded. Ladies' Bridge—Miss B. Hass; Gentlemen's Bridge—Mr. W. A. Davy. Ladies' Euchre—Mrs. John Moxam; Gentlemen's Euchre, Mr. Reginald Wiggins. Euchre earning prize was won by Mrs. S. R. Walker. The party closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

Canada Packers at Bancroft are making intensive changes in their local plant by installing new machinery at the grist mill and also changing their offices over at the creamery, Mr. H. L. Tanner being in charge of the work.

Hotstove League Of Travellers Holds 'Bean Feed'

A very successful "Bean feed" and social evening was held in Orange Hall, Point Anne, on Wednesday, upwards of 50 were in attendance which included travellers from all over Ontario.

Mr. Jack Singer of Sims Batteries was in the chair and extended a warm welcome to the members and guests.

The community singing was in charge of Jim Haggerty and Jim Worrell, Belleville, and who with their unlimmitable way treated the party to many fine selections throughout the evening.

One of the features of the entertainment program was the presentation of Mr. Sam Moffatt, Munitions and Supply, (Old Sam as he is commonly known to all) delighted the company with his rendition of Irish songs.

The catering as usual was in the capable hands of Great Norton, Hehta Co., and Bert McManus, De Laval Co., and members expressed their appreciation of their excellent work during the entire evening.

Several Prizes Given.

Several beautiful prizes were drawn for the lucky winners were Mr. H. Warburton of Goodrich Oil Co., who received a lovely catalogue case donated by the Iron Fireman Co., Toronto, Mr. Edgar Hutchison, Bell Telephone Co., Ottawa, was the lucky winner of pen and pencil set donated by Mr. Walter Allove, Belvedere Hotel.

The mystery prize was won by Mr. Bill Green, Belvedere Hotel.

The past president, Jack Singer was presented with a suitable gift by Walter M. Fowler on behalf of the members and expressed thanks to Jack for the excellent way in which he had conducted the affairs of his office during the past year, suitably replied.

Jack suitably replied stating he would always be ready to help the league at anytime if in his power.

On behalf of the league a cheque was handed to Mrs. Jack Charlton for war purposes: in Point Anne, who thanked the members for their thoughtfulness.

In the wee small hours of the morning a very pleasant and happy party came to a close with the singing of Auld Lang Syne and the National Anthem.

Election of officers for ensuing year was conducted by Mr. Bert Charlton, Point Anne which resulted as follows:

Hon. President: Walter F. Allen, Belleville; Jack Singer, Hehta Co.

Past President:: Jack Singer.

Committee: Ward Baker, Chown Ltd.; Jack Flannagan, Dominion Rubber; Percy Brown, Dept. of Highways; Fred Sendrick, Western Feed Co.; Bert McManus, De Laval Co.; Dan Douglas, Minimum Wage Board; Jack Sweeney, Loblaws.

Secretary: Walter M. Fowler.

Treasurer: Wm. Green.

Before leaving for their several destinations on Thursday a deputation waited on Mrs. L. Allen, Belvedere Hotel, and presented her with a bouquet of flowers in appreciation of many courtesies to the "Man on the Road."

COFFEE COSTS $61 POUND

AT THE CAPITOL

"Laurel and Hardy"

Laurel and Hardy are back again in a hilarious new comedy in tune with the times in Mc-Cal's "Air Raid Wardens," now playing at Capitol Theatre. Though the picture is chock full of hilarious situations and comedians poke fun at no one but themselves, it does have a stirring patriotic lesson.

Enlisted and Enlist.

When the two partners try to join the armed forces and are rejected by all branches, they return to their home town and become air raid wardens to do their bit. When their blunders create havoc in the ranks they become perilously involved and are a result, are thrown out of the warden's service. But they manage to stumble on a ring of saboteurs and round them up to become the town's heroes.

You'll overflow with laughter when you see them actually make a victim of leather Rowland, R. Emmett, in a first aid practice drill and how when they run afoul Major Rowland when he refuses to cooperate during a blackout.

"Sheriff of Sage Valley"

Opening last night at the Capitol Theatre, the latest in the popular Billy the Kid westerns starring Buster Crabbe with Al (Fuzzy) St. John and Tex O'Brien, moves into high gear right from the start, and stays that way until the finish. It is "Sheriff of Sage Valley," from the P. R. C. stable of the same program a colored cartoon and the serial "Secret Service in Darkest Africa" complete the big double bill.

AT THE BELLE

"Adventures of Tarte"

Keyed to present-day headlines, "The Adventure of Tarte" now in its final day at the Belle Theatre is a stirring drama of intrigue, coupled with a romance that almost defies by purpose. Robert Donat is the star in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "The Adventures of Tarte," and lovely Valerie Hobson enacts the leading feminine role. Others who stand out are Reginald Owen, Zia Johns and Walter Rilla.

"Gildersleeve on Broadway"

Fun and complications feature RKO Radio's latest farce comedy in its "Gildersleeve" series. "Gildersleeve on Broadway" the added comedy hit on the same program, with Harold Peary again has the title role, and Billie Burke heads the supporting cast.

A New Community Sing will be exhibited on the same program.

"Riding High" in Technicolor. Another great new Paramount musical, in Technicolor, co-starring Dorothy Lamour, Dick Powell and Victor Moore, is coming soon to the Belle Theatre, with Gil Lamb, Cass Daley and Milt Britton and his Band, when "Riding High" makes its local debut.

According to all reports, "Riding High", is one of the merriest, flimsiest and most tuneful of the musicals ever made, in the best of a Western, glorified with gorgeous Technicolor. Fitness, pre-Lenten humor, all that and Technicolor, too!

It tells the hilarious story of Victor Moore, a counterfeiter, who tries to elude Sheriff Gil Lamb and play Cupid to Dottie and Dick Powell as the game lime. Dottie has the role of an enterprising queen who returns to Arizona before her father's death, as owner of a silver mine. Dick is framed for murder, but as he hasn't been able to operate without a partner, Victor is the man and his counterfeit letters come in.

"Riding High" is said to be in the spirit of recent Paramount bigtime comedy musicals like "Star Spangled Rhythm", "Happy Go Lucky" and "Thank Your Lucky Stars" pictures, which ought to be welcome news for entertainment seekers.

"Three Swell Featurettes"

Three swell featurettes are announced for exhibition on the same program, including "Swing Fever" with Kay Kyser, Ish Kabibble and his orchestra presenting a smart musical revue and another of the popular speaking of animals screen novelties "In the Desert."

AT THE McCARTHY

"Is Everybody Happy?"

Ted Lewis, the "High-hatted Tragedian of Song," through his long career as vaudevillian and radio leader has become almost a household word. The wild and uncharted syncopations of his music have been heard from stage, screen, radio and phonograph records. But according to advance notices on Columbia's "Is Everybody Happy?" the musical jamboree based on the life of this maestro opening Saturday at the McCarthy Theatre, Lewis has never been seen or heard in better form.

Ted really is said to give out in his finest style. He has plenty of chance, for there eighteen of the songs he has made famous included in the picture and page of this happy romance. The music includes: "Eastchown My Chinatown," "St. Louis Blues," "Sunny Side of the Street" and "Everybody Baby."

The background of "Is Everybody Happy?" which is based on the real life career of Ted, is the colorful Roaring World War I when the Great White Way had no blackout of lights and certainly not of merriment. Famous characters in the lively plot are Mrs. Hayes and Lillian Lorraine were in their heyday and Rector's Restaurant where Ted had his first big break was on the crest of its champagne bubbles.

The story shows us the forming of Lewis' band; the trials and tribulations which beset his path to stardom; his first love; how he won that high hat with which he has been identified for so many years; all this by the action of those eighteen songs which are so nostalgic and heart warming.

Supporting Lewis is a cast of quality headed by those featured players: Nan Wynn, Michael Duane, Bob Haymes, Larry Parks, Dick Purcell, Lynn Merrick and Lynn Merrick.

Leading the parade of thrilling adventure pictures is the new Hopalong Cassidy film "The Leather Burners," which is the second feature attractions from Sunday at the McCarthy Theatre.

By Burton Stevenson

CHAPTER 26

"What was the clue?" she asked.

"I said 'guess.' I remember that he was reading my column in the Record when it entered his office mind that he was the impression that the clue was connected with that, but I read it over afterwards and couldn't see anything . . . Can you?"

"May I see it?"

"Of course. Clarence!" he shouted at the . . .

"Yes, suh."

"Bring me last Thursday's Record."

In a moment it was in his hand. He opened it to the editorial page, "Here we are," he said. "Let's start out, 'Thus, Thus is the McKibben Case!' and then goes on: 'Perhaps somebody got what he deserved, but why did he cry Oh hush! just before he was shot? You see young Terry said he had heard someone —either McKibben or the man who killed him—say Oh hush! and then the shot . . .

He looked up to find Miss Scott staring at him, her face white, her lips working, her hands against her heart.

"There is it!" she whispered hoarsely. "That is it! We've got him now."

"Got who?" Tony demanded. "What do you mean? You're going to faint."

Miss Scott waved him back as he started toward her.

"I'm not going to faint," and she stood erect, her eyes shining. "I am too happy. Don't you see? McCann too happy. Don't you see? McKibben did not say, 'Oh hush!' He started to say 'Hello Herschel,' and the last word was cut short by the bullet which killed him!"

"Hello, Hersch . . ." and then a bullet through the heart. Could that be it? Of course it could be . . .

—but how to prove it?

"I'm sure I am right," said Miss Scott, her voice still unsure with emotion. "I'm sure that's the clue Dr. Metcalf spoke of. It must be."

"I think so too," Tony agreed. "He said young Terry had given him to me. He must be it. How did you guess?"

"I don't know." She sank into her chair again, her face very pale. "It just flashed into my mind."

"Let us see where we are," the columnist said. "We know that Jack McKibben had something on Herschel Schneider. Schneider, we think, had gone to call for him and killed him and then, tried to make it look like suicide, not realizing the red carnation. By Jove, I remember now that he said that very thing to me the other evening! I thought he was theorizing then, but he must have been telling me exactly what occurred. The thought of Schneider sitting and talking me that. What a nerve!" and he sat for a moment thinking it over. "He'll never break down."

"We must break him down!" and the girl said "Please go on."

"All right. The red carnation spells the murderer and Schneider knows the police are looking for the murderer and suspect that Metcalf was involved in a blackmail case with McKibben and got into a quarrel with him and shot him. So in order to clinch the matter, Schneider puts Metcalf out of the way, really makes it look like a suicide this time, and ships up a lot of evidence to show that Metcalf killed McKibben. That's my theory, isn't it?"

"I—" she agreed. "Isn't it yours?"

"I'm the last I can think of," he answered gloomily, "but it doesn't convince me, and it won't convince Duffy either. The evidence of killing Metcalf is too weak."

"But Dr. Metcalf told you he knew who the murderer was," she pointed out.

"He did."

"And it must have been Schneider he was thinking of."

"Yes."

"Very well, then. Schneider must have known that, too. He had to kill Dr. Metcalf to protect himself. Is that sufficient motive?"

"Yes," Tony nodded, "provided we can prove that Schneider did know it. But I can't imagine Metcalf telling."

"Neither can I," agreed the girl, "He certainly didn't tell me. I am doubt if he told anyone except you. Where by one answer? You must have mentioned it to someone."

Tony was on his feet again. "Of course I did!" he shouted. "I mentioned it to Duffy and Schneider! When I was talking to him Wednesday morning, I told him that I was going to see Metcalf next day. He was very interested—he indicated that he thought Metcalf was guilty—and he asked me to call him and let him know what happened and I did."

"And told him that Dr. Metcalf was dead?"

"Yes. The chain is complete, my dear!"

They sat for a moment gazing at each other, then Tony said, "Then Herschel Schneider who told you that ridiculous alibi about Mrs. Grandin? And Miss Scott, at last.

"It was."

"It looks as though he was caught in his own web, doesn't it?" she asked excitedly.

"No, he's not caught, Miss Scott," he said. "Not yet. We have built up a theory which hangs together beautifully, but there is not enough proof that it is true. What convicts in court is what you can demonstrate—not what you think, nor what you suspect."

"There must be some way," she cried.

"The only way is to dig up proof. If we could prove that he bought the ladder or that he really took the 10:30 plane, or that the baby automobile belonged to him, or that he had the key to the Grandin apartment—if we could prove just one thing, it might be enough. But before we can do anything we've got to have one good solid piece of evidence which we can hang our theory on."

They sat for moments deep in thought.

"Meanwhile, where were we?" the columnist asked. "Oh, yes, that proof problem! When Duffy and I went to Metcalf's office Thursday night, we found a record in it. Evidently Metcalf's foot was on the button when he knew he was shot. We put it in the reproducer."

Miss Scott's eyes were blazing again. "Go on!" she cried. "Go on! What did you hear?"

"Very little," said Tony ruefully. "We couldn't make out what was being said. There were a lot of faint sounds—which didn't mean much; that is the usual tapping of which was probably the typewriter and then some one coughed, some one walking around, perhaps . . . nothing definite."

"Will you let me hear it?" she asked eagerly. "I'm accustomed to the machine, you know."

"I don't see why not. Duffy has it at headquarters. Metcalf's home was searched, however—I suspect Herschel Schneider is at the bottom of that job—and Duffy knows has arranged to turn it over to him tomorrow morning."

"Oh, he must not do that!"

"I'm afraid he will have to. He is going to try it out with an amplifier first. If you would like to be present—"

"Of course I should!"

"Very well. Suppose you meet me here at 1:30 tomorrow afternoon?"

"Thank you, Mr. Bigelow," she said. "Perhaps I shall have some news for you then. Now I must be going."

He saw her out and then went back to his study and sat down at his desk. How vivid she was . . . Was it she who had been with Metcalf that first fatal night?"

Tony brushed the thought away, reached for the telephone and soon he was talking to Duffy.

"Look here, Jim," he said, "there is something I want you to do for me. I'm going to drive to headquarters in about half an hour myself and I want you to give me half an hour."

"All right, Tony," Duffy laughed. "I'm willing to gamble half an hour on your time."

Presently Tony taxied to police headquarters.

"Where we going?" Duffy asked, as he dropped into the seat beside him.

"Central Park West."

"Sick there again?"

"I've made some discoveries, Jim. One is that Metcalf couldn't have killed McKibben because he wasn't home Monday night."

"That sort of alibi isn't worth a hoot!" Duffy snorted. "It's too easy to cook up."

"I know it," Tony agreed, "but I believe this witness is telling the truth. Also I have a little more evidence that Herschel Schneider had a finger in this. It has been suggested that Duffy and said 'Hello Hersch,' not 'Oh, hush,' just before he was shot."

"That's just conjecture, Besides, why should Schneider kill McKibben?"

"Lily Edgerton told me that Mc-Kibben was dwelling he had something on Schneider that would bring him into court."

"That's a little warmer," said the detective. "But we would have to find out what it was. One thing is sure—Schneider didn't get any of that twenty-five grand McKibben got from Mrs. Bradford. McKibben banked the whole sum right away. What are we going to do over on Central Park West?"

"We're going up to Metcalf's office and see if there is a bullet hole in the floor beside his chair," Tony answered. "I think there's one there."

"Yes. What about the blood on the floor?"

"It isn't McKibben's. It's type three. McKibben's was type one."

"What was Metcalf's?"

"Type three."

"They'll let us!" cried Tony. "Don't you see, Jim? Schneider dipped the pillow in Metcalf's blood."

"It's possible," Duffy nodded, "but you still haven't got anything."

"That's right, of course," Tony agreed gloomily.

"One of your bimobbes was pretty good," Duffy remarked.

"You mean about the automatic?"

"Yes, that's it. There wasn't a sign of any print."

"Which means that they had been wiped off," said Tony. "But why should Metcalf do that?"

"He didn't can see," Duffy grunted. "Though of course I can see that he might want to get it clean, maybe."

They said little until the cab reached its destination.

"We don't have to get the key from the building superintendent," said Tony. "Metcalf told me he had a key. Occasionally I stay to his brother's funeral and Joe threw up his job last night. By the way, is that fellow Metcalf's brother?"

"Yes—we've checked it. He's his brother all right. Come on, let's get that key," and Duffy led the way to the building superintendent's office. "I want to look around Metcalf's office for a minute," he explained. "You have a duplicate key, haven't you?"

"Yes, But I don't know whether I can let you have it."

"Sure!" Duffy demanded. "Do you want me to get a search warrant?"

"No, but isn't Dr. Metcalf's brother upstairs?"

"He's supposed to be out of town. You can come with us, if you're suspicious."

"All right!" and the superintendent turned to a little safe set in the wall of his office, twirled the combination and swung open the door. Inside was a series of books from each of which hung a key.

"Who else knows the combination of the safe?" Duffy asked.

"Mr. Schneider has a memo of it. In case anything should happen to me, the superintendent answered as he took a key from one of the books, closed the door and gave the combination a spin.

"You always keep the safe locked?"

"Always."

"All right, come on," said Duffy and led the way to the elevators. "Now I want you to wait here," he went on to the superintendent. "Mr. Bigelow and I are going inside for a moment. Come along, Tony," and he crossed the room to the inner office and closed the door behind them. "I don't want him telling Schneider about this," he explained. "There is a nice point about the keys, wasn't there? How go about and see what you can find?"

Tony dropped to his knees on the floor beside which covered the floor. "There's a tiny hole here," he said, pointing to it, just beside the office chair.

"Might also be a moth hole," the detective remarked.

"It isn't," said Tony wheeled the chair aside and turned back the rug. In the hardwood floorline was another hole.

"Well find a bullet at the bottom of it," Duffy suggested.

"Better leave it," said Duffy. "Put the rug back and we'll get back to headquarters. You can tell me what it means on the way."

Tony replaced the rug, pushed the chair back where it was and followed Duffy out. The superintendent looked at them curiously. They had been gone scarcely two minutes.

When they were in the taxi again Duffy asked, "What made you think that bullet hole would be there?"

And Tony told Duffy of his conversation with Schneider. The homicide squad ace listened intently, evidently impressed, but at the end he shook his head.

"It still isn't evidence, Tony," he said, "interesting, but there's no proof that Schneider fired it. Metcalf might have fired it himself, just to see if his pistol was working."

"But remember, Jim," Tony said quietly, "there was only one shell on the floor. Somebody must have picked up the other one."

That's true," Duffy agreed. "Getting warm again — but not warm enough. There's nothing to show that Schneider picked it up . . . automatic!"

"I can and will. But he'll probably let himself be born in his before he'll confess giving it to Schneider. Remember Schneider is his lawyer, he's the only thing that stands between him and the chair."

Duffy got out and hurried into his office then Tony taxied toward the Waldorf.

It was a few minutes before two o'clock Monday afternoon when Tony Bigelow, accompanied by an unidentified girl who drew admiring glances from the men on duty, arrived at detective headquarters and inquired for Lieut. James Duffy's office on the second floor. They found Duffy waiting or here. The dictograph was there, too, plugged into a wall socket. On the floor by Duffy's desk was the old sedan on a table in one corner the number six Underwood typewriter. At Duffy's elbow lay the little automatic with its stock carved ivory.

"This is Miss Scott, Jim," said Tony. "Dr. Metcalf's secretary—you remember her. And, Miss Scott this is Lieut. James Duffy."

"Of course I remember Miss Scott," said Duffy, placing a chair for her.

"I brought her along, Jim." Tony explained, "because I wanted her to listen to that record. She is used to the machine—"

"You will be fine!" Duffy broke in. "Come in," he called, as some one tapped at the door.

It was the man from the dictograph company. "I'm not overconcentrate. I've ripped up an amplifier," he said. "put I can't say how it will work or whether it will work at all. It all depends on the record. It can't bring out anything more that is there, can it?" he asked Duffy.

"That's it," said Duffy. "Do your best."

The man went to work.

"It's not been a pleasa," remarked Tony gloomily.

"I'm sorry, too," Duffy agreed. "Remember, I have promised to turn all this stuff over to Metcalf's brother this afternoon. I told him to come here and get it."

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma and 6 other ladies belonging to the Olla, meaning Olve Lits to Serviceme, and tonight at supper she said to pop, I picked up rather an odd individual today, William. He was a big sailor with such a glowing red face you wouldn't believe it, and I might of ignored his thumb on political principals, but the Olla are pledged to give a lift to any poker sailor serviceman who may . . . I stopped for him and he got into the back seat, ma said.

So you mean there was anything odd about him besides his face? pop said, and ma said, Well yes. At first I thought I had never encountered a man with so many freckles because he kept waving out the window so much, but every corner that passed, and calling, Hello, Joe, or Hello, Luke, or Hello Mabel, I noticed that the men were waving back at him with an air of familiarity rather than recognition, so I decided that the sailor was intoxicated, which naturally relieved me of my pledge, so I stopped the car and told the man, I'm afraid you've been drinking and I'm afraid I'll have to ask you to get out.

Did he go peacefully? pop said, and ma said, He made a little fuss, as a matter of fact. It seemed it was impossible to get out gracia and his general liking for his fellow men that made him refuse to accept favors, and he told me that he had never touched liker in his life and that nobody on earth could induce him to begin, and in fact his shipmates had warned him against the missionary because whenever he went out with them he practiced what he called a little of himself preaching against the evils of drink. I felt heartily ashamed of him for his first impressions, and I took him to where he wanted to go and left him. I just shows you how easy it is to be mistaken about people ma said.

How can you be so sure you were mistaken? pop said, and ma said, Because I found the floor of the car I found a half empty bottle of whiskey that must of fallen out of his pocket. So you see I was right, she said.

Pop claiming he didn't see.

Unswept Dust Blamed by Police For Cathedral Murder

Washington, March 3 (AP)—A bit of unswept dust was blamed for Washington police today for the bludgeon-slaying of Catherine Cooper Reardon, 27-year-old librarian at Washington cathedral, the burial place of Woodrow Wilson and other notables.

Held on a murder charge was Julius Fisher, 34, negro handyman arrested in an obscure restaurant after a whirlwind search for the perpetrator of Washington's second sensational killing within a fortnight.

Following police announcement of a confession, Fisher was arraigned before a U.S. commissioner on a first degree murder charge and pleaded not guilty.

Mrs. Edward J. Kelly, chief of police, said Fisher had admitted fatally beating and choking Miss Reardon Wednesday night after he learned she had complained that he had not swept the dust from beneath her desk.

Kelly quoted Fisher as saying he found Miss Reardon at her desk and struck her with a piece of firewood. She ran and he followed her Kelly said, striking again and choking her. Then he dragged her body into a steampipe pit.

She was found clothed only in a slip. She had not been ravished.

Queen Elizabeth Walks Into Club, Surprises Officers

London, March 3 —(CP Cable)— Five Canadians chatting casually in the Churchill Club today were startled when the Queen appeared in a doorway, walked over and talked to them.

Lieut. W. V. Madison of Toronto and Winnipeg said later in describing their surprise: "It was awfully nice of her to introduce us. Otherwise we would have been speechless."

Group Capt. Davoud, O.B.E., of Kingston, Ont., had met the Queen before, at an R.C.A.F. station. Her Majesty recalled the meeting, then helped put the group, four of them graduates of Royal Military College in Kingston, Ont., at ease.

An old copy of a magazine carried by Madison attracted the Queen's attention. By coincidence it contained a photograph of the King and Queen taken during the royal visit to Canada in 1939.

The photograph was taken by Maclean, an amateur, with a week-old camera and was the first he had ever had published. It also showed Davoud in civilian clothes.

R.M.C. graduates in the party were Davoud, Maclean, Maj. Jimmy Eady and Capt. Jack Wickson, both of Toronto. The fifth member was Lieut. G. H. Clawson, also of Toronto.

THREE CHILDREN LOST

Kingston, March 3—(CP)—Police, firemen and volunteers today continued a search for three children missing from their homes here since yesterday afternoon.

The children, Grant Orr, five, Gilbert Way, five, and his sister, Annette, 3, were from near Lakeside property of the Canada Dredge Co. Later police were informed three children were noticed near the Davis tannery, where there are several open sewers.

Gen. Montgomery Completes Tour of Canadian Army

By ALAN RANDAL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

London, March 3 (CP Cable)— Gen. Bernard L. Montgomery, commander of the British group of armies on the western invasion front, has just completed a four-day tour of the Canadian army in Britain.

He is succeeded by Lieut.-Gen. commanding the southeastern command in Britain, the visit was a renewal of friendships with men who will form part of his invasion army.

There were no formal inspections. Gen. Montgomery preferred to describe the tour as "informal meetings." He travelled the English countryside in a jeep usually accompanied by Canadian commanders and senior officers.

He saw Canadian troops in groups of several thousands. In each case the Canadians formed a hollow square and stood at ease as Sir Bernard walked slowly down long lines, chatting here and there with various men.

In typical Monty style, the general climbed into a jeep in the middle of the assembly and drove among the ranks and told the men to keep their chins up.

Lt.-Gen. Kenneth Stuart, acting Canadian army commander, was with Gen. Montgomery during the tour.

U.S. Air Force Fighters Sweep By Day Over Berlin

London, March 3. (AP)—American Air Force fighter planes continued an offensive sweep over Berlin today while the 8th Air Force's heavy bombers, attacking targets in northern Germany, it was learned authoritatively tonight, in the first time that formations of the American air force have flown over the German capital, a frequent target of the R.A.F. There was no indication of early information that the fighter planes over Berlin ought be targets in Berlin, which up to now has been assaulted solely by the R.A.F. night bombers.

(This disclosure may presage a new phase of American bombers over the German capital, until recently considered too distant for British bases for daylight bombing because fighter planes accompanying the American air force had been restricted to cover of flights at first from England.

A round trip to Berlin from the British coast is 800 miles.)

The disclosure came on the heels of other big announcements today.

(—The R.A.F. has developed a 12,000-pound bomb, two tons heavier than block busters previously disclosed, and it is using it on special targets.

2.—The American heavy bombers, sweeping deep into Germany in targets in daylight day, concentrated on undisclosed objectives in the northwest part of the Reich while mediums were slashing at German airfields and targets.

WEIGHED OVER 600 POUNDS

Ann Arbor, Mich., March 3 (AP)—Medusze Langevin, described by hospital attendants as weighing more than 600 pounds, died today at the University of Michigan hospital of acute cardiac dilation. He was 39 years old and lived in Munising, Mich. Langevin was admitted to the hospital on March 1.

HER SCORE—21 DEAD NAZIS

This 19-year-old girl, Vera Kritzman, is leader of the Yugoslav women Partisans. Here she poses beside a picture of her commander, Gen. Josip Broz (Tito). Her score is 21 dead Nazis to date. At the moment she is in Bari, Italy, training women veterans of guerilla fighting.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, March 3 —(CP)—An index advance of .31 to a new high for the year was posted by Toronto industrials in the early session and other groups weakened moderately. Trading proceeded at normal tempo and turnover for the first three hours was 336,000 shares.

The gold group had the widest set-back. San Antonio, Malartic and Sullivan dropped .10 each, Quemston, Hesitle and Sylvanite were down five cents or more. In the base metals Hudson Bay was heavy at .50, down a full point and Sherritt Gordon weakened three cents to $2 30. Nickel gained the minimum fraction.

Home, Calgary and Edmonton, Foothills, Dominion Steel, Howard Royalite were all stronger Western Oils.

Utilities were a bit softer and other industrial groups showed a mixed picture. Steel of Canada "A" and C.P.R. posted minor losses. Canadian Locomotive gained 1 1-4 to 41 1-2.

WALL STREET

New York, March 3 —(AP)— Selectivity continued to be dominant today's market and, while favorites managed to show fractional gains, several touching peaks for the year or longer, indifference was the rule for most issues.

Actual and potential dividends and earnings continued to be the principal investment argument. Both buyers and sellers, however, inclined to proceed cautiously pending international developments and business moves by Finland and other Axis satellites.

Paramount Pictures and General Motors registered highs for 1944. Canadian stocks were firm with Canadian Pacific and Dome Mines up small fractions and Distillers Seagrams down a fraction.

HOGS

Toronto, March 3 —(CP)— Prices were unchanged at Thursday's level.

Dressed weight: Barrie, London, Stratford $17 delivered, Hamilton $17.25 delivered, Hull $16.50 delivered.

Weekly Livestock Report

Toronto, March 3 —(CP)—Prices were down 15 to 25 cents on choice steers at cattle trade in the livestock market here this week and weak on other kinds except cows and fed yearlings which were steady. Calves, lambs and sheep were unchanged.

There were about 700 head of cattle sold at the close or a dreary week. Top weighty steers were $14 and choice heifers $13.50. Butcher steers sold at $10 to $12.50 and heifers at $10 to $12.50 with a few at $12.50. Fed yearlings were $13 to $13.50. Butcher cows sold for $9 to $9 with canners and cutters at $5 to $7. Bulls were from $8 for light bolognas up to $9.50 for good butchers. A few stockers were sold at $8.50 to $10.50. Calvers and springers were steady at from $90 to $120 each according to quality.

Calves sold at $16 to $17 for choice with common lights downward to $10. Bulk of vealers sold between $14 and $16.50 cwt.

Lambs were steady to 50 cents lower at the week's opening. Bulk of lambs on down on German targets with enormous destructive effects, the Air Ministry disclosed tonight.

The largest previously-announced bomb used by the R.A.F. was a four-lomner.

This giant R.A.F. weapon of destruction was invented by British scientists for attacks on special targets.

"It's destructive effect on 'big' factory is already proved to be enormous", the Air Ministry said. "A few of these bombs brought down the greater part of the very large Dortmund-Ems Canal Engine works at Limegoe on the night of Feb. 8."

The gigantic missile was carried in the bellies of Lancaster bombers which attacked a German aircraft factory at Albersh, near northern France, last night.

Night photographs showed the 12,000-pounders hit the factory "fair and square," the announcement continued.

Death Sentence Passed on Four

Algiers, March 2 —(AP)— The French concentration camp torture ring in Algiers received death sentences passed on four defendants today.

Two others were sentenced to penal servitude for terms of 10 years and two to 20 years. One was acquitted. The eleven had been charged with treason or complicity in crimes at a Vichy camp for Foreign Legion men while acting as guards.

The four sentenced to death were Sgt. Maj. Finidori and Lt. Xavier Santucci, both Corsicans, Sgt. Maj. Raphael Jimenez, a Frenchman, and Otto Riepd, a German.

Economic Problems Of Liberated Area Make Progress

Naples, March 2. (AP)—Progress toward settlement of the economic problems of the liberated part of Italy was reported today, six months after the signing of the armistice ended the official official of the Allied Control Commission by Premier Marshal Pietro Badoglio Alexander.

Food supplies are being built up, transportation organized and roads mended, the officials reported, but the whole market remained a pressing problem.

6-Ton Bombs Used By Allied Airmen On Nazi Targets

London, March 2. (CP)—Bombs weighing 12,000 pounds, now are crashing down on German targets with enormous destructive effects, the Air Ministry disclosed tonight.

The largest previously-announced bomb used by the R.A.F. was a four-lomner.

ARMED SERVICES SAVED APPLE CROP

Halifax, March 3 —(CP)—Members of Canada's armed forces were credited today with saving Nova Scotia's barrels apple crop in 1943.

John A. McDonald, minister of agriculture for Nova, Scotia, said in an interview that 1,200 members of the Canadian army and navy contributed 32,000 man days in harvesting last season's crop in the province at a time when farm labour was at a critical stage. He said by far the greatest part of this labor was devoted to picking and packing apples and "I can only say that these farm-duty workers from the army and navy saved the apple crop—the largest since 1930."

ENSIGN FRITZ TOLDT DIES AS GERMAN FIGHTER PILOT.

Stockholm, March 3. (AP)—Ensign Fritz Toldt, Volkischer Beobachter, said today that Germany has lost more air force pilots during the war than army and navy combined. Toldt, a member of the Mannheim district of the Nazi party, had died as a German fighter pilot. The announcement gave no details.

One of Quads Born on Monday Dies During Night

Hearney, Derbyshire, England, March 2 (CP)—Youngest of quadruplets born Monday to 33-year-old Nora Clarke, wife of a sergeant in the British Auxiliary Territorial Service, died during the night.

The child, named Macdonald, previously suffered from a cold and his condition was the cause of some anxiety, but only last night he was reported showing signs of progress.

Nora was reported "not too well" this morning. Her mother, Mrs. Ellen Carpenter, said Mrs. Clarke's soldier husband had visited and the father of the quads had visited the Carpenter home for a few hours Thursday night.

Both Mrs. Carpenter and Miss Edith Mathews, nursing home superintendent, said the father of the babies is Ellard Clarke, William Thompson of Pittsburgh, Pa.

Macdonald, who weighed three pounds, was the weakest of the quads at birth, and doctors had been giving him small doses of brandy in addition to his regular diet of sterilized cow's milk and glucose. A matron of the nursing home said the babies had been taken said a hemorrhage was the immediate cause of death.

The three surviving children were reported doing well.

Mother Optimistic,

A few hours before Macdonald's death Nora had chatted optimistically to an interviewer of her plans for the babies and had said she eventually marrying the American soldier identified as their father.

Miss Mathews said the Quads' father "was married about two years ago to America and they had no children," but added:

"I understand he has seen his commanding officer about the quads and I'm hoping something will be made to enable us to get married some time in the future."

She commented that "everyone in Heanor knows I'm single and it would be foolish for me to pretend I'm not. I've never claimed to be married."

Reported in Seclusion.

In Pittsburgh the wife of Staff Sgt. William Thompson was reported in seclusion last night and her mother Mr. Mary Lemmond was quoted as saying the family had "no definite proof" he was the father of the Heanor quads.

"We are Catholics and it is against our religion to divorce," she said.

Advices from Washington, meanwhile, quoted a United States War Department spokesman as saying the babies would be eligible for dependency payments if their father is an American soldier and acknowledges them as his children.

The monthly payment is $30 for the first child and $20 for each additional child.

Wallbridge

Wallbridge — The World's Day of Prayer services for Wallbridge W.M.S. was held at the home of Mr. W. H. Nobes. Due to sickness in the community the attendance was not as large as had been hoped. Mrs. A. Latta, Group Leader, had charge of the program which was carried out as given in the Missionary Monthly. She was assisted by Mrs. W. Badgley, Mrs. R. F. Elliott and Mrs. J. N. Chisholm who led in prayer. Mrs. A. Clare rendered a solo with Mrs. R. Lane as pianist. The devotional address was given by Mrs. R. F. Elliott, the theme being "And the Lord Wrought that there was no Intercession."

The service closed by singing The National Anthem and prayer. All felt that the service was of great benefit.

Italian Labor Leaders Intend To Stage Strike

Naples, March 3 (AP)—Italian labor leaders advised Allied authorities today of their intention to go ahead with a 24-minute "strike" tomorrow in defiance of an official demand that it be called off.

The strike will be called as a protest against Prime Minister Churchill's recent acknowledgment of the government of Premier Badoglio.

One labor leader said that if the labor leaders go ahead with their plans for the protest strike it would mean their arrest.

Allied authorities pointed out that strikes in war zones are prohibited by proclamation of the Allied military government.

Out of the early-morning mist laying over the water, a blunt, grey-painted landing craft's stem pushed its way silently, grating on the beach pebbles. Before the wash has had a chance to subside, the hinged ramp forming the front of the boat lowers with a roar of chains and tackle, and a horde of grim, efficient infantrymen are disgorged, still other beach landing is under way. The versatile infantrymen of this war have taken even to the sea in their pursuit of the enemy. They travel to enemy shores in landing craft of many sizes, each adapted for a particular use. Smaller types of these craft carry only personnel. Others carry light tanks, jeeps and small cannon; still other ones nestle heavy tanks, supplies, heavy cannon, ammunition, and the like of small freighters and are ocean-going. Others are carried on the decks of troop transports and launched as needed.

Many Cases of Pin Worms Are Not Suspected.

A surprising number of children and adults suffer with pin worms but because the effects are not dangerous to life little attention is paid to it.

Many cases are not suspected until the pests or child scratches the little worm at or near the anus where congregate at the lower bowel. A recent survey gives the information that one in every three children and adults have pin worms whether they know it or not. It is thought that the slow crowding of people together in these days of industrial activity is responsible for an increase in the number of cases.

While some cases are detected by finding the little worms on the body or in the stool where they look like tiny pieces of white bread, a more reliable means is by microscopic finding of the eggs obtained by swabbing the skin around the anus or bowel opening.

The greater number of eggs are found in the morning immediately after the patient has risen and before bathing or going to the toilet.

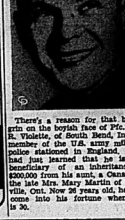
When the tiny worm is not seen, or there is microscopic examination has been made the usual symptoms may cause the patient to suspect by suspect pinworms. There is itching at the anus, worse at night, disturbed sleep; extreme irritability; burning pain; feeling of fullness in the rectum, as if the bowels wanted to move; frequent desire to pass urine; restlessness; lack of appetite and thin blood.

Among the various drugs recommended to remove pinworms are turpentine, santonin, aloes, methylene-blue, onions or garlic; mercury ointment, carbolated vaseline, epsom salts, and other purgatives.

The most popular method of treatment is enemas of an infusion of quassia chips. Two ounces of quassia chips are placed in a quart of water and the water boiled down to a pint. The quassia chips are strained out and the water used as an enema. This is repeated every morning for a week.

A less troublesome method of treatment is by getting violet tablets. The dose is 3-20 grain for each apparent year. This dose is divided into two or three portions and administered one hour before meals. Older children and adults are given 1-2 grain three times daily for eight days, a rest period of one week, and then daily treatment for another eight days. Gentian violet is not given to patients with severe heart, liver or kidney disease.

COURSE HE SMILES



There's a reason for that broad grin on the boyish face of Pfc. Ben R. Violette, of South Bend, Ind., a member of the U.S. army military police stationed in England. Ben had just learned that he is the beneficiary and sole inheritance of $500,000 from his aunt, a Canadian, the late Mrs. Mary Martin of Niagara ville, Ont. Now 26 years old, he will come into his fortune when he is 30.

RAWDON

Special Service Marks Day of Prayer At Mount Pleasant

Rawdon—The World Day of Prayer was held in Mount Pleasant United Church on Friday afternoon with a small number in attendance.

The pastor presided and Mrs. John Holmes played quiet music. The theme was based on "And the Lord wondered that there was no intercessor".

Mrs. T. F. Townsend, president of the W.M.S., Mrs. Percy MacMullen, vice president and Miss Gladys Summers in charge of the opening devotional periods.

The pastor based his thoughts on the fellowship of the world through prayer and said "We can put Christ first and try to realize the suffering and hardship of all of the unfortunate people that we have been praying for in this particular service, the great land of China with its 400 million people, India and her underprivileged masses, the peoples of Africa and Europe and all of all lands."

Mrs. Clifford Clancy, Welman's, presided over gold-intercession for the refining of the silver. Mrs. Leland and Mrs. Carl Clancy, Welman's was in charge of a Litany of Praise and Thanksgiving.

Mrs. Edgar McKeown sang "Prayer is the Key to Heaven".

Mrs. Sid Demorest and Miss Murlie Hiss gathered the offering which amounted to $1.08 which will be forwarded to the inter-board committee to be used in Christian literature in all lands. In 1943 the offerings pushed it to $10,000 and the full list of where that money was used appeared on the leaflets.

News Briefs.

Mr. and Mrs. James Groves and family, River Valley, moved to their new home at Mount Pleasant last week.

Mr. Jack Sharp, Smithfield, spent several days last week visiting friends in this district.

Mr. Allan Donnell, a former editor of the Stirling News-Argus, underwent an operation in Ottawa hospital last week.

LAC. Percy White, Brantford, spent the weekend with his parents.

The fire on Sunday evening, which destroyed the unoccupied house of Mr. Dewey on the town line, was viewed for miles and several folks journeyed to the scene of the fire. It was most fortunate that no one was residing here as Mr. and Mrs. Dewey had recently moved to their new home at Campbellford.

Miss Rena Cole, Campbellford, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Linn.

Rawdon circuit contributed $60 for relief for the starving people of China and India.

The fourth line road was blocked for two days last week, not with snow but a house. Mr./C. Gay moved the bungalow from the Sharp farm on the fourth concession with the assistance of several men and two tractors. All was merry as a marriage bell when they started off. However, when the travelling equipage reached the railroad hill they became stuck and stayed in the centre of the road for almost two days, the result being a detour on both sides and some folks found it quite an inconvenience as it meant several extra miles. Despite the "Detour" signs at Wallace White's corners and considering that there was a light snowfall that morning, folks wondered if new banks had filled the hill. The house was soon moved to its new home on the 2nd concession.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Pudboro, attended the sale on Tuesday and visited friends in Rawdon.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond McConnell and Betty, spent the weekend in Toronto with friends and relatives.

Mrs. Blake McCoy, Mrs. McConnell's daughter-in-law, left Shuffle on McCoy arrived on the hospital train at Kingston early Sunday morning. Wilbur has served four years overseas.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Smith and children, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Smith, Belleville, on Monday evening.

The pastor in charge of the recreation period and all enjoyed a social half hour in various games.

Miss Ana Zuglish, Belleville, spent a recent weekend with Mr. and Mrs. George Watson.

Mr. Thomas McMullen, Bine, had a very successful auction sale on February 29.

DIEPPE RAID VINDICATED

Hamilton, Ont., March 2. — (CP) — Fred Wyncoll, of Jersey Wincoll, veteran of the present war who lost his eyesight in the Dieppe raid of August 1942, said Wednesday at a homecoming party that the raid was justified by the lessons learned and that "all bickings have been silenced on the subject." "Good or bad, learned at Dieppe," he said that 5,000 of us bled, if we had to be, that later lose 500,000 men on the same job", Capt. Wood-cock.

FOOD DROPPED TO SEAL HUNTERS

St. Johns, Newfoundland, March 3.—(CP)—Food and supplies dropped from a plane to a band of Canadian Air Force plane to five seal hunters stranded on the ice off Gooseberry Island in Bonavista Bay since last Friday, two weeks with only a four-day supply of food. Airmen in the heavy plane reported that the stranded men seemed to be all well.

Ten Boys In a Bomber

Nothing So Beautiful in All This World as the Selfless Team Work of a Fortress Crew—Ten Men Welded Into One When on Operational Flight

From a U.S.A.A.F. Flying Fortress station in England, Edward P. Morgan, of The Chicago Daily News, writes: Did you ever really stop to think what lies behind a B 17, Sir Air Force communique saying 700 — or 900 — or 1,000 planes pounded Europe today?

Most instinctively think in terms of American superlatives, of production lines and power and savvy. You probably tell yourself: "Boy! We sure handed it to Adolf today. It won't be long now at this rate."

But the next time you read a communique don't try to memorize the statistics of bombs loads or fighter escorting ranges. Just think of 10 boys in a bomber. Ten young boys with hopes and fears and nerves to signal pain, hair, bones and me, flying off to a rendezvous with flak and fire and dynamite.

There is nothing quite so beautiful in all this world as the selfless team work of a Fortress crew. An infantryman will go through hell for his buddy. A sailor will do the same for his shipmate. But the 10 boys aboard the bomber are 10 brothers. Each sweats and swears and shoots, not for himself but for the whole crew.

An outsider can never quite belong to this brotherhood, the bombardier never knew the tall-gunner existed before the crew was organized six months ago. The radioman from Brooklyn used to make dirty cracks about "Joisey." Then he discovered his pilot came from Paterson, that is the same thing right down the line with the pilot of the crew, it is a closed corporation, but its shares are held by every American and there is no stock on any market worth more.

Harvey Tidwell and I were standing at the bay in the officers' lounge. Lt. Tidwell used to work in the steel mills in Gary, Ind. Now he is bombardier aboard the "Hitt Parade," which, beated the Focke-Wulf factory in Oschersleben.

"You never saw a man like Mac," he said. Harvey was talking about Lt. Edward MacNeil of Rockville Centre, N.Y., who held down the starting job of accountant before he and the A.A.F. discovered he could pilot a Flying Fortress.

Harvey continued: "Mac is one of the greatest guys alive. I don't think he ever took a drink in his life. He doesn't smoke, he doesn't even swear and I have never seen him with a girl. You know what he reminds me of? The Bible. And when he's not doing that he's studying flying. Know what he thinks about? His crew. That's sound silly to you, but when Mac's flying us it's like God Almighty himself and His hand on the controls."

Harvey's quiet, earnest voice kept on. "After we got aboard together we sang songs like we always do when we're starting a mission. That was rough day Mac—God, it was rough. But Mac never said a word. He just flew us through that mess.

"When we got down, I discovered that a 20-mm. shell had exploded inches from Mac's face. He never even mentioned it. I walked over to him on the ground and said, 'Mac, you're a great flier.' The best damn bombardier in the E.T.O. (European Theatre of Operations)." Fairbanks said.

On the ground those boys do not go swaggering around, wearing bright badges of courage. They talk like you would expect them to talk, about food and baseball, women and maybe wine, and certainly about what they are going to do when the war is over and operational missions.

But actually they are living with a nightmare of noise, of rockets' red glare and bombs and flak and shells, and who knows what else, bursting in air. This is the sort of thing that eats their young hearts out: one Fortress crashed and burned in the takeoff the other day. Nobody escaped. Two of the boys aboard were on their 25th mission; there was a dance last night 25th. They are not there, neither was Ralph or Leonard. The intelligence reports read "one B-17 was seen to collide with a FW-190 and explode, etc., etc.

Four nights up where the cold sky is scarred with the smoke and steel of hate 10 men, wedged in a Flying Fortress, crouch at their positions and fight. They are not supermen, they are just ordinary men, accountants and steel workers a few months ago. Now they are welded together and working as one crew.

It was hard to get Sgt. Bill Provonsha, a pilot from Sanders's helper, to talk. He shot down two Nazi planes Tuesday, saved the life of a wounded buddy by crawling his foot in the midst of battle and keep the rest of the crew going by applying oxygen bottles through the flak. Bill did not think he did much. When we finished talking he looked me straight in the eye and said: "Don't forget to mention the rest of the boys of the crew. They were swell."

CONTINUOUS AERIAL ASSAULT IN THIRD DAY

Great Formations Of Heavy Bombers Dot Sky for Miles

Hundreds of Planes Hit France, Reich In Past 24 Hours Without Loss

WEAK OPPOSITION

By W. W. HERCHER
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, March 4 (AP)—Strong forces of heavy American bombers struck at targets in Germany today, United States headquarters announced, and the British radio said great numbers of bombers had reached Berlin.

The raid on Berlin by heavy American bombers, if confirmed, would be the first of the war by the four-engined craft.

The American announcement said that the bombers attending the late Germany for the third straight day were powerfully escorted by fighters.

They crossed the Channel in a tremendous procession and headed toward Germany in clear, cold weather.

London, Mar. 4 (AP)—A daylight aerial assault by vast formations was mounted from scores of American bases in England today, and RAF. Mosquito bombers winged homeward from night assaults on Berlin and western Germany.

The third straight day of almost continuous aerial pursuits was marked by the departure of one of the greatest armadas of bombers ever seen crossing the Straits of Dover. Almost immediately the Hitlerman radio left the air—the usual sign that raiders are driving deep into Nazis' territory—as the great American and Allied armada completed the bright blue sky for miles along the channel.

Coast-dwellers identified some of the craft droning steadily for the continent as American heavy bombers.

Long-range American fighter planes, ranging their first offensive sweep of the war yesterday after Berlin, already had served clear warning to the Germans that their capital and other distant parts of the Reich now are open to heavy daylight blows.

Said Winston Jones:

An early announcement on today's activities said R.A.F. Dominion and Allied medium and fighter bombers struck military objectives in northern France again without a loss.

Later reports on yesterday's daylight operations disclosed that both British and American tactical air forces sent hundreds of medium and light aircraft into northern France without loss, striking at four French airfields among other military targets. These forays, together with Friday night's R.A.F. operations over Berlin, western Germany and enemy waters, all were made without loss.

The daylight sweep of American fighters over Berlin Thursday was regarded as a possible curtain-raiser for daylight assaults against the capital by heavy bombers.

Dispatches from Italy, meanwhile, said heavy bombers spread destruction through the Littorio and Thurstina rail yards in Rome, scene also in the fifth American assault against military objectives in the Eternal City. Crewmen said they caught the rail yards crammed with German supplies.

The sweep by twin-motored lightnings over the German capital was at least 575 miles—served notice on the Germans that one of the major considerations which has prevented American heavy bombers from raiding the capital long ago—a lack of range in escort fighters—has been removed.

Circled Around Capital.

The strong raid the fighters flew to the outskirts of the city and then circled around Berlin for a period at least 15 minutes beyond for a probable record penetration of the Reich. The planes encountered little flak but were unimpeded by Nazi fighters.

Perfect Weather.

Bomber crews were helped by almost perfect visibility in following strict instructions to avoid all risk of damaging Rome's cultural and religious treasures. Medium bombers flew striking Italian targets in dense rail yards.

Operations from Britain yesterday also included U.S. heavy bomber attacks on aircraft and industrial targets in northwest Germany. Six American bombers and 10 fighters were reported missing with Allied fighters shot down eight German planes.

The new "super-super blockbuster", the 12,000-pound bomb which the Air Ministry disclosed yesterday to being dropped occasionally by heavy bombers against special targets, has been nicknamed "Corporal Cockie" by R.A.F. members.

Four Senators Are Appointed By Premier King

Ottawa March 4 (CP)—Appointment of four Senators representing Quebec divisions—Hon. T. D. Bouchard of St. Hyacinthe, Armand Dalpe of Montreal, J. A. Lessard of Quebec and Hon. Cyrille Vaillancourt of Lery—was announced tonight by Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

The appointments reduce to 11 the number of Senate vacancies and left the party standing in the Senate Upper House at 50 Liberals and 25 Conservatives.

Mr. Bouchard, 62, has been Quebec Public Works Minister since 1939 and he must resign to take over his Senate seat. His represents Laurentides division which formerly was represented by the late Senator P. E. Blondin.

Mr. Dalpe, 51, is chairman of Dalpe and Lessard Ltd., and is connected with several other companies besides being a governor of Montreal General Hospital district.

Mr. Lesage, 62, has been assistant General Manager of the Quebec Liquor Commission since 1940 and from 1918 to 1936 was a Quebec city alderman. He represents Golf division in the Senate, succeeding the late Senator C. O. L'Esperance.

Mr. Vallancourt, 51, a member of the Quebec Legislative Council and general manager of La Federation Des Caisses Populaires, represents Kennebec division held formerly by the late Senator Georges Parent.

Senators Blondin and L'Esperance were Conservatives and Senators Prevost and Parent, Liberals.

The retiring Senate Speak vacancies are divided as follows: British Columbia, one; Manitoba, one; Saskatchewan four; Quebec three; and Prince Edward Island one.

CP Air Lines Make Application For Ten Air Routes

Ottawa, March 4 —(CP)— Applications for licences to operate 10 air routes in various parts of Canada have been filed with the Controller of Civil Aviation and the Board of Transport Commissioners by Canadian Pacific Air Lines, the company announced last night.

The proposed routes would provide local and connecting air services to a large number of Canadian communities not at present served by air transport facilities, it said. The air lines already operates many routes in Northern Ontario, Quebec and Canada.

The cities for which licences have been ask include:

Montreal, Trenton, Peterborough, Toronto, Hamilton, St. Catharines, Welland, Niagara Falls, Brantford, Parris, Stratford, Waterloo, Kitchener, Guelph.

Toronto, Sudbury, North Bay, Haileybury, Kirkland Lake, Timmins, Iroquois Junction, Rouyn, Noranda.

EDITIONS LIMITED

New York, March 4. (AP)— The Nazi D.N.B. Agency reported today that the Japanese Press Association has decided to stop publication of all midday and evening editions of daily papers because of a wartime paper shortage.

British Blitz Airmen to Have Names Enshrined in Chapel of Henry VII

By DOUG HOW
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, March 4—(CP)— The airmen who gave their lives in The Battle of Britain will have their names enshrined in the chapel of Henry VII in Westminster Abbey in the place of devotion set aside by the late Tudor king more than four centuries ago.

They, and Allied fellows who have survived, are those of whom Prime Minister Churchill spoke Aug. 20, 1940: "Never in the field of human conflict was so much owed by so many to so few."

The commemoration will await the triumph of what they fought for, but after the war their 375 or more names will stand in illuminated letters on a roll of honor in a "Battle of Britain" memorial which, Westminster Abbey officials said, $180,000) has been subscribed, more than double what was originally sought.

When Lord Trenchard, marshal of the R.A.F., and Air Chief Marshal Lord Dowding, the leaders of the Battle, announced the memorial, donations came from high and low, from Buckingham Palace and the humblest choir boy who sent in six shillings he earned singing in church carols.

GROUND FIGHTING ON ANZIO FRONT IS DEADLOCKED

Three Small German Attacks Against Anzio Beachhead Smashed By 5th Army

WEATHER IS BAD

By RICHARD G. MASSOCK
(AP War Correspondent)

Naples, March 4 —(AP)— Three small German attacks against the beachhead south of Rome were smashed yesterday and Thursday as the Nazis continued to stab weakly at the Allied lines after the failure of their latest all-out offensive, headquarters announced today.

A dusk assault against American troops along the Cisterna-Mortello road Thursday was beaten back by artillery fire and three tanks were destroyed. Two strong enemy patrols probing the American positions Thursday night were dispersed and infiltration attempts by the Hitlerite riflemen also failed.

Unfavorable weather curtailed ground operations as of the 2 p.m. (8 a.m. EST) communique said, with action in the Cassino area limited to "scouting activity and exchanges of fire." The British 8th Army reported no small local actions in the mountains.

Nazi Divisions Used.

Allied officers estimate that at least five Nazi divisions were used in the recent costly offensive against the beachhead. Three German divisions had previously been identified in the assault, but the Allied Command has identified a fourth unit, the mammoth Goering Panzer Division and the Tiger Battalion, which were employed. The Hitler outfits suffered heavy casualties in both of the last two offensives.

Since British and American forces landed south of Rome Jan. 22 they have taken more than 3,500 prisoners, a spokesman said.

The Allied air forces yesterday carried out attacks on German communications in northern Italy and in Rome, including Littorio, Tiburtina, a number of locomotives and carousing shipping and docks. Eleven German aircraft were destroyed for a loss of 10 Allied planes.

One company of German infantry and tanks counter-attacked the mountain village of Pallasceo, southwest of Tortolela on 4th Army front, but was driven off with casualties leaving four prisoners in Allied hands.

On that front Allied patrols maintained contact with the Nazi Hermann, a Canadian patrol capturing a machine-gun in the Orecchio area. Another Canadian patrol ambushed a German party in a night action near Orecchio, killing or wounding Polish patrols also were active.

Spitfires again blasted the Yugoslav railway system with bombs and machine-gunning trains, and Wellington night bombers hit Sibenik and the railway to Zadar at Zara last night.

Yesterday, following the heavy bombers over Rome, attacked the Littorio rail yards in the northern part of the city through which German supplies to the Anzio front and the Cassino area must pass. Fighters went north of Rome to bomb airfields, but a heavy overcast prevented accurate observation of the results.

TURKEY WILL ACT

London, March 4—(CP)— Turkey has accepted an unofficial Bulgarian envoy to submit to the Allies any Bulgarian request for peace, it was learned yesterday in an Istanbul dispatch.

CANADA NEEDS NEW NATIONAL POLICY—BRACKEN

Economic and Social Problems Need Revision Says Conservative Leader

SPEAKS AT OTTAWA

Ottawa, March 4—(CP)—John Bracken, describing the Progressive Conservative party which he leads as a party combining the best of the past has urgent need of a new national policy on economic and social problems.

Such a policy, he told a dinner meeting of the Dominion Progressive Conservative Association, should provide for full development of national resources, recognition of fair reward as the best channel to security and protection for the less fortunate.

Today the association concludes its two-day annual meeting here.

P. D. MacArthur of Horsich, Ont., yesterday was elected president of the association.

MacArthur read a telegram from Premier George Drew of Ontario regretting he was unable to attend because his plane was grounded. Col. Drew said he was certain "This will be a successful year in the party's history."

Mr. Bracken said the major difficulty now faced is one of distribution rather than production. The answer he offered was that the capitalist system be used to give the people the full benefit of what they produce.

Speaking of distribution problems, he expressed a sympathetic word for supporters of the social credit theory which had "a kernel of truth." Its introduction in Alberta had been accompanied by error but it should not be unreasonably expounded because the first attempts at its introduction had been "fumbling."

Says Both Parties Have Failed.

Party delegates assembled from all parts of Canada were told their primary job was to impress on Canadians that the Progressive Conservative party was a new party which combined the best of the old with the best of the new.

The two old parties had failed in recent years to understand the problems of the common people or provide an adequate answer to modern problems, Mr. Bracken said. His recent visits to various parts of Canada had convinced him the Progressive Conservative party was steadily gaining support.

The national leader said he could give no indication when an election would come.

AFTER THE STARLINGS

Hamilton, Ont., March 4—(CP)— Westworth county is going to go all out against starlings. The county council yesterday approved in principle a resolution urging support and leadership of the Ontario Agriculture Department in a campaign to check the birds, which officials describe as a serious menace to grain and fruit crops. All Niagara peninsula counties will be asked to support the resolution.

FINNS EXPECTED TO ANSWER SOON RUSSIA'S TERMS

Passikivi Will Carry Reply to Stockholm in Near Future

CLAUSES REJECTED

Stockholm, March 4—(AP)— The Stockholm Tidningen, quoting private sources, said today that Juho K. Passikivi, who represented Finland in arranging the 1940 peace, would arrive in Stockholm soon with Finlands' answer to Russian peace terms.

The newspaper said the reply would be handed to Madame Alexandra Kollontay, Soviet Ambassador to Sweden, and would ask for clarification of certain of the terms. The reply was said to express a desire to continue the negotiations.

Earlier the Stockholm Dagens Nyheter said the Finnish parliament had rejected the Soviet demands for the interments of German troops now in Finland and restoration of the 1940 boundaries.

Aleksandra Kelanti correspondent said "it is clear the Finnish government has received one of the formations regarding the armistice conditions and had found a way of resuming negotiations.

"Finland's social democratic press now was said to be emphasizing a way out must be found and Finland cannot continue at war with Russia."

Attorney Will Oppose Motion

Washington, March 4 —(AP)— Louis (Lepke) Buchalter, former master of Brooklyn Murder Syndicate, blamed for as many as 63 killings, hopes to win an extension on life today from a court that will so long gag turned him down flatly.

Counsel for the condemned gangster was slated to ask the United States Supreme Court to save him from going to Sing Sing prison's electric chair at 11 p.m., E.D.T. tonight, but Burton A. Thayer, U.S. Assistant District Attorney who obtained the conviction against Buchalter, said he would be on hand to enter "vigorous opposition."

CONVICTED OF MURDER

Detroit, March 4 (AP)—Alex Fox, 18-year-old negro, was convicted of second degree murder late last night by a recorder's court jury in a shooting out of Detroit's race riots last June.

Fox was charged with first degree murder in connection with the death of Dr. Joseph De Horatiis, Detroit physician. The jury returned after about six hours of deliberation.

RED CROSS RETURNS

Toronto, March 4 (CP)—Moderate progress was shown in the national figures released today by the Canadian Red Cross Dominion-wide appeal for $10,000,000 which ended the period in the 1943 campaign. The drive concludes March 25.

Total returns to date have reached $7,243,582 or 73 percent of a $5,000,000 objective.

BRITISH TROOPS CAPTURE POSTS NEARBUTHEADUNG

Drive on Akyab 50 Miles to South Progressing Favorably Says Communique

LARGE AIR SUPPORT

New Delhi, Mar. 4 (AP)—British troops captured Japanese positions north and northeast of Buthedaung in their drive on Akyab, 50 miles to the south, in Burma yesterday and Allied planes assisted strong counter-attacks, today's Allied southeast Asia communique announced.

Strategic and tactical air forces combined in an attack on Port Blair, Andaman Islands base yesterday while tactical fighters and dive bombers gave ground support in the Kaladan, Arakan and Mayu areas.

Large formations of United States fighter-bombers and Liberators dropped explosives among the troop concentrations, and stores in the Buthedaung area were destroyed, the communique said.

West African troops moving down the Kaladin valley east of the Mayu range in a southward drive which has out-flanked Buthedaung, were attacking the town of Apaukwa, the communique said, and were closing in on the rail town of Buthedaung.

African Captures Kaulaw.

Apaukwa, a Kaladin river port, has 31 miles westward of Buthedaung across the Mawdok mountain range. It is eight miles south of Kaulaw, which, the West African troops captured a week ago.

On the Arakan front Japanese forces trapped east of Ngakyedauk pass in the Mayu range were being driven through the Allied lines yesterday and fell back southward. One of the groups was driven back in hand to hand fighting and the other is being followed up and harassed, with half of its original numbers killed.

The Tokyo radio, still claiming a victory in the Buthidaung area fighting, said Japanese troops destroyed the main fuel dump of the 15th Indian division. It said that 7,000 men including the British troops had been killed and that 600 prisoners were taken.

Allied communiques have reported that this division, previously trained by the Japanese, has been relieved.

Lonergan's Trial May Be Delayed

New York, March 4 — (AP)—Any possibility that Wayne Lonergan's trial for manslaughter may be quickly appeared today to be buried beneath legal stumbling blocks.

With less than a month to date back in a jail cell, expressing disappointment over the delay, Assistant District Attorney Frank Hogan said he had not decided whether to press for a new trial immediately.

"Even if we should win tomorrow," he added, it would take at least two weeks for the preliminary maneuvers.

A new jury panel must be drawn and Justice Judge John C. Knox has missed the original talesmen when he rejected them for cause. Yesterday with a statement that Lonergan's attorney, Samuel Leibowitz, had sought to make "a farce and mockery" of proceedings, Knox declared that Leibowitz' "statements, his demeanor and his entire attitude" is the result "of one of the stormiest in the history of New York courts — raised danger that the jurors might not be able to evaluate the facts properly."

The defense might somehow be prejudiced.

Germany Not Hungry Although People Live on Tiresome, Unappetizing Diet

By MEL MOST
(Associated Press Correspondent)

Lisbon, March 4 —(AP)— Unlike the rest of Europe, Germany is not hungry, although the people live on a monotonous, unappetizing diet with many deficiencies.

Everything in Nazi-land is sacrificed to keep up army morale. That is Hitler's No. 1 "secret weapon." German civilians come second, and the Nazi regime is doing its utmost to keep their rations from going below the point which would cause real troublesome. This is done even at the expense of driving the citizens of unoccupied territories to revolt and starvation.

Even at that the German civilian is not starving, but nevertheless he chose not used to it. At badenbaden about the only thing left to gorge on is garden parsley from the United States and our 12 ounces of meat a week against Germans' eight-ounce allowance. Purchasing power always is the envy of the civilians often missed. We had potatoes at almost every meal. Rationing is one of three important everyone's health. A lack of calcium in the diet plays havoc with teeth. hTere is a notable decrease in resistance to disease.

Russians Succeed In Enlarging Gains On Narova River

Fighting in Narva Area 'Exceptionally Embittered' Says Berlin Report

CUT REVAL RAIL LINE

London, March 4 (CP)—Russian troops have smashed their way into the outskirts of the Baltic gateway city of Pskov from the east, Moscow announced today, and unofficial Soviet reports said the Germans have put the torch to the ancient Estonian fortress town of Narva as the Soviets lunge near.

Red army units now are fighting in the environs of Pskov from two directions. Even before yesterday's gains they had plunged to within six miles of the city from the north.

Seventeen miles southeast of Pskov Soviet spearheads fought their way within six miles of the Pskov-Warsaw railway, one of two last escape rail routes open for the Pskov garrison, a Russian bulletin said, and were closing in on the rail town of Dno southeast of Pskov.

African Captures Kaulaw.

Fighting in the Narva area, described the fighting as "exceptionally embittered" and said "the enemy continues to attach extreme importance."

Indicative of the fight the Germans were prepared to put up to hold Pskov, Berlin said that their communications and supply system in northern Russia, covering said "the enemy has transformed dilapidated places situated on the approaches to Pskov into powerful centres of defence and by putting strong artillery and armor defence."

The Russian communique said the Red army troops yesterday brought their lines to a point eight miles northeast of Pskov at Pokhvalochina. Another town engulfed in the Soviet drive was Kunyasy, 11 miles southeast of Pskov and six miles from the Pskov-Warsaw trunk line.

Brig. H. Graham Arrives Home On Sick Leave

Trenton, March 4.—(Special).— Brigadier Howard D., Graham, D.S.O. and Bar, commander of the 1st Brigade of the 1st Canadian Division now fighting in Italy, arrived in Trenton yesterday late Friday night on sick leave. His wife and family were not aware he expected.

Mayor of Trenton, Brigadier Graham went overseas early in the war as major and has received rapid promotion. He is with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment. Relinquishing his command in Italy just prior to Christmas, he was invalided home to hospitalization and now has been sent home to Canada on sick leave.

J. A. O'Sullivan Named Bishop Of Kingston See

Charlottetown, March 4 —(CP)— Most Rev. J. A. O'Sullivan, who has been appointed Roman Catholic Archbishop of Kingston, was consecrated Rt. Rev. Louis J. O'Leary as Bishop of Charlottetown in 1931.

He is a former rector of St. Mary's Cathedral, Hamilton, Ont.

Archbishop O'Sullivan, a native of Hamilton, is 58, and before his appointment was Bishop of Charlottetown in February 1937, was president of St. Augustine's Seminary, Toronto.

The apostolic delegate also announced that Pope Pius has elevated the personal title of archbishop on Most Rev. James Morrison, St. Bishop of Antigonish, N.S., and the Archbishop Emeritus of the Roman Catholic hierarchy in Canada.

Archbishop Morrison was appointed Bishop of Antigonish in 1925, and will retain that post.

Roosevelt Begins 12th Year as Pres.

Washington, Mar. 4 (AP), — Franklin D. Roosevelt stepped into the 12th century in the presidency today feeling fit at 62 after eleven phlebo-cancerous years behind the domestic and international upheavals. He began his 12th year in the White House facing momentous decisions on which history in part may depend his political future.

At home he is confronted by a Congress in which a rough-shod over his tax bill veto and has been talking back on other issues.

Abroad, he has many fronts in the fire, both militarily and diplomatic, stemming from the greatest war in history.

His personal physician, Admiral Ross T. McIntyre, navy surgeon-general, declared as in good shape physically, considering his long years in office and his heavier attack of influenza.

Last night he and Mrs. Roosevelt were hosts at a cabinet dinner, an annual affair preceding each presidential inauguration, March 4, 1933. His record-breaking third term has been in progress since his first on January 20th.

Tomorrow Mr. Roosevelt will stand for a fourth term nomination in a Democratic mass meeting. Spokesmen say will surely be answered in the affirmative at convention time, although they admit no talking one way or the other has come from the President himself.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

COLEMAN ST. HOME DAMAGED BY FIRE

Fire starting in an upstairs apartment around the kitchen stove supporting the chimney was responsible for a blaze which caused approximately $300 damage, to the residence owned by Mrs. Delilah Ryland, 158 Coleman street, at mid-morning Saturday. Firemen brought the blaze under control in less than half an hour before it was brought under control. The blaze was confined to the upstairs.

Three or four separate apartments are contained in the residence, each with stoves/gas running into the same chimney. This is believed to have been the cause of the blaze according to Fire Chief William Lynch. Damage was entirely as the result of fire and furniture being saved from water damage by firemen covering it with tarpaulins.

J. D. Hayes Turns Over $500 Bond To Red Cross

Employees of the Laura Secord Company in Toronto, through the president of the organization, Mr. John D. Hayes, formerly of this city, have presented a $500 bond to the Canadian Red Cross. The bond, purchased by the employees was presented to Mr. Hayes, who asked permission to turn it over to the Red Cross. Mr. Hayes turned the bond over to Dr. F. W. Routley, national commissioner for the Red Cross at a "family dinner party" held recently at a Toronto hotel. Mr. John Hayes is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Hayes, 27 Catherine Street, Belleville.

Charge Dismissed Against F. Duby

A charge of the wilful destruction of property was dismissed against Frank Duby of city police court before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd on Friday afternoon. Duby, who was charged at the Graham Dried Foods Company on Pinnacle Street, was alleged to have tossed bolts into a vegetable cutting machine. However, fellow employees working on the same shift in Duby testified, that it was impossible for the accused man to have committed the act as he was not in the vicinity of where the alleged act was completed.

Prosecution entered the damaged knives as evidence, but Magistrate Lloyd dismissed the matter commenting there was not sufficient evidence adduced to warrant a conviction.

The War Today—Flight of Fighters to Berlin Hint Of Things To Come for Germany

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

The unprecedented flight by a formation of American fighting planes from their British base to Berlin and return, a distance of more than 1,100 miles demonstrated that Allied heavy bombers could receive greatly increased fighter protection, thereby vastly augmenting Allied striking power. It meant, too, that they are prepared to hunt greater fighter strength against Hitler's rapidly weakening force in battles of the sky.

This news was driven home by disclosure the R. A. F. now is using 12,000-pound bombs against the Germans, the largest previously announced bomb in use was 8,000 pounds.

Did you ever see an 8,000 pound bomb—a "blockbuster"—in the belly of a heavy bomber? Even the members of the crew are afraid of such monsters with awe. You feel as though you're standing on the edge of eternity when you look at it.

As one read of these two developments, it was almost inevitable that there should be the forecast made last Tuesday in the House of Commons by Air Minister Sir Archibald Sinclair. He said:

"There lies before us now clearly established the definitive prize of air supremacy—a talisman that can paralyze German war industry and war transport."

Sir Archibald also said Britain's defences are prepared for heavier German air raids, and added: "It may well be that Hitler's gang will look back on the period between the end of March and June as the period of the decisive stages of the war."

We may indeed be close to the climax of the great battle for air supremacy over Europe. The Allies have superiority already, but enough superiority is an essential preliminary to the kind of invasion which they are preparing.

Make no mistake about it, invasion is being laid to perform. Prime Minister Churchill said the other day that four-fifths of Germany's fighter power now is in the West to ward off the Anglo-American onslaught.

We are in the midst of the most gigantic effort that the world ever has known. It's something that maybe stands four-square, and will never before have seen.

Eire Suffering From War Nerves After Incident

By ALAN RANDAL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, March 4.—(CP)—Canadians There are indications that Eire is suffering from war nerves despite her attempts to keep out of the world wards to preserve her neutrality.

It is reported in Ireland within a few wild shots fired 10 days ago by a trigger-happy Irish soldier which crossed the border from Ulster into Eire brought an attack of the invasion jitters.

No news of this matter has come from Eire authorities but the Irish Daily Express reported the alarm is only now subsiding and travellers who related that the Eire army was ordered to a five-day "standing to" after the border incident. Troops manned forts, mined bridges, and were stationed at machine-gun posts. Local volunteers were called out.

Eire, according to the reports of the travellers, became a great rumor-factory, particularly in Dublin, where stories grew to such an extent that a week ago there were reports: "The Allies are presented an ultimatum . . . the Allies want ports and other facilities."

President de Valera in a speech on Ireland denied the existence of such rumors and said there was no justification for public uneasiness, although he added:

"The danger becomes greater as the theatre of war comes closer to our direction and the efforts of the belligerents against each other exhibit a climax . . . At any moment this war may come upon us and we must be forced to defend our rights and our freedom with our lives."

Sixth Eire soldier to be apparently allowed no word of the rumors or Belgian-Axis broadcasts, but who acclaim President de Valera's Cavan speech a Dublin source advised The Canadian Press in London that he was not for accounts of the speech and headings as they appeared in Eire press.

London —(CP)— Group Capt. Frank Whittle, inventor of the jet propelled airplane, has been elected a fellow of the Royal Aeronautical Society.

Revised Program Will Feature Stage Show at Carnival

The third night of the Argyll Light Infantry Carnival brought out more people than on either of the two previous nights as, close to eight hundred came to see the stage show and participate in the various games of skill and chance. As upon the first two nights, five $5 bills were given to the holders of the lucky door prize tickets, making a total of fifteen winners throughout the run of the carnival so far. Five more five dollar bills will be given out on the last night.

Preparations are being made in the Armouries this morning for a capacity crowd for the last night. Several alterations have been found necessary to accommodate the large crowd expected tonight, and the promise of a gala night has been made by Pipe Major Donnan and the general chairman of the carnival committee, Captain Orliff A. Lloyd. All men and women in uniform will be admitted free of charge for the stage show and other activities and entertainments.

The Cinderella dance this evening will be presented in new costumes and many changes in program for the final night's performance. Mr. Gordon announced this morning that the whole program has been revised and will be a different show than that seen on either of the previous three nights.

No More Dunkirks Says Home Secretary Morrison

Sheffield, England, March 4—(CP)—Reuters)—Home Secretary Morrison said last night that there will be no more Dunkerques.

"This time there will be no mistake about the outcome," he said in a speech. "We mean to get into Europe, and to get at Germany, to take the German Army by the throat and shake the life out of it.

"We mean to be for good and all with the German general staff the German Military Tradition; the German lust for power and the German habit of aggression."

The home secretary said Britain's opposition British soldier in all wars has won a historic reputation for his ability to hang on, as he has done for the last four years, and then when the moment has arrived to hurl himself to leap to the attack with full force."

The recent German raids on London, though not comparable with the German attempts to annihilate it, had been quite bad enough, he said. "Some 20,000 people have been killed by the German air attacks and 26,000 seriously injured. Of this the British civilians have been killed by bombs and 163,076 have been injured."

Father of Quads Says He Will Stick To New Family

London, Mar. 4 (AP)—Red haired Staff Sgt. William Thompson Jr., 26 year old United States soldier from Pittsburgh, Pa., announced publicist last night that he was the father of the quintuplets born to Mrs. Edith and Norah Carpenter, an English girl, whom he married a year ago always. "I stick together and do all we can for each other," he said, "and we respect each other and are not ashamed."

"Norah and I are not married, but we hope to be after the divorce. She has had written his wife in Pittsburgh, Pa., and asked her to agree for a divorce.

"My wife must understand it was all a mistake and that our marriage never occurred soon after I returned to the army. I have had thoughtless under the stress of wartime existence," Thompson said.

"I think my wife will understand."

Youngest Baby Dies.

Thompson said he wanted to register the babies in his name and "support them and their mother every child day onward. He learned only after he had come to London to make his announcement that the quintuplets had been born without official connection. He handed out a written statement which he had typed for him, but which he said was wholly his own.

Assisted by army officers, he answered a few questions, haltingly but determinedly. He said he met he and the mother of the babies in Pittsburgh, where from the limelight into which they had been thrust, met intermittently with the birth of the quadruplets.

"I hope Norah and I will be left alone now that we can continue work out our problems and decide what is best for everybody," he said so that : may be able honestly to go work out my problem with my wife."

Describes Romance.

The first thought of Norah Carpenter at Hessler in Derbyshire when she heard of the death of baby Macdonald" today was that Thompson would be released immediately.

Jumping up in bed, her shoulders in a pink jacket, she told of having met Thompson in a dance hall on Dec. 16, 1942, "the first day he was allowed out of camp after his arrival in England."

"At first he talked about his wife and child," she said, "but I tried to break it up on account of her, and then we got to like each other. She said no, because of her relations.

She thought a while, and then turned up her nose.

"I love Red," she said.

Sgt. Thompson came to London to consult with his army superiors after having paid a brief visit to Hessler last night. He saw Norah and stayed with her parents until early this morning.

EXPECT THRONE SPEECH DEBATE TO LAST WEEK

Ten Bills Given Third Reading, One Being to Set-up Planning Commission

MAY RAISE SUBSIDY

Toronto, March 4 —(CP)— The Ontario Legislature went into its second week-end sitting today of the new session today with the end of the Throne speech debate in sight and with indications that it will continue all next week at least.

The debate has been proceeding at a fair pace but not as fast as it might because of the heavy volume of legislation. Many measures have already been given third reading, 10 of them yesterday, including one to set-up Ontario's new department of planning and development as recommended in the province's post-war plans.

The House has already heard three C. C. F. opposition speakers including Leader J. S. Joliffe, and indications are that the C. C. F. plan at least another nine speeches.

Yesterday members heard Agriculture Minister T. L. Kennedy warn that the high cost of feed and low cost of sugar is anticipated this year. The speech praised the sugar beet growers of Ontario and Eastern Canada.

The Minister was speaking during second reading of his bill to increase the Ontario sugar beet subsidy from 56 cents to $1.56 a hundredweight for the year ending March 31, 1945, which was given second reading.

C.C.F. Amendment Approved.

A C.C.F. amendment sponsored by William Dennison (C.C.F.-Toronto St. David) was accepted by the government in the House yesterday during committee consideration of amendments to the highway improvement Act. Mr. Dennison's amendment would prevent members of the legislature from sitting as members of municipal boards of commissions. He believed it would "prevent some local politics from creeping up." The bill was reported.

Mrs. Rae Luscock (CCF-Toronto-Bracondale) one of two women members of the legislature—the other is Agnes Macphail (CCF-York East)—entered the debate yesterday for their maiden speeches. Mrs. Luscock said the government's proposals to set up a provincial apprenticeship qualification certificates amendments to the apprenticeship Act and provide for compulsory qualification certificates amendments in all trades asking to be brought under the apprenticeship plan.

Mrs. Luscock did not see why training people should have to buy certificates.

Opposition leader Joliffe was critical of the power given by the bill and warned it might land the Ontario Labour Relations Board in "trouble." The measure was referred.

Attorney-General Blackwell introduced a bill authorizing the publication of advertising discriminatory against race, creed. Both were given first reading.

Making Constitution.

Agriculture Minister Kennedy said, in speaking on second reading of the sugar subsidy bill, he hoped that Canadian sugar-beet farmers would be encouraged to protect consumption to the war effort.

He said that was one of the things the Dominion Government was raising the subsidy. The other reason was that the Dominion government had declined to give any assistance to the sugar beet industry.

In explaining his bill, Mr. Kennedy said the government had been confronted with the fact that the industries at Chatham and Wallaceburg areas of Ontario and in Manitoba and Northern Alberta. The price of sugar was met by the Dominion government at $5.50 a hundred weight at Montreal and Toronto, which gave Eastern Canada an advantage, due to equalization of the freight rate.

"Alberta and Manitoba have also been able to make a better deal for Japanese land to be working out their beets and harvesting them", he said, "and they have had very considerable item in the growing of beets.

"Thus it came to us that we had to either subsidize the farmers to grow beets or see the industries die", he said.

THREE VESSELS SANK

Ankara, March 4.—(AP)— Two British motor torpedo boats and a small British sailing vessel piled up and sank on the rocks of Turkey's southwestern shore yesterday. "Rightly we believe that wage workers should be treated as chattels in our industrial system . . . We do believe that farmers must be perpetuated in the unfair economic position in which they find themselves."

In extraneous introductory remarks, Mr. Bracken said he wished to thank the association's sub-committee on agriculture for coming out in favor of co-operation.

Co-operation, Mr. Bracken said is the only means by which the city consumer stave off monopolies and help society head off state socialism.

Drill Developer Dies in Italy

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

London, March 4 (CP)—The nurse who treated wounded Allied officers in the British Army, Maj. Lionel Wigram of the Royal Fusiliers, has been killed in Italy, it was announced by George V in 1913.

But his memorial of high torment came with this war when, its ravages: prudently stripped of its elegance, a German bomb which struck the Houses of Parliament more than three years ago, burst down, pierced its wall and left a small, round hole which, in time, what it stands for, will become part of the memorial.

Persons Named Today.

The chapel today is forlorn, unkept, chilly in the winter as all the English winter, its interior is drab and lonely. The wrought-iron Tudor-bear the armorial badges of the sovereigns which fought for the surrender of Calais in the last twenty-year-old Englishman.

In 1941 he was with a British division in the southeast command and started the first battle school. Here he trained many of the now several hundred Canadian officers and non-commissioned officers took the course, training in battle tactics with the use of live ammunition and exercises which had a high realism.

Both the original ideas sprang from Wigram's experimental work in his own drawing room. He was the son of a Sheffield business-man and was in the territorial army. Before the war he was already doing success as a London solicitor and company director.

6-Ton Bombs

Six-ton bombs are dropping on special targets in Germany's capital. From the small bomb of not so long ago, came two-ton bombs, then the world was greatly surprised to hear that the Royal Air Force was using four-tonners. Now the 12,000-pounders have arrived and have already been doing their work of shattering what remains of Berlin.

It is entirely fitting that these huge missiles which carry with them an almost immeasurable explosive power, should visit first of all the city that is at the root of illiterate tyranny and Nazism.

The destructiveness of these messengers of Allied air power can be left to the imagination. The knowledge that these bombs are in use must come to the German militarists as one of the many shocks they have had to take during the present struggle. The German leaders will know what these mean in material loss and in the lowering of German morale.

So far have Allied ingenuity, scientific skill, enterprise and production outstripped the best the enemy can do. Hitler trusted to great deal to his blitzkrieg but he never could have foreseen what this race in air weapons would have meant. He started with a powerful Luftwaffe and with it failed to enable his plan to subject the world. That was one of the stages on the course of the war which mark the overtaking and the passing by the Allies of everything in production and power of weapons Hitler's Germany has achieved or can achieve.

The other day Goering praised the Luftwaffe and said that Germany would answer the raids of the Allies with new inventions. Hitler has tried with recent raids to strengthen the morale of the people and to impress the satellite state but his raids cannot approach the power of a British or an American raid in impressiveness or in destructiveness.

Almost every day there seems new evidence of Allied power. Yesterday the United States air force fighters for the first time in history visited Berlin and they came by day. And so the still-gathering power of the Royal Air Force with its huge squadrons and of the American air strength is made manifest in ruined German cities, industrial plants, communications and failing German production of implements of war.

Unpaid Portion of Income Tax

Those who have income tax payments to make between now and April 30 for might well begin to make out their statements and be prepared, for it's to pay the last minute the result of the computation may bring them considerable surprise and shock, because they will find that they owe considerably more than they thought they owed. Those who have the last date now will have time to make arrangements to have the money ready to pay.

Most people have been figuring on having to pay only about five per cent before the end of April, going on the assumption that the present deduction in the payroll is about 95 per cent, leaving five per cent unpaid. This is true but at present that it must be remembered that last year for the first three months the deductions were at the rate as set forth in the 1942 tables while the rest of the year had been deducted on the 1943 rate. So for the first three months there was a greater amount unpaid after deduction than most taxpayers expect. It is in the first three months of 1943 that the "stickers" is.

So he is a wise taxpayer who as soon as possible learns what he can expect to pay and prepare against that day, April 30th.

Salvation Army Celebrates

Like churches, the Salvation Army has anniversaries. Practically all of these religious organizations have had their roots deep in the past in Belleville. Religious organizations here are busily at work here more than a century ago. The Salvation Army came on the scene here in the year 1884 and in the intervening sixty years has been serving the spiritual needs of a large number of citizens. Today the Army is very much a part of the community life for it has had a large share to do with the upbuilding of the city and the results of the ministry to human needs shows directly in the lives of many who have come within the range of its wide influence and also in the city of today. The benefits it has wrought here are not to be measured nor confined in statistics, for these tell only a small part of the story.

On Sunday, March 5th, at the Citadel, the Belleville corps marks the anniversary of the founding of the "Army" with appropriate ceremonies.

Change in "Tiddly-Winks"

(Ottawa Journal)

It may be that "Mairny Doats" is getting them down, or it may be something else, but at any rate our neighbors across the line have hit upon a new strange device line have hit upon a new strange device for giving customers change for their ration coupons. This new device is in the form of what the Office of Price Administration (War Prices Board) calls "Tiddly-Winks," little red and blue discs. Red stamps are each good for 10 points in the purchase of meats and edible fats; blue stamps for the same number of points in the purchase of processed foods.

When a shopper makes a purchase and presents red ration stamps the merchant will give her ration change—if any is due her—in the form of the red discs, slightly smaller than a dime, and valued at one point each. Similarly "change" for blue stamps will be made with blue tokens, also valid at one point. The O.P.A., which has had some 3,000,000,000 "Tiddly-Winks" put out, is not optimistic over them that one of its officials has burst out into poetry, to wit:

"Something old, something new,
Something red, and something blue."

Just the same, we're not recommending them to Donald Gordon. We've had our experiences in queue lines, but one experience we don't want is to stand in one of them while some woman is fished all the last minute to dig down in the bottom of her handbag for a strayed or stolen "Tiddly-Winks." Moreover, what if the head of the house should come home right after using them in a crap game—and lose? Ugh.

Ready for the Worst

(London Sunday Express)

We go in 1944 to meet awfully big adventures. We go to take the caged beast by the throat and make an end of terror. He warns us that he will fling at us all he can muster. Good. We are ready for his worst. We expect nothing else.

We are a kindly, sentimental folk. But Hitler has turned us into realists. We used to forget and forgive. Germany has changed our mood. We do not forget Warsaw and Rotterdam and Kharkov. We do not forgive Coventry. We also have been rough as well as tough. And this time, for the sake of humanity, we shall be.

A victorious New Year for the cause. And God defend the right. He will.

Fear of the Unknown

(BBC Broadcast)

"Over 1,000 school buildings have been damaged beyond repair. The under-fivers have never seen a banana, never known a life not overhung by fear. 'What's that?' he asked — a six-year-old, looking scared. 'It's the guns,' said his brother. 'Oh,' said the six-year-old, relaxing, 'I thought it was thunder.'"

Britain's Ministry of Food is erecting fifteen grain-drying silos, each with a storage capacity of 5,000 tons. Each silo will be capable of taking grain from road or rail of forty tons an hour. Each will have twelve storage bins of 200 tons capacity, to allow at least one bin to be turned within 24 hours. Railway facilities will provide for a 20-truck loading capacity.

Canadian Scene A Century Ago

There is more than meets the eye in the loading of a pack-horse. The old trappers made a fine art of it. They had to be — for on their knowledge of just how much and how to pack on horse could carry its burden depended the success of their expeditions. Among the best pack-traing hit the trail for the North, Many such caravanes included seventy and more horses. Under the caravanes were packed the provisions and supplies to last the folk in far regions for a year. The telegraph was unknown. Mail could looked forward with the eagerness of lonely people to the coming of the pack train. In each, isolated station were two men who usually did a long term of three years before being relieved. To each pair of these was sent the lone of the mail and the other and it had to do until the pack-train made a return trip the next year.

Hauling of another sort took up clusive.

the time of Westerners engaged in farming. In many localities one out of every five took part of wheat carted to a railhead had to be charged up to hauling charges. The transportation business was far from being the thing it is today. Sometimes the trip took a week and more, time that the settler could ill afford to spend away from home.

Anything that retarded or destroyed the grain crops was a tragedy to the prairie farmers. Wild horses roaming the plains at will were a great menace. There was no fence to keep them off the crops and went—and they did—hog wild. Hog-wheels had a way of losing their cams and breaking down beyond repair. Sometimes the trip took a week and more, time that the settler could ill afford to spend away from home.

Ottawa, March 4.— (CP)—Frederal officials hate to pooncture rosy dreams about the post-war era but sometimes they have to face facts. And one is, they say, that victory after the war does not automatically means "all the cornbeds over the country" and so on will disappear at once.

The Prime Minister, for instance, takes his authority from the War Measures Act which gives him emergency powers to the present end and lapses six months after the war ends. But the powers are that it simply will not be possible to abandon controls in a hurry—perhaps as six months. Supplies will still be limited, and if someone is allowed to bid what he likes for anything in scarce supply there can be no hope of "fair prices." As anything the war might have seen if there had been no price controls.

There's something on the other side, too. The government has said it will place floor prices under agricultural products so that many if there will have to be arrangements for subsidies for those industries rather than make effective by the Prices Board today against under the emergency wartime powers.

Hon. Hamilton Gray Minister Howe announced in the House that Canadian Pacific Airlines would use Northwestern air-route development he mentioned that Canada's Northwest air-field staging route is "the main artery for air traffic between the United States and Alaska, and beyond Alaska to northeastern Asia."

The minister made clear that Canada's interest in developments in other nations in post-war commercial aviation, including Canada's, is that Canadian planes will fly towards the Orient as well as Europe when the war is done, probably passing along the string of Northwestern airfields which the government builds in the 30's.

The new routes will flew regular services through the mountains to Yukon territory never thought they had been possible to use. But the war not intervened there might be Edmonton-Whitehorse air services in operation today.

Old Person's Heart.

It is because the legs give out that old people do not get enough exercise, it must give up their specialties such as basketball, hockey, football, boxing, and other sports. While this is a keen disappointment to them it really does not affect the span of life in that these sports continue—and more, that the settler could ill afford to put up fencing and the ranchers wouldn't do it—there seemed no answer to the problem. However, a life-saver came along in the form of a Herd Law which allowed cattle and horses to rove and made it necessary to have a herdsman in control. It also upheld the farmer in assuring him of compensation for loss occasioned by straying animals between the setting of April and October.

Former German Attache Tells Why He Volunteered Against Nazis, Step Dictated by Conscience

Erich Vermehren, former assistant German military attache at Istanbul, recently made away to the Allied territory and volunteered for military service against the Nazis. In he tells what prompted a confirmed follower of Hitlerism to change his bitter pattern of thought and action.

Written For The Associated Press

By ERICH VERMEHREN

Cairo, March 4.— I am happy at least to be able to do something for Germany, and to join as a volunteer the ranks of those who have declared war against the bitterest enemies of Germany—the National Socialists (Nazis).

What made it most difficult for me to come to this decision was the fact that my step was essentially one dictated by conscience. It was not, however, such an honest political decision, more than a change from party to another.

Both these considerations weighed with me, but perhaps what my action was one that made me a criminal in the eyes of the law of my native land and a dishonorable scoundrel in the hearts of many of my friends.

My political decision, my personal ideas, my recognition of the hopelessness of Germany's situation—these alone could not bear the weight of such a decision.

"My Conscience Put Me Right."

It was only my conscience which could put me in the right, and which could acquit me of any accusation of high reason and treachery towards my Fatherland.

But it is high time that if one loves one's Fatherland so much that one cannot stand by and see all unscrupulous clique running one's country?

That one cannot tolerate a well-nauschaung (world philosophy) which grows like a cancer and destroys everything that is healthy in the body and fosters evil things?

That one cannot stand by and see the glorious name of one's country being dishonored by the wickedness of its present rulers?

That one cannot see its beauty suffering destruction at the irresponsible results of their political greed and unscrupulousness while its blood and treasure are being wasted in the Curse of Germany National Socialism.

The man who loves his Fatherland must be able to distinguish between dedication for what it really is—the curse of Germany.

We are not finished yet with slavery from without but from within our own Germany. The ideals of the enemy we oppose in arms are nearer to our own than those of our own countrymen.

I have most unexpectedly found deep attachment to the decisions of my own conscience on the part of Britain and America. I look forward with great hope for Germany to close co-operation with the Allies.

'Winnie' and 'Pooh' Guard Dover Strait

London, March 4.— (CP)— The Dover Patrol, Britain's "Eelliire Corner" sometimes say, when the big guns screaming across the Channel, "Winnie" and "Pooh" — that's Pooh".

Winnie and Pooh are two giant naval guns which, it has been disclosed, were installed after Prime Minister Churchill's government conference that convoys must continue to sail the English Channel despite the German occupation of the French coast and their heavy-gun bombardment of the English coastal towns.

The first gun, a battleship type, was installed in six weeks and named Winnie after the Prime Minister. The second, says the Admiralty's account of the battle, was named for the man the guns. was named Pooh "by an obvious association of ideas".

These giant guns have a "super-super" charge of cordite and can hurl a shell for six miles. They have been shelled and bombed but without result since the arrival of Winnie and Pooh.

The people of Dover have come to know them well enough to tell the difference in their "barks".

NUGGETS OF KNOWLEDGE

Just before Rome was burned during the reign of Nero the price of wheat is believed to have had a population of about 1,300,000.

Half of the people in Rome at that time were slaves and two-thirds of the rest were paupers supported in idleness by the distribution of free bread.

In the days of Homer the Greeks applied the term "Asia" only to a seaside strip. It was next applied to a strip of coast on Asia Minor, then to all of Asia Minor and finally to the whole continent.

Psalm 91:35 says: "I have seen the wicked in great power, and spreading himself like a green bay tree."

That is the only place the green bay tree occurs in the Bible. Bible scholars differ as to the exact meaning of the Hebrew original so rendered in the King James Version. In the Septuagint translation made about two centuries B.C., this passage in the Psalms is rendered "as the cedars of Lebanon." The editors of the American Revised Version translated it "a green bay tree in its native soil."

Most people in quoting the passage from the handwriting on the wall at Belshazzar's feast say "Thou art weighed in the balance, and found wanting." The exact phrase of Daniel's interpretation in the Bible is, "Thou art weighed in the balance," where the word "tekel" is used in English in the sense of "scales," a weighing device.

George Logan, the father of the Henry Chalot Lodge who recently resigned his seat in the Senate to serve in the armed forces, was a friend of considerable note.

Mr. Webster says it is all right to pronounce "orotile" either "ORO-file" or "FRO-file."

Webster's second pronunciation indicates that the word did not enter English directly from its original Latin source, but carried a while in French. There seems to be no good reason why the French pronunciation should be retained, since the word has been used in English for nearly three hundred years and is thoroughly naturalized.

Many people are under the impression that all appropriations bills must originate in the U. S. House of Representatives. It is customary for such bills to originate in the House, but the Constitution does not so require. Under the Constitution the Senate has the same right to initiate appropriations bills as the House does.

But the Constitution does provide that "all bills for raising revenue shall originate in the House of Representatives; but the Senate may propose or concur with amendments as on other bills."

Immoderately High Heels Cause of Many Foot Ills

Joan Fontaine goes in for wearing comfortable shoes

By HELEN FOLLETT

THERE USED to be a great deal of sobbing done about foot blinding in China. Who were we to criticize? Spoiled heels have caused many deformed feet among the women of Uncle Sam's domain. A survey made some years ago at Iowa State college revealed that the average co-ed students only three had normal feet.

Two hundred girls in physical culture at this college started a campaign, urging students to wear correctly fitted shoes, plenty wide, and preferably moderately high. Each year the percentage of normal feet was more encouraging.

Because of the unnatural pitch of the spine caused by high heels, girls throw back their shoulders in an unnatural degree, developing protruding abdomen. It is impossible for the body to have perfect balance unless the foot has a sure, steady hold on the ground.

Moderately High Heels.

We're not crying down heels that are only moderately high, but those that are slender spikes with bases about the size of a dime. Such heels are responsible for many serious accidents.

Deformed feet are not the only penalty for wearing shoes that do not conform to the shape and outline of the foot. A long list of ills will ruin the shapely contour of the legs, cause the ankles to weaken and the muscles of the thighs to lose tone and elasticity.

The Small Shoe.

Dr. Harold H. Hedrick of the Illinois Association for Crippled Children once announced that many deformities, such as bunions, result from metatarsalgia which, he explained, is caused by wearing too small foot of the Chinese. The sole becomes calloused, toes go into a curve, and the ball of the foot is pushed upward. All because of high heels and shoes that do not either too short or too narrow.

Dr. Hedrick also warns against colds that they refer to as "grue-some twosome." Lets all wear them, and we'll march along the road to better health.

St. Julien Chapter I.O.D.E., Raised $4,785.76 During the Past Year

The Regent, Mrs. Neate, and Executives Re-elected at Annual Meeting

MANY ACTIVITIES

At the annual meeting of St. Julien Chapter, I.O.D.E., held in the past, Mrs. E. J. Neate and her 1943-44 executive were returned to office with the exception of the Standard Bearer and the Educational Secretary. All reports and conveners are standing for the ensuing year.

The Chapter again lived up to their motto "Able and Willing".

Receipts for the year totalled $4,785.76; disbursements $4,005.09. The treasurer's books were audited and found correct.

General monetary donations were made to the following funds: Chinese Russian and Greek Relief, Canadian Institute for the Blind, Sea Cadets, Endowment Fund, Princess of Wales Fund, Navy League, Camp Libraries, Educational Prize, local Service and Educational Work (in Canada and overseas). Total value of unending provided for the Chapter's adopted ship H.M.C.S. "Dauntless" is in excess of $700.00.

Other articles, new clothing and good worn clothing, quilts, afghans, dressings, etc., were dispersed among the following:—Bombed areas of Great Britain, Russian and Polish Relief, Service men at the front, Merchant Navy, Army, Air Force and Merchant Marine.

Magazines and books distributed in great numbers among several camp libraries and hospitals for the services and hospitals in R.C.A.F. Stn. and R.A.F. Stations.

The Prevention of Lockjaw Tetanus

Whenever dirt is present, and injury drives particles of this dirt deep into the flesh, there is danger of lockjaw. The lockjaw germ lives in dirt and grows where there is no air. A shotgun wound, or a puncture with an oily nail, are examples of injuries which may allow tetanus or lockjaw to develop.

Once tetanus occurs, it is a most disease to cure, and but few recoveries have been reported. Hence it is important that everything possible be done to prevent the disorder. Prevention may be brought about in two ways. One way is to use injections of tetanus toxoid, which bring a prolonged immunity to the disease. The other method of prevention is to give an injection of tetanus antitoxin as soon as possible after one has suffered a wound which the physician suspects may be the type which may contain the infection to occur.

According to Doctor Paul Campiche, of the University of Lausanne, Switzerland, the fundamental element of the problem of deciding whether or not to use the anti-toxin is: Is the antitoxin should be given, is whether or not the wound is contaminated with dirt. It is necessary, however, for the physician to question the wounded person carefully in order to determine if there is a possibility of such contamination. For example, a city dweller, such as an electrician, who has been working around his home and who steps on a nail, is not likely to be one who hunts near his farm and therefore receives a small wound. A bookkeeper who punctures his finger doing a little work in the garden or yard, may come in contact with the soil for only a few moments. The farmer, on the day of avoiding the disease. If there is any doubt in the mind of the physician about whether or not the injection should be used, it would appear that the wisest course is to give it.

It is true that certain reactions from the serum may occur, due to sensitivity of the person bitten the patient may have serum sickness or get skin eruptions and swelling of the joints. Such reactions, however, are uncomfortable but not dangerous. On the other hand, tetanus toxoid definitely is likely to prove fatal.

In addition to giving the tetanus toxoid, the wound should be carefully cared for. Bits of dead tissue and any materials in the wound should be removed. After the injuries have been put to sleep with an anesthetic, this can be done if necessary. Then the proper prophylactic substances may be employed.

The "favorite" isn't Juan Fontaine necessarily, in this instance, but rather it refers to the black mantilla. This flattering headdress with our southern neighbors wear whenever in gala toilette, is becoming more and more popular here.

Any one can learn to toss it on becomingly, to accent a beautiful hairdo, and even conceal poor one and the hairdresser, to disguise things a bit when an important evening is to be attended with freshly shampooed and arranged locks.

Would Throw Away His Whole Life For a Year of Happiness

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"You'll probably call me crazy and I'll agree with you, if I want to work as a foreman in a defence plant, because the salary will be double what I had been getting. We had been married ten years and I've been a comfort for whom we had given up many pleasures and ambitious plans, educationally. In the past I met a girl, and that was the end of prudence, even sanity.

"If anyone had told me I would have kicked at another woman's wife I'd have laughed at him. This girl is starving. Her morals are no more genuine than her complexion—but I'm crazy about her. I know she hasn't been faithful to me, because it's not in her nature to be faithful to anyone.

"However, she agrees to marry me if I divorce my wife, and I've argued with my wife to get a divorce, but she's divorce-proof. I've no grounds. I'm terribly unhappy, but in my present frame of mind, I feel

MOST of the the resort frocks that we have seen are of the type that can be worn very nicely later on at home fon town or country. Black crepe rayon makes this useful Nurth or South frock and it is given vivacious appeal through the medium of shell pink at the hem and on the neckline. The pink belt is leather lined. The frock features short sleeves and casual collar.

Announcements for a Hero's Posthumous Baby

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A few days ago I received word that my husband was killed in the service overseas. In two months I am going to have a baby, and we had planned, as you suggested in your column, to send out the birth-announcements on Informals.

Now I am trying to have them printed, with both our names .. Captain and Mrs. John Henry Smith of the Blank Regiment.

Because of the unnatural pitch of the spine caused by high heels, girls throw back their shoulders in an unnatural degree, developing protruding abdomen. It is impossible for the body to have perfect balance unless the foot has a sure, steady hold on the ground.

Moderately High Heels.

We're not crying down heels that are only moderately high, but

Your mother's advice about the Informals is perfect. This will do, with slight change, for you to send your cards to do, make the announcement of your baby's birth. It is based on the great work of missionary doctor and the book written by Ruth Hubble read "The Beloved Physician." A reading entitled the "Quints Broadcast" was read by Norma Hinton and the meeting closed with the singing of Christian Recreation under the leadership of Evelyn Bird and games were held following a delicious lunch, everyone enjoying the evening. Thanks are due those who made the evening a most enjoyable one.

Exposure to the sun is going to be the thing this Summer even for silk frocks. Many of the new ones have back is noted in clother prepared for a city Summer. For actresses, these come with tiny matching jackets, bolero or scarfs.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Soon there is to be a wedding in our family. The bride-to-be has some wedding cake boxes, and we would like to know what is the proper kind of cake to be put in them. I think it should be a dark one .. is this called the bride's cake?

Into these boxes go the pieces of wedding cake, and the dark fruit cake .. the cake which guests are given to take home and dream on." (The bride's cake is the white cake, iced in white, which at the wedding reception is placed before the bride, who cuts the first slice and serves it with her bridegroom. Then the rest of the cake is served to the wedding guests.)

Wrap the small pieces of wedding cake, the dark fruit cake, in squares of waxed paper or white tissue paper, put them into the boxes, and tie the boxes with narrow white ribbon.

BEAUTY By Helen Jameson

Permanent Waves

When a woman has just had a permanent wave and has been beautifully arranged by skilful fingers, she feels very righteous. She has done her duty by herself, she has an impulse to arise and sing "Long may my big head run." A loud and hearty voice. But she has misgivings. It may not survive more than three days in a head. Gradually the silky strands will go stringy. Sag will appear to extend along for a time; then will know that the fly has left the house on some other appointment, is resigned, during the transformation when all the little metal clamps are in place—to look like the old Empress of China.

Fortunately, the business does not now take a day, as it did in the past. You don't have pieces of hair wrapped individually on the head cotton or bits of the shampoo and rinse do not assume the appearance of a floor mop. The permanent waving process is also improved. It has marched a long way since the days of the pioneers subjected to their precious pates to the steaming irons.

Find a smart operator who uses her head. That is not only the one who has her brain, but has found out much for herself—how to wave hair that is like and can how to keep white locks from being discolored, and more besides.

To insist upon a certain machine is a fine idea, but the operator may have found that she gets better results from one than from another. If the hair is long, she will suggest the spiral wind; if it is short, the croquignole, which gives a neater, tighter turn to the ends of the hair. If she suggests the new cold wave, and you fancy you would like to try it, you prove yourself to give an extra hour of your time. It is claimed that this treatment calls the hair closer to the scalp than the wave that is produced by moist heat.

Be honest with your operator. If alone your hair permanent, you have used a dye, bleach or so-called restorer, tell her. She probably will know that you have been experimenting with colorings because of the odor and will just what has been applied. Some dyes do not interfere with the permanent wave, however, others may make plenty of trouble. The genuine Egyptian henna does not interfere with the wave. In henna shampoo, however, the bowls is really a carrying agent for chemicals.

A certain amount of bleaching can go on but, if the shafts have been bleached and dried until they have become brittle, have a test curl. It is the experience of the permanent that disqualifies hair for the hardest bobbie undulations.

Dry hair should be sprayed with brilliantine once a day for several days after the treatment.

KINGSTON JUNIORS BEAT COMBINES BY 20-5 COUNT

Visitors Too Big and Too Fast For Winners of Group in This District

D. PATTERSON INJURED

Stirling, Mar. 4.—In a third period rally that left over 1000 fans practically breathless, the Kingston juniors scored 14 goals and walked out of the Stirling rink with a 20-5 win over the Stirling-Marmora "Combines" here Friday night. The Combines stood up strongly against a heavier Kingston squad in the first two periods when the visitors led 2-2 at the end of the first and 6-3 at the end of the second, but it was the first game of the first round junior O.H.A. playdowns in a best game in-three series with the second game slated for Kingston next Wednesday.

It was not until Doug Patterson, one of the well-known Bastedo-Patterson Combines' front line sustained a fractured arm in the middle period that the Neal-coached Combines fell by the wayside, before the fighting forces of a much heavier Kingston team from the goal-mouth out. Once the lead was turned on in the last frame, however, the Limestoners literally burned rubber into the Combines' ego for their worst defeat since they ended as a juvenile team some four years ago.

Wallis and Metcalfe scored four goals each for the visiting Kingston giants, with Ohlke and Myre getting a trio each. Bastedo, Patterson, Fowler, a pair. The local scoring was divided with Patterson getting two and Fife, Bert Bastedo and Goodchild one each.

Kingston—Goal, Stone; defence, Watts and McCartney; centre, Myre, Wallis, Wallace; wings, Ohlke, McGregor, Fowler, Moore, Metcalfe, Timms and Hall.

Stirling-Marmora "Combines"—Goal, McIntyre; defence, McNichol and Ulman; centre, R. Bastedo; wings, Patterson, Fife, Patterson, Goodchild, Cousins, Whitehead, Fife, Trumble and Lindsay.

Referees—S. Loula and Holway, Belleville.

ALL SIX TEAMS TO SEE ACTION

The most crowded weekend program of the National Hockey League season sends all six teams into action today in home-and-home series which should provide a useful test of Stanley Cup series strength.

The grouping might even be a preview of the Stanley Cup lineup, since Boston Bruins and New York Rangers are slated for the best of series, Rangers renowned hope of a series berth since Lester Patrick's Broadway Blueshirts and Montreal Canadiens and Toronto Maple Leafs, the other two weekend brackets, are logical postlim-ities to the finals. The eight Stanley Cup round, which matches first and second place clubs against fourth, Canadiens now lead the league by an unassailable margin while Leafs are battling for third place with Chicago Black Hawks, who meet Detroit Red Wings, now holding second place, in the weekend double bill.

The weekend card:

Saturday: Montreal at Toronto; New York at Boston; Chicago at Detroit.

Sunday: Toronto at Montreal; Boston at New York; Detroit at Chicago.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 219

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

The partner in bridge who is low on any bid is one who bids no trump when he should assist. He flops into contracts where we should not be, and when they lose out puts the blame all on me.

Keep singing with this pair of partnership bands:

SOUTH	NORTH
♠A 8 5	♠K Q 2
♥A K 4	♥Q 9 7 3
♦J 6 4 3	♦A K 7 2
♣A Q	♣10 8 7

South starts with an opening bid of one heart and north responds at once with three diamonds. That is a one-jump signal for keeping the bidding open until at least a game contract is reached.

South should follow the order of choice of bids in T.-A.N.-T.: take-out, assist, no-trump. He has not another talent. So, with support for diamonds, he assists to four diamonds.

There are players who would not bid four diamonds in that spot with such a hand. Instead they would bid three no-trump. And they look like intelligent people, too.

Such players fail to go beyond the level of three no-trump. This is particularly so when the assist to the level of four is in a minor suit (diamonds or clubs).

Why? No doubt it is due to their ignorance of the number of tricks they can count in their own hands. That and a lack of confidence in what their partner holds.

North's immediate one-jump take-out shows a hand with at least six tricks. Inclusive of at least two sure tricks. South has a total of six tricks: five high cards and a short card in clubs.

Suppose south had confidence in what partner promised. And suppose south knew how to count the tricks in his own hand. Would he not know there are 6 tricks in his pair?

If so, why should he fear to go beyond a bid of three? It must be only because of ignorance or lack of confidence. Such a player should learn the 4 partner. He is a third player.

Everybody's a Happy Ian! So nobody will want to miss his most action packed movie of them all. "The Leather Burners", the second feature attraction now playing at the McCarthy Theatre. In Manhattan

By PAT SWEENEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, March 4—(CP)—Most noteworthy of the week's matinees on the New York stage is "Thank you, Svoboda," based on a novel about a Czech porter who outwits the Nazis, but the concensus was that portrayal fell far short of promise.

The play is written by H. S. Kraft, from John Fen's novel, "You Can't Do That to Svoboda." But the critics found the characters unreal, the drama poor and the whole thing somewhat tedious.

Sam Jaffe plays the role of Svoboda, but it is difficult to tell from the play what sort of character the porter is. He appears at first to be a dolt, then a comedian, then a shrewd seducer.

Svoboda is put into a concentration camp by the Nazis when he unwittingly signs a confession that he helped to blow up a bridge. The Nazis stage the crime as an excuse to loot Svoboda's village. He escapes from the camp in three months in fine clothes, having made money by performing menial tasks distasteful to the other prisoners. Then he learns that the Nazis have confiscated the money he had in the local bank. In revenge, he really blows up a bridge as a Nazi troop train passes over it. That's all there is to the story, except that Svoboda falls in love with a junk lady, played by Adrienne Gessner.

Stage shorts: The Caley sisters, Dorothy and Hazel, of Toronto, skating stars, now are appearing in "Stars on Ice" at the Center Theatre; "Othello," with Paul Robeson as the Moor, today achieves the longest consecutive run for any Shakespearian production in the United States, with 158 performances; "The Doughgirls," a fixture on the Broadway stage since December, 1942, has taken in $1,000,000.

Tweed

Tweed—Mr. Clayton Lafontaine left on Monday for Toronto, where he has accepted a position with Bender. Mr. LaFountaine has been in business with his father, Mr. Geo. Lafountaine for a number of years, which will be missed by his customers and friends. Mrs. LaFontaine and family will follow later. Mr. and Mrs. Arthur McGarry visited Peterboro and Cobawa over the weekend.

Mrs. Arnold Zyer of Belleville, spent a few days with her father, Mr. Lafountaine and Mrs. Lafountaine.

Mrs. L. Cobb of Toronto is visiting her sister, Miss Jennie Wright.

Mrs. Charles Elliott of Toronto, 201 Way are in Toronto, this week.

Mrs. Hamilton is attending the millinery opening.

Mrs. W. W. Garrett will leave on Friday to spend some time with her daughter, Mrs. (Rev.) Scammith and Mr. Scammith at Ottawa.

Mrs. 'Bert' Cornell was operated on for appendicitis in the Belleville General Hospital on Wednesday.

Mr. Charles Elliott of Toronto, spent a few days visiting his mother, Mrs. Nook Elliott, who has been ill.

The condition of Mr. Walter 'Tim' Leal who is a patient in Belleville Hospital, remains about the same.

Miss Laura Grills of Belleville, will join the staff of Miss A. M. Raybourn's office soon.

Miss Audrey Jarmes has left for her home in Newcastle, Ont.

Among those attending the funeral of the late William A. Sherwart were: Miss Nakia Sills of Toronto; Miss Isobel Sills of Kingston, and Mrs. Leroy Shiller, "Buffalo, N.Y."

22 STUDENTS EXECUTED

Lonergan's Trial Abruptly Ended For Time Being

New York, March 4. (AP)— The trial of Wayne Lonergan on first degree murder came to an abrupt end Friday when the court, dismissing a special panel of talesmen gave Defence Counsel Edward V. Broderick one week in which to show cause why he should not be cited for contempt.

Judge John J. Freschi at the same time granted a motion by District Attorney Frank S. Hogan, appearing in court for the first time in the case to send all records concerning it, both in court and in chambers, to the Appellate Division "for such action as may be warranted."

Hogan said later it would be up to his office to fix the date for a new trial but said he believed it would not be before completion of the contempt case against Broderick.

Judge Freschi, announcing the decision to dismiss the panel, said that the rights of the accused for defence made a motion for dismissal of the panel on grounds that the rights of the accused had been prejudiced".

"At that time," he continued, "I denied the motion. Thursday the District Attorney announced he had no objection and made the application for the case to be sent up.

"Its stated he would consent to the granting of the motion. In spite of his vehement denunciation several days ago and vociferous argument that a fair trial could not be had, counsel for the defence did a right-about-face and asserted that he wouldn't accept the District Attorney's consent on the motion."

The judge said that in dismissing the panel there could be no question of raising the issue of double jeopardy when Lonergan, 36-year-old native of Toronto, was brought to trial before a new panel. Assisting Defence Counsel Edward V. Broderick, the veteran jurist said: "His attitude persuaded me that he has made of this trial a farce and mockery for purposes of which I cannot fathom".

"No motion was made by the Judge of the possibility of a mistrial".

Anti-Nazi Joins Canadian Forces

Kingston, Ont., March 4.—(CP)— After seven unsuccessful attempts a young German-born anti-Nazi, who was forced to flee Germany in 1939, has finally succeeded in joining the Canadian army.

Since his release from a Canadian camp for friendly aliens in May 1943, Carl Presidig, 26, several times had been told he could not be attested. His final application to the chief recruiting officer of M.D. 3, proved successful.

In Germany, being of Jewish ancestry, his family was persecuted by the Nazis. In 1934 Prochling's father committed suicide, and in 1939, he was forced to leave his brother behind and flee to England.

Until December, 1941, as a Class C alien, suffered only minor inconveniences, but with invasion imminent, all aliens were put in camps.

He was then transferred to Canada where he was kept in camp with other friendly aliens until 1943. On his release, he began to look for work and in June of last year applied for his naturalization papers.

From his knowledge of the German people, he warns that victory for the Allies will come only after a long, hard struggle. His intention after the war is to return to Germany, saying that the people have been misled by the Nazis and also many of the regulations have been changed since 1933.

"Give the German his brown bread and sauerkraut and he won't kick", he said.

Hallingrad and Cape Bon marked the beginning of delivery for the whole world.

NEW DRUG INDUCES HYSTERIA

London, March 4.—(CP)— Research is being carried on here into the properties of a new drug, mescaline, as a reliever of pain in childbirth.

Two London hospitals have been experimenting with the drug which was first used in battle casualties. Writing in the British Medical Journal, Dr. Beddie Keller said that of 100 patients on whom the drug was used many actually slept during the period before the child was born.

Of toe babies, 91 were normal and active at birth, the rest were reported as stimulations within 20 to 30 minutes.

"Where Are Your Children?"

The country's serious problem of child delinquency is presented in startling fashion in "Where Are Your Children?" the new Universal Monogram drama which opens an engagement at the Capitol Theatre next, as the screen's first exploration of the subject in the present emergency.

Jackie Cooper is seen in the starring role with an unusually capable supporting cast. Includes many popular screen players such as Gale Storm, Patricia Morison, John Litel, Gertrude Michael, Byron Eason, Addison Richards and Betty Blythe.

As the story opens Gale, left entirely to her own devices, is working in a hash house while living with her brother and the latter's wife, who have migrated from Minnesota to work in the shipyards. Jackie, son of the wealthy Betty Blythe, takes the lonely girl to a night club, and there begins a series of events which bring her under the attention of Miss Morrison, police probation officer. After that she goes away to join the Navy, Gale innocently becomes involved in a murder case, and from this point the story's absorbing succession of dramatic incidents. Later sequences point towards the solution of a question which is becoming increasingly serious, and constitutes an ominous threat to future generations.

"Where Are Your Children" was directed by William Nigh for producer Lindsley Parsonet, and the original story by Hillary Lyon was adapted by Lynn and George W. Sayre.

"What a Man"

Perhaps the most difficult problem in the filming of a screen comedy is what is commonly known as "spacing for laugh". Briefly, the problem is this: In a funny bit of action or dialogue, how much time should be allowed for the laughter of the audience to subside so that the succeeding dialogue may be heard?

This was the age-old question which confronted Monogram studios, producer Barney A. Sarecky and director William Beaudine during the filming of "What A Man!" the hilarious comedy which comes next to the Capitol Theatre it is added hit with Johnny Downs and Wanda McKay as the principals.

The Canadian Universal news completes the program. Special matinee Wednesday for these attractions.

AT THE BELLE

"Riding High," In Color

A fun-for-all Western set to grand music is Paramount's latest contribution to Canada's treasure. It is the Technicolor "Riding High," which is now on the Belle Theatre screen.

Co-starring Dorothy Lamour, Dick Powell and Victor Moore, the picture is a riot of laughs, color and gaiety and a definite must for all those who like their movies light and fun-filled. The action and there is plenty of it including a hilarious chuck-wagon race, takes place in Arizona on a dude ranch belonging to Cag Daley, who plays a pint-sized mama to a fare-the-well. You'll howl when you hear her interpretation of "Willie, the Wolf of the West."

Victor Moore is seen as a favorite counterfeiter, who involves Dick Powell in his tussle with the law, the latter represented by Dorothy Gil Lamb.

Dorothy plays an ex-burlesque queen who entertains at the ranch and her romance with Powell is light and gay, like the film.

There are a few great tunes, in addition to the one already mentioned. They are "You're the Rainbow," "Whistling in the Light," "Injun Gal, Heap Hep," "He Loved Me 'Till the All Clear Came," "Get You Man," and "I'm the Secretary for the Sultan," the production number, "Injun Gal, Heap Hep," is one swell number for its tune, comedy and lavish production effects. But then, the whole picture is something to remember, so be sure to see it.

The Canadian Paramount News, Mitchell Ayres and his orchestra presenting the Andrews Twins and another clever speaking Shakespearian comedy "The Desert," will be exhibited. Continuous shows will be presented today.

AT THE McCARTHY

"IS EVERYBODY HAPPY"

"Is Everybody Happy?" the picture now playing at the McCarthy Theatre and starring Ted Lewis and Nan Wynn, is a thrilling, dramatic, tuneful, tale into another happy hit. Lewis will have you with his wild, uncharted renditions of eighteen songs he has made famous in vaudeville, radio and phonograph records.

If you can sit through "Cuddle Up a Little Closer, Lovey Mine," and "Chinatown My Chinatown" and Jimmy Durante's famous nose number a few in the gay list, without a feeling of blood in your extremities, a tickling in your feet to get up and dance, and you stiff, you must be the kind who thinks a uke is a musical instrument and not an ill wind nobody dares go near.

"Is Everybody Happy?" is gay in a great, big way. Its double romance is in the capable hands of charming Nan Wynn, as Ann Lawrence and lovely Lynn Merrick and Robert Stanford. The gay songs are sung by Nan Wynn, Ben Blaisford and Ted Lewis himself.

Ted Lewis, originally told by Ted Lewis to a soldier and his sweetheart, who are on leave in their minds to get married before the war is over, takes us back to the colorful period of 1915 and shows the trials and tribulations of a young Lewis struggling at his chosen job which will make him famous. It shows how he was first discovered, his debut at Rector's famous Broadway Restaurant after putting on an impromptu show on the sidewalk and landing in jail.

From beginning to end "Is Everybody Happy?" is crammed with those infectious hit songs that are the magic of the maestro of rhythm. Yes Ted is here and his supporting cast keeps up the temperature which makes "Is Everybody Happy?" the happiest show in town.

CHAPTER 27

"It's all ready, gentlemen," put in the stenographer.

Before we hear that record," Duffy explained, "I want to ask Miss Scott a few questions about the machine and about the records Metcalf made on it. Continued. It," he added, as there was another tap at the door. "Come in."

It was the doorman. "Mr. Metcalf to see you, sir," he said to Schneider. In with him."

Duffy glanced at his watch. "They're almost an hour ahead of time," he said, hesitated and looked at Tony. "Suppose we have them in and slap our cards on the table," he suggested, smiling grimly.

"All right," said the columnist.

Duffy met the visitors at the door. Nobody could have been more cordial. "Come in, Mr. Metcalf," he said. "Hello, Herschel. You know Tony, of course, and Miss Scott, Dr. Metcalf's secretary."

Schneider nodded to Tony and then to the girl. "Looks like a post-mortem," he remarked.

"It is," Duffy agreed crisply.

"Who's the corpse?"

"Dr. Metcalf."

"I thought he was buried yesterday."

"He was—but it's not too late to dig him up again.

"Have you gone stir-crazy, at, Duffy?" Schneider asked.

"Only that there are one or two things about his death still puzzling me—a little."

"Such as what?"

"That bullet hole in the floor near his chair," Duffy replied, and looking at him keenly. But if Schneider was surprised he showed no trace of it.

"Is there a bullet hole in the floor?" he questioned.

"Yes. We found it yesterday."

"Oh, yes," said Schneider. "I heard that you and Tony were nosing about the place yesterday afternoon. So that's what you were looking for? How did it get there?"

"We sort of thought you might have put it there," said Duffy.

"What in blazes do you mean by that?" the lawyer demanded.

"Only that Tony happened to remember he had advised you to do something like that, in case you ever killed a man and wanted to make it look like suicide."

"Astonishing!" Schneider remarked with an amused smile. "I believe they did suggest something like that."

The lawyer's eyelids were half-lowered, but he was entirely at ease.

"We've also been wondering, too, about that man Stockbridge," Duffy went on.

"Stockbridge?"

"Yes—Richard Stockbridge. Same initials as yours—another coincidence, of course. He said he was a lawyer and lived at 2236 Bancroft Place, in Washington. Ever hear of him?"

"No. I never heard of him."

"Well, one day we did," said the detective, "and there is no such number on Bancroft Place."

"What could that mean?" Schneider asked.

"He took the 10:30 plane for Washington Thursday night," Duffy continued, "getting a last from the Washington airport to the Union Station and then another car from the station to the Mayflower Hotel. Kind of a roundabout way to get there, don't you think?"

"Well," countered the lawyer, "suppose he did ave? What's the matter with that?"

"At the Mayflower he seems to have registered as Herschel Schneider," answered Duffy gently.

"Nobody could impersonate me at the Mayflower," retorted Schneider. "They know me well."

"Of course not," Duffy agreed. "We're quite well that it was not you who registered at the Mayflower, that it occurred to us that maybe you had impersonated Stockbridge."

"Oh, I see," said Schneider, his eyes narrower still. "So that's what you're driving at! All right, go ahead. I always enjoy seeing a man make a fool of himself."

"That night I talked with you at Lindy's," said Tony, "Wednesday night it was. I asked me whether your Tony heard McKibben say anything just before he left."

"I don't see anything incriminating in that," Schneider retorted.

"I told you that Terry thought he heard McKibben say, 'Oh, hush,' but it has been suggested that what he really said was 'Hello Herschel' and that the shot drowned out the last syllable."

Metcalf started to say something, but Schneider silenced him with a motion of the hand.

"Terry Regis said the lawyer commented, 'May I ask who made the suggestion?'"

"I did," said Miss Scott.

Schneider gave her a searching look. "So it seems I'm suspected of two murders!" he said. "Very interesting! What have you got to say up against me?"

"I suspect that Curly the Kid gave you a little automatic," and Tony motioned toward the gun on Duffy's desk.

"Has he said so?"

"No," put in Duffy. "He says he lost it."

"So that settles that. Have you formed any theory as to why I should have killed McKibben?"

"He told Lily Edgerton that he had something on you that would blow up to bits if he gave you away."

"That poor drunk would say anything," Schneider commented. "And why should I kill Metcalf?"

"Because he told Tony he knew who had killed McKibben and Tony told you and you decided you didn't care to have him around any longer."

Schneider laughed cynically. "So that's your case," he said. "I knew I confounded well. Duffy, that you would like to get something on me, but—even you must see that you haven't a leg to stand on."

"Sure," the detective agreed cheerfully. "That's the reason we're having these showdown. What we need are a few more facts."

"Why you haven't got one fact!" Schneider declared. "The trouble is that you have been listening to Tony too much and Tony has been letting his imagination run away with him. What he ought to be doing is writing detective stories, where he can fit up the facts to suit himself. I'm not so much surprised at him, but I am surprised that anybody who has been on the police force as long as you have, Jim, should fall for anything so ridiculous."

"Nobody has accused you of anything, Herschel," Duffy pointed out mildly. "All these little clues interested me—and then there's the ladder and the gloves and the towel and so on—because they seemed to indicate that somebody was trying to frame Metcalf."

"Why should you think that?" Duffy glanced at Tony.

"I'll tell you why," the columnist retorted. "I may be afflicted with too much imagination, as you say, but there is one fact you can't get around: I happen to know that Metcalf could not possibly have killed McKibben."

"So you know that, do you?" Schneider asked, his face flushed.

"Yes, I know it. Metcalf wasn't at Sunday night. He had something else to do."

"The woman in the case, eh?" the lawyer laughed. "And you believe that old stuff?"

"Is it happens the woman is ready to come forward."

Schneider sat looking at him for a moment. "Oh, now I get it!" he sneered. "Now I understand. I'm the one who is being framed. And the woman he is ready to come forward? All right, let her come forward. Who is she?" His smoldering gaze passed from one to the other and finally came to rest on Miss Scott. She sat erect back at him, his face livid: "What did you say this woman's name is? Scott? Why, I know who she is—she's Fortunio Scotti's sister . . ."

The girl was on her feet, her face like death. "That is true Herschel Schneider," she said hoarsely, "I am Carmellita Scotti. You sent my brother to the chair with your lies, and I'm going to send you . . ."

She had snapped her handbag open and was fumbling blindly in it.

"Sit down, Miss," broke in Duffy sharply, his face very grim. "Give me that bag." He snatched it from her, dumped it out and laid it on his desk.

"There's no weapon there," she said, with emphasis, "I was looking for my handkerchief. May I have it, please?" Duffy passed it to her. "What I have been telling you is true," she went on with a sob. "That man has murdered three people."

"Nonsense! Utter rot!" remarked Schneider wearily. "It will finish this. The girl's crazy. Give Duffy what he wants, Terry."

Metcalf drew a letter from his pocket and handed it to the detective.

"What's this?" Duffy asked.

"A letter from my brother," Metcalf answered, "which I received this morning. I showed it to Mr. Schneider and he suggested that I bring it along this afternoon. I'm sorry I didn't think to send all this talk. That girl isn't crazy. She's tired for days and today because I found her prying into things which were none of her business. It is my belief that she is the one who stole those records for McKibben—"

"Wait a minute," Duffy broke in. "One thing at a time. Suppose we see first what this letter is." He looked at the envelope. "Addressed to Mr. Myron Metcalf, Plainville, Connecticut. What's in it?"

"Yes, that's me," said Metcalf. "Stamped at the Washington postoffice at 5:30 p.m. this afternoon—that is, one o'clock Friday morning. Received at Plainfield at five o'clock Friday afternoon. Redirected to you at the Central Park West address and received today."

"All right," said Duffy, and slipped the letter out of its envelope and opened it, holding it carefully by the edges. He glanced with pen and ink on one of Dr. and Mrs. Metcalf's letterheads. "Now let's see what it says:

"'Dear Myron,'" he read, "'If there is ever any question as to why I killed John McKibben, I want it understood that it was because he was stealing dictograph records of our clients and using them to blackmail my patients. He was a cold-blooded fiend and I have no regrets.

"'Jerome Metcalf.'"

There was a moment's dazed silence.

"Do you recognize the writing, Mr. Metcalf?" Duffy asked at last.

"Certainly. It's my brother's. My belief is that he wrote it Thursday night just before he shot himself and dropped it in the mail chute at his apartment house."

"How about you, Miss Scott?"

She came forward slowly, her face like death, and looked closely at the letter.

"Yes," she said at last, almost in a whisper, "that is Dr. Metcalf's writing."

"I'll check it, of course," declared Duffy, as he slipped the letter back into its envelope. "But I guess that settles it."

Herschel Schneider yawned slightly and settled back in his chair with a smile of satisfaction which he made efforts to conceal.

Tony Bigelow felt himself flushing. He should have seen at once how silly it was to suppose that a man as clever as the astute Schneider . . .

The columnist glanced sharply at the lawyer, but the latter did not meet his eyes. He was gazing benignly at Carmellita Scotti, who sat crouched in her chair, crushed. As she caught his look she jerked herself rigidly erect and stared back at him . . .

It was Schneider who looked away first, turning to Duffy, who was fingering absently on his desk his face a blank.

"You might find it worth while, Jim, to look into the suggestion I made a while ago," the lawyer remarked lazily.

"Which suggestion?" Duffy asked.

"About the young lady yonder. That was so anxious to send me to the chair. It's evident from that letter," Schneider went on, "that Metcalf knew McKibben had been stealing his records, but I don't see how he could have done it without some assistance—inside assistance," he added dryly.

"They were not stolen," Tony put in. "They were duplicated. Terry found the originals all in place when he got them out and returned them."

"How do you know that?" Schneider asked. "Oh, I suppose this girl told you," he went on, as Tony hesitated, "as I may or may not be true. But it makes no difference. My suggestion is that the one person in the world who had every opportunity to juggle with those records was Metcalf's secretary."

Duffy glanced in the girl's direction. Her eyes had not wavered from Schneider.

"And her history certainly isn't above reproach," the lawyer added. "Have you told her fingerprints?"

"Of course."

"Did you find any of her prints on the dictograph, or on the steel cabinet Metcalf kept his records in?"

"Yes, as well as around the office generally. That's natural enough."

"But you didn't take the trouble to look through her room, wherever it is?"

The detective made no comment. "Well, think it over," said Schneider, with a little scorn. "Maybe now that you know who she is, you'll decide to search the place, but don't let her get there first, or you may not find anything. When I think of the way you tried to drag me into this when you had her right under your nose, it makes me a little mad. It looks like you had it in for me."

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was reading his paper and Ma was reading hers, surfing. Did you read this account of the charity tea and bridge for ferrets we held little Hilda Hotz yesterday afternoon?

I'm afraid that's one of the things I either missed or skipped, probably both, pop said, and ma said, Well it's just laughable, it's simply a laugh joke.

Maybe they should of printed it on the comic page, pop said, and ma said, There's more truth than fiction in that suggestion, I assure you. Of course the mere fact of a person having their name in print is nothing new to me there in the final annalasts, but I really have to smile when I read this long list of names chosen from the women present just because they happen to be members of so-called society although not a single one of them had a cent more for her ticket than I did, and yet as far as this list is concerned I might as well be in obscurity as the inhabitant of some planet. I just have to laugh when I think of the amount of eyebrows beats in the world, ma said without laughing.

I'm sure if your name was in every society column it would get to be a awful bore and you'd pass it off with a blazzay shrug, pop said. I'm trying to make it how it would be, he said.

And he turned to the society page in his own paper and pretended to read the notes on local, saying. Among those present at Mrs. William P. Pott's all-night poker party in the sumptuous kitchen last sumptuous home Saturday were Mrs. William P. White in white and gold pin-feathers overlaid with a sequence of sequins. Cards were poured by Mrs. W. P. Potts in an original creation of pea-green gloxinia with a contrasting bodice of silver fish hooks. Mrs. Potts wore a bird blue dreams with a corsage of ferns and garlick.

Now William it's absurd to be that rediculous, ma said.

Well I'm surprised like somebody feeling better instead of worse and started to do the bridge problem.

Montgomery Guns For Angott After Tipping Beau Jack

Philadelphia Negro Takes Decision Over Favored Southern Boy

$111,954 GATE

By TED MEIER
(Associated Press Sport Writer.)

New York, March 4 (AP)—From crowned to crown in two weeks is the latest chapter in the fight story of Philadelphia's Bob Montgomery. Knocked out in the 13th round by Al (Bummy) Davis Feb. 18, Monty bounced back Friday night to win a split 15-round unanimous decision over favored Beau Jack and regain the New York version of the lightweight title. It was their third title bout. Montgomery first won the title last May and lost it in a return 15-rounder in November. Odds were 8-5 on Jack.

A crowd of 19,266 that contributed to a gross of $111,954—the largest indoor take since heavyweight champion Joe Louis last appeared in Madison Square Garden—saw Monty regain his lost prestige by thrice having the Beau in a bad way and apparently on the verge of being knocked out.

In the third, fourth and sixth rounds, Monty had the Georgia Ga. negro with sharp rights to the jaw and a two-fisted body attack. Late in the 14th round, too, he nailed Jack with a right that made the champion's knees buckle. Meantime, Montgomery took Jack's best punch, an uppercut, without batting an eye.

In his dressing room Monty was all smiles.

"What about Sammy Angott?" asked a reporter. "He beat you three times you know."

"I'm not sure this time," Monty replied.

Montgomery and Angott, the Napoleon, are scheduled to meet in a 15-round bout on March 31 for the undisputed lightweight title. Meanwhile, Angott is slated to defend his N.B.A. crown against Juan Zosarita at Los Angeles on Wednesday.

Only slightly consider every question on its own exclusive merits."

Such was not the "true function" of a body elected to discuss public affairs. Debates might be lengthy but they brought home to the government the advisability or unpopularity of particular lines of policy. All views had to be heard because democratic government rested on public opinion.

Parliament was the assembly of representatives elected by the people where great issues are debated, or should be debated," said the committee, which included representatives of all parties. "It is not primarily a board of auditors charged with the inspection of public accounts.

Great Have Freedom of Speech.

"Freedom of speech is one of the inalienable privileges of members of parliament. It is in truth the privilege of their constituents and it is secured to members not for their personal benefit, but to enable them to discharge the functions of their office."

It will be more difficult to obtain a division on a speaker's ruling if the new rules are adopted. Divisions normally take at least half an hour while the votes of 240 members are being recorded one by one. Whereas five members can demand a division on a speaker's ruling now, the report proposes a minimum of 20.

No reduction is proposed in the length of speeches in formal debate, now 40 minutes, with a few exceptions—but a limitation on speeches in committee of the whole is proposed. The suggested rule would limit members to one speech each day on one item or clause and that not longer than 20 minutes.

A new rule, approaching the practice of the "question hour" in the British House, is suggested regarding oral questions at the opening of the sitting. They are to be submitted in writing to the clerk and the minister concerned an hour before the meeting and after reply three "supplementary questions would be permitted.

Shorten Up Procedure.

A shortening up of the procedure in the passing of senate divorce bills is proposed but the committee went on record for the complete elimination of divorce bills from parliament "as soon as conveniently possible."

During discussion of his estimates, Agriculture Minister Gardiner may give a few hints of the nature of the proposed farm price floor legislation. He said at the start that general terms and will not likely set prices in itself. It will authorize certain steps in the event certain conditions are developed.

Questioned by J. G. Diefenbaker (PC—Lake Centre) on the constitutional aspects of federal price floor legislation, Mr. Gardiner said he had no doubt it could be done legally since there were pre-war precedents in the case of legislation sent proceeded by purchasing farm products at a stated price.

The proposed bill is a post-war measure and is not intended to replace wartime price regulations until they lapse six months after the Dominion has.

Answering several members who criticized beef cattle exports being exported to the United States, Mr. Gardiner said there was no point in that now since the United States was having the same trouble as Canada with congestion in packing plants.

Building Up Market.

On all food matters, such as the recent suspension of canning sugar, the government worked closely with the United States government. The plan" was to ship surplus Canadian beef to Britain, to help feed the population there and also with a view to building up a market for farmers and industry to cattle which Canada may have to dispose of after the war.

He said he hoped early arrangements for a trade agreement with Britain best to Britain, similar to those in effect for bacon shipments, would be made.

The battle against insects in Canadian forests caused concern to Hon. W. Earl Rowe (PC-Dufferin-Simcoe), an Ontario farmer who now heads a large pulp and paper company.

He said the spruce budworm has already destroyed 15,000 square miles of timber and threatens more in Ontario, Quebec and New Brunswick. He urged that teeth be

Members Consider Changes In Rules of Parliament To Expedite House Business

Subject Will be Debated With View to Application This Session

MAY LIMIT SPEECHES

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Mar. 4 (CP)—Changes in the rules of parliament to speed business without limiting freedom of speech are under consideration by Speakers Rodger and Beaubien, it was disclosed today.

It will be debated next Tuesday with a view to their application this session.

They were reported to the House yesterday by a special committee headed by Speaker J. A. Glen, as a preliminary to an all-day discussion of agriculture department estimates —the third full day devoted to the debate.

Nothing radical was proposed by the committee. It rejected several far-reaching suggestions mooted in and out of the House during recent years, including the consideration of estimates by committees and the limitation of time to be devoted to major debates.

The committee found both suggestions inconsistent with the true function of parliament and the duty of members to speak freely on behalf of their constituents.

"Criticisms of parliament seem to have been inadequately considered in relation to the whole structure of parliament, the necessary parliamentary system and the complex situation created by the war which now is in its fifth year," the committee reported.

Consider On Merits.

"These criticisms arise from opinions concerning the functions of parliament which are often based upon such misconceptions as the view that parliament is primarily a board of directors with the members of the cabinet as its executive staff and that members, instead of trying to reconcile as much as possible all the elements of public opinion which is difficult in our diversified country, rigidly consider every question on its own exclusive merits."

Such was not the "true function" of a body elected to discuss public affairs. Debates might be lengthy but they brought home to the government the advisability or unpopularity of particular lines of policy.

Here's A True "Lost Horizon" Story—A Real Thriller

By Peter Edson, Washington Correspondent of The Montreal Daily Herald.

Story of personal experience story of American pilots forced down while flying "the hump" of the Himalaya mountains on the aerial Burma road from China to India comes from O. J. Hoebert and Charles Bennett of Pendleton, Ore. Both survived the crash and lived to tell the tale. But the story of their return to civilization through the mountains, easily ranks as one of the great thrillers of the war.

Hoebert had been an original volunteer Flying Tiger. Bennett was a veteran of African desert flying. On the Burma air route, they flew Douglas C-47 transports for the Pan-American Chinese National Airways Corporation, the line that grew from the start of the war has made a record of escaping the Jap Zeros by flying only by bad weather.

On their last flight from India, they took off in a pea soup fog which, at 15,500 feet was a lake of smoke and at 16,000 feet was still inches of ice on the wings and tail. Within 15 minutes they were more than safe from Zeros. Another 1,000 feet, another 30 minutes and they'd be over the Hump.

Hoebert pressed his hand against the window to melt the ice and did make a hole through which he could squint—see a peak rise dead ahead. He grabbed the controls, banked the plane, missed the cliff by inches, but then the bottom of the cabin scraped the side of the mountains and the plane crashed.

The Chinese radio operator was instantly killed, his neck broken. Hoebert had a broken left ankle, Hammel's face was cut and his right ankle was sprained so that at first he hobbled. In the below-zero cold, it took him nearly an hour to move 30 feet length of the cabin to get parachutes for blankets and for six days of emergency rations.

By morning the plane was buried under two feet of snow, beyond possible recognition by rescuers. They crawled out, in blasting sunlight and, five miles away 9,000 feet below, saw the clearing, but they had no idea where they were. They figured if they made sleds out of floor boards, splinted their legs with strips of parachute cord and tied themselves to the sleds. The sleds upset and sent them plunging, head first, down the mountain. That way they made progress, rolling. Just before nightfall they reached timberline, found a mountain stream they could follow to civilization.

The eight days they hobbled put into forest conservation and that forest was reserved as a result of action from the Department of Agriculture. He also said that recently a joint Canada-United States committee on forest insects met and that the same is true in both countries.

Farming at Its Best Job.

W. F. Rickard (L—Durham) said a more cheerful picture of the future was painted by Hon. James Ilsley.

"I am a farmer and there's no better job today than farming," he continued.

LA.-Col. J. A. Ross (PC—Souris) United States said that in recent years ago that conservatives were talking "no truck or trade with the Yankees."

"You never heard that from me," interjected Hon. Mr. Ilsley.

"This government is to be congratulated on what it has done for the farmer," said Mr. Richards.

Mark Sexton (PC — Haldimand) said Hessian fly disease was prevalent among livestock throughout Canada. Cattle, particularly, were suffering mid undertake manufacture of serums.

He said due to shipping fever were heavy in Ontario. Steps should be taken to see it was not a factor also in stockyards and shipping cars.

More research might well be provided for research in fighting such disease, said Mr. Senn, who spoke of the need for veterinary surgery and animal and poultry pathology.

May-Oct. Babies Said Brighter

London, March 4 (CP). — Dr. Lancet, British medical journal said today that babies born from May to October generally were the most intelligent because they have the most intelligent parents.

Investigation has brought that the time of conception was an increasing factor with autumn being smarter, it said.

The Lancet advanced no theory as to why decided smarter folks have most of their children between May and October.

ONTARIO TO HAVE CONTRIBUTORY HEALTH SCHEME

Cost Will be Within Means of Everyone Says Dr. Vivian

GROUPS TO ASSIST

Toronto, Mar. 4 (CP)—Plans were made today for introduction by the Drew government in the present legislature next week of an independent provincial health service plan to be carried out on a contributory basis.

Hon. Dr. R. P. Vivian, Minister of Health, issued a statement yesterday announcing the measure, which if it passes the legislature, will be the first provincial health plan in Canada.

The statement said the measure to be introduced in the Ontario "probably next Tuesday" will be known as the "Ontario Municipal Health Services Act". It will provide for an improved type of medical care available to all on a basis satisfactory to the medical and Allied professions, at a cost within the means of everyone and by a method of payment that will ease the financial burden in the cost of sickness."

Dr. Vivian declined to discuss details until the measure reaches the floor of the House. However the statement said the plan will be carried out with the aid of the Ontario Medical Association, the Ontario Hospitals Association and other groups representing organized personnel rendering services in the treatment of illness.

Lives Interview.

In an interview following his statement Dr. Vivian said the provincial scheme would be independent of Dominion health legislation. Premier Drew commented that the Ontario plan would not bar the way to Ontario's participation in any Federal health scheme which was "acceptable" to the province, in which case the provincial scheme could become part of the Dominion-wide health plan.

The health minister's statement was given to the press from behind door of the speaker's chamber while the legislature was in session but there was no reference to it in the House itself.

The statement was given out a few minutes after William Dennison (CCF-Toronto St. David) had introduced a bill in the House enabling municipalities to adopt a municipal doctor plan.

He explained there now is provincial legislation enabling residents of St. Joseph Island to pay a doctor by a special levy on the tax rate. His measure would have this privilege extended to all areas in the province wishing to take advantage of it.

Dr. Vivian's statement mentioned the St. Joseph Island tax levy plan but said proposed provincial health services plan "goes much farther."

The statement added the plan would be particularly applicable in northern Ontario "where because of the very nature of the settlements, adequate medical services are not easily procurable."

In addition to the Municipal Health Act, the government planned to introduce amendments to the Public Health Act, the statement said.

STILL FOUR SHADES FOR WOMEN'S HOSE

London, (CP)—The hardships of the second winter have already opened on Britain's women's hose. Due to coming action there will be no new, exotic shocking colors for Spring.

An official of the British Color Council has stated: "Due to pending big military operations the authorities cannot grant stocking manufacturers extra fuel which would be needed for the blending of new dyes. The four shades, with the service colors now manufactured will have to remain".

ARRIVE AFTER FOUR YEARS

Cobalt, Ont., March 4. (CP)—It took more than four years for a pair of socks knitted by Mrs. J. W. Moore of Cobalt and New Liskeard to reach their destination. Knitted when the Cobalt Red Cross branch was organized for war work at the start of the conflict, Mrs. Moore received word from Cpl. Thomas Brady, Chagoan overseas member of the British army who has been a prisoner in Germany for three years, that the socks, bearing Mrs. Moore's name and address, finally had arrived.

Masham, England — (CP) — Council has adopted a plan whereby the 200 service men and women of this Yorkshire village will receive at least a shilling a week for each week of service at the end of the war.

They Tax You Twice

Canada's System of Double Taxation is Far More Drastic Than the British System—Defects Not Only Hit Business Firms and Man of Wealth, But Also Man of Small Income

(By Bruce Hutchison in Winnipeg Free Press)

It is not true, as many people imagine, that Canada has a lighter load of taxation than Britain, or any other country. The British system, for all its faults, is based on a clear philosophy. Its philosophy is clear, and very simple. It is designed to get as much money as possible for war purposes. To this overriding necessity all other things have been sacrificed, with serious results to the economy and to the taxpayers. During the war it has become completely impractical to reform the law, lest changes involve a loss of war revenue, and the Conservative Party has made little complaint. But as soon as the war is over, or perhaps as soon as it seem to be near its end, Canada will have to reconsider its income tax system from top to bottom.

Some of the worst defects of the law have been noted already—its discouragement to enterprise; its encouragement to concentration of power in officials; its lack of any adequate appeal from the decision of taxpayers against the decision of officials, its heavy and unjustified penalties to the taxpayer if he underpays his taxes and its refusal to let the taxpayer interest if he overpays; its complication, which prevents most taxpayers from knowing what they owe; and its long delay in collecting it.

These defects largely hit the business man and the individual with a substantial income. Another defect, which is aggravated in this country, hits the small man and hits him hard. This is the defect in the law of capital gains, which is far more drastic than the British system.

A simple example will illustrate the Canadian law. Suppose a man is covering from investments. Assume that a British citizen and a Canadian citizen each receive $250 a year as a dividend on an investment, and no other income.

In Britain the $250 paid to the investor represents a profit of $500 earned by the company of which he is a shareholder. Of this $500 profit, $250 is paid by the company to the government as taxes, leaving an equal amount for the investor. The government does not tax the profits twice, first through the company and then through the investor, as we do in Canada.

But the effect of the Canadian law is more onerous, in comparison with the British law, than appears on the surface. In Britain the poor man, with an investment income of only $250 a year, is not taxable at all. However, he has already paid, through the company, a tax of $250 on his dividend, he is entitled to reclaim it from the government. He receives a total of $500 from his investment. But in Canada the investor has no such claim. He has paid $250 tax on a $500 dividend, or 50 per cent of his income, even though he is a very poor man. In theory he is not taxable, because he pays nothing on an income of $250 a year. In practice, he is taxed at a higher rate than the man with a $10,000 income from salary.

This, of course, is admittedly ridiculous. It results solely from the fact that the income of corporations is taxed twice in Canada once in the hands of the corporation earning the income, and again in the hands of the recipient when that income is distributed. In the case mentioned above the little investor does not pay a second time, though he has already lost half his dividend.

But if the total income of the investor is large enough to be taxable, then he not only loses the amount already paid in taxes by the company but must pay another tax on his diminished dividend. Thousands of Canadians are paying these double imposts without realizing it, and most of them imagine that the British investor is suffering more than they are.

The position of the Canadian purchaser of an annuity is also remarkable. The payments received by a citizen in return for the purchase of an annuity are largely a return of his capital. Yet in most classifications these payments are taxed as income, even though the investor is doing little more than withdraw his capital from a bank.

The following hypothetical case shows how the Canadian law affects a citizen with a modest estate. This citizen's income arises entirely from company dividends. He invests his savings in a life insurance policy with the provision that the proceeds are to be used to purchase an annuity for his widow. Apart from some revenue earned on the money paid into the insurance company, the citizen's whole estate arises from the profits earned on his original investments.

By the time the citizen has died and his wife after him, taxes will have been paid on that capital in various channels:

First, by the original company in which the citizen invested, through taxes on its profits.

Second, by the citizen himself when he received his share of the profits as dividends.

Third, by the citizen's estate in the form of succession duties on the life insurance policy.

Fourth, by the widow, on the annuity.

Fantastic? Not at all. It is the law of Canada.

Great Pyramid Still Puzzle

(By W. G. C. in Windsor Star)

While various theories have been advanced at different times throughout history to account for it, the great mystery of how the ancients were able to build the massive stone structure known as the Great Pyramid in Egypt remains today as baffling to skeptics and men of science as it has been for centuries.

Unaffected by the ravages of the war which has brought such destruction to many modern structures and far away at Cairo and elsewhere, this mighty tribute to the building ingenuity of the Ancient World stands 481 feet above the surface of the surrounding desert. The pyramid was made from 2,300,000 blocks of solid stone averaging in weight about two and a half tons each, and scientists have established that they were quarried in upper Egypt near a place called Syene some 700 miles away.

Still Puzzle.

How the ancients—it is estimated that the pyramid was constructed at least as far back as 3600 years B.C.—somehow conveyed the huge blocks, which averaged in size nearly five feet in length and two feet in height, across this vast distance has for many centuries been a puzzle but the most perplexing question of all, for which the answer is still sought, is how they lifted stones of this weight to the top of the towering structure—a task which today would still be no little problem with the aid of all the powerful machinery available for modern construction. Yet in that age the only possible source of power available for the job was human and animal muscle.

Believed to have been built as a tomb by an ancient Pharaoh it is generally referred to now as King Khufu, scientists are satisfied that the construction was done by immense masses of slave labor who must have worked for many long years at the gigantic task. Adding to the fascinating interest of those who like to probe into the mind's many mysteries are many great chambers and mile channels found inside, one of which contained the sarcophagus of the king.

While scientists may have been long conducting research in futile attempts to explain the secrets of the chambers and the dimensions and appearance of the mummy inside such a solid stone coffin, the most frequent questions of sightseers still concerns the baffling manner of the hoisting of the great stone blocks for the construction, . . .

Pipes and Measures.

In efforts to at least partially satisfy the curiosity of those who have gazed with amazement at this last remaining relic of the Ancient World some writers have contended that the great masses of slaves lifted the stones with enormous derricks. Others have held that such lifting machinery was necessary for such an operation were impossible and suggest that somehow the stones were put in place by ropes and manpower.

A more plausible explanation favored by many, is that the massive blocks of stone leading up into the Egyptian skies like a mountain were dragged into place over a great slanting road. Such a theory, if this is the true explanation, must have been immense and the construction and removing a tremendous task in itself.

The theory, however, is that it was started after the stone base was laid, the road being gradually built as an incline to meet it after tier of the giants until it reached its towering height.

London, March 6.—(AP)—United States heavy bombers in very strong force bombed Berlin today in the second American blow on the German capital, a frequent target of heavy R.A.F. night raids.

The first announcement said only that "eighth Air Force heavy bombers were hit, without identifying them further or giving other details.

The surprise follow-up to Saturday's "firebreaker" raid by an striking nation of the world—a smashing demonstration of the U.S. 8th Air Force's might, for it was the seventh operation of the heavy bombers in eight days.

Heavy fighter escorts accompanied today's formations on the longest trip of more than 1,100 miles from British bases.

One of Greatest Battles.

The German radio declared one of the war's greatest air battles had raged over 350 miles from the Netherlands coast to Berlin.

Berlin, already seared by massive R. A. F. night assaults, was brought under relentless hammer blows falling by day and night.

Presumably the American, R.A.F. night attacks are aimed at precision destruction of selected targets "war raging" the R. A. F.'s night raids.

The heavy bombers reached targets in all Adolf Hitler—and fighter-bombers attacked northern France —where Prime Minister Churchill has said the Germans were preparing rocket and Robot-pad launching stallations—for the first successive day. Last night R. A. F. Mosquitos attacked Wilhelmshaven with 500 tons.

Last Wednesday was the only time in the last eight days that American heavy bombers have not gone out. Successively, they bombed the Pas de Calais area, Brunswick, southwest and northwest Germany, and yesterday bit Nazi air bases in Southern France. The bombers and fighters yesterday knocked down 29 enemy planes.

The German broadcast said that the great air battle "has been raging since 11:30 this morning over northwest and central Germany," extending from the Zuider Zee far-ge the Hawaii lakes near Berlin.

The radio said the air raid alarm sounded in Berlin just before 1 p.m. (3 a.m., E. D. T.).

Take Direct Course.

The Americans took a direct course to Berlin, the German said, and "burning their incursion were continually tempered by the strongest forces of German fighter and destroyer planes and were forced to ever fresh evasive manoeuvres by the fire hundreds of German aircraft batteries.

The attack had been expected by German anti-aircraft defences after the first two American daylight raids had failed. It continued. "The U. S. bombers flew in tight formations, protected by both sides by fighters and long-range fighters flying at higher altitude.

"The impression that the greatest ever fighter protection by U. S. Army and R. A. F. fighter was given in order to assure the Americans to Berlin this time was prevailing when the formations flew over the western frontier."

The overnight attacks were carried out without loss, the announcement said. Specific objectives were not disclosed.

Yesterday's American operations were executed by strongly-escorted forces of bombers which struck into southwestern France to bomb the German base at Cognac and other targets in the vicinity of Bergerac. A communique Sunday night said good results were achieved.

Today Allied medium and fighter-bombers for the fifth successive day pounded northern France where Prime Minister Churchill has said the Germans are preparing rocket and robot-plane projectors. The planes crossed the Channel in relays and repeated explosions from France could be heard on the English coast.

This morning the Germans' Hilversum, Holland, and Friedsland radio stations left the air, hinting at another daylight attack on part of the continent.

While the Mosquitos bombed Germany for the sixth straight night, other intruders acted on what is to the battle of Britain days was known as "bonbers' moon" and prowled around Nazi airbases on the continent. They shot down four German planes, three of them bagged by 29-year-old Flt. Lt. A. D. Wagner who brought his score to eight, including two Japanese bombers shot down over Ceylon.

A fifth German plane, a Junkers-88 on a daylight reconnaissance over the eastern coast, fell to a machine-gun an anti-aircraft site north of Scotland and was sent crashing into the sea, in flames by the Bofors battery. Three of the crew were rescued.

Ten Planes Lost.

Four bombers and five fighters were lost. The escort destroyed 14 Nazi planes. The total knocked down by the bombers was not immediately announced.

Official secrecy meanwhile continued to screen the full story of the American daylight blow against Berlin, the first by United States heavy bombers of the R.A.F. Mosquitos again hit Berlin Saturday night, the 16th consecutive night as many nights on the enemy capital.

An Allied offensive against the Pas-de-Calais coast of northern France by medium, light and fighter-bombers continued by day, with day heavy-bomber stab. Enemy shipping movements were attacked last week.

The American raid on Berlin and accompanying attacks on other unspecified targets, in eastern and northern Germany, and German planes were destroyed, brought a total of 2,421 planes, knocked down in the largest to date for any operation by any European power heavy bombers were missing.

There was no official explanation of the high fighter loss, although the 50-below-zero weather may the substantiated the 1,200-mile round trip probably were big factors.

A United States headquarters announcement said the operations of Flying Fortresses reached Berlin and the fliers declared their bombs on "primary objectives" in the capital. The German radio claimed last night that 150 American heavy bombers been flown over by North American bombers.

THREE BODIES RECOVERED

Kingston, March 6 (CP)—Bodies of three children missing since Wednesday's fire were recovered yesterday in the Cataraqui River, about 50 feet from the shore where they believe the three—Gerry Orr, five, Gordon Orr, two, and his brother, Annette, three—fell through a weak spot in ice which covered the river. A large opening was made in the ice to recover the bodies.

HUNT FOR BRITISH SEAMEN

London, March 6.—(CP)— An intensive search for six British seamen who escaped through a steel barred window Friday night continued today. The six who had been awaiting trial on charges of deserting from the Royal Navy were C. Spinks, F. Moyle, J. Moyle, A. Roberts, A. York and W. Gilles.

ON-PREMISES SALE OF BEER AND WINE TO 3-MAN BOARD

Notice of Motion Given, Board to Tour Province, Rule On Licenses

PUBLIC HEARINGS

Toronto, March 6.—(CP)—Attorney-General Gordon Conant announced motion in today's Ontario legislature votes and proceedings of two bills designed to transfer licensing authority for on-the-premises sale" of beer and wine in Ontario from the Liquor Control Board to a specially-appointed three-man board which will tour the province and rule on all licensing matters.

One bill, the Liquor Licensing Control Board Act, 1944, will provide for the setting up of the three-man judicial board which will hold public hearings in various parts of the province and rule on all licensing matters for "on the premises" sale of beer and wine, such as applications for new licenses, renewals and cancellations.

The Attorney-General said the other bill, an amendment to the Liquor Control Act, simply provides the lengthy amendments which will have to be made in the act so as to set up the new licensing machinery.

Pasaikivi May Go Directly to Russia To Discuss Peace

Stockholm March 6.—(AP)— The Stockholm Morgontidningen indicated today that Finnish President Juho Kusti Paasikivi might win the Finnish government's authority to negotiate the peace because he is personally in good favor with the Soviets and might be able to get better terms.

The paper raised the question why the Finns open the negotiations, and said "they should have been started long ago because the Russians would demand increment if the Germans in Finland." Paasikivi and Finland has been reported reluctant to accept.

Maj. Paul Triquet, 35, Second Canadian To Win Victoria Cross

By WILLIAM STEWART
(CP War Correspondent)

London, March 6. (CP Cable) — Canada's second Victoria Cross of the war was awarded today to Maj. Paul Triquet, 35-year-old company commander of the Royal 22nd regiment.

Triquet, a Montrealer who holds the rank of acting major, received the Empire's highest award, for valor during the bloody battle of the Moro River in Italy.

A former company sergeant major, the wiry mustachioed officer who rallied his men with cries of "never mind the bullets, boys, they can't shoot straight", led his company in an attack on a little group of houses making up the settlement of Casa Berardi.

His successful action was part of an operation by which the 1st Canadian Infantry Brigade cracked a strongly-held crossroads south of Ortona and, under withering fire, troopers into the seacoast town itself.

Action at Moro R. on Dec. 14.

At the time the Canadians had been over the Moro River just a week and had been unsuccessful in attempts to dislodge the Germans from a gully in front of the crossroads to the east of the main Ortona-Orsogna Highway.

Triquet's company, Maj. Triquet's After's depleted company from the Seaforth Highlanders of Canada, was mounted the road still farther south and marched to the outskirts of Berardi.

The Seaforth relited when nightfall came and Triquet's men went into the attack. Stone houses in green, sloping fields had been covered by the Germans into strong points mounted with machine-guns. The paratroop defenders were also supported by tanks.

The gallant major whose men think the world of him had Sherman tanks in close support. As they went in the Germans opened up with heavy machine-gun and mortar fire and all of Triquet's officers were killed or wounded and half of his non-commissioned officers.

Triquet kept moving about among the remainder, talking and joking in French. When he had his group virtually all surrounded he called "The enemy is all around us. The only safe place is our objective.

He led them on a dash toward the edge of the settlement where the men dug in and he directed fire from lying positions, continuous counter-attacks that lasted until the end of the battalion moved up to relieve him, two sergeants and the 15 other ranks who remained.

Triquet, who has a son and daughter in Montreal, is a native of Cabano, Que., a lower St. Lawrence village. He is a veteran of the Royal 22nd and was a company sergeant-major when he came to England after enlistment for active service.

Commissioned in 1941.

He was commissioned March 18, 1941, and a time headed the battalion's unarmed combat school at Aldershot. He was training here in England.

His wife, who speaks with the clipped accent of an non-commissioned officer, was one of the few who fought throughout the campaign in Italy and is one of the few Canadian women officers in the battalion that has fought with distinction in the Sicily and Italian fronts. She is a Canadian Women's Army officer.

First V.C. Won by Col. Merritt.

Canada's first V.C. of this war was awarded Oct. 2, 1942, to Lt.-Col. C. O. I. Merritt of Vancouver and Bellevue, B.C., for valor down the Dieppe raid Aug. 19 of that year.

Col. Merritt, a prisoner of war since Dieppe, was the man who waved his helmet as he led his troops of the South Saskatchewan Regiment, of which he was commanding officer, across a bullet-swept beach.

The official citation said that Col. Merritt "set the example" and "the was collecting Bren and Tommy guns preparing a defensive position which successfully covered the withdrawal from the beach."

REINFORCEMENTS, SUPPLIES POURED ONTO LOS NEGROS

Indicated Japanese May Make Another Attempt to Recapture Airdrome

3,000 JAPS KILLED

Allied Headquarters, Southwest Pacific, March 6—(AP)—More American troops and supplies are being poured onto Los Negros Island in the Admiralties, indications today that the Japanese may make another strong attempt to recapture Momote airdrome.

Allied headquarters reported today progress and additional supplies and reinforcements for the 1st Cavalry Division are constantly being landed. It was reported that the enemy also is increasing his strength after his costly defeat Saturday.

There was evidence of an eastward withdrawal of Japanese troops from the garrison at Lorengau on Manus Island, adjacent to Los Negros Island on the West, headquarters spokesman said. This led to the belief that another blow is in the making.

Sporadic fighting flared when the American forces came up against enemy groups which entrenched, the spokesman said Saturday, when the Japanese repeatedly hit the American flanks in fences around the airdrome without success in the line.

In this attempt to retrieve the airfield which fell easily to the invaders when they hit the beaches, the Japanese left more than 700 dead.

Three-thousand Japanese have been killed in fighting around the landing headquarters said Sunday, against American losses of 61 dead and 245 wounded.

Allied aircraft bombed Japanese installations west of Momote, without interception, and American destroyers attacked enemy craft off the coast of Seadler Harbor at Lorengau, destroying gun positions.

More than 200 Japanese-based army and navy bombers hit Rabaul, New Britain, on New Britain, Saturday, centring their attack on the waterfront.

509 ITALIANS ASPHYXIATED IN RAILWAY TUNNEL

Lose Lives When Fumes From Stalled Engine Overcome All but Fifty

ALL CIVILIANS

Naples, March 6. (AP)—A total of 509 Italian civilians were asphyxiated early Saturday when the freight train on which they had hitched rides stalled in a railway tunnel in Southern Italy.

Allied authorities while conducting an investigation said that several hundreds Italians apparently had climbed aboard the freight train in the darkness while it was halted in the Apennine Mountain tunnel through which it passed before entering the tunnel.

Only about 50 of those caught aboard the train when it stalled escaped per cent grade in the tunnel escaped with their lives. The rescued apparently met a cruel death as carbon monoxide generated by the engine spread through the tunnel.

All members of the crew except the fireman were among the dead.

Teletype Circuit Closed by Order

"Buenos Aires, March 6.—(AP)— The Argentine Secretariat of General in an order of March 4 has shut down the United Press teletype circuit in Argentina, it was announced today. United Press teletype circuit operated under a 1941 agreement which ordered its affiliate, La Prensa Unida, to suspend all radio communications facilities for the transmission of news throughout Argentina.

The order said the action was taken because the United Press permitted an employee of Prensa Unida to transmit news from Montevideo in violation of regulations.

The Montevideo circuit was used to transmit news to the United Press clients in Uruguay.

GERMANS LOSE 24,000 MEN IN ANZIO BATTLES

3,500 Were Captured While B'g Share Of the Remainder Were Killed

LIMITED ACTION TODAY

By EDWARD KENNEDY

The Anzio Beachhead, Italy, March 6.—(AP)—German attempts to drive the Allies off this foothold south of Rome have cost them casualties totalling about 24,000, authoritative sources said today.

Of these 3,500 have been captured by Allied beachhead troops and a high percentage of the rest killed or wounded, Allied artillery having taken an especially heavy toll.

An officer who got back to Allied lines after being in German hands said, "I saw dozens of bodies piled up like cordwood while a common grave was dug for them."

Naples, March 6 — (AP) — Allied beachhead forces have repulsed another German attack, it was announced today in a communique which added that bad weather sharply reduced operations on all fronts in Italy.

Despite continuous rain and low clouds, fighting-bombers attacked shipping off the Yugoslav coast and gun positions on the 5th Army front behind Anzio.

Except for the one enemy attempt to plunge into the beachhead, these ground operations were confined to fighting-to-gaining patrolling on all fronts. Eighth Army troops threw back a minor German attempt to raid their lines.

The new German thrust against the beachhead defenses of the Cisterna in same general area where American troops restored their positions Friday night after a battalion of Nazi infantry had advanced slightly.

Artillery and mortar fire scattered a small German force attempting the new drive before it reached advance defense lines. A German tank concentration also was observed but shelling, one tank was destroyed.

R.A.F. Aircraft Pound Shipping of Enemy In Aegean Sea

Cairo, March 6. — (CP)—R.A.F. aircraft operating from middle east bases, including Palestine, attacked enemy shipping in the Aegean Sea, two harbors and a number of small supply vessels, a communique said. Other aircraft, several damaged supply ships of the west coast of Greece and Crete. Nine Nos. the announcement said, while Wellingtons attacked a merchant ship covered by four fighters off the coast of Crete and left it smoking.

Meanwhile, an intruder patrol shot down three enemy aircraft over Crete. Three R.A.F. planes are missing.

GERMAN STORY IS NOT CONFIRMED

London, March 6 —(CP)— The German International Information Service, a propaganda unit, said in a broadcast recorded today by the Associated Press that British torpedo planes sank the 1,876-ton Swedish vessel Diana from the direction of Kalmar on the east coast of the Island of Borkum, on the night of February 29-March 1 or March 1-2.

The report, not confirmed, said two planes were shot down.

Nightmare Ride on British Train For Passengers as Engineer Goes Mad

London, March 6. (CP-Reuters)— Two hundred passengers were given a nightmare trip Sunday when a British train went mad.

A British train went insane, beat off efforts to keep them from the controls and carried his train past danger signals at the end of a switched track.

"Clear all lines", flashed a message to signalmen at 13 stations on the Bath-Salisbury line, "driver of 7.12 p.m. train from Bristol gone crazy".

The engineer apparently lost his mind in Bath station. He suddenly pulled open the throttle and sent the train out without many of its passengers. Some jumped others threw off their feet as the train lurched along in erratic bursts of speed.

Signalmen when railway men at some stations were heard shouting for the engineer to stop. As the train tore through the darkness the fireman fought desperately to get the controls from the madman's hands. Eventually his three the brake, bringing the train to a jolting stop.

The engineer could not be induced to leave the cab and passengers who flocked forward to offer him investigation were kept at bay with a pick.

A police five men to overpower him. The train arrived at Salisbury two hours late. The engineer was taken to a mental home.

Russians Approach Volochisk 60 Miles From Rumania

12 Nazi Divisions Routed in Strong Offensive — 6,000 Germans Killed

112-MILE FRONT

London, March 6 — (CP) — The Red Army swept close today to the vital Odessa-Lvow railway, main artery supplying the Germans in the Dnieper Bend, in a powerful new Western Ukraine drive which Moscow announced, has routed 12 Nazi division and liberated more than 500 communities in two days.

A Soviet communique Sunday said the Russians were battling at the approaches to the station of Volochisk on the Sbrucz River, 60 miles north of the Rumanian frontier and said, "It was from here that the Nazis to rely on poor roads to the railways Khyrov and Rumanian frontier, or on the sea, for supplies or retreat."

Moscow announced from 224 guns thundered in Moscow in celebration of the victories, announced by Premier Marshal Joseph Stalin in a special order of the day and by two Soviet communiques. Lieut.-General Nikolai F. Vatutin, reported ill.

The announcement said at least 6,000 Nazis have been killed in the drive, which carried Russian forces on a 112-mile front and surged forward up to 31 miles. Joining with previously won positions in pre-war Poland, the new line runs from Volochisk, a salient from Demydrotvi in the north, southwest to Tarnopol, then south to Zbarazh and Belozerka — a line about 165 miles long.

The German communique yesterday admitted breakthroughs and a British broadcast said the Russians were attacking with at least 12 to 20 divisions, supported by strong corps — more than 70,000 men.

Two Transports Sunk.

Moscow also reported that Russian submarines had sunk two 10,000 tons, and 700-ton mine-sweeper in attacks on a German convoy in the Barents Sea and had damaged a 7,000-ton transport. The sea route is one which the Nazis used to send war supplies and reinforcing their divisions in northern Finland.

The great Ukrainian drive, the communique said, liberated 14 large towns in the previous advance southwestward from the Shepetovka area. Several of these were on their westernmost salient into pre-war Poland. Advancing eastward the Russians swept down upon the railroad from Novyka and Vitkiv, 15 miles northeast of Ternapl.

The bulletin said a heavy battle was fought for the town of Beloguschka, 25 miles south of these Storozhka, but Soviet tankmen, assisted by dive-bombing airmen and artillery, finally overwhelmed the Nazis.

Moscow reported the enemy "suffered enormous losses in manpower and armaments in the area of the front" and that the scattered enemy detachments abandoned their artillery ammunition dumps and other war material in their flight.

The communique also announced that in the north, where the Russians had pushed a bridgehead across the Sarny River line, they repulsed violent German counter-attacks south of Nikva, their positions

Lepke Buchalter, Two Companions 'Burn' in Chair

New York, March 6. (AP)—Louis (Lepke) Buchalter, czar of nine Brooklyn gangster chieftain, chose a killer's death, than turn informer — which possibly would have spared him from Sing Sing prison's electric chair Saturday night.

This was indicted yesterday by J. Bertram Wegman, counsel for the head of Murder, Inc., who said:—

"Buchalter had two keys in his hand. He chose to use the one that opened the door to eternity rather than the other one".

He did not explain what he meant by "the other one' but Wegman's remark gave pointed equally terse comment on the case by Mayor La Guardia and Assistant District Attorney Burton B. Turkus, who prosecuted Lepke on the murder charge which sent him to his death.

"Lepke's choice," Turkus told a press interview: "Some people sweated a life in the jail—few days".

Turkus said a death-house statement by Lepke Saturday was a "signal to the underworld that he was not opening up on its members".

Whether this is his was ended, life just began for a great many other people he could "drag down".

Jewish Funeral Held.

Meanwhile, brief orthodox Jewish funeral services were held for the former racket kingpin and his two companions. Rites for Lepke henchman also executed Saturday were held in the home of wife and daughter and a few relatives attended his services.

Louis Capone, executed at the same time, will be buried later this week.

The three were convicted of slaying Joseph Rosen, a Brooklyn storekeeper, eight years ago.

Capone, who was charged by the State with being the fingerman in the killing, went to the chair first, because the prison authorities believed him the weakest of the trio. He weighs 120.

Mendy Weiss was second to go. He repeatedly refused to talk and was able to mutter, that he had been framed.

The 47-year-old Lepke walked unaided to the chair, according to assed that his attitude could have been interpreted as indifference. He said nothing.

"The other two were frightened, but Lepke was paralyzed".

Gripsholm Heads Toward West

Lisbon, March 6 — (AP) — The Swedish exchange ship Gripsholm headed westward across the Atlantic today on the first leg of her south Americans bound for home after a long period to internment and repatriation of enemy-occupied countries.

Most of those aboard the ship were deliously happy as she started her voyage at sundown last night, but for some—who have lived in Europe for many years and have left behind all the luxuries of the Atlantic—it was a sad occasion.

Among these were several dozen American First Great War veterans, survivors of the 1917 American expeditionary force who remained in Europe after the war started, married, raised families and were interned by the Germans. Many of them never saw broke out. For them embarkation on the Gripsholm means freedom from their wives and children and sent thousands of miles overseas.

were improved. It made no mention, however, of Pskov where last reports said the Russians were close as five miles north and east of this northern communications city.

INDIAN FOUND FROZEN TO DEATH

Provincial Police reported the finding of the body of a 68-year-old Indian frozen to death on the Curve Lake Reserve, north of Peterborough yesterday. He was identified as Alex Knott, a resident of the Reserve and no inquest was deemed necessary according to the judgment of Coroner Dr. H. Young of Peterborough.

BLACK MONGREL DOG PLACED IN POUND

A black mongrel dog was placed in the city dog pound over the weekend by Constable Thos. Thorne, the pound custodian. The animal was wearing a dog collar but no dog tag and was found wandering at large on Pinnacle St. It is kept in the rear quarters.

TWO CARS DAMAGED

Property damage resulted to two motor cars at the intersection of Pinnacle and McAnany Streets on Saturday, afternoon when a motor car driven by Charles Fitzpatrick, 185 1-2 Pinnacle St. and John Hanna, 31 Baldwin Street were in collision. Mr. Fitzpatrick was coming out of McAnany Street while Mr. Hanna was proceeding north on Pinnacle Street when the collision occurred. The matter of damages was settled amicably between the parties concerned. Police added that Hanna did not have his driver's licence in his possession, however.

CLAIMS HIS DOG SHOT ON PURPOSE

Complaining that his dog had been purposely shot, Arthur (Curly) Charters, Consecon R.R. No. 5 Belleville requested Provincial Police to probe the matter after finding his dog wounded along the side of a concession road Saturday afternoon. Provincial Constable A. Kellogg investigated and found that the dog had been shot but not with accurate aim to kill the animal. Reports of the investigation are now in the hands of O.P.P. authorities for further consideration

R.T. Hostess Club Sets Out Schedule For Week's Program

The various "color groups", into which the Red Triangle Hostess Club of the Y.M.C.A. is divided, has begun its alternately take charge and plan activities for a week's duration at the "Y". Each week each group had a chance to share equally in the entertainment of the airmen, and thus a variation of events will be conducted. This week, the Red Group, under the leadership of Miss Cecelia Rolland, will act as "governing body" of the "Y" and tonight there will be a dancing class and on Tuesday evening there will be the usual weekly social in the "Y" canteen, ball room with music being furnished by a radio box. For Wednesday, something new and different has been planned—a hand time dance in the gymnasium of the "Y". The group has been able to obtain the services of a pianist, fiddler, base fiddle player and caller to provide square dance music for the occasion. And even the gym will be converted into a "scene from the farm" with decorations of lanterns, pitchforks, hay and such like. On Thursday night, the airmen will be able to enjoy an evening of small games, while on Friday a Musical Appreciation Club has been arranged. The weekly dance will be held at the arena on Saturday while on Sunday Open House will be held at the Y.M.C.A.

COMBATS BLIZZARDS IN WELSH MINES

Cardiff, Wales, March 6.—(CP)—Reinforced barricades of tiles and steel water pipe will be installed soon in South Wales coal mines, to combat blizzards, rather long distances affecting the miners. After extensive research, a plan of piping water into the coal face to halt the formation of injurious dust has been evolved.

WO. W. Nolan, Actinolite, Awarded Military Medal for Bravery in Italy

Two Central Ontario soldiers, including one man from Madoc are listed as having been awarded the Military Medal for valor in the Italian campaign, it was announced by the Minister of National Defence. Fifty-nine names are included in the list which has been signed by His Majesty, the King.

The Madoc soldier to be awarded the honor is Warrant Officer Class II, Wilfred Joseph Nolan, Actinolite, member of the Canadian Armoured Corps, while the other one from the Central Ontario district is Sgt. Ross Cameron Clarke of Norwood, a member of the above corps.

Following are the biographical sketches and citations of the two Ontario soldiers receiving the Military Medal.

Sgt. (A/CSM) Wilfred Joseph Nolan, M.M.

Sergeant Armoured Company Sergeant-Major) Wilfred Joseph Nolan, C-46536, 26, is a native of Actinolite, Ont., and enlisted in the Army for active service with the Active Army, Infantry, in September, 1940. He was promoted to his last confirmed rank in this theatre of war, in January.

"During the night of the 8th and 9th of December, Sgt. Nolan was with the 1st Canadian Infantry Corps unit, was holding a defensive position on the Arezzo side of the bridgehead established on the north side of the Moro River in Italy. The enemy counter-attacked during the night and were repeat, but despite a heavy and determined attack, Sgt. Nolan maintained his position until dawn came, Sgt. Nolan discovered the enemy had established a strong point commanding his front. After securing that point, Sgt. Nolan, with ten men from his platoon, put in an attack on the strong point.

"Advancing under very heavy machine gun and small arms fire the section broke through the enemy defensive position, routed the enemy and captured one officer and twenty-five other ranks, Sgt. Nolan consolidated his position.

"By his personal example, downright courage and determination, Sgt. Nolan materially assisted in attaining the objective."

Sergeant Ross Graham Clarke M.M.

Sergeant Ross Graham Clarke, B-60737, Canadian Armoured Corps, was born at Lindsay, Ont., November 2, 1913, and enlisted in the ranks of his enlistment September 18, 1939. His proceeded overseas June 18, 1941. His mother, Mrs. Mary Leslie Clarke, lives at Norwood, Ont. His citation reads:

"On December 15, near Ortona, having been already ordered to evacuate two tanks which had been destroyed by enemy action, Sgt. Clarke and his crew were forced out of a tight tank which was hit by fire from concealed anti-tank guns. Having successfully extricated his crew and thereby saved the danger of following his tanks from this cunningly concealed gun position, Sgt. Clarke, under heavy machine gun and mortar fire, determinedly set out on foot toward his Squadron Leader's position. On the way, he continued on until he was able to direct the fire of his Squadron Leader against the gun emplacement, destroying the position and guns.

"Only then did he return on foot to an ambulance for his own medical attention. This most conspicuous act of bravery and extreme devotion to duty in the face of the enemy was undoubtedly a contributing factor to the ultimate success of our attack on Ortona."

Man Arrested After Hold-up Of Front St. Store

Police Engage in Hectic Chase Along Campbell and Pinnacle Streets

MONEY RECOVERED

"This is a hold-up," warned a stranger as he held his hand in his windbreaker pocket and ordered he was armed upon entering the Kent Shoe Store, 223 Front St., on Saturday evening, Mr. J. C. McKee, manager of the store, compiled and handed over the contents of the till to the stranger snatched a hand full of bills and rushed out of the store.

A hectic police chase along Sack streets and over property lines in the downtown area followed and terminated when police apprehended Everett Wm. Allen, Belleville, on Victoria Ave. At the police station some $80 in cash was found on Van Allen and today he is being held on a charge of vagrancy. No weapon or gun was found on his person, police officials revealed.

Followed to Rear of Store

As Mr. J. C. McKee, manager of the Kent Shoe Store, entered the store at six o'clock Saturday evening a strange man, wearing a windbreaker followed him to the store where Mr. McKee took off his overcoat. Then the stranger approached and said: "I want to see you" and turned towards the front of the premises allowing Mr. McGee to lead the way. When near the cash register Mr. McKee relates he said, "This is a hold-up, open the cash register." Glancing around, Mr. McGee noticed the man's right hand was in his windbreaker pocket, indicating he was armed, although attempting to signal to customers in the store, Mr. McKee complied to the order and opened the register. The man grabbed the money and made a quick exit to the door, where he broke into a run. Shouted for Help

Mr. J. C. Latta, another employee of the store, realized the seriousness situation and joined Mr. McGee in the chase, as did Miss Evelyn Fox, store clerk.

Outside the store, Mr. Latta shouted, "Robber, robber," and fortunately P. C. Wright was standing only a short distance down King street and hearing the commotion joined the chase that led east on Campbell St., where P. C. Cartwright, who was near at the time, also gave him sight. Several officers chased the fleeing man north on Pinnacle St. to an alleyway north of the Belleville Sargent Co., when the fugitive sought to escape by climbing a fence. However, P. C. Carruthers followed, while P. C. Wright raced around on Victoria Ave., where Van Allen

Obituary

LATE MRS. ZENAS PALMER

The funeral of Mrs. Zenas Palmer, formerly of Foxboro, who died at Belleville General Hospital, took place from the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, Campbell St., on Sunday afternoon to the United Church at Foxboro where service was conducted by the pastor, the Rev. E. M. Cook.

Interment took place in Foxboro Cemetery. The bearers were Messrs. Harry Reid, Harold Gardiner, Harold Stewart, Charles Bird, Alfred Wickett and Everett McCann.

MRS. ISABELLA MARIA MARVIN

Mrs. Isabella Maria Marvin, widow of John Ryerson Marvin, died at her home on Main Street, Mrs. Clayton Carter, 5th Concession of Hillier Township, Prince Edward County, on Saturday, March 4th. She was in failing health for some time.

The late Mrs. Marvin, who was 78 years of age, was born in Elsevir Township, Hastings County, and was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Wannamaker. For a time she lived in Quebec and for the past fifty-five years she made her home in Hillier Township. She was a member of Burr's United Church and was an honorary member of the Women's Auxiliary. In the community she was highly esteemed.

Surviving her are three daughters, Mrs. Ray Humphrey, of Consecon; Mrs. Gilbert Phillips, of Consecon; and Mrs. Clayton Carter, Hillier Township; one son, Mr. Joseph Anson, of Timmins, Ontario.

The announcement of the funeral which will take place from her own house, is made in this issue.

LATE ARTHUR G. BURTON

The funeral of Arthur Clarence Burton, late resident of 144 Albert St., took place from the Martin Funeral Home, Bridge St., on Saturday afternoon and many friends were present. The service in the Belleville Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. H. C. Priestley, pastor of Victoria Ave. Baptist Church.

The honorary bearers were six members of the Belleville Post Office Letter Carriers' staff, namely Messrs. Follows; C. Sinfield, F. McBride, C. Howie, C. Jeffs, A. Skelton and C. Bird.

The active bearers were Messrs. Fred Mossman, Ed Timmerman, William Steward, Harold Poole, C. Wannamaker and C. Turner.

ALEX. McINROY (West Huntingdon)

West Huntingdon, March 6 (Special)—Alex McInroy died at his home at West Huntingdon on Sunday, March 5th. He was in failing health for some time.

The late Mr. McInroy, who was in his 81st. year, was born at West Huntingdon and was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Andrew McInroy. All his life was passed in the district, where he was born and he was highly esteemed in the community. In religion he was a member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, West Huntingdon.

Surviving him are his wife, the former Matilda Burkitt; three daughters, Mrs. Harry Thompson (Elma), West Huntingdon; Mrs. Percy McIlle (Pearl), Stirling, and Mrs. Stewart Carr (Bertha), Campbellford; two sons, Mr. Andrew McInroy, Peterborough and Mr. Joan B. McInroy, at home; one brother, Mr. Peter McInroy, West Huntingdon; one sister, Mrs. Ira Simmons, Foxboro. A daughter, Mrs. Roy McGill (Annie), Campbellford, is in some time ago.

The funeral announcements is made in this issue.

Brig. Graham Praises Highly Work of Canadians in War

Efficiency of Canadian Hospitals in Britain and Italy Commended

HOME ON SICK LEAVE

Trenton, March 6 — Just back from more than four years with the Canadians on the fighting front Brigadier Howard Douglas Graham, D.S.O., and Bar, E.D., has nothing but the highest praise for the work being done by the Canadian army in the gigantic struggle now taking place. He left the front line shortly before Christmas and since that time has been in hospital in Italy and England.

Brigadier Graham commanded an Ontario Brigade.

The men of all the units he said are magnificent in the work which they have done and are still doing. Included back in Canada, he was loud in his praise of the efficiency of the Canadian hospitals in Britain and England. Friends and relatives of soldiers sick or wounded, it was pointed out, could feel that the best possible care is given the men. "Well qualified and trained Canadian Nursing Sisters and doctors, many of whom are specialists. Along the same line Brigadier Graham particularly praised the great work being done by the stretcher bearers and medical officers with the front line troops, who have no hesitation in going out under fire to locate and bring in the wounded men who are quickly evacuated through First Aid posts and other medical units to base hospitals in the rear.

"The use of plasma and sulfa drugs in the forward areas," he said, "is undoubtedly saving thousands of lives which would otherwise be lost."

Veteran of First War

In the two-five years of age, Brigadier Graham is a veteran of the First Great War, having enlisted in the ranks of the C.E.F. in 1916. He served overseas with the 155th, 21st, and 15th battalions, and at Corps Headquarters in France. He was in many up to 1919.

He graduated from Osgoode Hall School in Toronto in 1922 and opened a practise in Trenton, being admitted to the bar in 1926. He was a member of the town council, served on the Public School Board and was Mayor of Trenton in 1934. He retained his interest in military affairs, however, continuing in the Non-Permanent Active Militia and was commissioned in the Hastings & Prince Edward Regiment in 1926. He joined the Militia Staff Course in 1937 and when war was declared was mobilized with his battalion as second in command. He arrived overseas in December, 1939, and was promoted to Lieut.-Colonel and was appointed to command the Hastings & Prince Edward Regiment on Sept. 2, 1940. He took the senior officers' course in England in 1941.

Took Regiment to France,

He took his regiment to France the latter to Sicily and Italy. He was awarded the D.S.O. for his brilliant leadership in the battle of Sicily and a bar to that decoration for his work in Italy.

Padres, too, came in for great praise from Brigadier Graham for the wonderful work which they are doing for the men at the front line directly under fire.

finally ran into the latter officer who was given to police by Mr. McGee. In the meantime, Mr. McGee had notified police headquarters and it was but a matter of seconds before Sergt. Ellis and P. C. Thomson arrived at the scene in the police car and the entire time elapsed from the time the stranger entered the Kent Shoe Store and the time of the arrest, was less than three minutes.

Description Given Police

Today at the police station complete descriptions of the robber were given to police by Mr. McGee, Mr. Latta and Miss Fox, while Van Allen is being held in custody on the vagrancy holding count. He will appear in court this week, Chief Probert announced, as he commended the work of the police officers for their work in the case.

Trenton Workman Narrowly Escapes Drowning in River

Trenton — Mr. Percy Meyers, 320 Front Street narrowly escaped drowning on Thursday night, when he was forced to spend more than half an hour with his body, except for his head and arms submerged in the icy waters of the Trent river.

Mr. Meyers was walking to his work at the Hinde & Dauche Paper Mill on the east side of the river at 5 p.m. and as it was his custom took a path across the ice from O'Hagan's property on the west side to the Canada Creosoting Co. on the east side where his duties there above considered this route since the ice one of the safest as the current there is not so swift as at other points in the river. Reaching the ice, Mr. Meyers was approaching the shore on the east side the ice broke away and he dropped suddenly through, several feet below the surface. He was brought him to the surface almost exactly the same point where he went down and though he got his head and arms above the ice he was unable to raise his body entirely due to the weight of his heavy clothing, which were filled with icy water, clinging with his arms on the ice. Mr. Meyers was rescued from there sticking close to the ice where he was forced to remain, by Burr's United Church for help, for more than half an hour.

Heard Man's Cries.

Finally Mr. Clinton Downs, just leaving his work at the Canada Creosoting Co. heard the man's cries and thought he could see a man's head above the ice but was not sure. He made sure it was someone and quickly returned to the plant where bringing a long plank which he stretched across the ice and went to the assistance of the trapped man, helping him to the surface where he was found to be almost in a state of complete collapse.

Mr. Downs assisted Mr. Meyers to his home just on the opposite shore of the river, where he was given hot drinks and medical attention and after a few hours rest was found to be none the worse for his desperate experience.

Clerk Has Lighted.

Trenton citizens were delighted on Saturday afternoon on finding up they saw the face of the clock on the post office all lit up for the first time since the Dominion government passed an order-in-council that after the end of March 1st, forbidding all signs and clocks being lit as a means of saving electricity.

This order has been rescinded and the clock has again been taken on its former bright appearance. Trenton people down town were always fascinated by the clock, visible for north or south and could always see the clock hanging above the building, and many and numerous were the complaints received by town officials as to the necessity and the advisability of blackening out the clock, which for so many years had rendered such a service to the town people.

Thanked Fer Seeka.

Rev. W. Bain, convener of knitting of the local branch of the Red Cross, has received a letter from Sergeant J. A. King in a German prison camp, thanking her for a pair of mitts, which he received through the Red Cross and for which he was very grateful indeed.

It is encouraging to those working on the home front to know that those who are in touch appreciate the comforts being sent to them through the Red Cross, helping to give them courage and endurance during the many months of prison life which at times must seem endless.

Marmora Commencement Exercises Held At High School

Marmora, March 4. — Marmora High School Commencement held in the Town Hall on Thursday evening attracted a very large crowd which at the fall of the curtain, decided the event had been admirably put on. H. W. Sabine of the High School Board was the chairman for the occasion and referred in glowing terms to the academic teaching which was given at the school as well as to the athletic accomplishments of its pupils. With Audrey Burwash at the piano, the program opened with the singing of "O Canada". This was followed by chorus "Dear Old High School", by full attendance of pupils. Cecile Black led in the School yell. Boys of Grade VIII put on a clever exhibition of gymnastics which won loud applause.

Diplomas Presented.

Principal W. R. Hamilton, B.A., then made the presentation of High School graduation Diplomas and Intermediate certificates. Pupils to receive graduation diplomas were, Jean E. Bonter, Dorothy E. Rowell, Rena H. Johnston, Anna E. Kosji, and Laura M. Nickle.

Those to receive Intermediate certificates were, Beulah M. Barnett, Cecil J. Brownson, Earl Cousins, Annie M. Dantonah, Jean A. Elliott, William E. Hubbs, Dorothy J. Goodchild, Frederick C. Hulsman, Thomas J. Johnston, Rita E. Lashwa, Glen R. Lavender, Dorothy A. Lummiss, Monica C. McGrath, Donald M. Quackenbush, Donald D. Reid, Melissa, M. Richardson, Clarence E. Shannon.

Those who will be receiving crest awards for full score of points at the first annual Field Day on November 3rd, 1943, were also called to the platform for congratulations. Crest Winners are:—

Junior Boys—Harold Altbart, Donald Henry.

Senior Boys — Jim Neal, Earl Cousins, William McInroy.

3rd of Sidney Aiken's W.M.S.

Third Sidney, Mar. 4.—The Woman's Missionary Society of the Aiken United Church held its monthly meeting on Feb. 24th at the home of the past president, Mrs. Fred Westover. Mrs. Gillis, a guide for "daily living," was the theme for the worship service which was in charge of the president, Mrs. R. K. Hubble. "Nothing would do more to make the world safe for democracy than a revival of home religion by which I mean the Christianity taught in the new's book," was stated. Parents who are Christians must look first after their own lives and realise how much they owe to their early teachings of a Christian home. This was the gift from their own parentage—are they passing it on to their children of today? They should hand on to their children as a personal legacy at least some of the verses from the Bible which have become dear and familiar to themselves. A reading, "In confidence shall be your strength", was given and was a spiritual message as taken from that verse of Scripture. A summary of the first and second books of the Studies was given by Mrs. Lee Grills and proved very interesting and helpful as a guide to reading the Studies. The worship service was closed with prayer by Mrs. Trout. Irwin. During the business period a letter was read by the corresponding secretary, Mrs. Baldwin, received from P.O. Gordon Spafford, expressing appreciation for the remembrance sent him at Christmas. Mrs. L. W. Spafford, Mrs. Lee Grills and Mrs. Fred Westover were appointed as a committee in charge of the Thank Offering service to be held at the church. Announcement was made of the Presbyterial to be held in the Tabernacle Church when Mrs. G. E. Forbes will address the gathering. The fifth chapter of the study book was ably given by Mrs. Lee Grills, Mrs. Ken Jones, and in the absence of Mrs. Allan Lalin, her paper was read by Mrs. Carmen Grills. In the presentation of this chapter, Christian worship in different countries was depicted, and this created in the members present a sense of fellowship with Christians of other countries and a desire to do the same God of love and mercy.

Canadian Drivers Have Good Record on Front in Italy

By WILLIAM STEWART
(CP War Correspondent)

London, March 6 —(CP)— Odds and ends about the Canadians in Italy—

It's no exaggeration to say Canadian lorry and transport drivers are the best in Italy; they were carefully trained in England and have kept all their good-driving habits in the Mediterranean theatre; they have gone back to driving on the right after months on the left in Britain.

Canadian convoys in the war area are neat-looking and fast-moving. Traffic accidents are at a minimum. The drivers are signal-conscious and habitually give the other driver as much room to pass. When passing a convoy halts, a man leaps out and takes up a station to guide passing traffic. There's a man opposite every vehicle indicating whether the road beyond is clear; if there's traffic approaching from the opposite direction, if the road is good or bad.

Safety leagues in Canada would take their hats off to Canadian army drivers and their road conduct.

The Canadians salute the British Tommy for his courage and discipline. The Tommy is regarded as a man who will tackle anything. They're an easygoing air which is deceiving and a mild manner which belies their fighting qualities and staying powers.

When an important move is under way, the British clamp down a road control system which permits them to move unheard of quantities of motor transport over restricted road facilities.

All around, what the British seem to lack in dash, they make up in patient organization, endurance and inexhaustible pains.

A soldier has to make the acquaintance of dozens of battle sounds before he can comfortably distinguish friend from foe, keen minimum.

Our shellfire and German shellfire each has its own distinctive series of sounds. Shells coming our way or going somebody else's sound differently. The German 88 millimetre gun is recognized instantly by its rapid chatter. It seems to be about three times as fast as a Bren-gun or a Tommy which has a jam within sixty rounds firing.

The explosion of a German mortar bomb likewise has its individual sound and so have the couplike mumie explosions of our mortars. The sound of shrapnel through the air likewise has its own discomforting note. So have snipers bullets.

Lead Foil Used To Disrupt Radio Location Finders

Samples of the lead foil recently used by the German Luftwaffe to disrupt Allied radio location finders during bombing raids over London have already been received in Belleville, having been passed by censors in letters from Canadians overseas. One sample of the foil recently received by George Fralick of Fralick's radio store on Bridge St., from his brother, Richard Fralick, of the 1st Canadian L. of C. Signals. Howard has been overseas for almost-and-one-half years.

First Allied report that the Germans were using the lead foil to disrupt British radio, locators was approximately two weeks ago, although the success of the trick was not indicated in the letter received by Mr. Fralick it was stated the foil "hung like icicles" on trees and buildings in London following the raid.

Made from rather ordinary appearing black paper, the material is slightly more than three-quarters of an inch in width with a three thin slits of lead running through the centre. The lead is the full width of the paper and will carry electric current the same as wire as was proven by test. Quantities of the foil are dropped from high flying planes and as it floats down the interference with radio reception of the radio location devices making it difficult for defence stations to locate the bombing planes.

PAINTED LIKE BARBER POLES

A U. S. Bomber Base in England, March 6 —(CP)— Some Germans pulled something new against a United States bomber attack yesterday, sending Messerschmitt planes painted like barber poles through a formation of heavy bombers without firing a shot. They had no propellers and white hubs. The base of the planes was aluminum with red stripes. Others underside were 10 black crosses. Luftwaffe insignia. Messerschmitts usually are painted in dun-color camouflage like the Allied fighters.

TO EXPAND KINGSTON HOSPITAL

Kingston, March 6 —(CP)— Board of Governors of the Kingston General Hospital announced yesterday it has approved a $1,000,000 hospital expansion plan designed to modernize and extend the present institution. Plans call for 200 additional beds, an addition to the nurses' home, new children's hospital, additional laboratory and kitchen space, larger out-patients' quarters and improved X-ray and cancer services.

FOXBORO Mission Band Dinner

Foxboro.—Members of the Mission Band sponsored a dinner in the I.O.D.E. rooms on Thursday which was largely attended and greatly enjoyed. The ladies were called to order and the W.M.S. hymn, "Tell it" March meeting, Mrs. J. G. Sills led a most helpful worship service. The theme being "The Bible, a Guide for Daily Living". After the meditation was given Mrs. S. C. Gay read the Scripture lesson and Mrs. Sills gave some prayer thoughts on "How to Use My Bible"—Two stories from the Story Book by Mrs. F. C. Hodgen and interesting articles from the Missionary Monthly were given by Mrs. W. Wickett. Mrs. Ash gave a reading, Mrs. W. Rorabough gave a reading on Temperance and Mrs. Harold Stewart read a poem. Mrs. W. Simmons then rendered an appropriate solo, "My Mother's Bible" and Mrs. R. Thurlow gave some articles on the life of Miss Irene Moore and she closed with a prayer for all missionaries. The President, Mrs. S. C. Gay, then took charge and spoke of a number of members who were unable to attend through illness. The Treasurer, Mrs. W. Scott, reported over $67 on hand. Mrs. E. Tummon gave some helpful thoughts on "Stewardship Principles," and said a faithfulness signified the extent of stewardship.

Temperance Secretary, Mrs. M. C. Reynolds sent in a paper which was given by Mrs. C. Ash. Mrs. Ash as leader of the Mission Band, received $16.74 raised. She is donating a prize to each member doing kindest deed. Mrs. Ash was appointed delegate to the Presbyterial to be held in Tabernacle Church, Belleville, on March 15th. Mrs. Stewart will be appointed at the next meeting at Mrs. W. Wickett's.

Trunbridge Wells, England—(CP)— Lady Torrens, 90, widow of Sir Frederick Trevres, famous surgeon who operated on King Edward VII at the beginning of the century, died here.

SALE OF BONDS FOR WAR

An advertisement by Scotia Pacific, Mar. 4 (AP)—The boys who bomb the enemy air base at Rabaul almost daily have a rule—"Until cost you a war bond or you miss." To date, sale of few war bonds has been brought about.

London —(CP)— The Government's first "safety-first" policy as outlined by the Ministry of War Transport calls for the building of more trunk roads and reserving of certain trunk roads strictly for motor traffic.

TO PAY TAXES PROMPTLY

War-time taxes are necessarily so heavy as to be a financial problem for every Canadian. It is advisable to save money to pay taxes promptly, but if through unforeseen circumstances you find yourself without sufficient cash to meet them when due, a bank loan is probably the best solution to your problem. A loan may actually save money for you by enabling you to avoid penalties for overdue taxes.

Our policy in making personal loans is to help Canadian wage-and-salary-earners, professional men and women and business executives to keep financially fit. We therefore make such loans—at very low rates and on easy terms of payment. Do not hesitate to talk over your needs in confidence with the manager of our branch in your own locality.

The cost is low, and the terms are fair:

Only $3.65 for a $100 loan repayable in 12 monthly instalments; smaller and larger loans at proportionate cost.

A MESSAGE FROM THE POSTMASTER GENERAL

Ottawa,

To all Canadians:

Last year, over 29,000,000 lbs. of mail were despatched from the Base Depot Office to our Overseas Forces. No wonder the Base Depot Office is called the busiest post office in the world—for every day over 100,000 letters, 25,000 parcels and 250,000 newspapers are despatched to the Forces from Ottawa. Yet due to carelessness or oversight in addressing, as many as 1 out of every 5 letters and 1 out of every 3 parcels are delayed in delivery to the Canadian Postal Corps. Addressees still insist on using abbreviations of rank, or omitting full initials or both. Some addressees still omit their unit or full address. Others use a post office box number instead of the proper address. Such errors cause great additional handling and delay in delivery. Parcels suffer in addition from careless packing and wrapping. Many are packed with other articles than those for which they were intended. Others are packed with such shortage from the addressee's point of view as to be unsuitable for overseas delivery.

You can help your Post Office to speed the delivery of your mail to your overseas friends. Just follow these few simple rules. They will help us to make sure that the parcels in your care arrive in good condition and without delay.

If you will take an extra moment to make sure the address is right you will be helping us to give our overseas forces a better all-round service.

Yours sincerely,
Postmaster General.

DO THESE 3 SIMPLE THINGS

1. Make sure the address is clearly and correctly written.
2. Write a return address in the upper left hand corner of the envelope.
3. Mail in the correct postage, and mail as early in the day as you can.

Look Jimmy— from the RED CROSS!

Who said we were 'Out of it'?

IMPRISONED by the enemy—out of the battle, yet still with a fighting soldier's heart—compelled to wait on the side-lines of the war for the duration—surely such thoughts must be the greatest hardships our prisoners of war have to endure. Broken hearts can hurt worse than broken limbs.

To such men, in 1943, went five-and-a-half million dollars worth of Red Cross parcels. In them were more than food, comforts. To each harassed soldier these parcels were reminders that their loyalty and the courage they displayed were not forgotten.

The need for Red Cross parcels has grown to staggering proportions. This need must be met by contributions from the men and women in Canada.

Let response be immediate and generous. Give money for this work of the Red Cross, work which must be done—and which can be performed by no other organization.

Ideal Pastor, Ideal Doctor

Prime Minister Churchill with his unrivalled wit the other day told a luncheon gathering of the Royal College of Surgeons that his "patient"—Britain—"is no longer in mortal danger: on that I can give you absolute confidence."

Mr. Churchill with that great oratorical style of his is the ideal speaker of this age for he has proven his right to be called great for the addresses he has delivered in the House of Commons, at meetings and at conferences of the leaders of the United Nations. He has spoken at his old school of Harrow to the boys of today and promised to say he has left there among the scholars an inspiration that will endure in their lives.

But the other day he was in scientific company and setting himself to the occasion he spoke just as a great doctor orator would speak. And he satisfied the company of surgeons that he could describe his patient well and that he had shown the ideal bedside manner.

"I have a patient I have been looking after for some years, as you may know," he began and added that his patient—Britain—was out of danger. Then he went on in language that would suit a doctors' conference, "you must not suppose that this has in any way reduced my work. On the contrary, now that the great danger is past, my patient has reached the stage where the restiveness, fretfulness and impatience of convalescence and weariness of the long prolongation of the disease, while they do not cause the same anxiety in one's breast, nevertheless require a very full measure of one's personal attention."

Mr. Churchill having not long ago been a patient himself in North Africa, was able to describe the patient's "restiveness, fretfulness and impatience of convalescence." The surgeons saw that he was having fun at his own expense as well as being witty for the pleasure of his company.

Britain was the ideal patient with Churchill the ideal doctor. The people trusted him and he knew them at their worth of steadfastness and determination.

How that Britain has been in his leadership, his resourcefulness, his ability to inspire and his uncanny skill at diagnosing the maniacal Hitler and the disease which festers Germany—is the aggression against the world! In the international and political sphere, it was well for Britain that she had a genius in leadership at her head who could expose the inmost secrets of the diseased mentality of Hitler and Mussolini and that with all the great tasks of his office, without haste or nervousness, with the calmness of knowledge and strength in his eye he could face the situation in 1940. In speeches that will live down the ages he has described the progress with which the British Empire and her Allies of the United Nations are marching to the overthrowing of Hitler.

Lord Moran, one of his physicians who attended him in his recent illness, said that he had seen Mr. Churchill more than once when the news of shattering reverses was brought to him "and in my heart I have come to think of him as invincible." That is the viewpoint of Britain, too.

His description to the fraternity of surgeons of the progress of medicine in the war years is in the finest oratory:—"Human inventiveness has been fanned by the fierce winds of war. New drugs of remarkable potency are being made commonplace . . . The discoveries of healing science must be the inheritance of all. Disease must be attacked whether is occurs in the poorest or richest . . . simply on the grounds that it is an enemy and it must be attacked just in the same way as a fire brigade will give its full assistance to the humble cottage as readily as it will give it to the most important mansion."

The Globe and Mail Celebrates

On March 4, 1844, the Toronto Globe made its first appearance, a small four-page paper of which only two hundred copies run off the press. Last Saturday The Globe and Mail celebrated its centennial and with the story of the one hundredth anniversary appeared a drawing of a typical scene of that city, twenty-three years before Confederation when styles of dress, means of conveyance and traffic and needs were so different from what they are today. Then the people lived a more leisurely life than their descendants were to do a century after. Few in Canada can realize the vast change which has taken place since that newspaper first appeared.

The Globe of those days was founded as a "weekly entirely devoted to politics and literature, accompanied with full details of commercial and general intelligence." This independence of attitude is preserved in The Globe and Mail of today. It was started in the midst of a turbulent political period.

The founder, George Brown, was the son of Peter Brown. Both had come from Scotland and settled in New York and later in Toronto where in 1843, they were publishing The Banner, a paper devoted to religious matters. George left The Banner and next year established The Globe. He called for representative government implied by the legislation passed and approved in 1841. In seven years Brown had become a national figure and occupied a seat in the Canadian Legislature. He then took up the battle of the Clergy Reserve with success. For years Brown had been through The Globe advocating enactment of legislation for the union of British North America and finally saw it come into being in 1867. In 1873 The Globe became a daily. The editorial and business genius of George Brown and his brother, John Gordon Brown, was reflected in the expansion of the newspaper. Under a good succession, they were outspoken and independent but Gordon's cool judgment tempered somewhat the fiery nature of George. Robert Jaffray who had become a figure in affairs, later became a director.

After the death of George Brown Senator Jaffray and later his son, William G. Jaffray, were in control of The Globe. In 1936 the controlling interest was purchased by William Henry Wright with C. Geo. McCullagh becoming president and publisher. Within a month The Globe purchased The Mail and Empire and merged the two newspapers as The Globe and Mail.

Through its long history the paper has seen the rise of Toronto to the present great city it is and Canada and Ontario grow more and more. Its importance in focussed the public's attention on the needs of the times as they developed and helped to shape public opinion for the nation's welfare.

The Globe and Mail still uses at the paper's masthead the words of "Junius" a political writer of the late eighteenth century whose letters were immensely popular in England and by which the writer is never known. They were chosen by George Brown when first The Globe appeared back in 1844, "The subject who is truly loyal to the Chief Magistrate will neither advise nor submit to arbitrary measures."

Pneumatic Tubes for Garbage?

(From the Scientific American)

Seemingly fantastic propositions, when backed by the solid judgment of qualified technicians, deserve studied thought before dismissal. Thus when Sanitary Engineer Morris M. John of Schenectady, N.Y., proposes that the refuse of cities of the future be disposed of through system of pneumatic tubes, the idea should not be dismissed as too abruptly impractical.

Garbage, ashes and household refuse of all kinds would be handled by the tube systems, equipped with air lock chambers at each point of entry and powered by steel-plant type blower stations to maintain adequate suction.

Such a system, as Mr. Cohen says, would require a "complete reorientation of engineering ideas." It would also provide a huge market for construction materials and labor.

It is a great dishonor to religion to imagine that it is an enemy to mirth and cheerfulness and a severe exacter of pensive looks and solemn faces.—Sir Walter Scott.

JUST FOLKS

BRAVE BOY

I never dreamed the years could fly
For one-so small so swiftly by,
But yesterday, it seems to me,
I had him sitting on my knee,
A wide-eyed little tousled head,
As unto him some tale I read.

Not long ago, beside his bed,
I waited till his prayers he'd said,
Or, standing at the kitchen sink,
Smiled at his lisped: "I wanna drink!"
Not long ago—ten years—no more,
I took him to the school house door.

I've still the medicaments I'd use
For every little cut and bruise.
I still can see his trembling chin
When, bleeding, he'd come running in,
To say: "I've hurt myself," and I
Would answer: "Brave boy never cry!"

I thought the hazards of the street
Were all he'd ever have to meet.
Now danger very real and grim
By day and night is facing him,
But this I know, in peril grave
My little boy is being brave.

Notes From Britain:
Canadians Feel at Home On Visits to Edinburgh

By VERNON M. KIFF
(Special to Ottawa Journal and the Ontario Intelligencer)

EDINBURGH, February.

On Princes street in the shadow of the imposing Scott memorial stood four soldiers with "Canada" on their shoulders. They said they had come to Edinburgh when their leaves began arriving and they liked the look of their nine days in London, but liked it so well in the Scottish capital that they had given it all their time and were returning to camp the same night. The incident was typical. We find Canadians everywhere in Edinburgh. Some of them were looking over the ancient Castle this afternoon. A Canadian officer on a tour from Vancouver sat beside us in the hotel lounge this morning. We have a long chat about the prices in shops and on the streets, and two of them on a train today had a charming little Scottish girl with them and obviously had set out to show them Scotland.

The Canadians over here love Scotland, and Scotland loves them, especially Edinburgh. They say London is too big for comfort—that everything is so far away, somewhere else it is four to six miles away. Edinburgh, they say, is just right. It has the shops, the theatres, the historical setting. The people are friendly, intensely interested in Canada. Almost everything, of course, except for their uniformed guests, and Canada's contribution to the movement.

Only too-brief stay of two days in Edinburgh gives us confirmation of all this. The Castle rises high above the city, perched on the base, that grim grey building where King David Bruce lived and flourished and which then was old, a something not to be made old anywhere. The Royal Mile, that street of modern shops and cluttered history, leads down from the Castle with partly-modernized Holyrood House at the end, rich in history and historical associations. The hills which encircle the city are dotted with trees, the street are clean and packed by busy, friendly, well-dressed Scottish men and women. Air raids are to forgotten when the damage in the city is negligible. Really Edinburgh is—something to be seen. Canadians have that in mind for a longer visit when times are happier.

It is best to take these two days in Edinburgh in order.

There was, first, a visit to an iron foundry notable not for its size, or the scope of its operations, but for the fact that it is the only foundry in the world where Canadian coins are cast today. There were some hundreds of young Scottish girls employed in the grimy dirt of the place, dismiling in the terrific clamor of the machinery, working at the various girls who seemed much more interested in us than in the war industry, developed since the Battle of Dunkirk to meet an almost impossible demand. Experienced labor was impossible to secure. Training was a matter of almost individually, and the extensions in the use of women for hard, heavy tasks has proved very successful. The average age of the women workers is 19 and four-fifths of them are married. They work six days a week, five days get about £2 10 shilling weekly which, with overtime, is the wages of men doing the same work. There is a good canteen where the workers get a lunch for a shilling. Some children there are, civic nurseries to take care of their babies while they labor at the forges and bench.

We talked to a pretty girl named Hannah, who said that in peace times she was a shop assistant and modelled for coats. She also said frankly that she would prefer to model for coats, but until the foundry cheerfully where the necessity was great. The description of a female officer had left her no choice, she welcomed the chance to stay in Edinburgh, and she was enjoying the experience.

An hour or so in Edinburgh Castle was but a fleeting glimpse which left one hungry for more. On the terrace outside the walls is a patch of pavement which officially is part of Nova Scotia, as declared by King Charles First so that he could create a new line of baronets of New Scotland. The old moat, long since dry, is now a fascinating children's playground and to an attacking force it must have been in times of simpler weapons. There is a long stone wall with ancient walls and buildings heavy with the aroma of history, and the quadrangle which holds the old Hall of the Parliament. The living and dining quarters of Scottish sovereigns, and the modern and magnificent War Memorial. The builders of the Memorial did a magnificent job in blending the old history, architecture, and the building, erected since the last war, which has gone into its setting without a jarring note. Inside the note is dignity and beauty. There is a central Altar for which the foundation is an outcropping of the natural rock on which Edinburgh Castle is built; and it seemed fine and symbolic. Because here is more than a rock and an old fort there is the heart of Scotland, valiant and unconquerable.

We left time for but a few of the treasures of this hallowed spot. We did see, however, the city crown of St. Margaret, both in its still used sometimes for weddings and christenings. One could hear room for 13 chairs. The Castle is full of things quite interesting.

We drove slowly down the Royal Mile to Holyrood where the Queen still resides sometimes stay. In the old days Holyrood was the residence of Scottish royalty when the throne was the seat of Parliament.

Here the evening we were guests at dinner of the Earl of Rosebery, Liberal Conservative leader in Scotland, a son of Lord Rosebery who was prime minister and a peer who has always taken a deep interest in a serious student of agriculture and agricultural affairs.

The next morning a young officer of the Royal Navy took us in charge took us by train across the famous Forth bridge to the naval dockyards at Rosyth, a city of 30,000, where thousands of men are employed in the refitted and accommodation for the biggest ships of the Royal Navy.

The feature was a visit to a great British aircraft carrier, which was almost more impressive when compared to the little speed boats and destroyers that I had seen only a few days earlier. There is singular grace and symmetry in the vast landing deck, the spacious accommodation for officers, the organized diversities of a floating hangar, and the enthusiasm of the captain over his command left no understanding.

Then, in the late afternoon, we drove back to Edinburgh, the Castle standing in subtle across the darkening sky and the border-ing gardens.

YOU'D BE SURPRISED!

DON'T CHEER!

"Don't cheer, boys, the poor devils are dying!"

These memorable words were uttered by Captain John W. Philip at the battle of Santiago on July 3, 1898.

Captain Philip at the time was in command of the U.S.S. Texas, which, with the U.S.S. Brooklyn, forced the Spanish cruiser "Oquendo" to run aground.

Naturally the victorious American crew broke out in cheering when they saw the enemy's vessel wrecked and in flames.

At this point Captain Philips shouted to his crew:

"Don't cheer, boys, the poor devils are dying!"

The captain made no reference to the Spanish sailors in his official report of the engagement to the Secretary of the Navy, and neither the Navy Department nor the public knew any official record of it.

Consequently the wording of the famous order varies in different accounts.

The Office of Naval Records and Library a few years ago gave the words as, "Don't cheer, men; those poor fellows are dying."

Lieut. Cabot Lodge, in his account of the battle, stated that Captain Philip said, "Don't cheer. The poor devils are dying."

The second speech it is almost invariably quoted: "Don't cheer, boys; the poor devils are dying."

John Woodward Philip was born in Malden, Mass., and was an active adult life in the U. S. Navy.

He was a member of the famous class in Philips Exeter Academy of the family dropped the two final letters in the name about the time of the Civil War.

At the naval academy he was known as a dry cadet, generally full of good humor and trenchant wit.

He served throughout the Civil War and was promoted in action for the Atlantic coast.

On August 10, 1866, soon after the war, he married Miss Heath in which he distinguished himself he was promoted from captain to commodore.

In 1898 he was made a rear admiral.

He died suddenly in 1900 of a heart attack while in command of the Brooklyn Navy Yard.

WEDDINGS

SLEMIN—LEWIS

The Rev. J. G. Hornsby officiated at a lovely afternoon wedding in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church on Saturday, March 4th, at three o'clock, when Florence Gertrude Lewis, daughter of Mrs. Lewis and the late Mr. Thomas Lewis, Waterloo, became the bride of Flight Lieut. Harry Charles Slemin, son of Mrs. Slemin and the late Mr. Harry Charles Slemin of Toronto.

Following Mr. J. Stuart Hamilton at the console of the organ throughout the ceremony and during the signing of the register.

Forming the pretty floral background for the bridal party was a graceful setting of snowy white spirea, pussy willow and ferns in tall white standards in the chancel. Interspersed were candles against the dark green ferns. Flanking the bridal altar were baskets of white flowers, tied with the guests' pews.

Entering the church on the arm of her father, who was with the R.C.A.F., to the strains of the bridal chorus from Lohengrin, the bride was a radiant model in her wedding gown of ivory lace, beautifully lace fashioned with sweeping train. Her long veil of ivory bridal net was held to her hair with a small dainty cap headdress misted with orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses and bouvardia.

Mrs. John Northway, Jr., her sister's matron of honor, was attired in a model in pink chiffon and pink ostrich tipped hat. Her arm bouquet was of pink sweet peas and pink carnations.

The bridegroom attendant was her nicely Miss Gillian Northway, who was charmingly gowned in a dress of pink taffeta and a bandeau of flowers around her hair. She carried a colonial bouquet.

Lieut. Commander G. E. Kemball, R.C.N., was groomsman and the ushers were Mr. W. J. Grant, Toronto, Flight Lt. Charles Seager, Trenton, Mr. John Northway, Jr., Toronto, Mr. H. C. Spafford, Toronto, N.Y.

For the reception at the home of the bride's mother following the ceremony, Mrs. Lewis received the guests wearing a black afternoon dress accented with sequin trimmed jacket and black accessories and corsage of gardenias. The mother of the groom, who assisted with the receiving, had chosen for the occasion an ensemble of black crepe accented with black accessories and corsage of pink roses.

Later the bride and groom left on a wedding trip to the Laurentians. For travelling the bride chose an attractive coat of blue trimmed with brown beaver, her accessories and floral corsage of gardenias. She carried a muff of blue fox.

On their return Flt. Lt. and Mrs. Slemin will live in Toronto.

Bridge St. Church Friendship Group

On Sunday evening the Fellowship Group of Bridge St. United Church met at the close of the regular church service. The meeting opened with the group joining in the hymn-song led by LAC. Allan Thomson. This was followed by a short devotional period by which all became acquainted with their neighbors. Mrs. Ruttle welcomed the late and Mrs. Lillian Lafontaine then gave a solo which was pleasing. Following another sing-song led by Cpl. Harold Mundell, a dainty lunch was served. Padre Hamilton of Mountain View, spoke a few words before the Victorian Chain with the singing of "Abide With Me." A closing and hearty invitation is extended to all young people in the city and to all those in uniform to attend these meetings at the close of the regular church services each Sunday evening.

3,903 Visits During Year Made by V.O.N.

The annual meeting, marking the 30th anniversary of the Toronto Branch of the Victorian Order of Nurses, was held in the Canadian National Railways Building on Thursday evening.

Invitations had been issued for the meeting with the added attraction of bingo and refreshments and the record attendance was well worth the effort put forward by the executive and committee in charge.

The president, Mr. R. P. Gilmour, in her opening remarks thanked all those present for their hearty co-operation during the year and giving a brief outline of the work done by the organization during the 1943. The gratitude of the Society was extended, he said, to Miss Lamb, manager for her assistance to Mrs. Blackett in driving her to and from meetings, and to Miss Cunningham of Mrs. Watts' coming from Ottawa.

Mrs. Wells' report attended was her nicely Miss Gillian Northway, who was charmingly Kate Greenaway frock of pink taffeta and a bandeau of flowers around her hair. She carried a colonial bouquet.

Lieut. Commander G. E. Kemball, R.C.N., was groomsman and the ushers were Mr. W. J. Grant, Toronto, Flight Lt. Charles Seager, Trenton, Mr. John Northway, Jr., Toronto, Mr. H. C. Spafford, Toronto, N.Y.

Prayer Book for a Bride

Dear Mrs. Bleckman:

I have always wanted to carry a prayer book at my marriage ceremony, and my fiance would like to give me one as a wedding present. Is it proper for me to carry one with a white chiffon gown and a shoulder length veil. Would you approve of my carrying a prayer book with a corsage in the centre and a shower of lilies-of-the-valley?

M. H.

Many, many brides today are carrying prayer books instead of bouquets and in these days particularly this beautiful plan has a deeply spiritual significance. To carry out your plan, which will be quite correct, would be especially memorable by your bridegroom's choice of this precious gift as your wedding present. The prayer book carried by the bride is white, bound in white satin with white satin ribbons tied with lilies-of-the-valley, and attached to your prayer book you may have a single white orchid, or a spray of butterfly orchids, or lilies-of-the-valley.

Thank-You Notes

Dear Miss Bleckman:

Will you please give me a general idea of thank-you note for a wedding gift?

P. F.

A general outline of a thank-you note for a gift is: (1) thanks for the gift, (2) how much you like it, (3) mention the gift and (3), mention the gift specifically and, if possible, make comments about its particular feature. If you have an extra touch tell how you are planning to use it in your new home. For example: "Thank you for the ——— gift. I shall always remember it as the ——— gift which will make my housework easier. Tom and I are enchanted with the beautiful linen. Its graceful base and its beautiful shade will be a lovely addition to the living room I'm planning. Thank you for your goodness to us. We'll be looking for you on "the" day!

Affectionately,

Florence'

Wedding Announcement

Dear Mrs. Beekman,

My father is dead and my mother is very ill and cannot attend my wedding. I've decided to have the marriage of Mrs. Brown's daughter," or how?

Miriam.

If the bride is devoted to her stepfather, this is the customary form used.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ward Smith request the honor of your presence at the marriage of their daughter Miriam Foster Brown (The bride's full name should be used.) Also correct is this form:

At the marriage of Mr. Henry Ward Smith and his daughter, Miriam Foster Brown

Zion W.M.S. World Day of Prayer

The World's Day of Prayer for Zion W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. Cecil Ketcheson on Friday afternoon with eight members present, this being the smallest attendance on record. The thought that there would be many taking part in the same service made it very impressive. Mrs. Searles read a letter from Mrs. R. G. Bailey on "Christian Stewardship," which wished that everyone adopt systematic giving. The allocation for the coming year is $60. Mrs. Parnsworth read a letter from Mrs. Parnsworth on "Temperance." The officers were elected with Mrs. Ketcheson presiding with the benediction. Collection amounted to $1.80. The W.A. will be the next service made in Ketcheson and had a pot luck dinner at noon, which it realized a nice amount.

Women's Activities

CARMEL Y.P.U.

The regular meeting of the Carmel Y.P.U. was held on March 1, in the Carmel United Church. Miss Hilda Stokes presided at the meeting with quiet music. Miss Jean Cooke read the Scripture reading followed with Miss Eleanor Leonard leading in prayer. Mr. James Fox gave the topic. Miss Marion Chambers gave a reading. The meeting closed with the Mizpah benediction. Recreation was in charge of Mr. Byron Brunson.

PLAINFIELD W.I.

The March meeting of Plainfield W. I. was held at the home with a good attendance. The president, Mrs. Clarence Hall, presided and all joined in community singing. In the business period it was decided to donate $ 10 to the Emergency Fund of the P.W.I. and $10 to the Red Cross drive. Plans were made for the concert to be held at the Community Hall the week. Letters of thanks for boxes received were read from Drury Denyes, Arthur Carleton and Harold Carleton. Mrs. Clayton Hall had charge of the programme and gave a very interesting paper on the topic, "Home Decorating." Readings were given by Mrs. Ed. Emmerson and Mrs. Fred Hall. Mrs. Emmerson also contributed an Irish contest which brought the meeting to a close. Lunch was served and a social half-hour spent.

BEAUTY By Helen Jameson

Lingerie as Nature? Let us Hope.

To those quaint old times when a touch of rouge branded a woman as being "past the hour," there is, I think, a great deal of talk about "natural" beauty. Anything artificial being regarded with scorn, our costume jewelry would have been considered shocking. If we simply could not have pure gold and jewels, you decided they might do for the sake of ornament.

The synthetic imitation was regarded as useful. If you had beauty griefs, you confined them nobly and with dignity to your most private beliefs on Mary Jane's chin. That was her misfortune, she did nothing about it. And, believe it or not, mothers of plain little girls actually said: "She is not beautiful, so she will be good." Why not, I ask, both? That miracle has been accomplished by millions of girls.

Natural beauty is a perfectly elegant; that we all realize. But how many women are to be found? Every woman who has passed her fortieth birthday, knowing full well that she is not beautiful, believes and usually demonstrates her belief that nature can take no modern improvements. She can compare the refinements of her face in the mirror upon arising — complexion carefully cleansed, hair with the more radiant person she becomes when the war paint has been removed, and her hair, if her hair has arranged becomingly. It is gratifying to know that we don't have to stay as we are. We can apply highlights from the outside in.

If every woman had a lovely ivory complexion, and cheeks like the budding rose; if every figure conformed to standard, and all measurements; if nakles were slender and ankles trim; if hair curled naturally, arranged itself amiably, there would be no more cosmetics through the doors of beauty shops, nor would the

In Put remember, every time you put on your hat you are wrecking the lovely hirsute structure.

Hair is a delicate and individuality of arrangement. It is surprising what one can do with a resourceful young lady-will think up. Ringlets and rosebud curls fill in odd spaces, make the coiffure decorative, and give many unlimited possibilities for charming designs.

Hair must be silky and glistening and to that end water is used. It is shampooed frequently, and shampooed frequently. Hair, also, should look free as air. No more plastered down effects.

Montreal Canadiens Continue Unbeaten Pace in the N.H.L. Winning Twice Over Weekend

Toronto Leafs Are Victims of the Powerful Team Coached by Dick Irvine

HAWKS SPLIT EVEN

By The Canadian Press

Three different sets of home-and-home results netted a National Hockey League weekend which saw practically all the fancy touches written, as usual, by Montreal Canadiens.

In inflicting double disaster on Toronto Maple Leafs, wartime hockey's "big" team:—

1. Stretched their victory streak to eight straight;

2. Played their 22nd consecutive game without defeat on home ice;

3. Rounded their home total to 202, four more than the league record Leafs put on the books last season.

4. Mixed within four points of the 77 Bigger Bruins acquired in 1929-30 to establish-a record for points in a single season.

On other fronts: Detroit Red Wings and Chicago Black Hawks broke even. Wings withing the Saturday night tilt, 5-3, on home ice and dropping a 6-1 verdict in Chicago Sunday, while Chicago handed Rangers 10-2 at Boston Saturday and played to a 4-4 draw in the Windy City tournament at New York. Rebuilt Hawks still failed to clarify the struggle for alignment among the four clubs chasing Canadiens. Detroit remained in second place, 10 points behind Canadiens and four points in the van of Chicago, who usurped third place from the faltering Leafs. Toronto, fifth-place, is place two points behind Chicago, held a five-point grip on third league's last-place berth ahead of Boston, which has six games to play compared with 10 for the Toronto before the "folding" paper chase known as the Stanley Cup series starts.

Continues Scoring Pace

Maurice Richard continued his wicked scoring pace, tallying twice Saturday as Canadiens trounced Leafs 8-2 in Toronto and collected in their 5-4 victory at Leafs Sunday. Babe Pratt fired two of the Toronto goals in the week-end games but Paul Bibeault, standing up under tremendous pressure here in the Toronto nets, probably was the most outstanding player. Gerry Heffernan bagged three Montreal goals.

The Saturday contest developed into a robust affair. Referee Bill Chadwick imposed penalties, 4 of them majors, as players staged a steady procession to the penalty box after various forms of combat.

Up to the weekend Chicago had not won on Detroit ice in 16 games since March 15, 1940, and they faced no better Saturday, failing to score until George Allen and Doug Bentley found the target late in the third period. Mud Bruneteau counted twice for Wings, who lost Bill Quackenbush for a week when their young defence rookie suffered torn ligaments in a collision with Art Wiebe of the Hawks.

It was a different story in Chicago Sunday as the Hawks moved into a 5-0 lead before Hal Jackman got Detroit's only goal. Clint Smith and Bill Mosienko scored twice while Ilmanie Doug Bentley flashed one red light.

Boston veteran Bill Cowey, bidding gallantly to regain his former eminence in the scoring race after an enforced period of idleness, collected four goals and two assists in Saturday's high-scoring action, but failed to add a point Sunday as Bruins blew a 3-1 second-period lead.

PLAYOFF SERIES BETWEEN MAJORS, ST. KITTS TIED

Runions Scores the Winning Goal for Hamilton in 3-1 Contest

OSHAWA BEATEN

(By The Canadian Press)

Hamilton Majors tied up the Senior O.H.A. playoff series with St. Catharines at one game apiece by defeating the Saints 3-1 Saturday night at Hamilton. It was the fourth game of the best-in-seven series between the two clubs. St. Catharines had trimmed Hamilton 4-3 in overtime on Saints' ice there the rivals will battle for the third time tonight.

In the low-scoring engagement, both teams notched a counter in the first period and the Majors repeated 1-0 going into the third frame when Hamilton cut loose, with Doug Runions scoring the winning goal and Robertson ramming home the extra tally. Manning was the first period scorer for the home club while Mazur was responsible for the Saints' lone one.

Featuring the week-end junior playoff games was St. Catharines Falcons' 4-2 triumph over Oshawa Generals at St. Catharines to take one game ahead of the motor city crew in the best-of-seven series which now stands two games to one for St. Catharines and the fourth contest scheduled for Oshawa tonight.

The Falcons led 2-0 in the initial stanza; Generals scored their only two in the second but Falcons added a third to lead going into the second and made it 4-2 before the end. D. McBurdy, Pete Long, Nick Phillips and Bill Wilson achieved the scoring for the winners while Bill Etnickel and Ken Ellis accounted for Oshawa's pair each for Oshawa.

In the other section of the Junior playoffs, St. Michael's College Majors defeated St. Mike's 6-3 to lead by a 2-1 lead in the best-of-five series. The fourth game to be played in Toronto tonight, John McCormack and Dave Bauer were double scorers for the students while B. McCarthy notched two of Galt's five counters.

League Playoffs Start in Week

This evening the regular schedule of the Belleville War Industries Ladies' Basketball League terminates and the league play-offs will commence next Monday. The usual last doubleheader will be played at the "Y" tonight when Reliance meet Dessons and Alemite battle Bell Sargents, according to the original schedule.

In the league play-offs all four clubs are included with the top team here four placed team meeting the number two squad in a sudden death game while the No. 1 and No. 3 placed clubs battle matters out in a similar series.

The standing of the league today reads:

	W.	L.	Pts.
Alemite	6	1	12
Reliance	5	2	10
Sargents	3	5	6
Dessons	1	6	2

It that is true, and we have no reason to doubt it, they should put a stuffed model of Laprade in the hockey Hall of Fame as a specimen of that almost extinct character—an amateur.

CASUAL COMMENT
By K.J.C.L

So Clear!

"Daddy, is today tomorrow?" asked little Johnny.

"Of course not, my boy."

"But you said it was."

"When ever did I say that today was tomorrow?"

"Yesterday."

"Well—it was then."

"Then today was tomorrow yesterday, but it isn't today today, but as yesterday was today yesterday it's yesterday today. And tomorrow will be today tomorrow, which makes today yesterday and tomorrow all at once, and——"

But father had had enough. "Here, you!" he snapped. "Run out and play!"

(Arcaro does it.)

They said it just wasn't being done in Florida racing circles.

Why no jockey ever won a grand slam—taking in with the Kentucky and Flamingo turf classics of Florida in succession. Well, maybe it has been prior to 1944 but on Saturday Eddie Arcaro rode four Freedoms, an 8 to 5 shot, home to win the Widner Cup over the favorite—Sun Again. Previously this year Arcaro was up on the winner of the rich Flamingo Stakes, today he was the only jockey ever to win those two rich Florida stakes in succession.

The season's record crowd of 18,694 was at Hialeah Park in Miami Beach and set a new all-time betting high mark of $1,172,321 being wagered on the eight-race program on Saturday.

It took a great horse like Four Freedoms and a jockey the calibre of Arcaro to turn the trick. Fortunate enough it was a photo finish between Four Freedoms and the Calumet Farm's Sun Again, but Arcaro pushed the phenomenal nose of Four Freedoms out in front as the camera's eye closed the race. The favorite Marriage from New Orleans found the torrid Florida sun too hot and finished fifth.

Down the stretch it was Sun Again and Four Freedoms in the thrilling battle between two thoroughbreds as ever seen at Hialeah track and although most of the fans cash was riding on older nags Hamiltons came west up at Aurora drove Four Freedoms into the lead. Known as a dangerous rider Arcaro had won the Flinger Cup back in 1942 and only a week ago had spent the dope bucket by riding Gilr 12 to another upset win.

(Hockey round up.)

The puck glory of the Stirling-Marmora Combines was really short-lived. Last Tuesday night Ralph Weal's middle Hastings team was riding on the crest of a victory wave and everything was being observed through rose colored glasses. Then they lost Jan's way Combines team left Over the weekend the management of the Combines notified O.H.A. convener Allan Meagher that they had been forced to withdraw from further O.H.A. competition for 1944 and defaulted their return game at Kingston. Of course the Limestone City management did not help their own cause any too much when they stepped into Stirling and beat the Combines by a 3 last Friday night. A return game wouldn't have attracted enough people into the Hockey Barn arena to pay for the night's lighting.

The decision of the Combines' management came after it was announced that Bert Bastedo, playmaking centre player for Marmora Weal's squad, would not be available for future games owing to a back injury. The Deep Palsarean sustained an injured arm and was forced to the sidelines during Friday's game breaking up the Stirling-Bastedo brothers-Patterson front line. That it's curtains for junior hockey in the district for 1944, but considerable interest is now being worked up during the season, but the final turn of affairs would indicate the calibre of hockey played in the district area, especially in the junior brackets, wasn't on a par with other centres. The Whitby Juveniles and the Kingston Juniors proved that.

Tonight the Mountain View "Bombers" are scheduled to play in the No. 1 Training Command hockey final at the Toronto Varsity arena versus the Western Ontario champions.

Incidentally Cpl. Rod Corbett, goalie of the No. 6 Repair Depot hockey sextette, is anxious for a playoff game with the Trenton Main Station senior R.C.A.F. puckisters. Corbett points out that the Trenton No. 6 Depot and the Trenton Flyers both games ended in a 4-4 tie and 4-4. They want a third and deciding game played with the winners taking all.

HORNETS WIN

By The Canadian Press

The American Hockey League's leading Cleveland Barons were stopped by Buffalo Bisons last night and given an 11-5 mauling by the Buffalo Bisons defeated Indianapolis Caps 2-0 Saturday night, while Pittsburgh Hornets whipped Providence Reds 7-0. Caps defeated Reds 6-2 last night in the other week-end fixture.

The high-scoring Bisons packed five goals into the second period and five more into the third to root Barons before a record crowd of 10,021 at Buffalo. Leading 5-5 in the final frame, Bisons drove three goals past past Paul Gauthier in 42 seconds.

Fred Thurier and Max Bennett each scored two for Buffalo while Cleveland's top scorer also got a pair. It was Bisons' ninth straight game without defeat.

Hershey Bears clung to their slim margin over Bisons in the Eastern division as they whipped Cops defeated Caps 2-0 to give Nick Damore his 22nd shutout of the year season.

Both counters came in the second period, Tom Porvie, new pivot man for Bears and Bulldog Drummond doing the scoring.

Pittsburgh's Art Cirovic led the Hornets while shutting out Providence Saturday night, when Hornets blanked the Reds 7-0.

Two counters by Captain Wynne Butler and another by Bernie Bunle gave Indianapolis a wide margin over the lowly Reds in the opening period last night.

Dick Kowcinak, Roy Glover and Rod Morrison added the other Caps tallies in the second and third periods while single three providence winger and Lloyd Roubell scored Reds' only two goals.

LESSON NO. 33c

By SAM GORDON
The Milkman

The Kibitzer's T-A-N rule is foolproof. If you have a partner who does not use it, extend my sympathy. You may say: "But I think of him! "Don't be a fool, you fool.

The T-A-N rule is simply the order of choice of bids. You should takeout to your own suit first. With no takeout, assist your partner's suit. With no takeout or assist bid no-trump. Unless you pass.

Within reason, there is never an occasion to change that order of preference or bids. Not if you expect to be correct. And it goes for all rounds of bidding until you start signalling for slam.

Look again at this pair of partnership hands:

SOUTH
♠A 6 3
♥A K 3 2
♦6 5 4 3
♣A 10 2

NORTH
♠K J 10 9
♥Q 9 7 5
♦A K 7 2
♣6 5 4

South starts with an opening bid of one heart. North responds at once with a one-jump to three diamonds. South, following T-A-N, comes back with a bid of four diamonds.

The jump by north is a signal that the bidding will not stop short of game. And four diamonds is not yet a game. So, north must bid again. No doubt about that.

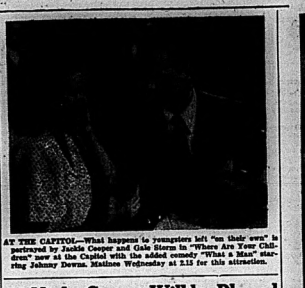
Following T-A-N, north has not another takeout. But he has an assist for hearts. He shows that by bidding four hearts. Which is a game contract.

With a game contract reached, the obligation of the jump signal ceases. So, south is now permitted to pass. If south did any more bidding it would be only to probe for a slam.

The jump takeout by north showed six tricks. With six tricks in his own hand, south sees 12 tricks in their pair. That and knowing what's trump are two of the essentials for expecting a slam.

The third essential is knowing if there are enough aces and kings in the pair. If not, a partner should be content with a game. A game in the hand is worth two slams in defeat.

AT THE McCARTHY—Lynn Merrick featured with Ted Lewis and his orchestra in "Is Everybody Happy?" now playing at the McCarthy Theatre. 2nd feature on the program is "The Leather Burners" with William Boyd and Rapalsee Cassidy.



AT THE CAPITOL—What happens to youngsters left "on their own" is portrayed by Jackie Cooper and Gale Storm in "Where Are Your Children" now at the Capitol with the added comedy "What a Man" starring Johnny Downs. Matinee Wednesday at 2.15 for this attraction.

AT THE BELLE—Dorothy Lamour in costume for the "Out Your Man" number in Paramount's Technicolor musical, "Riding High", now at the Belle with Dick Powell, and other favorites. Seven hit tunes, a rip-roaring plot, and a rip-roaring plot are said to make this a great fun film.

"Is Everybody Happy?"

Ted Lewis and his "Medicine Man of the Blues" together with his laughing clarinet and the wild, uncharted explosions of his music, happily tooted himself into the McCarthy theatre on Saturday, in Columbia's fast-stepping musical jamboree, "Is Everybody Happy?"

Reports say that Lewis has lost none of the showmanship which for many years has kept him in the public's eye as one of the outstanding band leaders of all time. "Is Everybody Happy?" Ted Lewis revives eighteen of the song hits which have made him famous. Included are: "Cuddle up a Little Closer", "Pretty Baby", "It Had to be You" and "Ain't It Blue."

The story is Ted's, or Lewis' life. It shows how he fumbled his hand; the trials and tribulations he went through to gain recognition, until finally a desperate saxophone-playing on the sidewalk of "The Great White Way" brought the famous Rector's restaurant he won his first engagement and became an overnight sensation.

Supporting players in "Is Everybody Happy?" are Lynn Merrick, beautiful and brilliant Nan Wynn singing herself to recognition with the Lewis band. Others who contribute to the gay, happiness of this entertainment are Joe Marrick, Jerry Colonna, Dunbe, Larry Parks, Bob Haymes, Dick Winslow and Harry Savitts.

AT THE BELLE

"Riding High," In Color

The boys and girls of Paramount's technicolor musical, "Riding High," which is now at the Belle theatre on the screen, are whooping it up out west in a way to bring joy to the hearts of moviegoers. Certainly the audience at the Belle theatre are having a happy time with Dorothy Lamour, Dick Powell, Victor Moore, Gil Lamb, Cass Daley and Mili Britton and his Band.

Here is a glorified Western, complete with rarin', tarin' action, gorgeous gals, and scenery and song and dance—and all of it in beautiful technicolor. The laughs from plentiful, entrusted as they are to such fine performers as Lamb, Miss Daley, Moore, Gil Lamb and Cass Daley. If you've ever seen, and heard, Mili Britton and his band, you'll know that their particular brand of humor is the belly-laugh variety. The lovely Lamour, too, proves to be quite a comedienne as she proves to be the partner in this Paramount venture, Dick Powell, has some hilarious scenes to his personal credit.

The action of the story takes place on the Triple Bar Ranch in Arizona to which comes Victor Moore, a genial counterfeiter, with a pocketful of home-made maxmums, and Gil Lamb, a wandering cowhand, some home to help her Pa in his operation of a silver mine which he owns in partnership with Dick Powell, a mining engineer. Dick has difficulty making headway with Dottie because he was supposed to produce some silver ore to open up the mine, but was unable to raise it. Moore decides to play Cupid with the aid of his manufactured money. But Sheriff Gil Lamb is on his track and the plot rolls merrily along.

There are a couple of eye-filling pre-Mounted Police affairs to the show, numbers in one a Northwest "Get Your Man" and the other the Indian number "Injun Gal, Heap Hep" which has Dorothy dancing for the first time, and right smartly, too. The costumes, the girls and the music all add to the pleasure.

There are seven hit songs you'll enjoy hearing—"You're the Rainbow," "Whistling in the Light," "Injun Gal, Heap Hep," "He Loved Me 'Til the All Clear Came", "Get Your Man," "Willie, the Wolf of the West" and "I'm the Secretary to the Sultan."

The Canadian Paramount News, Mitchell Ayres and his orchestra presenting a smart musical revue and another short subject complete the animals screen novelty "in the Desert" will also be exhibited.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Where Are Your Children?"

The season's timeliest picture, opens tonight at the Capitol Theatre, Gale Storm and Jackie Cooper starring Monogram drama, "Where Are Your Children?" which deals incisively with the current crisis in juvenile delinquency, and carries special interest through the fact that is the first to attack this dynamite-laden subject.

Jackie Cooper is starred as the son of a well-to-do family, and gives a fine performance as the boy who is the innocent cause of a young girl's first step on the pathway to trouble. Gale Storm is the girl in the case, and fully demonstrates in this role that she is on the brink of stardom. Others in the big cast include the exceptional work are Patricia Morison, John Litel, Gertrude Hoffman, Evelyn Eaton, Addison Richards and Betty Blythe.

ZION HILL WINS FROM CORBYVILLE BY 8-0 SCORE

Winners Will Now Enter Finals Against West Huntingdon

SIMMONS STARS

Scoring almost at will, Ed. Simms' Zion Hill pucksters demonstrated their offensive ability against Corbyville at Stirling Friday evening when in a sudden death game for the right to combine into the finals o the Oenarel Hastings Rural Hockey League, they bump up decisive 8-0 victory.

Zion Hill will now enter the finals against West Huntingdon, the first game to be played Tuesday evening. It will be a best three of five series."

Mentor Ed. Simms was a prominent figure in the Corbyville win over Corbyville, figuring in no less than five of his team's eight goals, while Director Hall and Cy Simmon also stood out. Walt soloed shortly after the first period was half over to put his team in the lead with Simms and Timmon adding counters before the canto ended.

In the second period Noley Guay took a two-way pass from A. Timmon and Walt to put Zion four goals ahead with Simpson counting on a solo effort a few minute later. Timmon took a pass from Simpson and Simms to add another just as the period closed. Two more goals were added by the winners in the final period as Simms scored on a solo effort and then set one up for G. Timmon who counted the final goal.

Two penalties were handed out by Referee Wallace, both of them to Zion; with Walt and Guay being sent off for minor offenses.

Lineups—Zion: goal, Gifford; defence, Guay and Walt forwards; Simpson, Arrell and Simmons; subs, Simms, G. Timmon, A. Timmon, Ray, Brandy and Robinson.

Corbyville, goal, O. Martin; defence, Cox and Sills; forwards, Sheffield, Ritz and Carleton; subs, D. Martin, Walker and Sills.

TO SET UP BOARD

Toronto, March 6 (CP)—A National Labor Relations Board—to be known probably as the National Wartime Regulations Board—will be set up within a few days to administer the Province's government's new labor code, Labor Minister Charles Daley of Ontario announced today upon return from a conference with Federal Labor Department officials in Ottawa.

91 Night Games Will be Played In National Loop This Summer

By The Canadian Press

The National Baseball League will have a record number of night games during the coming season with 91 to be played under the lights, according to the official schedule announced at New York yesterday. The 154-game campaign continues from April 18 to Oct. 1 with each of the clubs making three intersectional trips. First night engagements are to be played at Cincinnati and Pittsburgh May 10 and the last are game is dated Sept. 19 at Philadelphia. New York and Brooklyn, restricted to twilight fixtures last season because of wartime precautions, will each have 14 games under the full lights in 1946. Opening games scheduled for April 18 will be: Pittsburgh at St. Louis; Chicago at Cincinnati; Boston at New York and Brooklyn at Philadelphia. The season opens a day later in the four other cities as follows: St. Louis at Chicago, New York at Brooklyn, Cincinnati at Pittsburgh and Philadelphia at Boston.

The Ontario Athletic Commission said in a statement Saturday it has "conclusive proof" that a fight-fix ring is operating in Toronto, comprising "at least three men" whose names are known to the chairman."

The statement, over the signatures of chairman Lionel Conacher and secretary A. W. Ince, said names of the men would be given to the police and that they would be barred from entering any building in Ontario where boxing matches are being held.

"Also, the Commission is going to stop all but officials visiting dressing rooms and will also licence all seconds and trainers so that they will be under direct supervision of the Commission for all future shows," says the statement.

The $25,000 Widener Handicap at Hialeah Park Saturday resulted in a stirring victory for hockey Eddie Arcaro with Four Freedoms, defeating what was considered a better horse, the favored Sun Again, ridden by Jockey Ted Atkinson of Toronto, in a stretch duel.

Oil Dodds, Boston Divinity student scored his fifth indoor track win in the season's two winning the special mile Saturday night in the intercollegiate games at Madison Square Garden. New York. his time being 4:21. Bob Ellis led for seven of the 11 laps and then collapsed.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.
(Associated Press Sport Writer.)

New York, March 6.—(AP)—Ho mmmm! way back there baseball fans used to get steamed up because a few prominent players hadn't signed their contracts by this time of the year? . . . Well, there's still a week or 10 days before 1946 Spring training starts and a lot more players are unsigned than signed. . . .

Not many are hollering for more dough, but you'll notice that the guys like Spud Chandler, Joe Gordon, Billy Herman, Stan Spence, Ray Mack, Doc Cramer and Dick Bartell who are either talking about quitting the game or seeking something anything . . . Washington has a player signed, the other clubs only 12 or 15 apiece.

The club owners, of course, claim that just a sign. Most of the players are uncertain about their draft status, but still it starts you wondering.

Just as a sample of what the major league managers are up against in their efforts to line up their 1946 squads, a Newark, N.J., paper yesterday ran a story saying Eddie Mayo was saying that he had given Newark "the best" for the season" . . . Two columns away on the same page appeared a wire story listing 11 players who had signed Detroit contracts for 1946.

. . . One of them was Eddie Mayo.

CHAPTER 22

"I wouldn't put anything past you, Schneider," retorted Duffy coldly, "but as I told Tony, I don't believe you would kill anybody yourself. You'd probably get one of your clients to do it."

"And make monkeys of the police again—eh?" Schneider asserted.

"Meanwhile, Mr. Metcalf is waiting to take away that property of his which you are illegally holding."

"All right Herschel," agreed Duffy amiably enough, though there was a warning glint in his eyes. "I told you I would turn them over to you at three o'clock. We've got twenty minutes yet," he added with a glance at his watch, "plenty of time for a little experiment we want to do with the dictograph."

"What sort of experiment?" Schneider demanded.

"You'll see," said Duffy, and pressed a button on his desk.

"Wells a minute," Schneider broke in. "We object to any experiments with that dictograph."

"Object as you want to," said Duffy bluntly. "If you want the stuff back before three o'clock, go ahead and start replevin proceedings."

Schneider's face was dark and his lids were half-covered again. The satisfied look had disappeared.

"At least we have the right to know what the experiment is," he said.

"Oh, all right," Duffy agreed. "I don't mind telling you. When we tested the machine Thursday night we found a record in it which didn't come out very clearly, so we got this man from the dictograph company to rig up an amplifier."

"What sort of record is it?" asked the lawyer. "Another confession?"

"I can't say as yet," Duffy answered. "The record is in the machine," he added to the expert. "Go ahead and do your stuff."

The man opened the reproducer to make sure the record was in place. Then he turned a switch. There was a low hum and clicks.

"Oh, wait! wait!" cried Miss Scotti, and started from her seat, then sank back again, her hand over her mouth, her face crimson.

"Turn it off!" snapped Duffy. "Now, what is it, Miss Scotti?"

"Nothing, nothing," murmured the girl hoarsely. "I didn't mean to speak. I'm sorry."

Duffy looked at her suspiciously for a moment, then signed to the man to go ahead. For a few seconds there was silence, then the sound of a drawer opening, a soft swishing, a ratchet working against something. The expert snapped off the switch.

Somebody has opened a drawer," he said, "got a sheet of paper out of it and put it in a typewriter. How long—" and he turned the switch on again.

Almost at once there came a slow uneven tapping, then after a moment the carriage was pulled back, then more tapping.

"Somebody is using the machine who doesn't know much about it," the expert commented. "You notice how he has to pick out the letters?"

"Or maybe it is somebody who wants to keep his fingerprints off the keyboard by touching only the metal rims of the keys," Tony suggested. "Wearing gloves, of course, not wishing to blur Metcalf's prints."

"Phooey!" commented Schneider. "I expect that thing switched off. Now what is all this?"

Metcalf seemed to have had his foot on the button which controlled the dictograph just before he shut himself in," told him. "What you just heard was him typing that note which we found in his machine."

"And the other what happens," Schneider demanded.

"Nothing much. The sounds were too faint—too far from the microphone, I guess. But maybe the amplifier will help."

Schneider settled back in his chair.

"There was a note found in the typewriter?" asked the dictograph man.

"Yes."

"If you've got it, maybe I can check what he was writing."

"Good idea," nodded Duffy and got a sheet of paper out of a folder on his desk. "Here it is."

The expert ran the record back to the beginning and took the paper.

"'Jack McKibben,'" he read. "Never expected you to help me prove anything, Jim," the lawyer said. "But there it is."

"Oh, it knew it was written on Metcalf's machine as soon as I looked at it," Duffy retorted. "I've seen too many samples of that writing. Go ahead," he added to the dictograph man. "Let's have the rest of it."

There was a moment's silence, then again the rustle of paper and the noise of a ratchet. Then four taps and then eight.

"There you are," said the expert. "'Jack McKibben.' Now we're getting it."

The tapping kept on — the bell rang faintly—the carriage was returned — All was still for a moment, then faint rapid footsteps crossed the floor, again silence.

"You see," said Tony, "there was someone else there. Metcalf couldn't walk around the room and keep his foot on the button at the same time."

"Wait," said Duffy and held up his hand. "Here he comes again." Another footsteps came nearer, stopped for a moment, and then receded. Silence once more.

Then there came the sound of footsteps, short, rapid. They stopped for a moment and then receded. There was a faint click — "That must have been the catch on the outside door," said Tony. "Then there was a long pause away and pulled the door shut after him."

He glanced at Miss Scotti. She nodded.

Another moment's silence, and then they all started when Tony suddenly declared. "There's one point which makes me think Metcalf killed himself."

"Shut it off," said Duffy. "That's from his desk. Here is his machine."

He glanced at Schneider, who sat slumped in his chair, his face inscrutable. "What do you make of it, Herschel?"

"Tony is right," answered Schneider impatiently. "I tell you again, Duffy, to keep your eye on this woman —she's dangerous. It would pay you to find out where she was Thursday night."

Duffy looked her over appraisingly. "It doesn't seem to make sense, Miss Scotti," he said. "You say that Metcalf was dead—"

"Of course he was dead."

"All right—he was dead. Then who moved his foot off the switch?"

"What do you mean?"

"I mean that if he was dead his foot would stay on the switch and the machine would keep grinding on."

"Not necessarily," put in the dictograph man. "There's an automatic control which stops the machine and pushes the record back into place if there's been no recordation. It's to protect it in case the switches gets jammed."

"So his foot might still have been on the button?" Duffy asked.

"Sure. It was probably there when you found him, only you didn't notice."

Duffy stroked his chin meditatively.

"What do you say to that, Herschel?" he inquired mildly.

"The switch must have got jammed, as this man said."

"He didn't say it got jammed."

"I know," Schneider agreed. "He said it might get jammed. Well, it did. Maybe Metcalf went back up to his rooms after he wrote the letter. Maybe he went out of the building to mail it and this woman sneaked in and—"

"That doesn't make sense either," broke in Tony. "Don't forget that we heard him write not only the address on that letter, but also the confession. Do you imagine for a minute that Metcalf would go away and leave that in his machine?"

"Why not?" Schneider demanded. "Who would see it? He wasn't expecting any visitors."

"He may have been," said Tony. "His boy told us that some woman telephoned."

"Oh, he did?" said Schneider, his face became a little woman telephoned, eh? What more do you want? Did it occur to you to ask the boy who she was?"

"He said he didn't know," answered Duffy shortly.

"I'd try to refresh his memory if I were you," said Schneider. "And meanwhile, I'd ask this woman a few questions."

"I shall be glad to answer all your questions, Mr. Duffy," said the girl, with a queer little smile. "But first I should like to take a look at the dictograph."

"Go ahead," said Duffy, with a wave of his hand.

"Wait a minute," put in Schneider. "It's three o'clock. The party is over."

"Shut up!" snapped Duffy, whose temper was evidently wearing thin. "When the party's over I'm the one that will say so. Go ahead, Miss Scott."

12 Million Autos Needed in U. S. After War—Knudsen

New York, March 6 (AP)—Ja. Conn. Knudsen, War Production Chief, says that Americans will want to buy new automobiles after the war—and will begin getting them six months after the peace. In an interview here the former General Motors Corporation president said the first wave of post-war cars will be 1942 models. He said the manufacturers won't be much like those dolled up artists today, and much progress in design will be due to bigger passenger and freight planes, rather than "flivver planes."

Theft of Coat Proves Mystery

Mystery surrounds the theft of a valuable lady's fur coat and its subsequent recovery in Belleville over the week-end.

Following the closing of the April Irish Industry Winter Carnival at the Armouries Saturday night, Miss Ruth Trumpour, Dundas St., reported her muskrat coat, valued at $300, had been stolen from the Officers' Mess, where she had left it, while enjoying a dance period. Also missing were her gloves and scarf.

Shortly after ten o'clock Sunday night three teen-aged lads appeared at the police station with a fur coat, which they told Sergt. Ellis they had found lying about the curb on Pinnacle St., only a few hundred feet south of the police station. The coat was identified as the property of Mrs. Mitchell. The three boys' names were given as Wilbert Calbury, 18 Franklin St., Milton Wannacker, 177 Foster Ave., and Clarence Kiser, of 80 Foster Ave.

Police are in possession of information to prove that the fur garment was stolen in the early hours as early as 30 minutes prior to the time the coat was found by the three boys. It is the belief of the authorities that the coat was deliberately thrown from a passing motor car as near to the police station as possible, in the hope it might be returned.

"It might have been taken by mistake, but we doubt this theory," stated police officials as the coat was returned today.

Six Junior Judging Teams to Compete

Members of six junior judging teams from as many counties in the immediate Bay of Quinte district will convene at Stirling High School on Saturday at the annual seed judging competition sponsored by the Quinte Seed Growers' Association. Judging will commence in the forenoon and the seed growers' convention scheduled for the afternoon.

Judging competitions will be under the charge of Mr. A. H. Martin, agricultural director, publicity and presentative branch, with the presentation of awards to the winning teams by Mr. Martin at the conclusion of the afternoon's session.

Addressing the convention will be John Cook, director of crops, seeds and weeds branch; and Dr. G. H. McNeish, the field husbandry branch. These men will address the convention on good seed and seed production. Other addresses. Dr. P. O. Ripley, assistant in charge of Dominion Forest Station, central experimental farm at Ottawa, will speak on forest management.

The car load of 1st generation registered Alsx oats which was purchased by the Quinte Seed Growers' Association this year in lieu of staging their annual seed fair, will be distributed. The seed distribution of the grain will shortly be made from the Stirling branch and in all the car contained 2,000 bushels, with Hastings and Prince Edward counties each allotted 300 bushels each. The balance was distributed among growers in other Quinte district counties.

Over Hundred Donors From Outside Points Attend Blood Clinic

Over one hundred people attended the Red Cross Blood Donors clinic held in Belleville Armouries on Dundas Street East on Sunday. The donors came from all the local points and the city, Brighton, Point Anne, Trenton, and twenty-two from Picton. The total number of persons represent practically the same number attending the previous clinics will be held during this week, and the concluding clinic will be held on Thursday night.

The Red Cross Blood Donors clinic in the city will be glad to arrange to have any donor called for and transported to the clinic either by automobile if there is no transportation available in the family. A call to 1000 on your telephone at anytime during the week will get someone who will be more than glad to make the necessary arrangements.

2 Members H. & P.E. Reg't. Die of Wounds

Two members of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, both former residents of the Quinte district, have died of wounds suffered on the battle front, it was revealed in the 438th Canadian Army casualty list released Saturday night. They were: The soldiers are Acting Sgt. Alvin Edward Neil, son of Mrs. Edward Neil, of Picton, Prince County, and Pte. Ervin Shorts, son of Mrs. Charles Bowman, R. R. 2, Mountain View, Prince Edward County.

Two other Belleville and Belleville district soldiers are listed as wounded in the casualty list. They are Pte. Percy Minaker, son of Mrs. Minaker, R. R. 2, Belleville, near Picton, and Pte. Kenneth Wells, son of Mrs. Wells, 19 Trinity St., East, Belleville. Pte. Wells has a wife in Surrey, England.

Toronto, March 6. (CP) —Odds held firm and losses were boarded by other groups this afternoon on the Toronto Exchange. Trading was active in a few penny issues of the base metal and oil sections but the first three hours totalled 446,000 shares.

Senior Oils, including International-Petroleum and Supertest common were down 1-4. Foods were a bit heavy and other industrials were steady; Steel of Canada, Can. Car and Consolidated Paper added a fraction.

Pickle Crow, Hard Rock, Beattie and Chesterville were mildly active spots in Golds, Nickel and Sudbury Basin were down narrowly.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

Toronto, March 6.— (CP)—Cattle prices were steady to weak in the trade on the livestock market here today. Receipts were light and trade was established for hogs. Veal calves were steady; lambs were steady and Consolidated Paper added a fraction.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Stockyards Service were:—Cattle 1,500, calves 300, hogs 1,100, sheep 1,000, lambs 1,000. Receipts Saturday were 600 head of cattle.

Cattle: Choice steers $11 to $11.50, butcher steers $10.50 to $11.85, heifers $9.25 to $11.50, butcher cows $7.50 to $9, canners and cutters $6.50 to $7.50, choice feed yearlings $12 to $13.50.

Calves: $16 to $17 for choice with common vealers downward to $10.

Lambs: Western $13.50, a few sales $10 to $12.50.

Sheep: $9 to $6.

Hogs closed previously at $17.15 to $17.25 dressed weight at yards or plus.

MONTREAL LIVESTOCK

Montreal, March 6 (CP)—Live-stock receipts: Cattle 679; calves 200; hogs 1,200; sheep 100.

There was a light offering of cattle and prices were steady to strong. Sales fairly active. Good steers, 1,100 pounds and up, $12.25, common 8.50-10.50. Heifers 7.50-11. Good butcher cows 8.50-9 with an odd one selling at 9.50, common about mostly 7.50-8.50, common butchers 6.25 up. Canners, cutters 5. Good bulls mostly 9 with an odd one up to 10.50.

Good quality veals were about steady, but common grades, including grassers, were 25 to 50 cents lower. Good veals 15-16, commoner grades 12 down to 7 and 8.50.

Lambs easier: The few offered were sold on a flat basis at 14-10. Sheep 3-7. Hogs unchanged at 17.15 for B-1 dressed. Sows 13 dressed.

Beef Offered By One Quarter

At least one Quinte district farmer took advantage of the temporary lifting of meat rationing and Saturday morning offered beef by the quarter on the local market. The near-zero temperature, Eggs sold at last week's quotations of 38 cents for fresh grade and 35 cents for mediums. Chicken brought 45 cents the pound for best grade although many vendors offered fowl at 40 cents. Dairy butter brought the usual 40 cents pound.

Apples and potatoes were quite freely offered on the outside market, although stores and closed vehicles were the order of the day because of the keen competition. Best grade apples of Spys, Delicious and McIntosh varieties sold at $2 the bushel with other varieties and grades bringing $1 per bushel and $1.50.

Potatoes sold at the selling price of $1.3 per bushel or 80 cents the peck. Only a very few vegetables were offered and at the usual prices.

VARIED PROGRAM OF PROPOSALS BEFORE BRACKEN

Conservatives Want Better Benefits for Servicemen and Dependents Following Approval

MUSTERING-OUT PAY

—Ottawa, March 6.—(CP)—A varied program of recommendations ranging from further benefits for servicemen and their dependents to measures designed to stimulate mining activity now is before John Bracken, National Progressive Conservative leader following approval by the party's Dominion Association at its annual meeting here.

The resolutions were placed before the Association's meeting by the report of the executive council Saturday, over matters affecting agriculture, labor, veterans' affairs, federal provincial and municipal authorities, aviation, and wages and living conditions in the period of conversion to peacetime economy.

The latter recommendation was regarded as supplementing the platform laid down by the Mid-Winter Windsor Convention last year. Details of ministerial responsibility set out by for members of the armed forces on a "generous" scale, in addition to adequate clothing allowance, increased emphasis on rural health services, the appointment of a board of livestock commissioners, and the establishment of a department of a central farm bank.

They also ask that representation from Federal authorities be required before any individual or corporation can enter into any loan, international cartel; general adoption by industry of the principle of collaboration with pay, and action to prevent strikes, the latter being presenting a substitute for adequate wages.

Control Flying Fields.

Among the recommendations is one which would restrict the ownership and control of flying fields to Canadian citizens and the withholding of new licences for permanent air stations to "aliens."

The policy committee is headed by Dr. Augustin Frigon of Montreal. It endorsed the agricultural program advanced by Mr. Bracken in La Lombardie, Alberta, address, and renewed the proposal—made at the Port Hope Conference—for setting for a Central Farm Bank. The committee also recommended that Canada have "no hesitation in going in for full-scale mechanization of agriculture."

The report said the upward trend in wages and living conditions must be continued in the conversion period to give industry the highest possible living standard, and that it must be made clear federal ode on Compulsory Collective bargaining be made applicable in all industry and that its provisions be made permanent by Dominion-Provincial agreements.

Unfair Labor Control.

The committee said the new wage control order was "unfair to labor in that it places an undue burden of proving that existing wages constitutional or discriminatory or unjustice, and that any increase was considered, on the ability of the employer to pay. It said further that both the labor code and wage order should be made enacted by parliament and not introduced by order-in-council.

A. E. Honeywell of Ottawa, was appointed secretary of the Dominion Association, and Ned Sherart of Toronto, Ont., honorary president of the Young Progressive Conservative Association of Canada.

Looking Ahead in Ottawa

By The Ottawa Staff of The Canadian Press (CP)

Ottawa, March 6.—(CP)—Possibility of the broadening of Canada's propaganda channels, with the initiation of a program of psychological warfare is seen in recent news reports.

Dr. Augustin Frigon, acting general manager of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, is on his way to Washington to confer with officials assigned to Washington to obtain equipment for shortwave broadcasting.

Dr. Frigon was seeing equipment to ship to Canada and the transmitter at Sackville, N.B., and it was understood that this would be purchased to Europe and placed at the disposal of a psychological warfare officer who would broadcast to enemy occupied countries.

It was understood these broadcasts would be especially directed at France and the Low Countries through which the invasion might concentrate was launched.

There also has been reports that a short wave transmitter will be established on the West Coast and that a plan be placed in the hands of the "nerve war" experts for the broadcasting of Japanese propaganda in the Pacific and for the Japanese population itself.

In this connection a report from New York indicates that Japan is also busily propagandizing in the Far East. The report stated that Tokio Radio, Japanese broadcasting station is offering a weekly prize of $1,000 (Chinese) for the best report of an American listener on Canadian news bill.

broadcasts from San Francisco over Station KEIGO every Monday.

If Canada can get the equipment she wants, she will not have to rely on United States short wave stations and the CBC will be able to provide the necessary facilities.

Health Hints—

A Dominion-Provincial Conference possibly will be called in the summer to discuss the details of a Dominion Health Insurance Bill.

Prime Minister King said in the House last week that financial provisions of the Health Bill which the government plans to introduce will not be ready for discussion at the present session. Dominion-Provincial conference, possibly to be held in the summer week.

No Health Bill had yet been submitted to the government, nothing but a draft bill has been before the Advisory Committee on Social Security. The draft bill included proposals which would be put into force by the provincial governments before any final bill was introduced.

Meanwhile, Health Minister Mackenzie and the Dominion Council of Health made up of Federal Health authorities and Provincial Ministers of Health, will meet within the next six weeks or two months to discuss as many of the proposals as possible.

However, the Health Ministers are expected to deal only with the medical aspects and benefits of the Bill. It is believed it will be necessary to hold a meeting of Provincial Treasurers, their officers and federal finance officials before the financial aspects of the bill.

Historic Home Provokes Bitter Clash in House

Toronto, March 6 —(CP)— A 143-acre farm and a farmhouse linked with some of the most stirring chapters in Canadian history have flashed back in prominence in the Ontario Legislature where members raked the most recent clash of the present session between Premier Drew and Opposition Leader Jolliffe.

The farm, described in the Legislature as the Alfred Griffiths farm, was purchased by the province by Griffiths family from 1941 until recently when it was taken over by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario in connection with the new 65,000-horsepower Hydro development at Cedar Rapids.

In the Legislature C.C.F. Leader Jolliffe charged the Griffiths family had been "swindled" by the government from their historic farm home. He called on the Conservative Government to return this home to the placed in the hands of the "nerve war" experts for the broadcasting of Japanese propaganda in the Pacific and for the Japanese population itself.

In this connection a report from New York indicates that Japan is also busily propagandizing in the Far East. The report stated that Tokio Radio, Japanese broadcasting station is offering a weekly prize of $1,000 (Chinese) for the best report of an American listener on Canadian news bill.

Will Not Give Farm Back.

Premier Drew termed the Opposition leader's charges "inconsistent with the facts." He said the Griffiths family had "no reason to get off the property after signing an agreement by which they got $5,000 and assessed at only $4,450.

The Premier said Mr. Griffiths family would not get their farm back. He called on Mr. Jolliffe to withdraw his charges that this was "misleading statements." If he did not, Drew said, the Opposition leader would not be accepting the responsibilities of his office.

House Built in 1808.

The history of the farm goes back to the days after the American Revolution when John Graves Simcoe, Upper Canada's first governor came from his native Vermont to Canada.

DeCew built the present house which was subject of much of the Legislature debate today, in 1808. It was in this house that Captain Fitzgibbon directed the British headquarters in the War of 1812. And it was to that house that Laura Secord walked 20 miles to warn and warn the Captain of the impending American attack.

Last October Premier Drew turned the entire farm over to the province in a new single-unit 65,000-horsepower plant at DeCew Falls.

It was this development by which the Hydro Commission took over Griffiths property. The historic farm house itself was not used but was turned into a home and much of the land is now flooded.

Living on Another Farm.

The Griffiths are now living on another farm. They say not for whatever pay they would like to keep their old homestead for sentimental reasons, but the decision issued after the Legislature debate yesterday declined to do so. They said anything that the Hydro Commission could do to get it they would refuse proceeding to be thoroughly investigated."

Whether an investigation will be made remains to be seen. But Opposition Leader Jolliffe said the "whole story" of the Griffiths farm and DeCew Falls "has been told" indicates the Legislature may hear more of it before the present session ends.

12,000 Miners In Monmouthshire On Strike

London, March 6 (CP)—Twelve thousand Monmouthshire coal miners struck today over a wage dispute, adding another grave threat to fuel production already said to have been affected seriously by an unofficial "slowdown" strike of hundreds of other pit men.

The Monmouthshire walkout stemmed from the same grievances voiced by the miners whose slowdown has caused a drastic drop in coal production, it was announced from the Ministry of Fuel.

In a test order, the Ministry, headed by Maj. Gwilym Lloyd George, directed the transfer of 400 miners from the Easington colliery company's pits in Durham to jobs elsewhere and ordered that they be replaced by other workers. The Ministry added that unless the ordered men left the mines, which dropped from 15,000 tons weekly to 10,000 tons, the entire operation would be closed down and the 2,500 other Easington miners would be transferred to other pits.

Miners Going Slow.

The slowdown began several months ago as a protest against conditions underlying the minimum weekly wage but providing no increase in pay rates.

The Daily Express said that Monmouthshire's "dangerously gassy" coalfields now are going slow because they refuse to work in "gassy" places.

Mine union leaders have complained to the government that declaring the new wage award is "of inestimable value" because it granted the highest minimum ever paid to the coal industry" and also "provided the principle of participation on the eve of the opening of a new front in western Europe."

Carnival Officials Express Thanks To Volunteers

A successful four-day carnival was reported by the general chairman of the Argyll Light Infantry Association Carnival held from Wednesday to Saturday night inclusive, starting with a special children's matinee on Wednesday the carnival grew in popularity with the public and drew a large crowd into the Armouries on Saturday night. Over 1,000 persons took to participate in the many games arranged for their entertainment, prizes were awarded. Considerable difficulty was experienced in finding a winner for the last door prize on the final night and, after calling the number several times, Lt. Col. B. C. Donan finally rolled one of the stubs into a ball and tossed it into the crowd. The one who found it and returned it to the stage would be the winner. The ticket was found by a young boy who received a prize worth over the five dollars. There had been three unclaimed door prizes each night and the last night two.

The committee and officers of the Battalion wish to extend their thanks and express their appreciation to the Ladies' Auxiliary for the volunteered their help and services throughout the carnival. Thanks are also given to the service clubs of the city for the number of their members who gave their services to assist with the games and others duties. The proceeds of the carnival will be used to purchase sports equipment for the Battalion for winter sports, and twenty-five per cent will be donated to the Fifth Canadian Armoured Brigade in the Battalion's contribution in the recently concluded Appeal.

Major Triquet, V.C. Listed for Lesser Award But Changed

By POSTER BARCLAY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, March 6. (CP)—Major Paul Triquet, latest winner of the Victoria Cross, received Britain's highest award for valor, early became lost in the shuffle of recommendations for decorations were being sorted after the Italian theater battle.

According to a story current at the front before I left there recently for Canada, Maj. Triquet, a Royal 22nd Regiment company commander, was listed for a lesser award than the Victoria Cross when the recommendation was changed to the Victoria Cross by an order of a higher-ranking British officer.

Officers of the regiment like to tell about the day this British officer dropped around at regimental headquarters to chat with the commanding officer. The talk eventually got around to Triquet and the commander explained in detail the action which earned the 28-year-old native of the Oricona crossroads.

British Officer Interested.

The British officer showed keen interest and asked 'if Triquet had been recommended for a decoration. He raised his eyebrows in surprise, when he learned that he had been recommended only for a Distinguished Service Order.

"Make it a V.C.", he told the commanding officer. "He deserves it."

That's why the tallish professional British soldier nicknamed Triquet the "Van Doos" when medals were handed out at the investiture ceremony last January. But few were surprised—the word had spread quickly through the ranks of the Battalion that Paul Triquet had been recommended for the highest award.

On that day Maj. Triquet's fighting days were over. He went into battle Dec. 14 and failed to come back. He attacked with a company of 150 and his men when he was relieved there was only himself and nine others.

Tenred Battlefield.

All during the ceremony Maj. Triquet, always a quiet man, was quieter than usual. He appeared pained by his commanding officer's praise but the twinkle in his eye belied his story of Economic Warfare, said in a humorous vein that he

Calling the present campaign an "inverted battle of Britain," he said the Germans intensified bombing but more than "a policy of attrition designed to wear resistance to the point potential over a long period—is the invasion of Europe."

Pinned Beneath Overturned Jeep, 2 Die in Hospital

North Bay, Ont., March 6.—(CP)—Pinned under an overturned army jeep on the Temiskaming highway early yesterday morning, Pte. Jack Parrell of South Porcupine, Ont., and Sylvester Gonsalve of Champlain Bay, Que., died shortly after being admitted to hospital here.

Pte. Gonsalvi, third soldier on the jeep, is recovering in hospital. The three miner soldiers, all three were members of the Canadian Forestry Corps, stationed at Englehart.

Hospital officials said death in each case was due to a fractured skull.

The men were returning to their station from North Bay.

Germany Said Planning Another War In 25 Years

London, March 6 (AP)—The German people now is so convinced that Germany has lost the war that it is already preparing for another war within 25 years in which the United States will be the principal opponent, according to the French underground newspaper "Liberation" quoted in the London Sunday Chronicle.

A confidential memorandum for the next war has been drafted, for the guidance of Gen. Karl Von Clausewitzpagel, military governor of France and chief of the German Military Intelligence Service, the paper reported.

CONDITION FAVORABLE

Windsor, England, Mar. 6 (CP)—The condition of Norah Neilan, 39-year-old mother of quadruplets, one of whom died shortly after birth, was described as favorable and could be expected to day by officials of the Derbyshire Royal Infirmary where she has been under care since Saturday night. There was "nothing sudden to report after child bearing" of the type that normally involves infirmity, hospital authorities said.

The War Today

Plan to Divide Italy's Navy Significant of Allied Unity

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

Few recent war transactions have been of greater international speculation than the unexplained announcement that the Anglo-American powers will divide ownership of the Italian Navy over to Russia, the surrendered fleet to be divided among others, is at white been.

The question is, of course, are the Italians, and Premier Badoglio has expressed pained surprise, going to be given any voice in the disposition of the Italian fleet, it's a symbol of solidarity among the Anglo-Saxon British blood, British, America and Russia— a unity that must be the envy of the world most certainly depends.

The Italian Navy, the German News Agency, professes to see in this move a proof of the "devoted intentions of the Anglo-Saxon Anglo-Americans try to satisfy the Kremlin.

All For One, One For All.

It's a matter of satisfying the Kremlin. It's a matter of adjusting questions on the basis of one for all and all for one. Each of the Allies is according to his own interests, ready to help in the war.

Allies must have Turkeys' permission to pass through the Dardanelles and there is no the point, the Hitlerites must be cleaned out of the Aegean which block Russia's entrance to the Dardanelles from the Mediterranean.

Allies Begin Carrying Out Pledge.

Anyway, of much greater importance is the fact that the Allies are in process of carrying out their pledge to render the axis powers impotent militarily and punish war guilt. Our statesmen have agreed to this a preview of what's going to happen to their own navies, armies and air forces.

However, there's something even more significant than the actual disposition of the Italian fleet, it's a symbol of solidarity among the Anglo-Saxon British blood, British, America and Russia— a unity that must be the envy of the world most certainly depends.

New Understanding With Turkey Still Possible

Ankara, March 6 —(AP)— Two Turkish newspapers today expressed today that a new Turkish understanding with Britain and the United States, announcement that shipment of war supplies from Britain and the United States had been stopped.

"The policy of the democracies is one of policy," said Vatan.

"If the Allies were to do something to Turkey, they would find us at their sides," said Tanin. "If we were to do something, we do nothing in the Balkans because we will not move. Because the Allies do not with to_land in the Balkans.

Suspension of Anglo - Turkish military talks was disclosed in the Tanin reported that aviators and technicians sent to Turkey by the British and American armies are preparing to leave and said that the flow of war material supplies from Allied sources has been halted shipments of rubber and tin would continue.

Uruguayan Govt. Postpones Decision

Montevideo, Uruguay, March 6—(AP)—Reports to Rio de Janeiro said today the Uruguayan government had postponed for several days a decision whether to recognize the Argentine government of Gen. Edelmiro Parrell.

Both Uruguay and Paraguay had been reported considering the possibility of joining Chile and Bolivia in recognizing the Argentine regime, a step that might split pan-American solidarity.

Information last night from the Uruguayan Foreign Office was that Uruguayan Foreign Acting Secretary of State, Edward R Stettinius, Jr., in Washington, indicated that Washington was withholding official recognition, but is trying to give concrete Data confirming a belief that Gen. Pedro Ramirez had been forced to give up the presidency to Farrell.

A Buenos Aires announcement when the Farrell regime supplanted that of Ramirez Feb. 25 declared that countries delegated his powers voluntarily because he needed a rest.

Both Chile and Bolivia accepted this explanation and said today that they considered the new Argentine government simply a continuation of the former one with no question of recognition involved.

Bus Breaks Down Concert Cancelled

Mechanical difficulties which put the R.A.F. bus on Picton out of action temporarily spoiled a perfectly good concert for the station personnel in their recreation hall this afternoon. Scheduled to be Belleville Municipal Band, 45 or more strong, were all prepared to make the trip to Picton to entertain the R.A.F. boys but when the bus failed to start for more at the Front Street band rooms, word was immediately passed that no bus had broken down en route to Belleville and that the concert was cancelled.

According to arrangements the air force was to supply transportation for the band to Picton and same through the breakdown it was too late to arrange for another and the engagement might be kept. Approximately 75 per cent of the band members was heard to say "I'm happy about it because we were not in the bus when it broke down".

Border Bridge Closed For Second Sunday

Niagara Falls, N.Y., March 6— (AP)—Traffic across Rainbow bridge between Niagara Falls and the international span of Thousand Island bridge at Alexandria Bay remained at midnight when border patrols were withdrawn and customs offices closed with week end duty.

The spans were closed yesterday for the second consecutive Sunday as bridge owners remained firm in their determination not to pay customs inspectors overtime for Sunday work as requested by the U.S. Treasury Department.

Legislation now is pending in congress authorizing the authorized payment by the government for the Sunday work.

NATIVE OF NORWOOD DIES IN CLEVELAND

Cleveland, March 6.—(AP)—Rev. Father Joseph Hubert, retired archdeacon of the Episcopal Diocese of Ohio, died in his apartment Saturday night while en route to Cleveland from Norwood, Ont., where he had been visiting relatives.

A native of Norwood, Ont., Dr. Hubert was ordained an archdeacon of the Ohio diocese in 1938 after serving in that post 18 years.

GOOD SAMARITAN

This is Prince Stevano Borghese, scion of an ancient Italian family, who opened his 14,000-acre farm to the 10,000 Italian civilians ejected from the town of Anzio and Nettuno by the Nazis, when the German High Command decided to make these resorts rest centres for German soldiers. Landing of the Allies in that area upset the German plans. Prince Borghese is now mayor of Anzio and Nettuno with the blessing of the Allied military government.

GREATER BOMBING OF NAZI INDUSTRY IS YET TO COME

Will Follow When German Air Resistance is Overwhelmed

BOMBING AS PRELUDE

London, March 6 —(CP)— When German resistance in the air is overwhelmed, "destruction of German war industry will follow on a far greater scale than that achieved in the last few weeks," Dingfeloat, parliamentary secretary to the Ministry of Economic Warfare, said in a broadcast to the United States.

Calling the present campaign an "inverted battle of Britain," he said the intensified bombing would be more than "a policy of attrition designed to wear resistance to the point potential over a long period—is the invasion of Europe."

Eight Fatalities All in Ontario

(By The Canadian Press)

There were eight fatalities in Ontario during February, the month's end, all of them occurring in Ontario.

Alvein E. Martin of Gads Hill, near Stratford, was injured Saturday when he was struck by a train while driving overturned near Shakespeare and he died after reaching hospital.

Mrs. Sarah Livingstone, 79, of Toronto, died Saturday of head injuries suffered Saturday in a fall at her home.

Opl. Farrell of Pembroke, Ont., and Pte. Lloyd Reid of Sudbury, Ont., died at North Bay Sunday shortly after the army jeep in which they were travelling turned over in a ditch at nearby Balsam Creek. Both were members of the Canadian Forestry Detachment.

Seventy-year-old Joseph Timmins of Hamilton died in hospital Sunday from scalds suffered in his home three days earlier when a fainting spell he spilled a pot of boiling water over himself.

Mrs. Alan Kirkwood, 62, Chesley, died Sunday in a Walkerton hospital from injuries suffered the morning day when the automobile in which she was a passenger was struck by a truck two miles west of Walkerton.

John Macauley, 78, died Saturday in hospital of a fractured skull received in a fall Thursday at his native Wiarton.

Alex Knott, Indian guide, was killed dead Saturday on a highway 12 miles north or Peterborough, believed to have frozen to death while walking to his home at Curve Lake Reserve.

BRITISH DESTROYER LOST

London, March. 6. (CP)—Loss of the Destroyer Inglefield was announced tonight. The Admiralty gave no details.

Allied Bombers Hit Jap Airfields In South Burma

New Delhi, March 6—(CP)—A British patrol operating on Burma's coastal plain south of Maungdaw engaged and routed a Japanese patrol, supported by a dozen Japanese, a southward advance, it was said today.

Elsewhere on the main Arakan front, quiet has prevailed for the past 24 hours, except for artillery shelling of the Allied positions north of Buthedaung, the bulletin said.

Heavy bombers carried their explosives to a number of Japanese airfields in southern Burma during day night, starting fires, while fighters, fighter-bombers and medium bombers attacked a wide variety of targets in the past three days.

Medlums hit Shamo town last night. Fighter and medium bombers, in northern Burma sweeps, damaged locomotives, felled trees, river craft and camp areas, destroyed a bridge at Kunmyen, heavily damaged a runway at the Shwebo airfield and demolished Japanese buildings.

Dive-bombers and fighters attacked enemy positions in all Burma fronts in support of the Allied troops in the past two days.

GERMAN ARMY IN UKRAINE ALMOST ISOLATED

Red Army Breaks Odessa-Warsaw Line For 18 Miles

Troops Pour Thru Gap in Race Toward Rumania Hoping To Trap Enemy

NARVA UNDER ATTACK

By EDDY GILMORE
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, March 7 —(AP)— The Red army brought the war close to Rumania today, all but isolating Gen. Fritz von Manstein's south-ern Ukraine army from Germany and Poland, surging on despite weather so bad Soviet dispatches described it as "almost impossible."

The vital Odessa-Lvov-Warsaw trunk line has been breached for a distance of 18 miles between Volo-chisk and Narkevichi, a Russian communique declared, and it was through this gap that the Red army columns were reported racing toward Rumania, threatening the ex-tinguishment of great masses of Ger-man troops already partially iso-lated to the south.

37 Miles from Rumania.

At some places where the Rus-sians have taken strongholds on the Odessa-Warsaw railway, Soviet units are 37 miles from the Rumanian border beyond Soviet Ukraine republic, (This refers to the border established in 1940 when Rumania ceded Bessarabia and northern Bucovina to Russia.)

Front dispatches said the snow had been washed away by heavy rains and that vast fields of the Ukraine are full of mud.

"This siege all-German would seem absolutely impossible," Red Star declared today, but added that "but what is happening proves the contrary."

These dispatches pointed out how the lack of roads and the mud have brought about "parallel dashings" of the German army, and indicated the Germans (at bays been separated from one another and are falling back without contact between them, where only a few miles lay between various units.

Secondary Supply Lines Left.

Six winding railways connect the Odessa-Warsaw and the Lvov-Bucharest trunk lines, joining two junctions at Zhmerod and Mogilev on the Odessa-Warsaw line. The Russians are already in Mogilev and Tarnopol and within 70 miles east of Lvov itself.

If Marshal Gregory K. Zhukov can continue the pace of his offen-sive—18 to 20 miles daily—he can soon be throwing the German army back from the Dniester river line to track lines into Rumania, for routes to Germany and Poland are im-perilled.

15,000 Germans Killed.

In the first two days Zhukov's forces killed more than 15,000 of the enemy and took more than 3,000 prisoners, Moscow said. Enemy material captured or destroyed in-cluded 323 tanks and guns, 617 mortars, 860 machine-guns, 2,000 trucks, 30 armored cars, 9 artillery depots and an armored train. In addition 500 men were liquidated, a total of 700 for the three days to date.

The Berlin radio, discussing the magnitude of the Russian effort, asserted that Zhukov had sent 80 infantry divisions and eight tank corps into the drive, and concluded that the Russians "definitely hope to fight the decisive battle" in this sector.

"With this new mass offensive the Moscow government hopes to deal a death blow to the German armies in the Ukraine," the Nazi broadcast added.

Developments on the first Ukrainian front overshadowed the fighting in the far north, where Tannoyed near the Estonian border, smashed into enemy fortifications on the Narva river and drove within 18 Narva, now almost completely sur-rounded by the Germans, is 70 miles west of Leningrad army. Here more than 100 enemy guns were killed in hand-to-hand fighting, the Moscow bulletin said.

The Soviet communique did not mention developments on other sectors of the long front.

Change in British Tommies' Pay Unlikely at Present

London, March 7 —(CP)— Prime Minister Churchill told the House of Commons today that no funda-mental changes are likely to be made in army pay allowances, an issue on which the government eked out a 26-vote margin in last week's flare-up vote in the House.

Replying to questions about an investigation into foreign service and allowance rates, Mr. Churchill said, "I have no new statement to make."

AVAILABLE TO ALL MEMBERS

Ottawa, March 7 —(CP)— Air Minister Power said last night in the Commons that benefits of the R.C.A.F. benevolent fund, con-tributed to from canteen funds, are available to all members of the force.

He was answering W. H. Macdon-ald, (L-Brantford) who said that a House Committee had found some years ago that the fund was to be used for the benefit of the per-manent R.C.A.F. only.

Maj. Power said the necessary steps had been taken to extend the benefits to all R.C.A.F. mem-bers.

Two Destroyers And Two Cruisers Announced Lost

Alexander Says Loss From U-Boats Less Than One in 1,000 In 2nd Half of '43

SUBS STILL MENACE

London, March 7 (CP)—A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the Ad-miralty, announced today that the cruisers Spartan and Penelope, the destroyers Janus and Ingletield, and five "major assault vessels" are the price the Royal Navy has so far paid for establishment and maintenance of the 5th Army's beachhead south of Rome.

Loss of the Penelope was an-nounced by the Admiralty today. Loss of the other cruiser and the two destroyers had been announced previously.

Alexander also announced that shipping losses from Allied convoys ran less than one in 1,000 during the second half of 1943, thus demonstrating the Navy estimates in the House of Commons, the First Lord made the announcement as he dramatically illustrated progress in winning the war against German undersea and air raiders.

"In 1941 one ship was lost out of every 181 that sailed", he said, "in 1942 one out of every 232; in 1943 one out of every 756".

He said that the "average loss for the last eight months is also below the level of 1918", the final year of the first Great War when the U-boat at last had been whip-ped. In that year 1,171 ships were lost to disaster in earlier years of that war.

Shipbuilding Increases.

His statement was particularly striking against the background of the fact that the combined ship building capacity of the Allies is far greater than in 1918 and showed that the U-boat has been much more thoroughly defeated than it was in the last war.

This victory may not yet be re-garded as final, the First Lord point-ed out, indicating that although the German navy had been balked and baffled, Germany still had at least as many submarines as she did at the start of 1943 and "there is not the slightest evidence that the enemy has in any way abandoned the intention to cripple our sea communications if he possibly can."

Alexander pointed out the first time that the Mediterranean route to the east is in full use, Admi-ralty said its reopening "is worth 1,000,000 gross tons and the con-sequent saving in shipping by half as much again in actual ships."

He said the Royal Navy now is stronger "in relation to enemy sea strength," than it has been since the fall of France.

He disclosed that 13 British war-ships were sunk on Russian convoy duty and merchant ship losses were heavy but that 88 per cent of cargoes got through and those goods "no doubt, ships and blood had been magnificently turned to account in the hands of the Red army."

Foe Develops New Tactics.

He said the Germans are trying to develop tactics calling for the use of "very long range aircraft" in conjunction with submarines. Increased construction of concrete shelters in occupied areas is the best evidence that the Germans "aim at putting more U-boats in the fight."

Alexander disclosed also that of 11 blockade runners sent from Ja-pan to Germany in the last 12 months, only two reached Red ports and both were damaged.

Other facts and figures he laid before parliament, along with a re-quest for naval appropriations in an undisclosed amount.

The British merchant ship out-put up to the end of 1943 appreci-ably exceeded the total for the last war and warship output was nearly twice.

The navy, while devoting its en-ergies mainly to the coming as-saults on Europe "is looking be-yond even to the Japanese war," Shall descend with our full might upon the Japanese".

Total losses of the Royal Navy and the European Allied navies in the Mediterranean since the start of the Sicilian campaign last July were put at 'many hundreds' and destroyers, two submarines, 10 mine-or war vessels.

Prisoners of War Require Large Quantities Butter, Dry Whole Milk, Cheese, Yearly

Toronto, March 7 — (CP) — Canadian Red Cross shipments to prisoners of war require about 5,300,000 pounds of butter, 5,300,000 pounds of dry whole milk and 1,-300,000 pounds of cheese annually, F. Singleton, chairman of the Dairy Products Board, said to ad-dressing the Ontario Cheese Pro-ducers Association today.

To keep the parcels, sent to Allied as well as Canadian prison-ers, include one pound of butter, 1 pound of dry whole milk and one-quarter pound of cheese, and they are going forward at the rate of 100,000 a week, Mr. Singleton said.

It was probable the quantities of dairy products needed for this pur-pose would increase in the future, he continued. Their cream-ery butter production in 1938 re-presented 20 per cent of the Can-adian total and in 1934 38.5 per cent.

AMERICANS PUSH AHEAD ON LOS NEGROS ISLAND

Allies Hold Tight Grip on Momote Airdrome and it is Being Used

3,000 JAPS KILLED

Allied Headquarters, Southwest Pacific, March 7 —(AP)— United States troops pushed ahead Sunday toward Japanese positions and in-evitable new jungle battles to drive the enemy from strategic Los Negros Island of the Admiralty Group in the Bismarck Sea—in mid-ter tary campaign similar to the 1942 Guadalcanal invasion.

Allied forces had a tight grip on Momote airdrome, which they seiz-ed after their daring landing Feb. 29, and have defended it against fierce attacks that cost the Japan-ese 2,000 killed and wounded in less than a week.

Their new move put the Ameri-cans across a lagoon north of Momote airfield and gave them a foothold on a seven-mile-long pen-insula jutting to the northern neck of Los Negros Island.

By capturing a belt of rough jungle along the northeast New Guinea coast, units of the U. S. 32nd Divi-sion made an amphibious landing behind Japanese positions and established themselves 30 miles west of Saidor. This puts them in the rear of Japanese blocking the road to Madang. The Madang area was bombed and strafed.

Massing for Thrust.

Hundreds of miles eastward, on Bougainville Island in the Solom-ons, Allied planes bombed and strafed Japanese concentrations against the American perimeter as Australian infantry, Navy, artillery pounded the Japanese positions. There was mounting evidence that the thousands of Japanese stranded on Bougainville were massing for a desperate effort to drive the Empress Augusta Bay positions.

FINLAND AWAITS RUSSIAN WORD ON PEACE TERMS

Country Replies to Terms Suggested by the Soviet Government

PARLIAMENT TO MEET

Stockholm, March 7 —(AP)—The Finnish government is momentar-ily awaiting word from the Soviet Russian government on Finland's reply to Moscow peace terms and hos-tilities terms, the Aftonbladet's Hel-sinki correspondent reported today.

This report, which was cleared by Finnish censorship, was the first word direct from Finland tending to lend credence to reports that Finland had made some sort of ac-knowledgment of the Russian terms.

But particulars of the reply were not made known.

"Usually well-informed persons stress that political developments now are characterized by increased tension," the correspondent wrote, and therefore is waiting with in-creased interest the second phase of the Finnish-Russian crisis. Finland is the Finnish government reply to Moscow and the expected Soviet re-ply.

The Finnish parliament is scheduled to meet today but the Aftonbladet report said it was thought the government would make no new declaration to parli-ament.

However, a special parliamentary committee for foreign affairs was summoned for a report from Henrik Ramsay, foreign minister, on political developments.

U. S. SUBS MAY DELIVER KILLING BLOW IN PACIFIC

Admiral Chester Nimitz Returns to Washington For Conference

TAKE ANOTHER ATOLL

Washington, March 7 — (AP) — Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, Com-mander-in-Chief of the United States Pacific fleet, reported today on his return to Washington for a series of conferences that the Amer-ican forces have occupied the Ma-juro atoll in the Marshall Islands and (2) U. S. submarines may de-liver the killing blow in the Pa-cific.

U. S. troops encountered no op-position when they invaded Ma-juro, once a German supply base, a dispatch from Admiral Nimitz's fleet said in announcing the occu-pation. They found no Japanese on the atoll, he said, adding that the little island will provide American forces with a good anchorage and advance position in the mid-Pacific Marshalls.

As for the work of American sub-marines, the Pacific commander said they "are taking such a heavy toll of Japanese shipping that lack of shipping may soon be the cen-trolling factor in what Japan is able to do."

Increase In Number

"Our submarines are increasing in number and not decreasing in efficiency, even though the num-ber of targets is slowly decreasing," he added.

Nimitz warned at the same time against discounting the importance of Japanese submarines.

Nimitz, in Washington for con-ferences, repeated naval assertions that the Pacific fleet would wel-come a major engagement with the Japanese Navy.

"It would be to our advantage," he said, "to have an early encount-er with the Japanese fleet, because we are prepared to meet them. It would be disastrous for their navy if they could bring us to battle on their fleet as long as possible."

Nimitz said the failure of the enemy fleet to appear in any force, Nimitz replied that "they've got a pretty good reason to take care of it."

Spring Thaws in Russia May Give Germans Advantage at Bridgehead

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, March 7 — (AP) — Reports of early spring thaws on the Russian front caused fresh con-cern here today over the Allied campaign in Italy.

Any Soviet slowdown might en-able the Germans to throw new di-visions against the Anzio beach-head which the Allies have encountered such heavy resistance ever since their initial landings last September.

The Allies have not considered urgently critical, which is to say that prospects for progress in Italy have been the brightest since they have been in the recent past. But much cause for concern remains, in the opinion of competent judges, and the Allies are not being the sole danger of stalemate.

Stalemate is a long enough word. It is no advance on the main front-line and no expansion of the Anzio beachhead.

2. Failure to reap the political re-wards will be the cause of None, which appear to have prompted the Germans to fight for Rome.

3. The men on the beachhead should be placed in a relatively tolerable position, with the sea at their backs and German artillery-men and troops occupying the entire area on three sides.

Toward these ends, it is expected the Germans will reinforce and supply their armies down the boot every time changed military con-ditions make it safe. Some extent is which they do this may furnish an indication of the total manoeuv-able strength with which the Ger-mans can hope to counter-attack, to counter-attack the Allies in this year of great offensives.

It is considered almost certain to make a major change in the Rus-sian front, if the Soviet drive is pressed, has the advantage of in-terior lines of communication. With Spring mud slowing Russia's mil-itary activity, it authorities assume it inevitably will, he can shift re-serve divisions, and air and artillery from one area to another, in an attempt to hold or even to smash the Allies there-after, then shift them as fast as needed in time to meet a Soviet Summer offensive.

First Time in History V.C. Award Made to Living French-Canadian

By DOUGLAS AMARON
(CP War Correspondent)

With the Canadian Corps in Italy, March 7 — Canada's French-Canadian soldiers in Italy learned with pride Monday that Maj. Paul Triquet of the Royal Canadian Regiment, who inspired leadership changed the course of the Moro Valley battle last December, has been awarded the Victoria Cross.

It was the first time in history that the Empire's highest award for valor had been made to a living French-speaking Canadian. Seven-teen awarded posthumously in the last war, Maj. Triquet too was the first soldier of the Canadian Brit-ish 5th Army to win this decora-tion since last April.

The action for which this honor is bestowed will inspire all Canad-ians, particularly those of French descent, the Canadian Corps Com-mander (Lt.-Gen. Burns) said in a letter to Triquet, a na-tive of Cabano, Quebec.

"It is a great thing to have been the first Canadian soldier in this campaign to receive the most cov-eted military decoration of the Brit-ish Empire," he said, "and I add my name and deeds will be long remem-bered in our homeland. . . . Your life long to wear the Victoria Cross you so gallantly won"

At his headquarters in a shell-torn farm house the battle-scarred colonel commanding the Royal 22nd echoed his corps commander's senti-ments in a congratulant words.

"It's terrific", he said. "It's wonderful thing for Triquet, for the regiment, for Canada".

The colonel had learned only a few hours before that the award had come through and had not ad-vised his men. He later summoned company commanders together to tell them the news in spreading through the regiment what he called "this wonderful news".

Maj. Triquet himself is in hospi-tal, victim of the seven division's fi-nal drive. Never content with carrying out the normal tasks of officer, he worked himself into a state of nervous exhaustion.

AIM TO REBUILD RUSSIA

Toronto, March 7 — (CP) — Rev. Bernard Pares, British lecturer and student of Russia, said last night in an address that the Premier Stalin's aim after the war will be to rebuild Russia rather than to seek territorial gains.

"Russia will until time after time that he doesn't want anything from the outside world," he said in a lovable character but he knows what he wants and what has happened before. I don't believe he wants to drive Poland into German hands. I think he would, touch Czechoslovak's

CANADIAN FLAG GIVEN ROTARY CLUB

Members of the Belleville Rotary club and their guests will stand to attention before a real Canadian flag instead of the Union Jack, when the national flag is used at future club meetings.

Previously only the Union Jack had appeared in the club dining room and members maintained that it was not quite proper to sing "O Canada" before anything but a real Canadian flag. Rightly presented the lacking emblem. The presentation of the flag to the club was formally made Monday noon by Rotarian R. Petry, recently back from overseas where he had been in charge of the "Maple Leaf" concert party. Rotarian Arthur Francis, watched approvingly.

A truck driven by the Belleville Steam Laundry skidded off Highway No. 2, three miles west of the city limits, and crashed into a Hydro pole, breaking it off at the base. The pavement on the highway was exceedingly slippery in the vicinity of the crash. The driver of the truck reported the accident at Provincial Police headquarters.

STRONG MARCH WINDS FOLLOWED BY RAIN

Activities in and around local police circles were routine during the past 24 hours although the fair strong March winds followed rain and snow which fell the previous day afoul of the law early Monday evening and were lodged in the cell block to "sleep it off."

As for Trenton, city streets Monday night the Department of Public Works was called upon to send the streets. Shortly after the employees arrived at the city hall, Queen Church Street, they found the driveway leading from the premises blocked by several parked motor cars. Police were notified and later the vehicles were towed away by the P.W.D. tow truck. The cost of the towing was assessed the delinquent automobile drivers.

MOTOR CAR SKIDS UNDERNEATH TRUCK

Property damage resulted to the front portion of a motor car driven on Front Street by Douglas Rowe, of Belleville early this Tuesday when the vehicle skidded underneath a large transport that was making a left turn at the corner of nearby driveway. Both vehicles were proceeding in the same direction when Gordon Bartley, No. 1 Abbey St., says he put his hand out indicating he was about to make a starboard turn with his transport and Mr. Rowe assured police he did not see the signal and when the truck turned left he applied both brakes to his motor car, which skidded beneath the left side of the larger vehicle. The right headlight of the car and the headlight of the motor car were all badly damaged.

Group Capt. Jones Took Part In Leipzig Attack

Former Trenton Officer Well Known Here

"We bombed Leipzig from 36,000 feet and it was a grand experience."

Thus Group Captain W. A. Jones of "Headquarters overseas" of an R.C.A.F. station in England where both Thunderbird and Goose squadrons operate against Germany, is quoted in a London Daily Express dispatch of a publicizing Allied air raid against the German capital. Captain Jones is well known in Belleville, having married a local girl, formerly Miss Kathleen Orr, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Orr, 133 Ann St., following is a copyrighted story by A. C. Cummings from The Daily Province London:

Originally from Regina, Group Captain Jones has been in the R. C. A. F. for many years and has held various posts, the most recent of which was as senior staff officer, western air command, Vancouver. It was his post as senior staff officer in the fall of 1941 to prepare overseas as commanding officer of the R.C.A.F. station in Britain.

As authority on armament, the 39-year-old group captain has now under his supervision two Canadian Lancaster squadrons which have been famous for their bombing and gunnery exploits among their individual targets and night fighters.

Commissioned in 1930

He was commissioned in 1930 and was moved to Trenton in 1932 with, among other ladies he flew with the Skatin Flight. At that time the British Empire was the largest and most manoeuvrable single-seat fighter then stationed in Trenton he met his future wife in Belleville.

He started learning about bombs and guns when he took an armament officer's course at Trenton in 1934. He took an advanced course in Britain and in 1936 returned to Canada to become O. C. of Trenton's first armament school at Trenton. In 1939 he was appointed command armament officer at Trenton. In 1940 he was also helped to organize and open No. 1 Bombing and Gunnery School at Jarvis and No. 2 B. and G. School at Mossbank, Sask. In 1941 he was C. O. of No. 8 B. and G. at Lethbridge.

Group Captain Jones' wife and two sons, Stuart and Anthony, live at 2276 West Forty-Ninth St., in Vancouver.

British Beat Off Two Japs Raids On Main Front

New Delhi, March 7. (CP)—British troops operating in Western Burma have beaten off two Japanese raids on their main front west of the Mayu range, Allied headquarters announced today. Severe casualties were inflicted and the British troops staged a successful raid south of Maungdaw.

Patrol clashes also were reported in the Kaladan Valley and south of the Chin Hills. Enemy opposition has increased in the Kaladan Valley.

In North Burma American and Chinese troops, exploiting the capture of Walawbum and Maingkwan, are mopping up Japanese units, and a Japanese attempt to cross the Tanai River has been thrown back with heavy losses, the communique said.

The Americans, first U.S. ground troops to fight on the Asiatic continent, took Walawbum, 15 miles southeast of Maingkwan, and Chinese forces seized Maingkwan, chief village of the Hukawng Valley and Japanese artillery opposition.

Chinese troops crossed the Ida river in the Maingkwan area and killed 74 Japanese. South of Sumprabum, 27 Japanese were killed and 20 wounded in a patrol action.

Allied fighter and dive-bomber attack Sunday and Monday at objectives in Araka, Kaladan, the Chin Hills, Mandalay and Central Burma, and long-range fighters swept over enemy communications and airfields in Burma. Allied planes supported ground troops and heavy and medium bombers hit Bhamo and Heho airfield. Two planes were lost in all operations.

Mrs. Rita Wagar Gives Evidence

Kingston, March 7. (CP)—Mrs. Rita Wagar testified yesterday at the resumption of the murder trial of Harry Poulter, Mrs. Annie May McCumber, repeating evidence she had given at the first trial of the woman the jury disagreed.

Mrs. McCumber is charged with the murder of the 18 months old baby daughter, Mrs. Wagar told the jury yesterday that Walter Bailey, the father of her child, told her that he had "choked the baby" and "drowned the baby in a pail of water. Then he told her, she said, that "one baby hasn't been living where I put it". Two days later Haley forced her to accompany him to the river where a length of stove pipe, stuffed with newspaper, was found, and a gunnysack holding what he buried the baby's body.

Mrs. Wagar swore that she did not know the baby's body was in the stove pipe when Haley buried it.

Dr. G. S. Tennant, superintendent of the Ontario Hospital at Brockville, testified that Mrs. McCumber was of her mentality. Regarding statements she made to police after the first trial, Dr. Tennant found she "accused was pliable to suggestions".

Obituary

GEORGE THOMAS BISSELL

Trenton, March 7 (Special)—The death of George Thomas Bissell, a former resident of Trenton, who died in Toronto on Friday, took place from the Oddfellows Home, Trenton, on Saturday afternoon. The service in the chapel and at the Mount View cemetery was conducted by the Rev. J. D. McKee, pastor of Grace United Church.

The bearers were Messrs. Norman Bissell, Angus Bissell, Lawrence Bissell and Lester Bissell, all of whom are nephews of the deceased, and Walter Bowen and Ralph Donaldson

[illegible] Bissell, who was in his 86th year, was born in Trenton and was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Warren Bissell. For a considerable time he was employed with the Gilmour Lumber Company in Trenton and for a time he lived also in Meaford. For the past twenty-eight years he has lived in Trenton. In religion he was a member of the Bethel Park United Church, Toronto, and was a member of the Board of Stewards. Fraternally he was a member of the Oddfellows at Trenton.

Rose, of Norfolk, Ray, Graydon Snyder of Wilton; Ont, Geo Ignna and Harvey Kilner of Frankford. Interment was made in the Frankford cemetery.

The late Mrs. Slingerland passed away on Tuesday, Feb 29th, in Toronto after a period of several months duration. She was in her 36th year. She was born in Brighton county, Brantford, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Ostrander. On 30th June, 1926 she had been made her home in Frankford, before that she resided at Newcastle. Besides her husband she leaves one daughter, Miss Marjorie Ann, also surviving is one brother Allan O'Grady in the armed forces and sister Mrs. Alvin Ward, R. R. 2, Drake, Oak Street, Brantford, and Miss Susan Ostrander, Brantford.

Mrs. Slingerland received her education at Brantford. She was a member of the Free Methodist Church, Frankford, also of the Ladies Association of the United Church. She was until her health failed, Fred Orr worker of the Frankford Branch of the Red Cross.

The many floral tributes testify to the high esteem in which the deceased was held in the community.

LATE JAMES HENRY JUBY (Corbyville)

The funeral of James Henry Juby, late resident of Corbyville, who died in the Belleville General Hospital on Thursday, March 2nd, took place from the home of his nephew, Mr. Frank Whitney, Corbyville, on Sunday afternoon. Service in the home and at Elmwood cemetery was conducted by the Rev. J. R. Trumpour, pastor of Canniffon United Church.

The bearers were Messrs. F. Hicks, C. Bretnell, W. Cook, E. Horton, F. Chambers and B. Clarke.

Many Prominent Citizens Guests At S. A. Service

A large attendance, including a number of the city's prominent citizens were guests of the Salvation Army on Sunday afternoon at their 69th Anniversary Service held in the Citadel on Pinnacle Street, Several short addresses were given by these visitors which conveyed the greetings of other denominational and organizations of the city. His Worship Mayor Rollins officiated as chairman and in his add spoke briefly on the excellent work done by the Army for the community from its inception here.

Mr. F. E. Deacon, one of a group representing Bridge Street United Church, spoke to the assembly on the history of the Salvation Army in the city, and said that through their efforts they have succeeded in the work of all Christian endeavor. On successful was the work of the Army, said Mr. Deacon in his address, in bringing many into Christian fellowship in the Army that the churches of the city in 1886 enlisted the services of Salvation Army officials for a six weeks campaign. He said that the work of General Booth and Mrs. Booth proved that first need of the people was spiritual and not physical need.

The address of the day was delivered by Lieut. Col. Best of the Salvation Army, Montreal. He spoke of the work the Army overseas is doing in the various branches of the war work and said that the co-operation of the three other organizations immediately in contact with the Army type of work, the Knights of Columbus, Y.M.C.A., and the Canadian Legion, who have their workers in fields of effort so that they are not all trying to do the same work at the same place. This was tried in the last war and the result was a great contrast in which one was stalled and another was criticized, hastily in the same area, he said. The Colonel illustrated his talk with a number of actual stories of the Army's work with the services.

Guests present included the Rev. J. O. Hornsby, Mr. J. O. Herity, Mr. P. S. Deacon, Mr. Ernest Bowerman, Mr. Morrison. His Worship Mayor Rollins presented the local commandant, Major Sharp, at the conclusion. Music was furnished by the Salvation Army band and the Benediction at the end of the service was invoked by the Rev. Hornsby.

Protest Strikes Are Spreading

London, March 7. (CP)— Wage protest strikes which began in the north of Scotland yesterday spread today through the valleys of Wales — Monmouthshire, with about 10,000 miners on strike, and the Swansea steelworks. More than 1,000 men in four Aberdare collieries struck today, following a strike by 600 miners at the Ocean coal mine of Monmouthshire and others in the Vale of Neath and Glamorgan yesterday.

Similar walkouts threatened other collieries and the South Wales Miners' executive committee called an emergency session to draw up an appeal to the workers to return to the pits pending negotiations to settle the grievances.

Miners again are protesting a wage fixing decision which boosted the minimum weekly wage but provided no increase in piece rates. The miners contend that this means virtually the same pay no matter what their skill and no matter how hard they work.

Dies in Toronto

The Rev. James S. McMullen, who for ten years was a resident of Belleville, being engaged in ministerial work for the United Church, died at his home, 145 Danforth Avenue, Toronto, on Saturday, March 5th. He was a resident of Toronto only a few days when the Belleville will regret to learn of his death.

The late Mr. McMullen, who had reached the advanced age of eighty-five years, was active in the ministry of the Methodist Church, the United Church for forty-one years. He served many rural pastorates in the Bay of Quinte Conference, entering the ministry in 1881. He was born at Bethany, Ont., the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. David McMullen, pioneer settlers.

He was ordained as a minister of the Methodist Church at Picton in 1886. His charges included Roseneath, Darlington, Camden, Lakefield, Cobourg, Minden, Dunbarton, Morven, Alderley, Enterprise, Tyrone, Trenton, Frankford, Picton, and Bloomfield, Carrington. It was while he was at Picton that Albert was married to Oshawa, in 1894, that he retired. During the following ten years he engaged in mission work in Belleville. He was a member of the Forth Avenue United Church, Toronto.

Mr. McMullen was twice married, his first wife, Emma Lillian Sales, having died in 1933. He is survived by his widow, Lilly May McMullen, a daughter, Mrs. D. F. Byers, at Toronto, and two sons, Flt.-Lt. Cecil E. McMullen, R.C.A.F., and Harvard J. McMullen, of Whitby.

FIRST TIME

"He wouldn't rest", the colonel said, "and finally I had to order him to hospital. He wanted to go but I insisted for he was expected."

(Defence Headquarters at Ottawa last night announced that Trigue had died from wounds received last Jan. 8 and that he remained on duty until Feb. 19 when a recurrence of his wound forced him to leave the battlefield for treatment.)

After the recommendation for the award went in which Trigue received testimonials from divisional and brigade commanders and soldiers who served with him, he returned to though Trigue might be fated not to receive the award. A bomb was struck by shells, while he was in it, but he was not injured.

Then he went as instructor to brigade battle school and a smoke grenade exploded between his legs. He was burned and fortunate not to receive permanent injuries.

He then went to hospital where it was hoped he will remain for for another month. Trigue is anxious to return to the regiment and is likely to go to Canada instead as an instructor.

AMERICANS PUSH

CP Head Replies To Criticism Of News Stories

Toronto, March 7. (CP)— J. A. McNeil, general manager of The Canadian Press yesterday replied to the complaints by R. W. McNeil, past state deputy of the Knights of Columbus, that reports of the New York Wayne Lonergan trial and of the birth of quadruplets to Norah Lonergan in England are "consistored rotten by your reading public". The reply said:

"The Canadian Press seeks to make its news report impartial, accurate and complete, in conformity with good taste. Our report on the interesting Carpenter quadruplets story was carefully censored without the illegitimacy angle. Similarly the Lonergan case would be unanimously rejected if we printed over certain sordid but pertinent points. Where impressions have become news it is our duty to report them for our newspaper readers".

Mrs. Cleon News.

Glace Bay, N.S., March 7. (CP) —Protest against cuts in coverage given the Lonergan murder trial in New York and the birth of the Carpenter quadruplets in England, was expressed over the weekend by W. MacNeil of Glace Bay, past deputy of the Knights of Columbus in a telegram to The Canadian Press.

Text of Mr. MacNeil's wire:

"Canadian Press reports for several days on Carpenter quintuplet story and Associated Press on Lonergan trial considered rotten by reading public. Surely you can keep your news columns clean one month or many hundred which is so vital at this time. Why not concentrate on the war and run riot with filthy salacious news?"

32 P.C. Objective In Red Cross Appeal Reached

Toronto, March 7.—(CP)—National Headquarters announced today the Canadian Red Cross Dominion appeal for $10,000,000 yesterday reached 32.5313,362 or 32 per cent of the objective, compared with 30 per cent at the same date last year. The current campaign will end March 15th.

In paying tribute to the work of the canvassers, a national campaign official urged that collections be reported as early as possible in order that correct tabulation of results may be kept.

Provincial collections reported, with objectives in brackets, were:

Prince Edward Island, $50,000(or 100 per cent with the original goals doubled; British Columbia, $746,512 ($800,000) 43 per cent; Quebec, $805,175 ($2,250,000) 36 per cent; Alberta, $143,556 ($400,000) 36 per cent; Manitoba, $261,000 ($800,000) 33 per cent; Saskatchewan, $160,000 ($500,000) 28 per cent; Ontario, $1,237,890 ($5,000,000) 36 per cent; New Brunswick, $80,138 ($300,000) 27 per cent; Nova Scotia, $86,000 ($350,000) 24 per cent.

In addition the leadership was held by Brantford, which subscribed $88,210; an objective of $50,000. The executive said a new quota or $100,000 had been set.

Trenton and District

R.C.A.F. Women's Auxiliary.

Trenton, (Special) The regular monthly business meeting of the Women's Auxiliary of the R.C.A.F. was held in the Mess Hall on Monday afternoon.

In the absence of the president and vice president, the secretary, Mrs. J. K. Holden presided.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved and the treasurer's report given as well as reports of the various committees. Letters of thanks from men overseas who had received cigarettes from the Auxiliary were read. A letter from the Red Cross asking for canvassers was also read.

It was decided that henceforth tea will be served at each business meeting. The secretary was reminded of the Victorian Order tea to be held on March 11th.

A motion by Mrs. Province was seconded by Mrs. Mills and passed that a donation of $25 be given to the Red Cross.

It was announced that there would be a tea in the work rooms on March 16th. Mrs. Toms, people who had given donations to help furnish the waiting room, also were established for use of the Women's Division of the R.C.A.F. The rooms will be opened on March 11th and will be henceforth open each Saturday from 1 p.m. to 11 p.m.

2-INCH MORTAR

Chief fighting gull would have had his own name for it; probably "Small stove-pipe go boom! Make much smoke." But the Old Chief would have had long in the vicinity of battle-front bombs.

Primarily a smoke-producing weapon for screening movement, and unsculled in that role, it is also a regular little Jack the Giant Killer which it comes to slobbing high explosives into inaccessible enemy positions. Its great value is enough authority to be useful against armored pillboxes, but personnel role it's a mean little devil capable of seeking out the enemy in his hidden positions and making life very, very miserable.

Every infantryman is a 2-inch mortar man, so that no matter what happens there's always someone handy who can put the weapon into action.

That's the Infantry! The versatile lads with brains and fighting hearts!

Gong and Mallet Made at V. S. Presented to Club

The variety and quality of work in the manual training given in the vocational department of the Belleville Collegiate is well demonstrated at Kinsmen Club bi-monthly meeting Monday evening when Mr. Norman Smith, vocational director, presented the club with a Kinsmen crested bronze gong and mallet, both made in the school shops.

Birth of the idea evolved from Principal W. S. Turner when he was guest of Kinsmen at a recent meeting, he then noticing the club were in need of a suitable gong. He communicated his idea to the shop director, Mr. Smith, who in turn supervised the making of the gong by shop students. Don Boyle, student in the wood-working department made the pattern for the bell which was then cast and finished in the machine shop. The mallet is of splendid workmanship and has a clear and pleasing ring.

Accompanying Mr. Smith at the luncheon was Don Boyle, who made the pattern for the bell. The gong was presented to the club on behalf of Principal Turner and staff and students of the vocational department in the school.

We certainly had no idea that such work as this was being turned out at Belleville Collegiate," said President "Matt" Currie as he formally accepted the gong and mallet. "This beautiful gong will be a vital link between the service club and the students of Belleville Collegiate.

SIX MORE AIR SQUADRONS

Ottawa, March 7. (CP)— Air Minister Power said in the Commons Monday night that arrangements have been completed with the British Air Ministry whereby an additional R.C.A.F. squadrons will be established overseas by transfer from the home war establishment.

In accordance with present plans the R.C.A.F. overseas squadrons will number 64, divided into heavy bomber, fighter and coastal command units.

Says Business Should Create Public Confidence

The value of public relations as a means of creating good-will and maintaining contacts between business firms was the punishing public in preparation for the green light signal for the post-war period was pointed out to members of the local Kinsmen Club Monday evening by F. B. Peppiatt, of the Peterb'o Brewing Corporation.

Introduced by Kin. "Pivot" Holway, the speaker maintained that despite present restrictions, public relations are definitely advantageous, regardless of whether the business be large or small. It instills a spirit of good will with the result that if many persons can be made to think well of a business or company, its future success is assured.

"Now well we carry on in the post-war period depends to a great extent on our public relations department activity during the war," he stated.

The speaker pointed to the nine and one-half billions national income in Canada during the present time, this having increased from five and one-half at the start of the war. Economists had predicted that when industry got back to normal following the war, the national income would show an increase of approximately 50 per cent over 1939. He predicted there may be thousands of new businesses coming to Canada and that a great majority of the present industrial plant would remain in the cities.

Wartime restrictions had put a damper on business and insofar as the domestic market was concerned but no limit had been placed on public relations. Kindness and decency by company employees when explaining the inability of filling customers' present needs would pay great dividends in the post-war period. Citing the topic of an address heard in Toronto, the speaker quipt urged that company representatives "take an hour to say no."

If the national income in the post-war period were to show a 20 per cent. increase over that of 1939,

Bill Dennis expressed club appreciation to the speaker.

BUDGET YOUR SPENDING FOR VICTORY

Join the Budgeteers—Get simple new budget plan without obligation

HERE'S something you can do to bring Victory sooner. Resolve to budget your spending in 1944! The way you spend your money during this essential year is extremely important to your country —as well as to you.

How a budget can help you

Your pay cheque now has a double job to do. It must help keep our armies fighting on the battle fronts—and it must keep your family fighting on the home front. If you carefully plan your spending in advance you can meet higher taxes and war savings more easily. You can cut out many unnecessary expenses. You can feed, clothe and house your family for less.

Why don't you start your planning now before the year gets a day older? The Budget Calendar can be a big help to you.

This is an utterly new kind of budget book. It gives no fixed way for you to spend your money, no rule of so much for this and so much for that. Instead it helps you make your own spending pattern to fit your own way of living and your own income.

All who use the Budget Calendar are invited to join the Budgeteers. The Budgeteers are encouraged in their efforts by receiving a new booklet or letter from time to time. Their letters and questions are welcome, and are answered personally. Special recognition is given to Budgeteers who complete a year of budgeting.

The War Today—
Russian Strategy Places German Commander in Untenable Position

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press War Analyst)

Yesterday was a blue Monday on Hitler's calendar as great Allied offensives tore into him from both sides in the climatic campaigns of the war.

Both Russia and the western Allies continued to push the all-important big limits. The U.S.A. again demonstrated her growing aerial might in a terrific drive which shook the foundations of an already shattered Berlin, and British Air Force last night strewed death and destruction over a wide area.

The detonations of the Allied block-busters more or less tell their own story. The Liquovites' treacherous stroke in the southern Ukraine, however, is a bit complicated and attention is invited to some of the most beautifully-developed strategies of the war.

The fresh development is that Marshal Zhukov's new southwestward offensive has ripped a great gap in the vital Lwow-Odessa railroad at the junction of Volochisk, east of Tranopol. This means that Zhukov has severed Hitler's life-line to Odessa and the Dnieper Bend area. That road was the last important communication left to the Nazi dictator in this area. With the Lwow-Odessa railroad cut, German Marshal Von Mannstein is in a tough spot. He may be forced to pull his south Ukrainian armies back to the Bessarabian border. His communications with the fatherland then would be via Rumania, route through Rumania. Ultimately he would have to retreat into that Nazi state.

This is exactly the position for which the Red staff has been maneuvering for long weeks. Ever since the Russians consolidated their hold on recaptured Kiev. Using Kiev as a pivotal base, they started the westward drive which has thrust a spearhead into the heart of pre-war Poland.

As that steadily-growing column extended into enemy territory, the Muscovites kept shooting sickle-like offensives out of it to the south. These fast moving hooks gathered in large bodies of Nazis and annihilated them.

From the beginning the Red aim had been the same—to slash the Lwow-Odessa railroad far to the west and compel Von Mannstein to fight east and fight with his back to the Balkans.

Von Mannstein has known what was happening to him. He's been doing a subtle political job for Hitler. The Rumanian gateway to the Balkans had to be protected at all hazards. A breach of that gateway would mean an explosion of the Balkan peninsula and southeastern Europe thus would be lost to Germany.

Just take a look at that long, finger-like salient which extends eastward into the Russian-held territory of the Dnieper Bend. Within the Bend there were at one time some 500,000 German troops. Those Red hooks which have reached down from the north have not isolated many, but there still are strong Hitlerian forces hanging on. Other Nazis are clinging to the Crimea, and also are in danger of being cut off.

So Von Mannstein probably is in the tightest place he has ever been in his life. There's one thing which might ease his position, and that's the early arrival of spring, which will turn the terrific ice-sea of mud had really impede military operations for several weeks.

Monday Night's Rain Makes Streets Slippery

Typical March winds blew down out of the northeast today to remind citizens of the old proverb "March winds and April showers bring forth May flowers."

On Monday night rain fell in the Belleville area, but frost as cold as it strikes making traction for pedestrians and motor vehicles exceedingly treacherous. Many vehicles skidded along city streets and at times bumped fenders, but no serious accidents were reported as the result of the ice-covered streets. Pedestrians who ventured out Monday night slithered home in the proverbial style as walking was the most treacherous of the season.

Late Monday night the city sander, operated by employees of the Department of Public Works, commenced sanding the hills and dangerous intersections. The sanding of city streets was completed this morning when driving was still dangerous.

40 Boys Break Out Of English Training School, Finally Rounded Up

Machynlleth, Montgomeryshire, March 7.—(AP)—Home guards and the police of two counties were called out recently to repel an invasion of 40 boys who had broken out of a training school and swept through the town.

When news of the mass escape was learned, the town police were mustered and a detachment of Home Guards were ordered to stand by. But despite these precautions the boys, equipped with bicycles, knives, succeded in stealing a car and burgling several stores.

Reinforcements were rushed in from the adjoining county and after a day-long chase the boys were all rounded up and sent back to the training school.

Sixth Victory Loan

Canada's Sixth Victory Loan will have the objective of $1,200,000,000 which was the objective of the Fifth Victory Loan which proved successful. The Hon. J. L. Ilsley, Minister of Finance has made the announcement of the objective of the new loan to be launched on April 24th.

The people of Canada will greet the new loan with the same enthusiasm and interest as they greeted and put over the last Victory Loan.

While there is a feeling that the war in Europe may end this year and it is sincerely to be hoped that it does end then. But financial demands will not end when the war ends in Europe for there are still the Japanese to be overcome and thoroughly beaten. And thereafter there will be rehabilitation of the returned soldiers, airmen and seamen who will have to be re-established in the economy of civilian life.

The winning of the war is the first great objective and then the resolution, expressed in action to maintain the peace on the basis of the victory won from the Axis powers.

So final support by every Canadian of the forthcoming loan is anticipated as each one realizes how the co-operation of everyone is needed in the task to be performed in winning the war and in carrying out reconstruction. The help of every citizen is essential in this joint undertaking.

Price Board Chairman's Report

Constant vigilance by all is necessary to meet the strain on the price ceiling in Canada it is pointed out by Donald Gordon, Price Board Chairman, reviewing operations during the nine months ended last December 31st. in a statement to Parliament, tabled on Monday afternoon in the Commons.

There are signs of diminishing of shortages in some directions but in others the demands have been increasing, "demanding new measures to ensure that essential goods reach the consumer." "While the pressure on the ceiling from increasing production costs has been eased in some directions, it has seriously increased in other and as yet more important directions" he said.

It has required a grand total in import and domestic subsidies or reimbursements paid by the board to hold the price ceiling from between Dec. 1, 1941, to Dec. 31, 1943, the amount of $115,378,235 and of which over fifty millions was for the nine months ending December 31st.

The limited supplies of metals have made possible the discarding of substitutes in some cases and as a result reversion to the original material has brought lower costs. On the other hand the high cost of transportation continues a problem of importance in many lines. The costs of transportation are up. The difficulty in getting supplies has raised the operating costs and in some cases closed production has lifted the unit overhead costs.

There is a serious pressure in labor costs for many industries have been compelled to use less qualified workers and "in many industries, included under the Wartime Wage Control there has been strong pressure for higher wage rates," the report says. The higher returns which farmers have asked for their products during the past year have exerted another "important pressure" on the price ceiling, Mr. Gordon pointed out.

Mr. Gordon said that the beginning of the end of the shortages is emerging "though somewhat dimly." He pointed out that the people who benefited most from subsidies were in the lower bracket and in large families, while the great burden of the subsidies fell on the people in the higher income groups.

During the year a decline in military contracts in the fabric industry resulted and some increase in civilian cloth production, yet here labor shortage prevented its becoming as great as had been hoped, Mr. Gordon said.

It was only the efforts of the board that assured a supply of fabrics and yarns from foreign and domestic sources and from a simplification program that prevented widespread shortage of finished garments, the statement said. One of the problems was supply of children's footwear and measures had to be taken to assure supplies. In the past few months some easing of labor shortages has shown in the lumber and pulp industry and with the use of war prisoners in lumbering and the efforts of the government to increase the labor supply. Lumber production declined somewhat and Mr. Gordon expects a further decline in 1944.

The decline of civilian supplies of such goods as electric washers and irons fell to "uncomfortably low" levels with the result that production was resumed even in plants largely changed over to war work. Naturally a considerable amount of scarce materials was required for this. Such a program as this kind once approved receives a priority equal to military production, it is pointed out.

Every effort have been made to stamp out black markets of which there have been "periodic evidences," Mr. Gordon said, by prosecutions.

Prevention of inflation is one of the tasks that require a close regard that is never relaxed and it is the duty of the people in every way to help in the object of checking any possibility of a runaway of prices which would be disastrous to every individual and to the nation's economic structure.

Tomorrow's Telephone

(Newsweek)

A telephone that will answer itself and talk back to you when you come home was predicted by Bell Telephone Laboratories Inc., in New York for after the war.

The self-answering phone uses a recording device, usually a magnetic record on a steel tape, from which messages can later be erased by passing the tape between two poles of a magnet, thus permitting it to be used again and again.

If nobody answers the phone, the caller can start talking to the tape. When the called customer returns he picks up the receiver and the message is "played" to him.

A variation of this device already in use records a two-way conversation for permanent records, but somebody has to pick up the receiver to make it work.

A $2,000 Bath

(Manchester Guardian)

Nelson and his famous Column in Trafalgar Square get a good bath and overhaul normally about every 20 years, at a cost of between £400 and £500. There are usually some repairs to be done. On one of the occasions huge cracks in Nelson's arm, as long as eight inches and four inches deep, had to be filled in with a special cement. The increase of heavy traffic and vibration from buses and lorries has imposed by the office of works experts, to be doing the column any good, and during the air raids of three years ago it must have had a further shaking.

March is giving the people a taste of the old style weather without a superabundance of snow up to the present time. There have been cold spells and thaws, but not zero which have called for the use of more fuel in a year when everyone is trying to conserve. Naturally the people are anxious that the weather be not too severe or the cold spell be long in duration and it is the hope of everyone that this year's spring be most favorable because this year of all years demands bumper crops in a way that has been going on for some years there is the more imperative need that the harvests be large.

Because of the earnings of her merchant marine, the fourth largest in the world Norway has been able to pay her own way all through this war. That is not all. The Royal Norwegian Government in London has also managed to meet pre-war obligations, and has paid interest and amortization instalments on Norwegian foreign loans.

THE RUT

The rut is just a rigid groove
In which the wheels of traffic move,
A sunken track from place to place,
With nothing left to fear or face;
A charted, beaten highway road,
Where even dullards cannot fail.

For those who stay the rut within
There's little left to lose or win.
The way by men has long been proved.
The hazards all have been removed.
There's much along the road to please,
And one may jog it at his ease.

But, boy, fame lies o'er pathways new,
In finding better ways to do
The tasks of life, and reaching out
From beaten lanes to grope through doubt
And search the hazardous unknown;
To go it, if you must, alone!

If you are bothered by a dream,
If still far off you've caught a gleam
Of something lying far ahead
Beyond the well-worn paths men tread,
Then you must blaze yourself the trail.
Nor stop to count the times you fail.

Generosity of Millionaires

(Oshawa Times-Gazette)

It is not uncommon to hear people generalize about millionaires. They can do as quite right because it is quite unlikely there are any present in their immediate group of friends. It is interesting sometimes to reflect that millionaires are human beings very much like the rest of us, but with infinitely greater responsibilities, as well as opportunities for doing good.

As an illustration of what one multi-millionaire did with a vast fortune, let us mention a man interested in reading the record of the estate of Stephen Harkness, who died four years ago, and whose estate has just been deposited with the State of New York for taxation purposes.

Mr. Harkness was a financier who had many irons in the fire so it should occasion no surprise that it has taken such a long time to deal with his estate. What most interested us was the vastness and number of his benefactions during his lifetime and under the terms of his will.

Chiefly, Mr. Harkness was an oil man. The statement shows that he owned over 2,000,000 shares in Standard Oil of New Jersey and other Standard Oil companies which represented more than two-thirds of his $97,000,000 estate. The sum payable in taxes is $37,414,351, of which the federal government takes over $36,000,000 and New York state over $10,000,000, the latter being a nice addition to the next-ere while Governor Dewey is scrambling on to instead of spending it now as many people would prefer.

An interesting fact about the Harkness estate is that during his lifetime, according to a statement by Mr. Harkness, he gave away about $225,000,000 in gifts to charitable, religious and educational institutions, and $128,000,000 more than he ultimately left. In addition to this he will provided for distribution of $1,250,000 among 79 employees, lifetime beneficiaries of his generosity included the University of Yale $24,000,000, Presbyterian Hospital $17,500,000, and Harvard University $13,460,000. And all the other donations went to universities, colleges, schools, hospitals, churches and the like. Mr. Harkness was the founder of the Pilgrim Fathers, in 1920, with a first contribution of $10,000,000 as a token of his admiration for the Pilgrim Fathers. He incurred and bore the main burden of the First World War.

Millionaires are subjected to a great deal of unfair criticism. Many of them live quite simply and give away far more than they ultimately leave. John D. Rockefeller alone gave $500,000,000, largely for medical research in all parts of the world regardless of creed or color. Andrew Carnegie died worth "only" $25,000,000, but he had given over $350,000,000 for libraries, educational institutions, especially to help poor students, church organs and for universities and peace.

Supposing these millionaires did get it from the people in the first place? Well, they gave it back in beneficial forms which in the aggregate amount to more than they could never have matched. In the long run humanity gained immensely by their benefactions.

Suggests Further Steps Equalizing Of Hydro Rates

Toronto, March 7.—In the Legislature a few days ago, Harry C. Nixon, Ontario Liberal Leader, suggested that the government could go much further in the equalization of Hydro rates and said the commission might share from its profits any cost involved.

"In 1942 the reserves were $182,-50,000," Mr. Nixon stated, "in addition to this, there was a stabilization fund amounting to $13,500,000, which could be used in part for the purpose I have outlined, and a contingency fund of $6,600,000. The government can go as far as they like in adjusting the rates on a more equitable basis, even on a flat rate, and they will have no cause to report".

The Speaker said that, although the Hydro has available 2,250,000 horsepower, there is a need to look for new sources of supply. "Otherwise two from where it might be obtained", he said, "the great St. Lawrence river project, which has been before several from pillar to post for a quarter of a century, and the Ottawa river.

Saved $1,000,000

Every time we get to the point where we are ready to develop the St. Lawrence, some factor makes it impossible. If we can't get it from there, it must come from Quebec. If this must be done, I feel it would be better to develop our own resources in Quebec rather than secure power on a cross sea trade". He said that the re-making of "the amazing clauses" of the Hydro Act which provided that the Liberal government was justified and said the cancellation meant a saving of about $91,000,000 to the people of Ontario."

Canadian Scene A Century Ago

By J. L. G.

Goodness knows there were no "good old days" when it was newly travelled fast just the same. When ever a doctor arrived from the woods section of the country practically very man, woman and child around and heard about it within an hour. Physicians were scarce and many came to Canada immigrants from overseas. Some trans-Atlantic ships lost more than one crowded without having a "saw-bones" aboard. Many of the early settlers complained that where there were 100 passengers or more a doctor should be carried. But under 100 "medicines of sufficient amount and kind" were to be taken as part of the supplies necessary for the voyage.

By this decree, in counting the number of passengers two children above seven but under fourteen—or three under seven—were considered as one passenger. Babies under one year were not included in the computation.

Fat, fatter, fattest . . . oh, ever so plump were the gems of pioneer times! No settler's wife looked with favour on a thin goose, wild or domesticated. When she thought about any one of these creatures she not only visualized it as a "third" on a platter but as the best source of soothing oil with which to squeeze croup and bronchial ailments. The family always had its nose but accepted as the good nose. Speaking of ailments and communications item of $34,854,365 in the air department estimates, he said production of such equipment had increased, but obsolescence is a problem.

OBSOLESCENCE A PROBLEM

Ottawa, March 7 —(CP)— Developments in wireless instruments come so fast that equipment sometimes is out of date almost as soon as it is put into the R.C.A.F. by the time it is delivered, Air Minister Power said last night in the Commons. Speaking on a signals and communications item of $34,854,365 in the air department estimates, he said production of such equipment had increased, but obsolescence is a problem.

End of "Small Landed Gentry"

(From the Transatlantic Edition of the London Daily Mail)

Britain's stately—and some not so stately—country homes are changing hands. The "small landed gentry" are being forced to sell to a new type of country dweller mostly city men who have made money and are looking for a good investment.

During 1943 more than $40,000,000 worth of country houses changed hands.

This figure, given to a Daily Mail reporter, by leading real estate agents, has aroused widespread sorrow of heart and home to hundreds of country folk.

Harroda, one of the leading London estate agents, appealed to owners of country houses to come forward and sell them at prices ranging from $12,000 to $40,000. Last year, they said, the supply was half the demand. Now it is five sold far more than they did in 1942.

The village squire, retired colonial governor, or business man who have lived in the same house for generations, are the people who have parted with.

The boom still goes on. One leading firm has advertised nine houses totalling $300,000; another, three totalling $200,000.

Harrods, said: "Our sales of country houses in 1943 far exceeded the sales reached in previous years, but we could have sold twice as the war.

many as we had on our books. The average profit to the seller on the price originally paid was 100 per cent, but in some cases it rose as high as 150 per cent."

A partner in one of the leading estate agencies said four things are responsible for the boom:

"1. A high proportion of this property was owned by what was known as the 'small landed gentry,' who in the last two decades struggled at all costs to hold on to their houses. Now many of them are in the army or navy. Life, air service rate and taxation at 10 shillings on the pound means they have no place but to sell.

"2. People have returned to the old belief that there's no better investment than bricks and mortar, and that they fear that this class of property will not be built after the war.

"3. There is a pretty well established belief that big scale air raids will not come again, and a home in the country is a safe retreat if this should happen.

"4. The shrewd businessman foresees the immense development of communications between town and country in the post-war era. He thinks that the 'Tube' will stop at 31 to be 50 or 100 miles out of London."

Despite high prices fetched by country property, estate agents are noncommittal as to its value after the war.

War Is Shelved As British House Talks About Chimneys

By SYDNEY GRUSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, March 7. (CP) — This is the tale of the chimney sweeps of Grantham, a town of some 30,000 in Lincolnshire, and how the House of Commons put aside the burdens of war and national affairs to discuss the matter with only the slightest touch of levity.

It's only a small tale but perhaps it's important these days for demonstrating a facet of democracy at work.

Charged as Independent M.P., for Grantham with looking after the interest of its constituents, William Denis Kendall raised the question, telling the sympathetic members how he had been trying for some time to obtain the release of a skilled Grantham chimney sweep from the army. The army was using the man as a sniffer's lashman and that was the crux of Kendall's case.

The town was sadly lacking in sweeps, he said. Saving the lives of men from important than those being a batman. The man ought to be released.

But when he went to the authorities they told Grantham they had four full-time sweeps and five part-time operations, Kendall added, and they threw figures but he pointed out the full-time sweeps were aged 78, 72, 60 and 60 which seemed a little old to him for the work. Besides only one of the four was skilled and he was 60 and suffering from acute arthritis.

Rising to support Kendall's view of a fellow Independent, William Brown, supported Kendall's view of the situation. In fact Brown gave the House firsthand experience to judge between the fire dangers. He had, it turned out, been sweeping at Kendall's house the night before and the night they caught fire.

This was where the levity entered the discussion. Brown suggested, however, what was to reply for the government, said it had been a particularly arid night and he regretted to hear Kendall needed a fire at all. The labor ministry's parliamentary secretary, of course, was referring to fuel rationing.

Kendall disclosed to inquiring reporters later he had put out the fire himself with a bucket of water of his house to do so. The damage was slight.

In his answer McCorquodale said it was a big request to release a fully-trained man of only 23 who had been in the army four years. But as Miss Brown replied the man's age was not the point, it was what the man was doing.

The House rose then, its members still sympathetic to Kendall's problems but not very hopeful he would get Grantham the sweep. The next day they went back to the war and national affairs.

Canucks in Italy Get Their Vitamins

By WILLIAM STEWART
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, March 7. —(CP)—Odds and ends from the Canadians in Italy:

The troops in Italy do not want for food. Rations are plentiful and the Canadians healthy. There is an unavoidable monotony to the rations but the men rarely grumble.

Army doctors have been pleased this flighty and have provided the troops with vitamins in plentiful quantities, especially fresh fruits which were available in early autumn.

Enemy aircraft make rare appearances over the Canadian front which is constantly patrolled by fighters. The Canadians have received solid air support during their most difficult fights and the presence of Allied aircraft relieved them of practically all worries from the air.

When enemy aircraft do come, it's a small, seemingly frantic, speed. They strafe and bomb hurriedly and seek for home. With the few exceptions when they appear, the Canadians filled with the roar of formations of medium bombers, kitty bombers and the fighter patrols overhead. They bother by enemy planes permits our transport to operate unmolested on the roads. Convoys move in broad daylight and are attacking rarely.

The Canadian medical services have operated with distinction. The wounded, due to the heroism of stretcher-bearers, unit doctors and ambulance drivers, receive First Aid and field hospitals or ambulances in a few hours. Dental clinics are in use day after day.

The Jeep is regarded as an outstanding contribution to good Allied war transport. It has a handy speed uses from carrying rations and ammunition in an emergency to transporting officers over country impossible ground. There are few places its four-wheel drive won't take it. At least one senior Canadian officer uses one of the best weapons in Allied hands.

Canuck Sets Noteable Record in Sub Warfare

By ROSS MUNRO
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

A Port in Northern Ireland, March 7. (CP)—Lone Canadian corvette commander in the Royal Navy "Killer" group, is Lt.-Cmdr. Jim Flower of Sydney, Cape Breton, a rugby who wears the blue-white ribbon of the distinguished Service Cross and whose score against German submarines in the North Atlantic is one destroyed, one probable, one possible.

He's one of the Canadian antisubmarine aces and in his Royal Navy Corvette, Flower has also shared in the major actions of the offensive group of destroyers, corvette, frigates and escorts led by Commander F. W. Creeton, one of the navy's most successful U-boat hunters.

Flower has been commanding the famous Sunflower for a year and his work has been outstanding. Creeton thinks he's one of the best men he has.

A big, lean six-footer with a shock of curly brown hair, Flower is 23 and looks like a North Atlantic viking. He's not the man to talk about his exploits. He will tell you if you sit long enough in his wardroom when they're not around and ask enough questions you find but some facts about him.

You find out that in his first real action he sighted a German submarine on the surface ahead of him in a heavy mist. He sent the Sunflower surging in for the attack and rammed her dead-on. He only claimed a possible on that one.

In his second battle, the sturdy Sunflower attacked in the night with a heavy sea running. After the first depth charge attack Flower saw the U-boat's keel astern with its bow out of the water. In the English channel.

He turned the corvette so rapidly her starboard rail was nearly submerged and attacked again as a giant wave broke over the ship nearly sweeping overboard sailors handling the depth charges on the low deck aft. More depth charges were dropped, however, and the U-boat disappeared. This was a probable.

Got One of Five.

Flower's weaks later came his third effort. He was sailing with the Creeton group as usual and a large concentration of U-boats was located in the path or an approach convoy. Creeton ordered the group with aircraft fought the submarines and finally drove them off after destroying five and damaging three.

One of those destroyed went to Flower. He and his crew finished it off with depth charges and wreckage floated to the surface to prove that the kill was definite.

Flower was born in England but left there when a mere child and since he's lived in Canada since he was 17 and feels he's a Canadian.

"In his youth he moved around a good deal, living for a while in South Africa and later in the United States before going to Canada. Before the war he was working in a bank and was in the Canadian naval reserve. In the spring of 1939 he sailed on the destroyer Fraser on a training cruise to the West Indies and the commander of the Skeena then was Capt. H. G. W. Grier, who commanded the cruiser Enterprise in the Bay of Biscay action late last year when she and the cruiser Glasgow attacked seven German destroyers and sank three of them.

Before joining Creeton's group, Flower commanded a minesweeper in the English channel.

30 to 50 Japanese Planes Destroyed In Kingshan Raid

Chungking, March 7 (AP)—Two-engined United States bombers, escorted by fighters, destroyed from 30 to 50 enemy planes in the air and on the ground in a raid on Kingshan airdrome in the northern part of Hainan Island Saturday, a communique said today.

The bombers also struck the airdrome at Changmal at the capital Thalland and destroyed eight twin-engined and one single-engined aircraft on the ground.

Fighter pilots of the Chinese-American wing listed 13 Japanese planes definitely shot down in the raid on Hainan, but three American pilots were credited with four, besides a number damaged.

Other bombers on a sweep up the Yangtze river sank a river freighter and a tanker and shot down two more Japanese fighters.

Japanese planes bombed an advanced American airdrome near Suichuan, the communique said. One Allied plane was lost in all the operations.

Writer Claims London Groups Work For Compromise Peace With Japan

London, March 7. (CP) —Under the heading "Japan is scheming to fool us again", The Daily Mail printed an editorial page article today by Simon Harcourt-Smith which warned against appeasement with Tokyo and charged that groups in the financial city of London and in the House of Commons in particular have been working for a compromise peace with Japan.

The Daily Mail said Harcourt-Smith's personal interpretive activities did not reflect the editorial opinion of the newspaper.

The basis of the article was a Japanese report that Britain conquered Batavia which the writer quoted as saying:

"If Japan's constructive war object cannot be fulfilled in our time, it will be carried forward to the next generation and if it is still not done, it will be turned over to the succeeding generations until final victory and peace are achieved."

The article traced at length the Japanese course since entering the war and commented that the Britavia broadcast "epitomizes" the new Japanese policy of 1944—that is no less fraught with danger for us than the overt manoeuvres which led to the capture of Singapore."

The writer also said that in the early days of the war Japan and Germany were "close cronies" but a breach between the two criminal confederates has widened until now fighting links them save an occasional hurried dash into Lorient or Hamburg or a Japanese "blockade runner with a cargo of rubber".

Harcourt-Smith writes occasional feature articles for The Daily Mail as a contract writer but is not a member of the staff.

"There have been no accounts by any House of Commons reporters or other political writers of any undercover move to compromise with Japan."

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

By LOUIS V. HUNTER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

With the R.C.A.F., in Britain, March 7.—(CP)—A Nazi submarine spotted in the Bay of Biscay by Flt. Lt. Desmond William Farrell of Montreal, skipper of a Bolton Squadron Wellington, was attacked and damaged by the Canadian aircraft which returned undamaged to base after a duel with the U-boat.

Rough seas spoiled the Nazi gunners' aim but PO. A. C. Hoddinot of Bird's Hill, Man., and an English gunner spoiled the gunners with machine-gun fire, Depth charges from the Wellington attacked the fully-surfaced sub halfway between the coming tower and stern. The Nazi guns were silenced after the depth charge attack. The submarine remained surfaced, for eight minutes, then disappeared and no trace of it was seen again.

The second pilot was WOI. G. A. Biddle of (3264 Parent Ave.), Windsor, Ont. The wireless operator-air gunners were Flt. Sgt. G. J. Hall of Kelowna, B.C., and Flt. Lt. W. H. Brown of (40 Winston Ave.), Amherst, N.S. Farrell's home is at 3449 Ontario Ave., Montreal.

The probable destruction of an FW190 which attacked their aircraft during a Berlin raid was reported by Flt. Sgt. Keith Pettitpher of (2210 Angus St.) Regina. Sgt. Bert Hague of (14 Elward Blvd.), Toronto, and PO. Alec Pawliuk of Ispas, Alta., members of the crew of an R.C.A.F. Halifax bomber.

They were about 20 minutes from the target when the Focke-Wulf attacked from the port quarter, astern. The rear-gunner opened fire and the enemy swooped up and over when he came within the range of Hague's and Pettitpher's gunsights.

Both gunners saw their tracer score on the fighter. Hague, but when Pettitpher, the pilot, took evasive action they lost sight of the attacker and it was scored as a probable. PO. Johnny Strange of (14 Chester Street, Winnipeg, is another aircraft, said he had seen an FW190 go down in flames at approximately the same time and place.

Censors continue to show their sense of humor. The latest example showed up at air force headquarters in London when Wing Cmdr. Carroll of Toronto, received a letter from Canadian airmen in the Canadians in Italy.

The letter contained a spicy recital of events mixed with sentiment such as only a Canadian could write. The unsigned husband added as a P.S.—"I wonder if the censor who read this had a good time reading as I should say time to spare".

"Did he ever", wrote the censor. "Whoo".

Flt. Lt. Anthony Herbert Tomlin of Donstable, England, has won the D.F.C. and Bar for gallantry. First he was awarded the D.F.C. for many successful operations in a raid on Berlin in December. Tomlin flew on and bombed the target after his aircraft had been attacked by fighters,whose fire disabled an engine and set it on fire.

Red Cross Appeal Givings $2,682,302 Or 27 Per Cent

Toronto, March 7.— (CP) — A slight improvement in subscriptions across Canada was noted in the weekend total for the Canadian Red Cross National appeal for $10,000,000, figures released at headquarters here today showing returns of $2,682,302, or 27 per cent of the objective. The campaign, which opened a week ago today, ends March 15.

Provincial reports with objectives in brackets were: Prince Edward Island, $50,000 or 100 per cent, with the quota doubled; Quebec, $767,433 ($2,500,000) 27 per cent; Alberta, $145,000 ($400,000) 36 percent; British Columbia, $282,367 ($800,000) 35 per cent; Manitoba, $167,000 ($600,000) 28 per cent; Nova Scotia, $85,000 ($350,000) 24 per cent; New Brunswick, $50,128 ($200,000) 25 per cent; Ontario, $1,077,274 ($4,050,000) 27 per cent; Saskatchewan, $70,000 ($350,000) 20 per cent.

O. M. L. Reports 6,000 New Members

Toronto, March 7. (CP)—President G. Alex Solitt of Peterborough yesterday told the 37th annual convention of the Ontario Motor League that it was gratifying to motorists to see that plans for highway improvement were included in post-war construction projects of both provincial and federal governments.

Reporting that within there were 6,000 new members in the last year there were more fatalities Mr. Solitt suggested, however, that safe accident causes and steps to prevent them.

W. G. Robertson, general manager and secretary, reported that 6,300 new members were enrolled in the league last year. He said there were 691,266 motor vehicle registrations in 1943, compared with 622,918 in 1939. Greatest number on record in Ontario was 729,194.

The Board of Directors reported the following nominations for league offices President, R. C. Berquist, Toronto; Vice Presidents, M. J. Overall, Hamilton, Dr. H. M. Harrington, Sudbury and Ernest Lashbrook, Rodney.

BANKING IS ADAPTABLE

...it changes constantly to meet this country's changing needs

FOR INSTANCE...

Ever wonder where your ration coupons go? The answer is that your grocer takes your sugar, butter and other coupons to his bank, which acts as the government's agent in identifying and accounting for millions of spent coupons. This vast bookkeeping job—known as "Ration Coupon Banking"—is just one of the new, additional assignments which the banks have assumed as part of their wartime service.

Another is the payment, on behalf of the government, of certain subsidies arising out of wartime price control. Still another is the handling of exchange transactions as agents of the Foreign Exchange Control Board.

At the same time the banks have arranged facilities to serve military establishments and new war-industry centres alike.

Through loans to industry and agriculture, they have helped to increase the supply of raw materials, weapons and food.

They have acted as issuing agents for approximately $5,700,000,000 worth of Victory Bonds and War Savings Certificates, as well as lending direct financial aid to the government through short-term loans.

...All this in the face of widespread staff changes resulting from enlistments of 8,360 trained bank employees.

The war emergency has proved the readiness and ability of Canada's banks to adapt their services to new conditions. It has proved, once again, the strength of your banking system, which is providing a firm base of financial service for the greatest economic effort in the nation's history, and will with equal resourcefulness meet the challenge of the years ahead.

Cannifton Red Cross Aux. Elects Officers

The annual meeting and election of officers of the Cannifton Red Cross Auxiliary was held on Wednesday last at the Orange Hall with a good attendance.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Boyd, and she handed in a financial report from the Cannifton Community Club showing proceeds of a very successful social evening held recently at the Orange Hall. It was moved by Mrs. Boyd of thanks be sent to the Community Club for its generous contribution. Mrs. Armstrong then took charge of the meeting for the election of officers. Mrs. W. Cole was appointed president in place of Mrs. Boyd, who resigned. Other officers elected were as follows: 1st Vice-Pres., Mrs. Millman; 2nd Vice-Pres., Mrs. Peacock; 3rd Vice-Pres., Mrs. Ryan; Sec.-Treas., Mrs. D. Brierley; Convener for Sewing, Mrs. Armstrong; Convener for Knitting, Mrs. Mills.

A list of knitting sent to headquarters was then handed in: 1 pr. ladies' women's socks, 1 pr. short seaman's socks; 3 prs. gloves, 6 sweaters, 2 helmets. The list of articles for sewing reported. The secretary's report showed a balance of $86.02.

WEDDINGS

HECTOR—ARMSTRONG

Queen Street United Church, Kingston, was the scene of a wedding of wide-spread interest at 3:30 p.m. Saturday afternoon, March 4, when Rev. R. W. Thompson united in marriage Mary Gladys, daughter of Mrs. Olive Beaubien Armstrong, 311 Johnson St. and Sydney F. Hector, Portsmouth, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. Hector, Belleville. The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion with quantities of spring flowers which formed an effective background for the wedding party. Miss Pearl Wright played the wedding music and during the signing of the register Miss Myrtle Elsing sang beautifully "O Promise Me."

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore an effective simply-fashioned floor-length gown of white sheer, with a V-neck, bracelet-length sleeves and topping at the waistline. Her shoulder-length veil fell from a coronet of orange blossoms and she carried an bouquet of mixed spring flowers.

The bride was attended by Miss Laura Couch as bridesmaid and by the little nieces, Miss Kathleen and Miss Sheila Powell as junior bridesmaids. Miss Couch's gown was of blue silk jersey with a matching flower hat and the bridesmaids were frocked alike in pink and green net.

Mr. Gilbert Pomeroy of Portsmouth was best man and the ushers were: Mr. Arthur Armstrong of Kingston and Mr. Bruce Sills, of Belleville.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, Johnson, during which Mrs. Armstrong received the guests wearing a handsome gown of navy blue triple sheer. Mrs. Hector, mother of the groom, who assisted in receiving, wore an effective gown of mauve flowered sheer.

The table was lovely, centred with a three-tiered wedding cake and tall white lighted tapers. Mrs. Thomas Godwin and Mrs. H. G. Porter presided and those who assisted in serving were: Mrs. J. Baker, Mrs. W. Clifford and Mrs. J. Powell, sisters of the bride, and Mrs. A. Armstrong and Mrs. J. Armstrong, sisters-in-law.

Later the bride and groom left for a wedding trip, the bride donning for travelling a gown of figured silk jersey with a black straw hat. Upon their return they will reside at 241 Albert St., Kingston.

Out-of-town guests included: Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Armstrong and son, Bruce, Toronto; FO. and Mrs. George Armstrong, Quebec City; Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Turner, Belleville; Mrs. A. Canham, Trenton; Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Sills, Belleville; Mr. and Mrs. Frederick E. Hector, Belleville; Miss B. Kerr and Mrs. James Hector, Toronto; Capt. H. G. Porter, North Bay.

A favorite this season is the two-color suit. A new model has a deep pink woollen jacket with black braid edging the slanting high set pockets and making the buttons. The skirt is cocoa brown woollen.

BY ALICE ALDEN

THE APPEAL of black and white for evening wear in perennial and it is at its best in the long skirted model. From the New York Dress Institute comes this charming design created for a memorable evening. The sweeping skirt is of black velvet, the fashion bodice is of embroidered white sheer. A pretty touch is furnished by a matching corsage of pink flowers tied with black velvet ribbon.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Feels Wife Shouldn't be Curious About His Income.

Dear Miss Fairfax,—

My wife agrees the allowance I give her for food and for buying clothes for herself and the children is adequate, but she wants to know about my income and my money affairs generally and says:

"There are some things I prefer to keep to myself." I'm willing to tell more money than when we were married, but I feel if she knew the exact amount it would be an inducement for her to become extravagant. I've been successful in business on the whole, however, even if one of them happens to be a failure, and I have my own column.

Please back me up in this.

H.-O. T.

My vote goes to your wife, rather than you, in this matter. And don't you know that all over, there are very splendid legal accounts which deposition have had, unknown to anyone?

Secrecy in regard to financial matters has kept many a widow and her children from the inheritance which should have been theirs. If this has been good enough to marry you and be the mother to your children, I think she's good enough to know your income.

Serious Problems For a Sixteen-Year Old Girl.

Dear Miss Fairfax,—

My married sister who is employed often asks me to take care of her children. Her husband seems to think that because he's my brother-in-law he can kiss me, and he tries to get "fresh" with me. The only way I can keep him at a distance is to threaten to tell my sister and the only reason I don't tell her is that I can't bear to hurt her. I wouldn't want to see anything happen to her marriage.

I don't know what to do—shall I tell my parents or shall I tell my sister?

Worried School Girl.

As this situation is full of dynamite, you should confide in someone, and it seems to me wiser that you tell your mother. It would hurt your father deeply if he knew these things about her husband. And things about her husband. things about her husband. And it's likely, if your mother is a woman of tact, she can make excuses to prevent you from going to your sister's home. The revealing that a cad her son-in-law, is, in trying to take advantage of a 16-year-old girl.

Husband Likes to Go Out to Dine and Dance.

Dear Miss Fairfax,—

I am a married man with two children. I like to go out occasionally, but my wife thinks I shouldn't go out without her. I like to go to dine and dance with the girls now and if I meet some friends with girls, I get up and dance with their girls. Do you think my wife should have any hard feelings?

If my wife should meet an old friends of hers and he asked her to dance, she thinks she shouldn't accept, and I think there's nothing wrong in it if she does it. Do you?

Also, here's another argument we have had. We can't agree on whether I should dance with an old girl when I happen to meet her at a dance-hall.

J. F. P.

How often do you go out to dances and leave your wife at home with the children? I'm afraid you don't take her out very often. If she joined these jolly little expeditions more frequently, she'd probably have a more liberal point of view. Perhaps you'd have no objection to her dancing with an old friend. Does she ever have a chance to meet these old friends? Turn about, you know, is fair play.

It Might be a Case of Jumping From Frying Pan Into Fire

Dear Miss Fairfax,—

I'm a girl of 17 and in love with a boy of 24, and I believe he loves me. He was stationed at a hospital in this city where I met him. We saw a good deal of each other and he finally asked me to marry him and wanted to give me an engagement ring, but I didn't want the family to know until after I became 18, so refused the ring.

Due to an accident he went home and I haven't seen him since, although he writes often. Reading between the lines of his letter I don't think his mother approves, as there was a girl back home whom she wanted him to marry. He tells me he doesn't love her.

My grandmother, with whom I live, thinks I should have married him before he left, but I think we were wiser this time, don't you? My grandmother is now afraid he will meet someone else and lose myself at him; which isn't true. She tells me to go out with others.

I'm true to him, as I believe myself engaged to him, and to me a promise is sacred. Would you advise me to move to the home or another relative to get away from grandmother's raving, or what is your advice?

C. P. E.

At 17 it seems to me you're young enough to let this situation work itself out. If the young man cares enough for you, he will come back. Your grandmother's attitude strikes me as inconsistent when she says you threw yourself at him and then urging you to go out with other young men. Sometimes other people are inclined to be a little unreasonable. Don't change your home unless the situation becomes unbearable. It might be worse by jumping from the frying pan into the fire.

Two Proposals of Marriage—Which One Shall She Accept?

Dear Miss Fairfax,—

I think I'm in love with two men, because I don't know which one to marry. I'll tell you about both of them and perhaps you will advise me.

A. is 30 years old, a college graduate, and has gone through officers' training and has a captain in the Army. He is sweet to me and says he loves me, and I like him, like him, and has asked me to marry him. He has given me his grandmother to seal our engagement, for you see I promise to marry him.

B. is a young man who worked in the office of my father, and I am my father's pet, and I know he'd like me if I married him. I knew him before I met the other one. He also thinks we're engaged; I feel I don't love either one of these but love like them both every much. Either one would make me happy, I think, although one commands a better salary than the other. I'm not engaged to both of them, as they're in the service now, I am 21 years of age, the boys are 24 and 30.

C. S. B.

When a girl imagines she's in love with two men and is really clided which one she should marry, it's usually a case of being in love with love rather than being in love with an individual. Why make an agreement with either of these boys now? Correspond with both of them and wait until you're absolutely swept off your feet that there'll be no question or choice. Perhaps your choice will be someone you haven't even met as yet.

Fashion Flashes

NEVER, NICES is the verdict on the new, little flower trimmed hats. A pretty little hat is a tall-crowned affair of light blue onionskin straw trimmed with clusters of blue forget-me-nots and pink buds on brown velvet ribbon. The ribbon comes from the back to tie under the chin.

Accent on self trim marks many new frocks, a good, conservation measure. A brown silk crepe with a beige and pink floral print has self-corded fabric, pinched and pleated, for a yoke border, to edge pouch pockets and the neckline and to simulate a rounded shoulder yoke.

The Marry-Go-Round

The Terrible "Joneses".

"The Joneses" have tried to stage a comeback; but they haven't got a chance! Well, not much of a chance.

You hear of a few of them, down in Florida, playing the horses and cultivating chain-cigarette habits and crepes suzette appetites; or in the Alcoa in New York, paying forty sky dollars for a hat or a hundred dollars for a dinner, swanning around night-clubs. But the showoffs are few and far between, and their reign is definitely out.

So you remember the "Joneses?" The terrible "Joneses"! It was "Keeping up with the Joneses" that caused lots of us trouble in the Twenties, and did more than anything else to bring on the trade depression of the Black Thirties, with their spale-sellers on the corners and blight-hat hobos.

Everything was "keeping up" with everybody — and nobody was making more money than he ever had before or ever would again — and expected it to last forever. And everybody was forward to a Beautiful New World"! Oh, it was grand!

If Mrs. Jones flashed out in a new mink coat, all the Mary Smiths and Sallie Browns clustered forth in new mink coats, whether they could afford them or not. A dollar down and a dollar when you eaton me—and give the wasn't old Hudson seal in the cook. If the Joneses speeded by in a Rolls Royce—away with the old Jalopy! And here's the first payment on a big, expensive car.

And HOW expensive that car was, when you got through paying for it! Those automobile dinners of the snooty friends you drove around in that there is nobility that can make a hobo out or a show-off so quickly as living up to an expensive car or an expensive club.

Then—BANG! Came the Wall Street crash; and men began jumping out of hotel windows, or being found dead, surrounding their breadlines were long and heartrending, with many of the "Joneses" among them.

But the world got the Joneses down, and what will keep them from making a comeback, after this war, is that we are no glittering down-payment planes, and nothing but cars at home and there's really not new motor-cars to be had for love nor money, and there's precious little gasoline to drive them with, if you have one. The smartest women are wearing uniforms or overalls—and so are the best-dressed men.

And, with the food shortage, the only way to put on a good and filling dinner, is for the family to eat at home and share their ration points. No more jumping into the car and running out to a "good time!" The good old Family Sunday dinner, at Ma's house, is your best bet.

No, I wouldn't give a white penny for chance the Joneses have of coming back. And what good will a hungry dollar pocket-book do you, Nouveau Riche if she has nothing left to put in it?

R.C.A.F. Has 12,000 Aircraft For Training Purposes and 960 On Order Power Tells House

Strength of Air Force Now 206,702 Including the Women's Division

CADETS CAN'T FLY

By JAMES McCOOK
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, March 7. (CP) — The Commons today will look through to see if its business can be speeded up after spending yesterday in considering study of air department estimates for the fiscal year 1944-45 totalling $1,000,000,000.

The House will have before it the report of the committee on standing orders which, in a document tabled last week, set forth the belief that debates might sometimes be long but still were justified. It suggested, however, that House business might be hastened if divorce bills were handled elsewhere than in parliament.

Air Minister Power, answering a series of questions from members, yesterday told of the growing might of the R.C.A.F.

He said the R.C.A.F. now has nearly 12,000 aircraft used for training purposes and has on order 960 more which may or may not be accepted, depending on developments in the war.

He gave the present strength of the R.C.A.F. at 206,702, including members of the Women's Division.

May Set Up Industrial Base.

He made these remarks in discussion of the Standing Orders Committee report, in which there was further examination of a Bill to set up an industrial development bank with maximum resources of $100,000,000 which will assist industry, particularly small industry—in financing after the war.

Should this bankers also be completed, the members will proceed to consideration of Navy department estimates totalling $410,000,000 for the fiscal year 1944-44, which compares with estimates of $489,144,987 for 1943-44.

The House spent almost the entire day on defence affairs. Immediately after opening of the session members applauded loudly as Defence Minister Ralston announced the award of the Victoria Cross to Major Paul Triquet of the Royal 22nd Regiment for valor in Italy.

War Duty Pay.

Justice Minister St. Laurent announced special war duty pay for members of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

Hon. Cyrus Macmillan, parliamentary assistant to Mr. Power, reviewed education facilities provided for R.C.A.F. members. He said more than 7,000 French Canadians have graduated from the school of English at No. 1 Manning Depot at Toronto.

To meet the need for general information on the part of airmen the Air Force has instituted a series of "Progress of War" lectures, said Mr. MacMillan.

A definite time is allotted for such teaching which consists of lectures, discussions, and films, all with the object of bringing all ranks more familiar with the ideals for which they fight, with their responsibility and with constructive post-war holds for all—in a word, to make them more effective members of the Air Force community today and better citizens of the world tomorrow".

11,000 Remuster to Air Crew.

Mr. Power assured the House that Canada will be in the war against Japan "until the end".

"We are going to shift from the European theatre to where Canada can do the most harm against Japan at the proper time", he continued.

The Air Minister said that a Transport Air Training school will be opened next month where R.C.A.F. men will be trained in air transport.

He announced that of 22,000 men holding R.C.A.F. commissions, 2,971 were commissioned from the ranks.

In R.C.A.F. squadrons overseas, there are six officers to every five in other ranks in air crew, while in ground crew there are 1 13 other ranks to one officer.

Should Make It Worthwhile.

Rear Democracy Leader Blackmore said that Mr. Power should make inquiry to see that there was a sufficient difference in pay to make it financially worthwhile for a man to accept a commission from non-commissioned rank.

The Minister said he would look into the matter, but Flt. Lt. James Sinclair, (L-Vancouver North), himself wearing the R.C.A.F. uniform, said no man in the service suffered by having a commission.

Flt. Lt. Sinclair said he thought the time had come to cancel special flying pay for non-flying personnel. They could claim air flying pay a day for flights although flying was as safe as other means of travel. If they built up sufficient flying time they might claim income tax exemption.

Would Be Glad to Know.

The Minister said he would be glad to know if flying pay was being abused by joy-riding or making excuses for flying and if so there would be no more abuse. The flying pay regulations, however, were so well established he did not think pay for non-flying personnel making flights in the course of their duty could be done away with.

L. S. Caridff, (PC-Huron North) said food served in R.A.F. schools in Canada was not as good as that in R.C.A.F. establishments.

Mr. Power said he had heard such complaints. The rations supplied R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. schools were similar, and the situation had improved since R.C.A.F. cooks were supplied in some R.A.F. schools.

DALEY DEFENDS LABOR POLICY OF PROVINCE

Ontario Will Accept Federal Labor Code Despite C.C.F. Protest

DEBATE CONTINUES

Toronto, March 7.—(CP)—Speakers from all three of the major parties probably will be heard today during the fifth consecutive day and night sittings in the continuing debate on the Throne Speech, which, is expected to occupy the House for the remainder of the week.

C. Mitchell (C.C.F.-York North) adjourned debate at the conclusion of yesterday's sitting which heard addresses by Labor Minister Charles Daley, W. A. Dunbar, (PC-Simcoe East) and Elmer Salsberg (LP-Toronto-St. Andrew).

Mr. Mitchell, first speaker today, will be followed by William Murdoch (PC-East South), Government House leader, and by Harry Langer (L-Prescott.) Other speakers expected to rise on the night sitting, second of the new legislature's session.

Labor Minister Daley struck back yesterday at C.C.F. criticism of the government's labor policy, especially in regard to acceptance of the new federal labor code covering war industries. He said the province was not entering into agreement with the new code, but that Ontario was a long way from it. He said: "we are going to accept it and so everything in our power to make it work and to give the boys back home as soon as possible."

Might Cause Confusion.

A provincial code could be set up, he said; but it would only cause confusion and create a situation which would be "ridiculous and unworkable."

"The Minister read to the House a letter from a man whom he did not identify, but who claimed to have been a member of a union and to have been paying five cents a week to the C.C.F. Mr. Daley said he would like to get verification of the statement that the C.C.F. was obtaining money in this manner for political purposes.

He spoke of the Ontario government's plan to introduce a bill for a 48-hour work week with one week's annual holiday with pay. Some said it should be a 40-hour week with two weeks' holiday, and with this he would not argue. But the government planned to see that never again would there be a situation where men who wanted work could not find it.

Mr. Dickson said the farmers' plight was not quite as black as it had been painted. However, he believed plans should be made to help young returned men to get established on the land. He suggested a farmers' bank or perhaps some revision in the present financial system to allow farmer-minded servicemen to get post-war loans at low interest rates.

"Let's be fair to the young men who come back," he said amid applause.

Wants Minimum Wages Upped.

Mr. Salsberg urged legislation to enable municipalities to set up local housing boards, and called for a public inquiry into the whole question of minimum wages in Ontario. He called the government's labor program "insufficient" and urged the province to seek changes in the new federal labor code.

Regardless of the final form of the federal code Mr. Salsberg said he believed that Ontario should bring down its own legislation.

Mr. Salsberg welcomed government legislation now before the legislature prohibiting advertisements reflecting on any race or creed and suggested legislation should also be brought down to prevent non-employment of anyone on racial grounds.

Premier Drew told the legislature that government plans for education matters come before the House.

He was answering a question by A. A. MacLeod (LP-Toronto Bellwoods), who referred to a Canadian Press dispatch last Friday quoting a source close to the Premier as saying that while the government planned "sweeping revisions" in educational taxation it was not likely any bill would be introduced at the present session.

Mr. MacLeod asked for more information and the Premier replied it would be discussed at the appropriate time.

United Church Plans For Annual Conference

Toronto, March 7.—The Annual Bay of Quinte Conference of the United Church of Canada will be held this year at Trinity Church, Peterborough, from May 30 to June 2. The Minister of the Church, Rev. George S. Easton, M.A., D.D., who is president of Conference is incapacitated through illness and his place at the opening session will be taken by the ex-President, Rev. J. J. Black, M.A., B.D., of Lindsay, who will also fill out the unexpired term of office.

For the second year there will be no Sunday ordination service and the sessions will close on Friday as candidates were ordained last September under war-time acceleration of courses to meet the extreme shortage of ministers.

The executive announced after its meeting in Peterborough that Rev. James Gordon Gilkey, D.D., minister of South Congregational Church, Springfield, Mass., noted religious writer on problems of reconstructing and inspirational lecturer on international matters will conduct the more formal devotional addresses. Rev. Wilson MacDonald, Canadian poet, will address the annual laymen's banquet and read from his writings. A public meeting on the Wednesday evening will be addressed by Rev. Dr. R. B. Cochrane, secretary of the Home Mission Board, Toronto, and Mrs. George P. Bryce outstanding missionary speaker on India. A memorial service for the ministers who have died during the year will be conducted by Rev. L. S. Thrower of Delhi, secretary, and Kingston Presbytery and Rev. James F. Beckel of Elgin, secretary of Conference, chairman of the Settlement Committee is Rev. James Semple, D.Th. of Belleville.

Despite wartime industrial conditions in Peterborough, the committee with Rev. William McDonald as host and Rev. Fred Orsh as secretary will arrange billets for the 300 ministerial and lay delegates with the assistance of families in nearby villages and country.

St. Peter's W.M.S.

Madoc—The March meeting of St. Peter's W.M.S. was held at the manse with the president in the chair. Mrs. Larsen had charge of the devotional period. Mrs. Larsen gave a talk on "Preparation" and Scripture passages were read on the words "Pray, pay and persist".

The chart on the "Feeding of the Five Thousand" that is being used at the "Good News Club" was explained.

Mrs. Millar took charge of the business. Recent magazines are still wanted for the Navy league.

Mrs. Millar had charge of the lesson which was on India. She spoke of the political situation. Mrs. Hugh Mackintosh read an account of the "Life on the Shiffield". Mrs. Mitchell then gave an account of the missionary work under Dr. and Mrs. Buchanan.

The meeting closed with a prayer for India.

A social half hour was spent, the hostess being assisted by Mrs. F. Curry in serving lunch.

Social Evening.

A pleasant evening was spent in the I.O.O.F. Hall on Friday night, when the Madoc I.O.O.F. held a party and dance. Bridge and euchre were played during the early part of the evening. The prize winners for bridge were Norman Whytock and Miss A. Burris and for euchre, Mrs. P. Rivers and S. Embury carried off the prizes. After lunch the time was spent in dancing, Stanley Hawthorne providing the music. The proceeds will be used for smokes for the boys overseas.

Women's Institute Meeting.

The February meeting of Madoc Women's Institute was held in the Assembly Hall of Madoc High School on Friday evening. Mrs. G. C. Moon, the president, was in charge. In the absence of the secretary, Mrs. R. Tanner, Mrs. Warren Hill, acted pro tem.

Communication and minutes of last meeting were read. Letters of thanks were read from Roy Smith and W. Ellis, soldiers overseas, for boxes sent to them by the Institute. A letter of thanks was also read from the Madoc Red Cross Branch for its assistance at the Blood Donor Clinic. The current events were capably given by Miss McDermid. Several musical numbers were given by Messrs. J. L. Ross, W. Hawthorne and Stanley Hawthorne. The guest speaker of the evening was Mr. Drinkwater of the High School staff, who showed a collection of slides on the common insects of gardens and the remedies to control them. A vote of thanks was tendered to all those who took part in the program by Mrs. Beauly.

Personals

Rev. Mr. Melville Wright, East Orange, N.J., is spending a few days in Madoc.

A MILD mustard poultice was the answer to the severe coughing attack that afflicted Mrs. L. C. Mercer, of Regina, Saskatchewan, last Winter. As she suffered from this choking cough, her voice left her entirely.

"The strain of coughing brought on a hemorrhage and I was alarmed. It suddenly occurred to me that a good mustard poultice might help so I mixed one (1 to 3) and placed it well up over my throat. Soon the phlegm moved and gave me quick relief."

Mustard Bath for Baby's Convulsions

"I have had four children and have always used mustard baths for convulsions," says Mrs. Mercer. She uses a desertspoonful of mustard to a large bath of quite warm water. After bathing the baby she wraps it in a warmed blanket. "This is as good as a help in relieving convulsions as I know of," says Mrs. Mercer.

Use Dependable, Full-Strength Mustard

You can use Mustard in foot baths, complete baths, poultices or plasters to relieve the pains of Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Arthritis, Bronchitis, over-tired Muscles, etc. Thousands depend on it year after year to relieve Chills, Colds, Croupe or what Mother insists on! A mustard poultice should not be left on for more than twenty minutes. When symptoms are at all serious it is wise to call a doctor promptly.

Pure Mustard is Safest

Be sure that you use famous Keen's D.S.F. Mustard made entirely from mustard seed of highest quality and packed to preserve its uniform quality and full, medicinal strength. Sold by grocers and druggists everywhere.

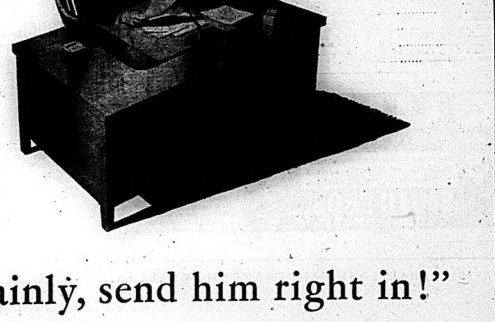
KEEN'S D.S.F. MUSTARD



"Certainly, send him right in!"

● A friend is going to call on you—this week or next.

He's going to ask if you'll pay the trifling cost of collecting and processing a few pints of blood plasma to save the lives of a boy from Manitoba and one from Quebec and another from Saskatchewan.

He's going to ask, too, if you'd like to put up a few dollars to see that the kids in a certain military hospital far away feel the touch of a friendly hand, a word of cheer . . . in their isolation and their pain.

And he's going to ask if you'll help speed nourishing food, medicines and a few of the little decencies of life to some Canadian boys "sweating it out" behind barbed wire in enemy lands as prisoners of war.

Who, indeed, can refuse?

So when this man calls, welcome him . . . with a cheque . . . and make it a good one . . . because he's calling for the folks that are always there—the Red Cross!

Next best thing to having your soldier son home for dinner every night . . . is knowing that the Red Cross is at his side—wherever he may be, whatever he may be doing, whatever the day or hour.

In the past you were asked to give only a little . . . to help the Red Cross in its endless peacetime vigil against catastrophe and disease.

But that was yesterday, friend. Dig deeper this time—ten, twenty, thirty times deeper! For the task of the Red Cross is that much more important to humanity, that much more important to you!

Give generously . . . give greatly . . . when the Red Cross worker asks your help. Say: "Sure! Here it is . . . more than I've ever given before . . . and you're welcome to more when you need more!"

Herbie Cain Still Leading Point - Getters

Montreal, March 7.—(CP)—With only a few scheduled games left to play, the National Hockey League scoring race has tightened into a hot contest that looks as though it will continue to the final game.

The league's official weekly figures released today showed Boston's Herbie Cain still leading the point-getters, but his 70 points to date gave him only a two-point margin over Doug Bentley, of Chicago, who in turn was three up on his team-mates, Bill Mosienko and Clint Smith.

Toronto's Lorne Carr sagged to fourth spot with 63 points, one ahead of Bill Cowley, of Boston. Carl Liscombe of Detroit and Canadiens' Hector Blake.

Cain and Bentley were tied for goal-scoring honors with 34 each, three up on Mud Bruneteau, of Detroit. Each led the assist column with 46—one more than Smith.

Detroit's Harold Jackson remained as penalty kind, with a total of 99 minutes in 33 games and showed three minutes more than Mike McMahon of Canadiens.

ALBERT COLLEGE TAKES GAME LEAD OVER B.C.I. TEAM

Collegiate Students Miss Tying Basket by Count by One Foul Shot

SCORE IS 38-37

Albert College took a one game advantage in the Bay of Quinte Collegiate Hockey League's best-of-3 series with the Belleville Collegiate Institute, when Coach Pepper's "Blue" quintette eked out a 38 to 37 win over the Ghosts Sawyer's basketball floor yesterday afternoon. The best-in-five series, for district senior, boys' scholastic cage championship became more than two rival school squads, now stands at two games to one in favor of Albert College with the fourth tussle slated to be played at B.C.I. tomorrow.

The most strongest game of the series yet played with Albert College edging it 20 to 18 lead at the halfway mark before Coach Townsend's "Collegians" showed back to dominate the play in the last half and miss tying the score by only one point.

It was a typical Albert-Collegiate cage game as both teams came crept into the contest as it progressed and the fighting spirit flaring in the last few moments. Referee Jack Dickens called the hot-tempered fracas right, however, with a few personal fouls and the game sailed on to victory.

Albert Never Headed.

Albert College never headed after Watson scored a field goal 45 seconds after the game got under way. Mason evened matters before Pulford and Mcleod drove through for goals. Some thrilling field goals were seen from both sides before the halftime gong sounded with Albert leading 20 to 16.

The open the second half Stan Wiggins, D. Boyce and Don Mason introduced some razzle dazzle passing to bring the Collegians up to within striking distance, when Nelson Wiggins was once again with two fast field goals for Albert. Woodley Boyce tallied for B.C.I. with Stan Wiggins starting on the Collegiate attack. Mcleod sustained an injured foot and was forced to retire. Feelings then rose to a fever pitch resulting in nuls being called on both sides. Albert's sharp-shooting Wiggins' brothers got two points while the Collegians failed in their efforts to register a foul shot would have tied the game.

Mcleod and Pulford Best.

Mcleod with 15 points led the Albert quintette and the scorers of the night, with Mason and Pulford also turning in fine exhibitions. Stan Wiggins was the best bet for the Collegians with 12 points.

Woodley Boyce rallied in the second half to count 9 points as a defencemen, Elongsate Dan Mason rattled in eight points. Stan Wiggins and Don Boyce, another Collegiate star of the game, seven. Bill Mcleod defied double figure points was the chief factor of the victory.

The lineups:

Albert College: Pulford 8, McLeod 15, Watson 4, Pisano, McDonald 3, McIntosh 4, Orr 1, Boyd and Jessop 4.

Belleville Collegiate: Mason 8, Wiggins S. Barrow 2, Bankier 4, James, Boyce 7, Kellett and Woods 4.

Referee: Jack Dickens of Belleville.

400 Major Loop Ball Players Now in U.S. Armed Services

(By The Canadian Press)

The total number of players have a total of 400 players in the armed services, of whom 104 are American. The contributed 203 and the national circuit 197, it was reported in New York today, which says the representation is sufficient for the formation of two complete leagues of a size equal to the major club's playing rosters after the thinning-out of June 15 when each club is restricted to a squad of 25 players, it was pointed out in a statistical review.

First of the baseballers to be drafted was Pitcher Eugene Stack of the Chicago White Sox who joined the U.S. army Jan. 7, 1941. He died of a brain attack June 24, 1942, the only big leaguer to die in the service thus far. Pitcher Rudy Kallsky of the Philadelphia Phils was called up March 8, 1941, and he is now a sergeant. Next to go, Johnny Vander Meer, of the Cincinnati Reds, reported to the Sampson, N.Y., naval training station Saturday.

Eddie Arcaro, the jockey of the year, may become the third man in history to win the Kentucky Derby three times.

Arcaro, who regained national prominence with his victories in the Flamingo and Widener stakes at Hialeah Park, triumphed in the 1938 derby with Lawrin and repeated in 1941 with Whirlaway, famed money winner.

So far the sateliite little jockey hasn't received a mount for the May 6 classic at Louisville, but racing observers believe that is a formality that will be attended to long before post time.

Isaac Murphy and Earl Sande, famous jockey of the golden 1920's, so far are the only riders to thrice win the coveted Churchill Downs classic that started in 1875.

BOSTON BRUINS IN TOUGH SPOT

(By The Canadian Press)

It's Detroit Red Wings at Boston in the only Saturday night National League game on tonight's card, and this time the Bruins are going to do or die for fans. Not for a long five games left, the Bruins are five points behind Toronto Maple Leafs who occupy fourth and last play-off position. Boston can't win victory and eliminated yet—but a loss tonight will do them no good whatever.

Whether the Bruins seriously hope to get into the play-offs depends a lot on Veteran Bill Cowley, back after a long lay-off through illness. Cowley scored four goals and seven assists when the Bruins beat Rangers 10-9 last week but that total was hardly a fair test of the drive that faces the Bruins. Cowley, incidentally, drills in practice with the Bruins and Rangers tied 4-4 Sunday.

The Wings aren't under the same kind of pressure, and for their rearmost night with handily.

The two teams have clashed eight times this season, Detroit taking five and Bolton one, with two ties.

What's Doing in Sport

Montreal (CP)—Prior to the exhibition hockey game here last night between Army and Navy teams, announcements was made that Jimmy Orlando, former player with the Detroit Red Wings, would not be used on the Army line-up. Orlando, who is under sentence for draft violation in the States, recently joined the Canadian Provost Corps.

Miami (CP)—Cashmet Farm's Mighty Mouse, ball-bright victory in the $2,000 handicap which featured opening day at Tropical Park here, equalled the track record of 1:10 for the six furlongs. Arbuti was second in the six-horse field.

Cleveland (AP)—Adding four points to his total, Tom Burlington of the Cleveland Barons continued to hold fast place in the individual scoring record of the American Hockey League with 744 points, six more than his team-mate Lee Cunningham. Jack Riedel of Cleveland was third with 67 points.

Toronto (CP)—Centralia Fliers defeated Mountain View Bombers 5-4 here last night in a sudden-death game for the hockey championship of No. 1 Training Command of the Royal Canadian Air Force. The teams were survivors of more than 50 squads who had been providing exercise and entertainment for airmen throughout Ontario this winter.

GALT ELIMINATED

(By The Canadian Press)

Hamilton Kilties shellacked St. Catharines Saints 7-0 Monday night at St. Catharines to assume leadership in the Senior O.H.A. final playoffs two games to one in the best-of-seven series.

The winners scored two goals in each period to run their total to 12 and Reliance trimmed Deacons 6-4 to 12 in the final scheduled games in the Ladies' City League last night. The play-offs start next Tuesday with all four clubs in the running. However, that should just about be narrowed down to Alerite and Reliance this time next week.

The final standing reads:

The magistrate was deaf, but certainly not deafer than the two men before him. The first man, a leaned forward.

"Hic," he exclaimed, "this man owes me a grocery bill amounting to twenty pounds, and refuses to pay it!"

The second lad man sprang up. "That's a lie!" he cried indignantly. "My dog didn't bite him."

There was a pause while the magistrate reviewed the situation, then he announced this decision.

"Gentlemen," he said, "I fully appreciate your feelings, but I can see no reason why you should not combine to support your mother."

(Cage round-up.)

Around interscholastic basketball circles they're still talking about yesterday's B.C.I. at Albert high hoop game, won by Coach Pepper's Albert quintette by the slim margin of 38 to 37. The score at halftime was 25 to 16, so it's quite evident that Coach Red Townsend's Collegians rallied strongly, but not quite strong enough. Referee McLeod, Fred Albert forward, slipped inside the Collegiate defence for 15 points which was a great help. For B.C.I. Stan Wiggins was a shining star on both ways, while Don Mason and Don Boyce helped considerably in the matter of scoring. After the game leads the senior Interscholastic cage race and the win is the first in a best-in-five series that continues at B.C.I. tomorrow. Incidentally, Referee Townsend informs us there isn't over three points difference in the two teams scoring in the three games, which demonstrates how evenly they're matched. Tomorrow's tussle means everything to B.C.I., as it's loss means curtains.

(Here basketball.)

There wasn't much to it when the Almeite girls beat Reliance 12 to 13 and Reliance trimmed Deacons 44 to 12 in the final scheduled games in the Ladies' City League last night. The play-offs start next Tuesday with all four clubs in the running. However, that should just about be narrowed down to Alerite and Reliance this time next week.

The final standing reads:

	W.	L.	Pts.
Alemite	7	1	14
Reliance	6	2	12
Sargents	2	7	4
Deacons	1	8	2

(Orwdge passe.)

Cpl. Bud Corbett, coach of the No. 6 Repair Depot R.C.A.F. puckchasers this morning is all set to say his "Bizarres"challenge for a third and final game with the Trenton 60th Main Station "Flyers" sestette had been accepted by Padre Mahon and the game would be played at the first.

Hume Arena Thursday night. In their previous two meetings the teams were strong enough to hold each other down, and neither could declare a winner, their first game ending in a 6-all tie, and the next at 4-4. "This one will be played winner take all," exclaimed the Corbett.

Well, there is a little point that Cpl. Corbett isn't acquainted with—that Padre Flying Mac-Creefy, former Maple Leaf ace forward, has mentioned as the Trenton main station. At least that's the impression handed along by Pilot-ferrt, Christie, secretary of the Quinte service league.

(Number, where?)

John eight days ago today the English football league's ban on entrance listing of weekend contests resulted in a 500,000 attendance drop. Less than half-a-million persons saw the 44 games. The league was trying to defeat pool promoters but came out second best reverting to pre-arranged schedules March 25 and that's that.

(Back together.)

The Wanzer brothers act will be on deck at Hume Arena next week and the St. Louis Cardinals phoned Mel Ott, manager of the Giants, that they're coming. "How old are you?" inquired Mel, and Dizzy replied "Eighteen," adding that he was 4-9 in the draft and had had a lot of experience. After the game talk, Ott invited Diz to meet him downtown, but the latter said he'd rather stay there to identify himself but the joke backfired when Ott phoned back a trial notice to see how bad I need pitchers these days."

Incidentally, the new owners of the Philadelphia Phillies who are having a fresh topsy-like-minute nickname for their club should contact Bucky Harris...He probably could suggest a couple of dandies, even if they were not so complimentary. Harris is the best of baseball men who operate bowling establishments in Eastern Canada. Eddie Rommell who has a 32-lane bowling establishment in Rochester, Ont., president of the Boston Braves, is another baseball executive who scoffs at the idea of a major league baseball club on the Pacific coast...Like Bob Carpenter, owner of the Phils, Quinn thinks Milwaukee, Montreal, Buffalo and Baltimore should be considered

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Slams are born with aluminum. Some acquire it by arduous practice, and some have slamitis thrust upon them. In any case, they should use The Kibitzer's convention for showing aces and kings.

Think yourself down in the south seat in this deal:

You and your partner get as far as four hearts by bidding this:

SOUTH	NORTH
1 H	3 H

North's jump takeout said he had six tricks. Your opening bid said you had five tricks. Your raise to four hearts said you had seven. Add two and two and you have slamitis thrust upon you

CHAPTER 20

She went over to the dictograph and said something in a low tone to the expert. He seemed to have with her, for he nodded and the two of them, their heads to the room, opened up the recording mechanism, looked inside it and apparently made some adjustments and then the girl turned around. Tony saw that she was frowning in her face. Her eyes were like stars.

"I am going to try again, sir," she said to Duff in a shaking voice. "I think it will be better now."

"I protest!" broke in Schneider who had been watching her intently.

"Sit down, Herschel," ordered Duffy and the lawyer slowly subsided into his chair. "Now, Miss Scott—" he said to the girl.

Her eyes were on Schneider's face as she turned the switch.

"What do you want?" asked Metcalf's voice. "How did you get in here?"

"Why—that's Metcalf's voice!" cried Tony.

"What's this?" Schneider shouted, and with one bound he was out of his chair and before the mouthpiece of the dictograph. He tried to wrench it open, but the girl swiftly set it off and threw herself in front of him.

"You got you now!" she cried. "Get out of my way!" and he tried to sweep her aside but she struck him full in the face with her clenched fist.

Schneider swung upon her, his face purple with rage, but Tony and Duffy had both risen before he could strike.

"That's enough!" roared Duffy. "Go back to your chair and stay there. We're going to hear this."

"It's a frame-up!" the lawyer shouted. "I demand that you turn this machine over to its owner."

"Not till we have heard the record," said Duffy calmly.

"I tell you it's a frame-up."

"And I tell you to sit down. We will soon see what it is."

"I won't sit down. This is an outrage."

The detective pushed the button on his desk. "Send in two men right away," he barked at the doorman. In a moment two burly policemen appeared. "Take this man," Duffy said to them, and they made him sit down in that chair over there. If he tries to get up, hit him on the head and kill him hard."

Without a word, the two men took Schneider by the arms and slammed him into the chair.

"I'll break you for this, Duffy! I'll get you, if it's the last thing I do!" raged the lawyer.

"If he opens his mouth again, hit him on it," said Duffy softly. Then he turned to the girl with, "Now, Miss Scott I don't think we will be interrupted any more. What is this record you started to play?"

"It's the first record," she explained. "It's the one before the one you just heard. Don't you remember those two clicks with which the other record started? They indicated that it was the second one."

"I see. But where was this first one?"

"In the magazine of the recorder. A mechanism slips it off the spindle when it is full, slides it down into the magazine, and pushes another record into position."

"That's right," said the dictograph man. "This machine can handle five records."

"It's a fake!" put in Schneider. "She planted it."

One of the guards lifted a heavy fist, but Duffy motioned to him not to strike.

"If it's a fake, I think we'll soon know it," said Duffy. "Have you heard this record, Miss Scott?"

"Of course not. I found it just a moment ago."

"That's right," nodded the expert "It was in the magazine. I took it out myself."

"And you don't know what's on it?" Duffy went on.

"No," she said. "But it must be a record of what happened in Dr. Metcalf's office before the note was typed. He must have put his foot on the button as soon as he realized that he was in danger."

"Very well," said the detective. "We'll hear it. And until it's finished, I don't want a word out of anybody. All right, Miss Scott, let the dictograph man handle it. Now, go ahead."

The expert adjusted the record and threw the switch.

"What do you want?" asked Metcalf's voice. "How did you get in here?"

There was an instant's silence.

"Oh, it's you, Schneider," Metcalf went on. "I didn't recognize you in that mask. Why the mustache? Why the disguise?"

"Maybe I'm on my way to a fancy dress ball," drawled a voice. It was Schneider's.

"What do you want?"

"I want to talk to you."

"How did you get in?"

"My dear fellow, I have duplicate keys. I answered your telephone."

"So that's it," said Metcalf's. "Well, what do you want?"

"I understand that you told Tony Bigelow this afternoon that you have killed Jack McKibben."

"Of course I know. You killed him yourself. I just said so to Tony, saying 'Hello, Herschel.'"

"It isn't healthy sometimes to know so much, Metcalf."

"You've come to kill me too, I suppose?"

"Exactly—unless I get a guarantee that you will keep your mouth shut."

"I don't really care who killed McKibben," said Metcalf's voice. "He was a skunk. But I'm not going to take it out on a chap I was working with him in any blackmail scheme. If he had an accomplice at all, it must have been you. I suppose you've come to that fireplace to that safe there, too. Don't stand there glaring at me. I'm not afraid of you."

"Aren't you?" Schneider's voice was as cold as ice. "Nevertheless, I'm going to kill you in just one minute if you don't give me that guarantee I want."

Again there was a little silence. The listeners could imagine Metcalf looking into Schneider's eyes and reading the grim purpose there.

"What sort of guarantee?" his voice asked at last as the dictograph listened.

"I want you to write a letter. Have you any relatives?"

"A brother."

"What is his name?"

"Peter Metcalf."

"Where does he live?"

"In Plainville, Connecticut."

"All right. This letter will be addressed to Peter Metcalf. But I will keep it and never produce it so long as you keep your mouth closed. Remember that it will be only to protect myself."

"I understand right, didn't I?" Metcalf's voice asked, with a distinctly sarcastic inflection. "Dictate, say, 'Hello, Herschel.'"

"What if he did? What business is it of yours?"

And at that moment in Duffy's office, Schneider bunched forward convulsively in his chair as the dictograph voice of doom went on.

"It's none of my business, of course," Metcalf agreed. "But I don't understand what you're driving at. What do you want me to say in this letter?"

"Get out a sheet of your letter paper and I'll dictate it," said Schneider. "You can tear it up afterward if you want to, but you'll be wiser to hand it over to me."

A drawer opened and closed.

"All right," said Metcalf. "Go ahead."

There was the sound of footsteps and Schneider's voice spoke again his voice was fainter. Evidently he had gone to the other side of the desk and was looking over Metcalf's shoulder. Tony wondered if he already had the little automatic concealed in his hand.

"First the date," Schneider said. "April 11, 1929." Then, very slowly, he continued, "Dear Myron: If there be ever any question as to why I killed John McKibben

"I won't write that," Metcalf's voice broke in, and there was a little rattle as of his pen being thrown upon the desk.

"Oh, yes, you will," said Schneider. "You'll write it or I'll use this gun. You get in my hand."

There was a moment's silence, then Tony heard Metcalf suddenly begin to laugh.

"What are you laughing at?" Schneider's voice demanded, "Don't you believe me?"

"Of course I believe you," said Metcalf. "I know you would have no hesitation in killing me, or anybody else you wanted out of the way, All right, I'll write the letter. The agreement is that you are not to produce it as long as I say nothing more about your having killed McKibben."

"That's it. Keep your mouth shut and you will be perfectly safe."

Everybody knew what was coming next. Only the girl dared look at Schneider. Her hand, leaning back in his chair, his eyes closed. Myron Metcalf's face was like glistening ivory with sweat . . .

"I shall," said the late Dr. Metcalf's voice.

"But there's one more question as to why I killed John McKibben." Schneider dictated, "I want him undestood that I killed him because he was stealing dictograph records from my cabinet and using them in blackmail my patients. He was an utter scoundrel and I have no regrets. Sign it."

"There you are," said Metcalf. "Now I hope—"

There was a sharp report, a long gasp . . . A second report and then some seconds of silence. The dictograph man turned off the switch.

"That's all" he whispered, and whipped the record from his face. For a moment no one moved. Then Duffy swung around to the two men who were standing guard over Schneider.

"Take him away, boys," he directed.

Ten minutes later, Duffy and Tony were holding a brief "post mortem."

"That was pretty strenuous," said the detective, mopping his forehead. "Some most interesting thing to me, at first, was that Metcalf should write that letter, even with a pistol to his head. Then I understood."

"Yes," Tony agreed. "So did I when I heard him laugh."

"And so, of course, when his dictograph was recording everything that was said. All he had to do was to turn that record over to the police and he had Schneider convicted out of his own mouth."

"And even if Schneider killed him . . ."

"The record would still be there. But I suppose you realize that Schneider would have got away with it. If it hadn't been for that girl. She'd make a good detective."

"I'm thinking of taking her on as my secretary," the columnist remarked.

"The deuce you are! I could do with a secretary like that myself."

"I know a little blonde down in Virginia," said Tony, "who would be just the person for you."

THAT BODY OF YOURS

JAMES W. BARTON, M.D.

Rapid Pulse Rate.

The pulse rate of the average or normal man is about 72 to 76, and of a woman 4 to 6 beats faster. This is the pulse when they are at rest sitting or standing, not after a hearty meal or after exercise. Should the pulse rate be faster than these rates at rest, there must be some reason for it.

Should the pulse be naturally smaller than the average, and this sometimes happens, then the heart will beat faster because it does not pump as much as the average will each beat. However, when your heart beats more rapidly than 80 times to the minute when you are resting, then the family physician should be consulted.

It is possible that there may be a little infection present or you may be working out plans or problems, or you may be worried or excited, in which case your heart could beat over 80. However, if "for no reason at all," the heart beat is over 80, the possibility of an early goitre should be considered. That is if you are not overweight nor underweight, but of normal weight.

Often the very first sign of goitre is the rapid heart beat. In life insurance examinations and in the army when the heart is found to be beating rapidly, other signs of goitre—trembling, eyelids not moving when looking, sleeplessness, indigestion—are sought. However, even if these other signs are not present, the recruit or candidate is given a "stress test" and the heart again tested. If it is still rapid the metabolism rate is taken and if shown high or rapidly at the body processes, including the heart, are working.

Of course, if there is any real nervous disturbance—lasting valves, poor or weak heart muscles—the heart will beat rapidly in order to supply the extra amount of blood needed because of these obstructions or weaknesses.

The thought then is not to worry about your heart being rapid "sometimes", but if your heart rate is "always" rapid, always on or more beats above normal, you should consult your physician as treatment for early goitre will prevent the development of severe goitre.

I was suppose to be asleep and I was laying in bed listening to The Horned Beetle on my mikkie that set, and you should ought to hear the doc saying, So that's it, is it? I've gods what a screaming and moaning and wailing. I thought you had your self caught in the door or else very least. Why cant you take your excitement more quietly? Why dont you get to work on that Junior Encyclopedia of World History which you got for Christmas? Infact may be louder than history, but history is even more scheming and bloodthirsty and revengeful, take my word for it. You cant start that at the stone age. Those cave men were rough actors, you'll just love them, he said.

Did you shoot human projectiles through space in rapsid full of oxygen so they could breethe on the way? I said, and pop said, it didn't occur to them. But if you want refinements, start in at the Dark Ages, when they burnt witches and all that sort of thing, he said.

Did they burn them with invisible rays so they never knew what hit them? I said, and pop said, They burnt them with fire and they knew what hit them all right. That was where the fun was suppose to come in, for Pete's sake. If you want some real excitement read about the Rise and Fall of the Roman Empire, with men in armor clashing all over the place, and spears splintering and swords clashing and to be short thundering to beat the band, he said.

Did they have rocket planes that could carry a hundred men to beyond the law of gravity? I said. Did they have a mystery bomb that would explode on contact and destroy a whole city so deep there wasn't a piece of it big enough to tell the tale? I said, and pop said, I refuse to answer on the advice of counsel and before I make an orderly withdrawal to a previously prepared position I am going to do this!

Meaning turn out my light and turn off my radio.

Lt. Hooper Tells Rotary Club Of Sea Life Aboard Corvette

Tribute to the personnel of the R.C.N.V.R. contributing their vigil against the Nazi submarine menace and to the R.C.A.F. for the coordinated support of the men manning the corvettes, the Tribune frigates and the destroyers in their flight to keep the convoy lanes open, was paid by Lieut. F. N. H. Hooper of the R.C.N.V.R., as he spoke to members of the Belleville Rotary club at their weekly luncheon.

Lieut. Hooper, returned recently from active duty aboard a corvette on the Atlantic, is now in training at No. 3 T.T.S. to train as air crew with the intention of becoming pilot of the fleet air arm to further the battle of the navy against the German sub.

Native of Winnipeg, but now claiming Vancouver as his home Lieut. Hooper has been a member of the R.C.N.V.R. since "the navy says" since March 1942, and has already seen nine months' service at sea and in coastal waters.

He distinguished between the three branches of the naval service and cited the expansion of the Canadian navy from the time of a few ships and 2,000 officers and men before the war, to its present proportions of many fighting ships and over 80,000 officers and ratings.

"Prior to the war the R.C.N.V.R. was merely another branch of the service," he said, "and its men can truthfully be called the 'Royal Canadian Navy'."

Distinguishing Features.

Distinguishing features of the uniforms in the three branches of the service, the Royal Canadian Navy, the Royal Canadian Naval Reserve, and the Royal Canadian Navy Volunteer Reserve, were indicated by the speaker. It came as a surprise to many to observe stripes in each branch of the service were entirely different.

Relative speeds of corvettes, frigates and destroyers were indicated by the speaker, destroyers, he said, was the only fighting ship of the Canadian navy to be capable of outspeed a submarine on the surface. Corvettes and frigates were fitted with reciprocal engines which would not turn up as much speed as turbines. Both were chiefly protecting convoys on the Atlantic routes were armed only with machine guns but today are being fitted with 4 inch guns, he said, for submarine battles.

Difficult Obtaining Accuracy.

Speaking as a naval gunner officer Lieut. Hooper referred to the difficulty of obtaining accuracy from guns aboard small fighting ships. Using a fist trajectory guns aboard corvettes are not as elevated by special devices for correction of the roll of the craft but their difficulties are increased by the smallness of the craft and by the wisp of a sail-e' periscope makes a very small target, according to the speaker.

Naval men are briefly but thoroughly trained for their respective jobs and parents of boys on Canada's fighting ships are not advised to be proud of the job they have been doing, Lieut. Hooper said, as indicated by the fact that after "action stations" has been sounded a boatswain's mate will announce that their guns manned and loaded within 30 seconds. Gunnery officers aboard a corvette make the 22 knots.

U.S. ARMY OFFICER KILLS 3 PERSONS IN CAMP CLUB

Two Girls and Patrolman Victims and Five Others Wounded

MOTIVE SOUGHT

Riverside, Calif., March 7 (AP) — Two girls and a policeman were slain and five other persons were wounded yesterday at nearby Camp Anza by a 31-year-old army officer who fired from the hip during an assailant, the camp commander reported. A military board of inquiry is seeking to establish the motive for the shootings.

Lieut. Col. Alfred L. Beaufort G. Swancutt, of La Crosse, Wis., suddenly cut loose with a 45-calibre army automatic Sunday night, said Col. Earle Harris, camp commander, were—

Miss Dorothy Douglas, 18, of Los Angeles, Calif.

Miss Lourdine Livermore, 18, of Corona, Calif.

Arthur R. Simpson, 34, a Riverside police patrolman.

The camp commander and witnesses to the affray—

Saddeny Drew Army Automatic.

Swancutt, his friend, 2nd Lieut. Ralph Light, said, "the girls were sitting in the camp Anza officers club Saturday night playing cards. Suddenly Swancutt rose from his chair, drew his side arm and quickly shot Miss Douglas and Miss Livermore dead," the witness said Lieut. Light in the hand and leg.

Another bullet struck the leg of Simpson, who had gone to the scene, Calif., who was passing.

According to the officer's statement, Swancutt awakened his superior officers, Col. Harris, Brigadier Gen. ff of Preston, Minn., and demanded another gun clip, explaining he was going to kill the man who had shot him. Gen. Sterling refused, Swancutt left the club and—

Runs Outside.

Outside, he wounded Cpl. Robert Sampson.

He then forced Sgt. John E. Robertz to drive him in a staff car from the camp into the suburban area of Riverside, where the slayings is situated.

There he stopped a car driven by Ray Schlegel, Los Angeles, and ordered Schlegel, his wife, Mrs. Ruth Schlegel's cousin, Enzi Atchley, apprentice seaman, to get out of the car. Swancutt took the Schlegel's eight-months-old baby.

Then Swancutt said police chief Nestor Brule, officers Simpson and Ralph F. Gross approached. Swancutt's gun killed Simpson and wounded Brule, the sheriff's aide. Cole fired back, hitting Swancutt in the stomach, chest and side.

Simultaneously Swancutt on a murder charge, Col. Sarles added.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, March 7. (CP) — The Base Metal and Industrial groups posted advances in today's trade on Golds and Western Oils were lower. Trade was moderate during the early period and turnover totalled 1,050,000 shares for the first three hours.

Canadian Locomotive featured the Industrial section, rising three points or more to 45 in fairly active trading. Steels were steady, 2-4 to 33 1-4 and Brazilian had a minor advance to 72 while Aircrafts were stronger generally and in the Senior Oils International Petr was firm.

Macassa, Teck Hughes, Aunor, Hollinger and Lake Shore were weak spots in the Gold group. Lake Shore fell 1 1-4 to 15 1-4 while Steep Rock and Nickel Copper and Falconbridge also showed small declines for Home, Calgary - Edmonton, Anglo-Canadian and Pamour.

WALL STREET

New York, March 7 (AP)—Broad but selective investment demand revived in today's stock market and the list moved ahead at mid-session gain leaders to 1944 peaks with gains of fractions to more than a point.

Issues with consistent dividend records were the most popular. Stocks with favorable prospects for peacetime apparently were responsive to the heavy air-pounding of Germany.

Motors and Rubbers were the strongest. Rails and Aircrafts did little.

Among Canadian issues Dome Mines added a major fraction, Inmaan Walker yielded a fraction and Distillers Seagram and Canadian Pacific were unchanged.

Tops for the year or longer were touched by American Telephone, Western Union "A", General Motors, Chrysler, White Motors, Goodyear, Goodrich, U.S. Rubber, General Tire, Du Pont, Houston Oil and American Power & Light Preferreds.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

Toronto, March 7. (CP) — Prices were about steady in very slow cattle trade on the livestock market here up to mid-session today. Veal calves, the few lambs and few sheep sold were steady. No price was established for hogs.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Marketing Service were: Cattle 250, calves 100, hogs 600, sheep and lambs 30. Receipts from yesterday were 700 head of cattle.

Prices in the trade included:

Cattle: A few weights — steers $10.25-$12. Choice butcher steers $10.15-$11.75, heifers $10-$11.50, butcher cows $7.25-$9, canners and cutters $5-$7, bulls $7-$10.50 and feed yearlings $12-$13.

Calves $15-$17 for choice, other vealers downward to $10.

A few calf lambs $16 and $17.

A few sheep $3-$6.25.

Hogs closed unchanged at $17.65, $17.25 for dressedweight at yards or plants.

Meats Featured On Tuesday Menus

Menus and bill of fares in the restaurants, cafes and tea-rooms of the city featured a variety of meals during the noontime luncheons on the first day of the Lenten season, restrictions on meatless Tuesday. No noticeable difference was evident in the attendance at the eateries when they discovered that they might have to serve fish in some form of chicken, eggs or macaroni, and a check of the plates indicated that the business and diet in feeding these was not affected.

One of the eating places showed that quite a few people did order cultivated the habit of going without meat on Tuesday, or found the other suggestions on the menus just as appetizing. The difficulty of making an exact check-up, however, guess is that it is the Lenten season and many have fallen into the habit for the forty-day period as a religious observance.

Major Downer Travels From Italy To Queen's Park

Spirit of Canadian Troops High Says Chaplain— Downer Elected While at Front

Toronto, March 7 —(CP)— Maj. A. L. Downer, Canadian army chaplain and Progressive Conservative member for East Hastings-Prince in the legislature arrived at Queen's Park today from Italy. He left Canadian troops in Italy about 10 days ago, travelling by air to London. He was given leave under military regulations to attend the session of the legislature for the first time since he was elected members of the House of Commons had accompanied him on journeys.

He said he had travelled from Italy to London by airplane, thence to England where he boarded a boat.

"The spirit of the Canadian troops in Italy is high," he said. "They are in great condition. I've never seen a more healthy group. They have every reason why they are fighting and are doing a magnificent job."

Major Downer's presence brings the Drew government's voting power in the house up to 36, compared with the 34 C.C.F. members.

Everett Van Allen Again Remanded

Being held on a nominal charge of vagrancy following a holdup at the Kent Street bakery here on Saturday night Everett Van Allen, of Belleville, appeared on Monday morning in City police court today. No evidence was adduced because Assistant Crown Attorney S. G. Robertson requested a week's adjournment. However, Magistrate Ponton, Chief Probert intimated that more serious charge against Van Allen was pending.

Otherwise the court docket was exceedingly short, three Icelanders had paid the conventional ten and costs as the result of drunk charges prior to the opening of the court today and therefore did not appear in person. One was a woman.

D. J. Callahan was assessed a dollar and costs after admitting violation of the parking regulations in the downtown area, while a domestic case concluded the proceedings. The latter was purely a family affair the result of family altercations. The head of the house was bound over to keep the peace.

SAYS HE WAS ATTACKED
BY TWO MEN WITH LEAD PIPE

Thurlow, March 7. — Percy Geo. White, 22, told police today he was attacked in the west end of Trenton last night by two men who slugged him over the head with a piece of lead pipe and left him in a dazed condition on the pavement.

White, who was stopped him to ask for a match and then attacked him. He was struck three or four times by the pipe length, he said, describing the men as about 35 years of age.

THINK.....

your RED CROSS

when you are making contribution!

THE RED CROSS IS AT HIS SIDE.....
AND THE RED CROSS IS YOU!

Because of the Canadian Red Cross, thousands who might have died, have lived. Think.

Thousands of men whose wounds might have crippled them for life have been made strong again because, at the crucial moment, the Red Cross was there. Think, also, of that.

Thousands of fighting men — and women, and little children — have been spared unspeakable physical and mental suffering through the ministrations of the Red Cross. Think of that, too.

Above all, remember this: The greatest, most punishing battles of the war are being fought now. Demands upon the Red Cross — from battlefields — hospitals — dressing stations and enemy prison camps, pyramid from day to day.

Surely, the appeal of the Red Cross for money to carry on their crusade against human suffering will meet the nation-wide and immediate response.

Let us all give to the Red Cross, gratefully, eagerly, generously.

U.S. PLANES DROP 350,000 FIRE BOMBS ON BERLIN

10,000 Explosive Bombs Dropped In Third U.S. Raid

Eighth Big American Assault on Germany In Past Ten Days; Follows R.A.F. Raid

NO NIGHT LOSSES

By ALGEWIN HILL
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, March 8. (CP)—Strong forces of United States four-engined bombers today attacked Berlin, dropping more than 350,000 incendiaries and 10,000 high-explosive missiles in the third American attack in a week against the German capital.

The daylight raiders set out on a few hours after midnight, but R.A.F. Bomber Command, which usually carries out its German-used railway yards at Lemana, 110 miles southwest of, acts. The night force, which included more than 1,000 squadrons in the R.C.A.F. bomber group, suffered no losses despite an anti-aircraft barrage and some night fighters. Pilots saw a great explosion that lit up the area and one crew saw a big building blown to pieces.

U.S. medium bombers flew into Holland today, striking unreported targets in an area where many German airfields have been bombed in the past.

Day Interval.

The attack on Berlin was the eighth big assault by American heavy bombers in ten days and came after one day's interval since the last heavy attack on the German capital.

A communique said that the Flying Fortresses and Liberators executed by large formations of British and American fighters, "attacked industrial targets in the Berlin district"

The American daylight aerial campaign against Berlin started on Friday when fighters penetrated to the capital. This was followed up Saturday by the first Liberator bomber attack, by one formation.

London, March 8. (AP) — R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. bombers in a new drive against railroad centres and feeding coastal defences struck heavily Tuesday night against the yards at Lemana, 110 miles southwest of Paris, and again returned without loss.

Radio blackouts on the continent today indicated the air offensive was rolling forward by daylight.

The night followed a day of subscisors attacks from south and west on targets in France and Belgium.

Coupled with the blow at Lemana, R.A.F. Mosquito bombers raided Western Germany for the sixth successive night. These speedy wooden bombers carry only a ton of explosives, putting them in the medium bomber class.

Lemana, site of a Renault Engine plant and a section of the Compagnie Rhone airplane Engine works is in the centre of the eastern half of France, and is the most convenient funnel for routing big rail shipments between the French Atlantic coast and the western and southwestern zones. The night before last the R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. hit Tergnes Rail centre 15 miles southwest of Paris.

Under Double Attack.

France was brought under double attack yesterday, with fighter-escorted United States heavy bombers striking at Toulon naval base in the south, and medium bombers from Britain raiding northern France. Other American heavyweights attacked Nazi airfields and railway installations near Rome, and mediums bombarded freight yards in Rome in the sixth Allied raid on that capital.

Lemana is a main line rail junction between the great coast ports of Brest and Nantes Canadian Bomber Group participated in the result-reported only flight flak defences.

It was the second straight night the R.A.F.-R.C.A.F. lost no raiders.

Monday's big attack was made by a force estimated unofficially as upwards of 650 bombers.

The afternoon raid, as on Monday, reported heavy air battles in progress over northwestern Germany and west of Hanover.

This aerial combat started about 1 p.m., said the radio, about half an hour after the American armada crossed the German frontier.

Radio Stations Close.

At mid-day German radio stations had blackened out to avoid giving the invaders navigational beams.

Monday's Berlin raid brought a record American loss of 66 bombers and 11 fighters, but the air force announced 176 German planes were shot down.

Red Cross Drive At $3,585,149, 36 P.C. Objective

Toronto, March 8—(CP)—Collections in the Canadian Red Cross national war fund drive, which continued to climb today with headquarters here reporting total returns of $3,585,149 or 36 per cent of the Dominion objective.

On the basis of the 1943 campaign subscriptions totalled $2,418,-966, 24 per cent of the nation's quota. The present drive will end March 31.

Provincial collections and percentages, reported until last night, with 36 objective, were: Ontario, $1,-Prince Edward Island, $50,000, 100 per cent; Halifax, Columbia, $1,000,-966 ($800,000) 42 per cent; Quebec, 71,010,416 ($2,500,000) 45 per cent; Alberta, $170,000 ($400,000) 42 per cent; Manitoba, $215,000 ($600,000) 36 per cent; Nova Scotia, $120,000 ($35,000) 34 per cent; Ontario $1-417,196 ($3,000,000) 14 per cent; New Brunswick, $5,138 ($200,000) 26 per cent.

There was no report of collections in Saskatchewan.

The term "strong force" n the official announcement indicated that Wednesday's attack on Berlin, as on Monday when the phrase "very strong forces" was used, but today's raiding fleet undoubtedly numbered several hundred.

Between 1 and 5 p.m. the German radio acknowledged "American bomber attacks with strong forces to reach Berlin."

"The experience of the attack was very nearly perfectly similar to the one adopted during the winter attacks on," the Berlin radio continued. "A new big defensive success for the defence of the Reich is reported."

The first group of escorting fighters to return reported shooting down 27 Nazi planes.

The Germans followed a sharp daylight attack yesterday on a German airfield near Coesfeld by United States medium bombers. Small forces of British, Dominion and Allied Spaces, Mitchells and Mosquitos also joined in daylight assaults on military objectives in northern France. Conches is about 75 miles south of the port of Dieppe.

Coesfeld was the first airfield hit down by an R.C.A.F. Spitfire squadron since the Germans pulled their fighters back to defend the Reich. Sqdn. Ldr. Ken Boomer of Winnipeg commanded the squadron.

French Defences Light

The fact that last night's operations were carried out without loss indicated anew the lightness of the German defences in Northwest France. In the Monday night smash by R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. bombers on Trappes, not a plane was lost. Only four bombers and the attacking aircraft bombed for nearly a half hour with "little interference."

Meanwhile, the Germans claimed they had scored a victory against the United States Air Force in the 4,000-ton smash at Berlin Monday. The German-controlled radio radio broadcast late yesterday a D.N.B. dispatch which described the attack as "the greatest success to date in the fight for the Americans."

An official announcement of the transmission had indicated it was the greatest success scored against the enemy since the beginning of the war.

The communique said the transmission had indicated it was the greatest success scored against the enemy since the beginning of the war.

Three armed travelers were set afire when Messerschmitts escorted by Mustangs pounced on an enemy convoy off Cape Frisian Islands, the Air Ministry said. Two Beaufighters failed to return.

Pinned Down by German Sniper Officer Orders Food by Telephone

With the 5th Army Beachhead Forces in Italy, March 8 —(AP)— Lieut. Col. Arthur Considered Dyer had Surrey, is a fast man when it comes to getting food to his hood.

Before dawn yesterday he crawled to the crest of a hill and called a telephone with him and when daylight came he relayed information to Germans by artillery phone resulted in seven direct hits on a German machine gun position, and which was causing serious trouble to the forces on the beachhead.

After the house was destroyed Dyer tried to get back to his original position, but was pinned down by a German sniper and forced to lie there until noon with no chance of getting food, in time for lunch.

Dyer solved the difficulty by picking up the telephone and ordering lunch. The lunch, with a additional 50 feet of wire, was attached to the telephone line and Edward hauled in his lunch hand over hand, maintaining communication with the forces on the west and North.

Later in the afternoon it began to rain, and when Edwards saw the sniper remove the telescopic sights from his rifle and try to keep them off he made a break for it and won.

RUSSIA REJECTS LATEST OFFER OF COMPROMISE

Premier Mikolajczyk Declares Government Was Not Informed Of Rejection

GIVES STATEMENT

By JUDSON Q'QUINN
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, March 8—(AP)—Russia negotiations said today that Russia had rejected the latest Polish compromise offer to settle the Russo-Polish boundary dispute, but Premier Stanislaus Mikolajczyk declared his Polish government had not been informed about it.

The first resentment in Polish circles over reports published by the London Press and circulated by diplomats that the Soviets had rejected the plan for a compromise settlement—a proposal which Mikolajczyk described as a British rather than Polish suggestion.

The Poles felt that their government should have been informed if Stalin had refused to agree to the proposal submitted to the Soviets by Prime Minister Churchill.

It was understood here that in replies to Churchill's proposals, the Kremlin reiterated that no understanding can be reached unless certain allegedly "anti-Soviet" elements are eliminated from the Polish government, and the Curzon line is accepted as Poland's eastern boundary.

This correspondent asked Mikolajczyk in a letter:

"In view of the Russian refusal to accept the Curzon line, how do you see any further hope for re-establishment of relations between the Polish and Soviet governments?"

Premier Replies.

The Polish Premier replied:—

"I regret not to be able to answer your question, as the Polish government has no knowledge of a Soviet refusal to the latest suggestions of the British government."

The communique offer in the Polish reply called for Polish admission of Germany west of the Curzon line, with modifications to include Vilna and Lwow on the Polish side. Permanent boundaries would be fixed by negotiations with a new elected government in Poland after the war. This plan was approved by the Polish National Council sessions in which Mikolajczyk threatened to resign.

Mikolajczyk said he had taken the firm stand that no Polish government has the authority to ask Russians without an election in Poland.

Meanwhile the Russo-Polish dispute appeared headed for almost a deadlock today as Premier Mikolajczyk's resignations could not break in face of the Russian Kremlin's demand for settlement of the boundary question now.

500,000 EVACUATED

Madrid, March 8—(AP)—Mass evacuation of 500,000 Frenchmen from the Mediterranean coast by Germans is underway, reports here reported in the Spanish press yesterday. The evacuation was said to be nearly complete.

KILLED IN TRUCK

Kingston, March 8 —(CP)— Charles Henderson, 47, Lime Lake farmer, was fatally injured yesterday when the truck in which he was riding left the highway near Marchand and plunged down a 70-foot bank. He died shortly after the accident. Irving Young, driver of the truck, was unhurt.

90,000 Aircraft, Mainly Of Combat Type, Built In Britain Till End of '43

London, March 8. (CP)— Britain manufactured 90,000 aircraft mainly of combat types from the start of the war to the end of 1943, Production Minister Oliver Lyttleton announced today in the House of Commons.

Industrial construction has more than replaced losses so that by the end of 1943 in most types of aircraft strength is greater than at the beginning of the war," he said.

He gave these other output figures for the same period:—

Eighty-three thousand tanks, armoured cars and carriers, more than 1,000 shells of various calibres, 2 million metric and nearly 9,250,000 machine-guns and rifles.

Construction Classified.

He said that just over four-fifths of current aircraft production is made up of bombers, fighters and naval reconnaissance planes, the balance being transports, trainers and target-aircraft.

Production of Britain to German bomber cases obviously prevented the publication of complete statistics, he said, but added that it certainly could do no harm to make public "a few actual figures to illustrate the magnitude of the war production of this country".

To the figures he gave on aircraft and gun production, he added 150,000,000 rounds of 9mm ammunition and nearly 7,000,000,000 rounds of small-arms ammunition.

Civil aviation said Britain had provided more than three-fourths of the total "extraordinarily" of the new aircraft delivered to the R.A.F. and the Fleet Air Arm in 1943, with 19 per cent coming from the United States and six per cent from the rest of the British Commonwealth.

U. S. 6TH ARMY WHIPPING JAPS ON THREE FRONTS

Marines Make Quick Thrust East of Cape Gloucester to Madmulin Area

HOLD LOS NEGROS

Allied Headquarters, Southwest Pacific, March 8. (AP)—The United States 6th Army is whipping the Japanese on three fronts around the borders of the Bismarck sea.

The Allied Supreme Command communique today said the American forces have won control of the Admiralties and in the Admiralty group, at the northern approach to the sea, and had buried 479 more Japanese dead.

Marines attached to the 5th Army made a quick thrust 110 miles east of Cape Gloucester, New Britain Island, and landed Monday with mere rifle fire opposition on Willaumez peninsula, on the north coast of the island. Soldiers on the south made an advance 25 miles eastward from Arawe to Amapring. New Britain forms the south boundary of the Bismarck sea.

On New Guinea, which limits the sea to the west, the 32nd Division forces who landed behind the Japanese lines at Yalau, 30 miles west of Saidor, consolidated their positions. The drive here is on Madang, Japanese base town.

Solomons-based bombers and fighters continued to hammer Rabaul.

BRITISH TROOPS IN WEST BURMA DISPERSE ENEMY

Jaws of Trap in Which Japanese Forced Begin to Close Rapidly

WALAWBUM ISOLATED

New Dehli, March 8—(CP)—British troops in Western Burma have dispersed an enemy raiding party in the vicinity of Zetanbyin, Indian headquarters said today and captured high ground south of the Maungdaw-Buthedaung road.

Allied communique said today:

A second announcement said that Chinese and American troops have linked up in the Walawbum area of northern Burma and now are fighting side by side.

Japanese counter-attacks on the British-captured high ground "met with no success," it was announced. Fighting and equipment were captured by the British force.

To the North Chinese forces have occupied Hpungpye, three miles southwest of Walawbum, and have turned Shingban, three miles to the south, Capture of Maingkwan, main objective in the Hukawng valley, was reported yesterday.

Jaws of Trap Closing

Jaws of the trap in which the Japanese were forced by encircling tactics in Walawbum to close rapidly, the communique reported. Walawbum has been completely isolated by U. S. troops, who have cut the Japanese line of supply and communication with other Japanese forces to the West and North.

"In this action the Japanese suffered extremely heavy casualties," the communique said. "American casualties were virtually negligible."

NAZIS POSSIBLY REGROUPING FOR FOURTH DRIVE

Gunfire, Mortar And Grenade Duels Rage For Second Night In Cassino

1,300 SORTIES MADE

Naples, March 8—(AP)—Gunfire, mortar and grenade duels raged for the second straight night in shell-torn Cassino on the main 5th Army front, Headquarters announced today, and observers have spotted movements behind the German lines south of Rome, possibly indicating a regrouping for a fourth allout push against the Allied beachhead.

New Zealand siege guns hammered at a German-held rail station about a mile southeast of the town as American troops west of Cisterna on the beachhead engaged in a fierce machine-gun and mortar duel with the Nazis, but there was no change in position. The Germans made a concerted but futile effort to infiltrate Cassino from near Carrocelo, on the Rome side of the battleground.

Discussing the German movements behind the lines Headquarters said the enemy "may be on the watch for any opening in our defensive positions."

Foul weather continued to hamper the ground fighting and the communique declared that "heavy snow in the mountains and deep mud in the valleys hampered all movements difficult."

Allied planes flew about 1,300 sorties yesterday, with heavy bombers striking the Verdun naval base in Southern France and medium bombers striking at rail yards in Rome.

Shipping Plastered

The escorted heavy bombers plastered shipping, docks and oil stores at Toulon, it was disclosed, and also pounded rail facilities at Pisa, near Florence. Medium bombers struck at the Cetienne and Littorio rail yards in Rome and at the docks at Santo Stefano.

Fighter-bombers bombed Pontassieve and Castel Florentino and airfields at Orvieto and Viterbo and Pratica Di Mare.

Night bombers slashed at the rail yards in Rome and at the night shipping bulletin added.

Other day operations included attacks by light bombers on gun positions, railways and road transport in the battle area.

NO NEW CONSTRUCTION

Ottawa, March 8—(CP)—The expulsion of the Japanese from Attu, miles long and 2 feet wide has been completed by the R.C.A.F. and British Commonwealth air training plan operations, Air Minister Power remarked last night in the House of Commons. A total of 6,'68 buildings have been taken over from the enemy and Nazis intend to hold, or from the

900 U. S. Rangers Infiltrate 4 Miles Thru Enemy, Fight to End

Naples, March 8—(AP)—Two battalions of American Rangers, 900 strong, infiltered four miles through German lines in the early days of the Anzio beachhead operation, and fought their way back from there fought to the bitter end when surrounded by superior German forces, it was announced today.

The night and day action occurred on Feb. 16 and 17 when the Rangers managed to filter back into Allied lines after being cut off for 36 hours.

As the spearhead of a planned general attack on Cisterna, 20 miles inland and distant, the Rangers slipped away at 2 a.m. on their mission to infiltrate German defense lines as quietly as possible; get inside Cisterna; encroach yourselves and start raising all the hell possible." Although it is not known for sure whether the Germans laid a clever trap, or benefited from a leak, during the night the first battalion of Rangers passed a heavy contingent of German reinforcements moving heading toward positions before the Rangers' lines. The opposing forces by-passed each other except for a few skirmishes, and the Germans were killed—quietly.

It is apparent that only the advance party got into the outskirts of Cisterna. With a little more than a battalion the Rangers entrenched themselves solidly. But the second, reinforcing Ranger ed and were being overpowered.

battalion ran into the Nazis whom the first battalion had passed in the night. Their advance was stopped, first party was unsupported. The fighting became general as the Germans moved in from all sides for the hill.

The Rangers were not part of their mission—"to raise all the hell possible." They could have done no more evil if they had fought with all their might.

One platoon reached a building where two German tanks were parked. Machine-guns mowed the sleeping crews, appropriated the tanks to spearhead their dash into Cisterna.

But back in Allied lines all the guns, mortars and a handful of German tanks were roaming around in that area where the Rangers were supposed to be, promptly blasted them out.

Casualties mounted. Ammunition ran out. When only a handful of men remained, the captain of one platoon, wounded but still directing the fight, ordered them to escape as well as they could. Then he stayed behind to cover their withdrawal.

The story of that platoon appallingly was duplicated by the others. The last message from the Rangers came in about noon, saying they were outnumbered and were being overpowered.

Igrovitsa Nine Miles Northwest Of Tarnopol Taken

70 MILES FROM LWOW

By EDDY GILMORE
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, March 8 —(AP)— Marshal Gregory K. Zhukov's 1st Ukrainian Army fought today against the worst ground conditions of the Russian-German conflict and what a Red Star Correspondence reporter called the "growing resistance of the enemy."

But still the Red Army rolled on, seizing a firm hold on the Odessa-Lwow railway and moving to within 70 miles of the important communications city of Lwow.

Zhukov's advance, now in its fourth day, is averaging more than 20 miles a day, in some areas as much as 35 miles, according to Moscow advices.

Pressing forward over a countryside turned from ice to mud by Spring thaws, Russian spearheads captured Igrovitsa, seat of Igrovitsa, nine miles northwest of Tarnopol and only four miles from the Warsaw railway line, a Russian communique announced. Other forces operating to the southwest actually severed the line in two places, 20 miles apart—at Kozhenovka, five miles south of Volchisk and Selezhny, 10 miles west of Zbarazh.

Countryside Flooded.

The campaign is becoming exceedingly more complicated," reported Capt. Anatoli Belaiev, Red Star correspondent. He said there were many small lakes, which the thaw overflowed large areas of the countryside, as well as numerous streams and small forests.

In this battle of mud, Belaiev reported, the Germans resorted to the use of long lines of sledges hitched behind tanks. Towing sledges with tanks, he said, enabled tanks, which cut through the muddy Ukrainian fields to reach the roads behind the enemy lines.

Field dispatches said the Germans have congregated large forces of infantry and tanks, seeking to halt their counter-attacking lines in the Ukraine.

"This is understandable," Red Star said, "because of the lack of roads and the already practically impassable for the troops."

Heavy, Sticky Mud.

On top of the warmest winter in many years, a sudden Spring thaw turned the clayey steppe country of the Ukraine into thousands of square miles of heavy, sticky mud.

It is too early to say whether the German counter-attacks are from the established Nazi lines, or if the Nazis intend to hold, or from the

Bulgaria Calls More Troops

Berne, March 8—(AP)—Bulgaria has called up three troops following a visit by German Balkan commanders to Sofia and discovery of a large store of armaments cached by partisans, the Basled Nachrichten reported today in a Budapest dispatch.

Strongly-armed Partisan bands are established near Sofia, and Bulgarian guerrillas have started a general offensive against them. After one battle which 150 Partisans were killed, Bulgarian regulars found enough guns and supplies to equip four regiments, and also found a radio station, the dispatch said.

Sofia officials were said to estimate that 27,000 Partisans now are being supplied by airplanes from Southern Italy, maintaining direct contact with British general headquarters at Cairo.

Post-War Civil Aviation Talks On Informal Basis

Ottawa, March 8 (CP)—Conversations on post-war civil aviation here in which Canada has participated with other United Nations have been on an informal basis, officials said commenting on reports from Washington that discussions have taken place between the United States, Russia, Britain and Canada.

It is considered unlikely that a formal conference at which these countries will participate will be held in the near future.

(Wayne W. Parrish, editor of "American Aviation" in a copyright article said invitations had been extended by the United States to each conference to be held the third week in March but "the slowness with which Great Britain has acted...may mean a postponement.")

Planning Committee Wants Action on Survey of City With Regards to Sewage Disposal

Suggested City Reclaim Land Near Creek Dock and Obtain Revenue

DISCUSS LANDING FIELD

Post-war plans of proposed projects before the Belleville Regional Planning Committee yesterday afternoon show a definite shaping as the commission discussed the city's future development. The whole purpose of the commission at the present time is to get action on those projects and plans now before them, the sewage disposal plans, explained and a landing field for the city. Discussion was also held on several other proposals by the commission at their regular monthly meeting held on Mar. 1 at the Chamber of Commerce. Fifteen of the twenty members were in attendance with present with Ald. Woodley presiding in the absence of Mayor Ellis.

It was proposed that a letter be written to Mr. Stonier that he was awarded the contract for making a survey of the city with regards to the sewage disposal system to expedite matters and ask him to start on the commencing when in the near future the commission might expect his representative in the city. Mr. A. E. Hertig, manager of the Chamber of Commerce asked that a report be made on the action taken to date on the futherance of the explanation as mentioned by Ald. C. R. Clapp, that there were only two of the proposed projects on the proposed right-of-way which had not been brought under option, Bridge and Bonnell Road.

A letter was read from the city council outlining that it had been resolved in the council that the Post-War Planning Committee approach the Department of Marine regarding extension of the east pier in the present Government Dock as a post-war proposition, this to work in with the plans for the city in claiming land along the water front, and the possibility of its reclamation for industrial sites providing additional revenues for the municipality. Also for industries requiring rail and water transportation. A letter also from the city council pointed out the suggestion, that the city itself might be the logical one to reclaim the land for city revenue instead of letting it go to the former owners of the property.

A lengthy report was produced by Mr. Ernest A. Mott which was tabled until the next regular meeting, when discussion will again be resumed and a letter was read by-ald. Lorne McDougall which resolved that the government was entering into the proposal and that the report would be sent as yet available. Mr. McDougall stated that he felt it would be possible to include Belleville on any trans-Canada airline, but that he considered it essential that the city have a landing field for private planes, or for any others which would to land at Belleville.

Mrs. Victoria Park Beautified.

Ald. Clapp urged the commission to bring out a strong proposal to the city council asking that Victoria Park be beautified and made more attractive for the citizens of the city as a place to spend their leisure time in the summer evenings and on Sundays and holidays. Ald. Woodley said that the city had been trying to influence the government into building a wall along the river at the park, which would assure the park being available all through the summer, but Ald. Clapp formulated the opinion that the city would have to do this without help from the government, and that it should be done.

It was unanimously decided that more definite and complete reports be produced by the three main projects under hand with the commission with regard to the immediate cost and amount of man-hours of labor involved in each instance so that these post-war projects might be registered with the government for immediate commencement following the cessation of the war.

Pay For Fixed In Water Rates.

Mr. Hertig asked whether the city council was planning to pay for the post-war projects out of the present taxation or by debentures. Ald. Woodley replied that there would be debentures raised and opinioned that the sewage disposal plant would be paid for from water rates.

Dr. Jacob Marshall asked the other members of the commission what had been done regarding the project started years ago. He said that the sewage on the south side would have to be dumped in the bay, that it was a project, which should be taken up immediately and that the council for post-war consideration. The two major factors situated in this district of the city are apparently willing to co-operate in any definite sewage system, which would relieve the situation there. A committee was appointed to investigate and report to the commission.

Congratulations were extended to Mr. C. W. Duff upon his appointment to the Board of Directors of Associated Boards of Trade and Chamber of Commerce, and the meeting was then adjourned by Mr. H. W. Ackerman. The following members were present at the meeting: Ald. Woodley, chairman, Lorne McDougall, Belleville; Mr. R. Clapp, vice-chairman, Mr. C. R. Clapp, vice-chairman, Mr. C. R. Clapp, vice-chairman, Mr. C

SHAKEUP SEEN IN YUGOSLAVIA

Far-Reaching Developments Foreshadowed in Interest of Fullest Co-operation

Cairo, March 8 —(AP)— A major shakeup in Yugoslavia's political affairs, including the possibility that King Peter's present government in Cairo may be final is necessary to resign or drastically to reorganize, is believed by friends of developments in the Balkans and Middle East.

Barring some hitch in the present trend, outright British recognition of Marshal Josip Broz (Tito), leader of the Partisans, is generally considered here as a likely prospect. This could be brought about through a reconciliation between Tito and King Peter, and there is reason to believe a major effort to this end is under way.

The presence of Gen. Capt. Randolph Churchill in Tito's headquarters is highly significant. The son of the British Prime Minister has certainly carried a message from his father intended to promote maximum co-operation against the Germans and Quislings. Reliable sources here also agree that the departure for London of two members of Tito's Partisan government, which is headed by Premier Ronald-ija Purich, foreshadows far-reaching developments.

In addition, it is known that an anti-Fascist middle of the road group, recently active in Cairo, has been able to plead directly to King Peter for action to bring the breach between the forces of Tito and Gen. Draja Mihailovic, Peter's minister of war, finally to cease.

TRUANT OFFICER APPREHENDS BOY

When a youthful bicycle thief observed Truant Officer Fred Wigle approaching him yesterday, he laid leaped from the bike and escaped unscathed. Mr. Wigle took the bicycle into custody, after obtaining a good description of the lad, and turned the bike over to police. Today, however, Truant Officer Wigle proved his observations and memory by identifying the youth seen at the bicycle. He handed the same teen-aged youth as he is about to report for studies at school. Later when arraigned before Chief Provincial Police the police station the boy was confronted with the bicycle and a signature from the local department store recently. A juvenile court case may lend to clear up other petty thefts.

All Members of Four Parties Agree on This Point

BILL HELD OVER

By JAMES McCOOK.
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, March 8 —(CP)— Members of four parties in the House of Commons last night said that the proposed industrial development bank, with reserves of $100,000,000, falls short of what will be required in the producing of industry in the post-war period.

Speaking in second reading of the bill to set up the bank, New Democracy Leader Blackmore said that once the bank began operations the institution would be unequal to its responsibilities. It would have its financing capital of $250,000,000 instead of $350,000,000, the money being created by the Bank of Canada.

The bank then could be expanded to the point where it would be able to lend all the money necessary for any needs of Canada, he said.

Blackmore and Hon. R. B. Hanson (PC-York-Sunbury) agreed the bank might be used by "big business" to the detriment of financing authority. But Mr. Hanson said he supported the bill with a combined high national income private means of industry and of private business.

M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader, said the bill setting up the bank fell short of what it should be at this time. The proposed institution largely destroyed the argument in favor of "so-called free enterprise" and went some distance in meeting the "risk for which the public is supposed to pay those engaged in free enterprise." The C.C.F. supported the measure in principle.

Gladstone Murray Tucker (L-Rosthern) said the rate of interest charged by the bank should not be more than three or 3½ per cent and there should be a position to assist those returning from overseas to become established in business on their own or the capital resources of the bank might well be larger.

Large Increase In Chick Sales

Due to fears that their needs may not be filled later in the season, district farmers and poultry raisers are purchasing their baby chicks day-old chicks at an earlier date this spring. It was announced today by an official of one Belleville chick hatchery that sales are already double the date last year is approximately 25 to 40 per cent ahead of 1943.

Early orders are not entirely due to fear that supplies of chicks will be rationed according to hatchery operators. Many poultry raisers believe it is thought there will be season's increase of around 30 per cent over last year caused by increased interest in poultry raising by district farmers.

Agricultural Report

According to the weekly crop report of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, Prince Edward County is pressed for shipment to the New England states, while the demand for dairy cattle appears to have fallen off. Sales of stockers and feeders are operating to capacity.

The seed grain situation in Northumberland appears to be more satisfactory than was at first anticipated although there is a shortage of feed of any description. In Prince Edward County there are a large number of springers being offered for sale. Hay is worth $20 per ton, rough feed on hand and considerable hay for sale.

Father Attends Funeral Of One of Quadruplets

Heanor, Derbyshire, England, March 8. (CP)— Staff Sgt. William Thompson, of the United States army today attended a private funeral service for Ann Thompson, one of the quadruplets born to him and Norah Thompson, and then visited the babies' 23-year-old mother in Derbyshire Royal Infirmary.

Only Thompson and the babies' grandparents attended the funeral for Quadruplet No. 4, who died March 3. The baby was buried in a small village cemetery.

The three surviving babies were reported doing well and gaining weight.

Members Say Resources Of Proposed Industrial Bank Are Insufficient

BILL HELD OVER

By JAMES McCOOK.
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, March 8 —(CP)— Members of four parties in the House of Commons last night said that the proposed industrial development bank, with reserves of $100,000,000, falls short of what will be required in the producing of industry in the post-war period.

Speaking in second reading of the bill to set up the bank, New Democracy Leader Blackmore said that once the bank began operations the institution would be unequal to its responsibilities. It would have its financing capital of $250,000,000 instead of $350,000,000, the money being created by the Bank of Canada.

The bank then could be expanded to the point where it would be able to lend all the money necessary for any needs of Canada, he said.

Blackmore and Hon. R. B. Hanson (PC-York-Sunbury) agreed the bank might be used by "big business" to the detriment of financing authority. But Mr. Hanson said he supported the bill with a combined high national income private means of industry and of private business.

M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader, said the bill setting up the bank fell short of what it should be at this time. The proposed institution largely destroyed the argument in favor of "so-called free enterprise" and went some distance in meeting the "risks for which the public is supposed to pay those engaged in free enterprise." The C.C.F. supported the measure in principle.

Gladstone Murray Tucker (L-Rosthern) said the rate of interest charged by the bank should not be more than three or 3½ per cent and there should be a position to assist those returning from overseas to become established in business on their own or the capital resources of the bank might well be larger.

Bill Held Over

After three hours' discussion the bill was held over for further discussion prior to second reading, from principles of the bill to the Banking and Commerce Committee.

During the afternoon sitting yesterday the House Members dealt with the appointment of committees to speed up business of the House by revising rules of procedure.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King said the government was making no suggestions and taking no responsibility for rejection or acceptance of the committee's report, the principal proposals of which are:

1.—Increase from five to 20 the number of members required to support an appeal from a Speaker's ruling before a vote is allowed;

2.—Limit speeches to 40 minutes when the House is in committee to one on each clause or item and this speeches be not longer than 20 minutes with no limit of the asking of questions.

3.—Shorten procedure on divorce bills by referring them direct to the Private Bills Committee on coming from the Senate instead of putting them through the usual steps of presentation of the Senate reading, first reading, second reading and report.

All Diverse Cases in Court.

Speaker J. A. Glen, who headed a committee reviewing the standing rules of the House announced he thought had been to see that the rights of minorities were not impaired.

Mr. Hanson said that he could not agree that abridgement of speeches in the House to less than 40 minutes was necessary. No diverse bills should be brought before parliament and should be dealt with by the courts.

Angus MacInnis (C.C.F.-Vancouver East) said the rights of minorities must be protected, but it was recognized the majority must rule and the government must have means to do business.

Liguori LaCombe (CON-Laval-Two Mountains) said that divorce bills should be used to protect married couples against themselves and for the protection of their children.

Ian Ross Reid (L-New Westminster) said the House rule forbidding the reading of speeches should be strictly enforced.

J. P. Poulin (L.-Pontiac-Huntingdon) said he felt the proposed amendment to the standing orders had been inspired by fear of the "yellow press" and "certain club men who know nothing about what is going on in parliament but pass judgment upon us while smoking long cigars at the expense of Scotch."

West Estimates Renewed.

The Prime Minister said he had hoped the House would have found it possible to make a reference to a committee of at least some Alberta, which now occupy considerable time in the House.

A. W. Neill (Ind.-Comox-Alberni) opposed the suggestion that members in the House be compelled to be on any group of private.

Mr. Hanson said he would support the bill to establish a national bank; bit ir it would assist in the financing of industry in Canada, although he felt an institution with $100,000,000 in resources would be more than adequate when the national income ran from $6,000,000,000 to $8,000,000,000.

Mr. Coldwell said his group believed the industrial development bank would destroyed the argument in favor of "so-called free enterprise" and went some distance in meeting the "risks for which the public is supposed to pay those engaged in free enterprise." The C.C.F. supported the measure in principle.

Mr. Blackmore said there was a fear that there might be another "window-dressing," and nothing in the bill was being designed to trick the Canadian people into thinking the King government really meant to do something to remedy the ill of unemployment, that it does not intend to do something effective."

Capt. Tucker said the C.C.F. program in British Columbia involved the taking over of land and mines in Russia.

J. G. Poulin (C.C.F.-Weyburn) said the C.C.F. had no policy for collectivisation of land in any province.

Capt. Tucker moved adjournment of the debate so he could obtain proof of the statement about the C.C.F. policy he had made, but the motion was rejected on a voice vote.

Medical Examination Before Marriage Urged by United Church

Toronto, March 8 (CP)—A resolution urging provincial governments to amend the marriage laws making it compulsory for both parties to have medical examination at least 10 days before a marriage licence was passed here today at the 1940 annual conference of the United Church of Canada Board of Evangelism and Social Service.

Other resolutions under discussion included a government-set floor price for milk and the establishment of the church with the nation, investigation of the amount of money thought had been to see that the rights of minorities were not impaired.

Mr. Hanson said that he could not agree that abridgement of speeches in the House to less than 40 minutes was necessary. No diverse bills should be brought before parliament and should be dealt with by the courts.

Angus MacInnis (C.C.F.-Vancouver East) said the rights of minorities must be protected, but it was

Walter Winchell Devotes Column To Praise of Canada's War Effort

New York, March 8 —(CP)— Walter Winchell, whose Daily Mirror column syndicated by King Features, usually is jammed with asterisks and "inside information" on every subject immaginable, devoted about 1,000 words to tell Canada about the part she has contributed Canada is making to the war.

Under the heading "Canada never knew till now of Canada's war role," Winchell wrote: "Intense sentences everything from growth of Canadian industry to the development of an anti-seasickness pill.

"Canada is the only one of America's Allies that has not suffered land help. . . . Most of her money payments to the Allies have been outright gifts because Canada is opposed to piling up war debts. . . . The United States is Canada's best customer; and Canada's the best customer of Britain and one of our best customers. . . . Canada is the largest producer of nickel and aluminum. Last year she produced more than 100 per cent of the world's zinc. . . . Canada is the world's largest producer of nickel and is the largest producer of asbestos, supply available to the United States. . . . Canada is the world's largest producer of asbestos, tetrachloride, used in fire extinguishers, carriers and battleships. . . . She is a heavy producer of lead. She is a heavy producer of lead. She is the largest and the most important discovery of tungsten ore in the United States. Much of it is being developed by the Canadian government. . . . Canada is the backbone of battle armor. . . .

"Canada's production ranges the field services and hospitals of the United Nations' armies and navies. . . . Canada is producing five times as much penicillin as the United States as she did in 1939. . . . She is producing 10 times as much insulin and mountings, although before she entered the war, Canada manufactured a big gun. . . . She has delivered 100,000 . . . rifles to the British. She has the largest small arms factory in the British Empire. . . . She has produced more than a million rifles and enough machine guns to equip nearly every soldier in the German army. . . . Canadians Called Upon to Banish 'False Modesty'

Toronto, March 8. (CP)—Premier Drew called upon Canadians Tuesday night to banish "false modesty" and tell the world of the part Canada to stand in relation to the British Empire. "Canada has become hesitant about expressing her sentiments," Premier Drew said, as he told the Ontario Producers' Association.

Canada were sound business reasons for maintaining close ties with Great Britain, he said. "I believe that he was not advocating merely sentiment or emotion as the basis of association, but a business proposition that is to endure as long as any other business association".

There was "tremendous significance" in the fact that all but $2,000,000 pounds of 129,000,000 pounds of Canada's exports last year went overseas.

Members of the association heard criticism of the Federal government's policy of price control by Association President W. H. Montgomery, Carrying Place.

The Premier blamed Agriculture Minister J. G. Gardiner's failure to assist producers in getting above 26 cents a pound and slaughter of 30 cents a pound as contributory to decline in Canadian cheese production.

J. F. Singleton, chairman of the Dairy Products Board, said that Canada Farmers had earned "a great deal more" than the estimated $400 million milk production in 1942. He said domestic and export dairy products could be largely attributed to exports to the United Kingdom, and that another drain on supply by the increasing number of food parcels being shipped to prisoners-of-war.

Mild Blizzard Brings 5 Inches Of Snowfall

A winter blizzard blew down out of the northwest early Wednesday morning and continued most of the day, until a depth of five inches of snow had been reached early in the afternoon.

No reports of highways and connection roads being blocked have been received at Provincial Police headquarters up until one o'clock Wednesday afternoon, as snow was not of a light flaky variety.

However, during the height of the blizzard during the morning a dense fog set in, so that motorists in downtown Belleville were forced to turn the headlights of their vehicles on in order to caution vehicles approaching in the opposition in an effort to avoid collitions.

Despite frequent sanding of intersections and hills in the city streets were in a hazardous condition as the snow quickly packed hard by traffic wheels. Trouble was experienced by transport trucking to negotiate Bridge St. hill. At the noon hour a transport trailer was unable to make the hill as he attempted to proceed west on the city and by backing down swung across the street to disrupt traffic for a considerable time.

NEW NAME ATTRACTS

Brierley Hill, England, March 7, (CP)—The Brierley Hill City Council advertised for a rat catcher at a salary of £4 10s. a week. No response. The Council decided to try again. Next applicant applied for "a rodent operative"—and got one at £4 10s. a week.

WILL HOLD INQUEST

Toronto, March 8—(CP)—Chief Coroner Dr. Smirle Lawson said today an inquest will be held into the death of Shirley Faulkner, 10, killed by injured in West Toronto last night when struck by car police said was driven by Orville Craig, 30, formerly of Peterborough.

Legislature Faces Heavy Volume Of Business

Thirteen New Government Bills Introduced as Debate Continues

HYDRO DISCUSSED

Toronto, March 8—(CP)—A heavy volume of new legislation, and the prospect of possibly four speeches in the continued debate on the Throne Speech, faced the Ontario Legislature today as it continued its session at the Queen's Park.

A total of 13 bills including three Government measures were introduced yesterday and O. F. Mitchell (C.C.F.—York North) and William Murdoch (P.C.—Essex South) Twin Progressive Conservative Government men, spoke in the debate.

A. Belanger (L.—Prescott) adjourned the debate, and Premier Drew and Hon. Gordon Conant spoke after a number of new bills are introduced and others dealt with in various stages. He will be followed by William Dennison (C.C.F.—Toronto Trinity), Leonard Hall (P.C.—Halton), R. A. McEwing (L.—Wellington North) and possibly Hon. Harold (C.C.F.—Wellington South).

Members Hear Plea

The legislators yesterday heard a plea by Hon. Peter Heenan, K.C., Deputy Minister of Mines, for the Dower (P. C. —Dufferin-Simcoe) Mines Act, which was passed in principle, planning to give Canadian fighting men "something to live for when they come home."

Capt. Dower was re-elected last August, while on active service with troops in Sicily and has returned on leave to contest the election.

He said the spirits of the Canadians in Italy were high despite the hardships of the enemy and despite the mud and the flees. But the boys overseas appreciated receiving more letters from home.

Another bashful thinking to believe the war would soon be won and Canadians should prepare for every war sacrifice.

Looking into the post-war period Mr. Belanger urged the Ontario Legislature to come here.

Legislation that marked the biggest flood of new legislation yet handled by the House in a single session of the current Parliament was introduced by Hon. Richard Hale, K. C. P. bill to amend the Municipal Act to provide for a Public Board and Board of Education employees to belong to a city or municipal councils. All were given first reading.

Second Reading Given.

Second reading was given a bill to amend the power district service charges and to reduce or remove service charges and provide the conveyance of any property by the Ontario Hydro Commission by the Consolidated Revenue Fund of the Province.

The Ontario Hydro Commission will be able to provide more electrical facilities within the reach of all in Ontario rural areas under a bill introduced by Hon. Gordon Conant, Hydro Commissioner, told the Legislature.

He said the Commission now has experiments under way to assist farmers in a quick-freezing unit which might be handled by some company. A central unit would be designed to enable Ontario farmers to grow summer products in the winter.

The commission also planned after the war to send "mechanized electrical units" to rural areas to supply displaying equipment which farmers might purchase.

Premier Drew introduced a bill to set up a board of governors to direct the work of the Ontario Research Foundation and extend Post-War research.

Attorney-General Blackwell introduced an amendment to the Communal Services Act, affecting act. He explained the department of National Health and Welfare, that all officers in the services be made eligible to be appointed as Justices of the peace, but those above the rank of major, as the act provides.

Bills Introduced.

H. E. Brown (CCF-Welland) introduced an act amendment to the Municipal Act to enable employees of school boards and boards of education to qualify and sit on municipal councils.

Mr. Mitchell in a 45-minute address called for lower interest rates on farm loans, better Social Service allowances, definite plans for rehabilitation of servicemen and revision in most cases of special privileges enjoyed by corporations under

Inspiration to Canada

Deeds of heroism for which Major Paul Triquet of the Royal Twenty-Second Regiment of Canada has been awarded the Victoria Cross will be an inspiration to all Canadians for generations and especially will they inspire the people of French Canada. He has brought honor to Quebec and every other part of the Dominion and his name and deeds will "long be remembered in our homeland" as Lt.-General Crerar, Canadian Corps commander in Italy remarked in a letter to the gallant V.C. winner.

The award is a tribute to and a symbol of the spirit of French Canada. At the battle of Dieppe French and English speaking Canadian regiments fought side by side with the same heroism as that which their ancestors showed before in Canadian history. Now they are fighting today in Italy and with the same spirit. In Lt.-Col. Merritt and Major Triquet the two great racial divisions of Canada are unitedly proud and united in the honor awarded these men.

Lt.-Col. Merritt won his Victoria Cross in what was virtually the first action of this war in which Canadians were engaged in any large number and now Major Triquet has won the V.C. for service in the campaign in Italy.

Major Triquet's heroism proves the award deserved. His valor showed not only in one instance but in a long sequence of incidents during a battle calling for the utmost in courage, resourcefulness and leadership. The deeds he performed on that day of December 14th, 1943, rank among the golden deeds which Canadians for generations will recall with honor. The citation shows these facts clearly. He rallied his men with cries "never mind the Germans, they are all side straight" and led his company on to a little group of houses making up the settlement of Casa Berardi.

The record reveals that all of Triquet's officers were killed or wounded and half of his men casualties. He kept moving among them and encouraging them in French. His group being virtually surrounded he shouted, "there are enemy in front of us, behind us and on our flanks; there is only one safe place and that is on the objective." He led them on a dash to the settlement where the men dug in and he directed them in driving off continuous counter-attacks that were kept up until the rest of the battalion moved up to relieve him, two sergeants and the 15 other ranks who remained. His actions resulted in the outflanking of the enemy position.

Major Triquet is one of the most popular of officers. By reading the short remarks as quoted in the citation and reading his words to the men it is easy to understand why he is so popular and why this series of deeds of his was a natural expression of his courage, energy and leadership. His relationship to the men whom he led in reorganizing and reorganizing them showed what care he took of their welfare and at the same time made Allied progress possible by his and their achievements.

In the House on Monday Defence Minister Ralston read the citations of the V.C. awards to Major Triquet and Lt.-Col. Merritt, the two V.C.'s of the Canadian army of this war and the House members applauded the recital of the deeds of these men of whom he said Canada was proud for their deeds were an inspiration to their comrades and "they are equally an example and a challenge to those at home" for they had "brought great honor to Canada."

Two other Canadians, Capt. E. T. Peters, serving in the Royal Navy, and Pte. William Mann of Brampton, killed in action serving with the British army in Libya have been awarded the V.C. in this war.

79 Canadians have been awarded the Victoria Cross since the Crimean War when the decoration was first awarded by Queen Victoria.

Of the earlier awards, 43 are held by living Canadians. Eight were serving with British units, the rest with Canadian forces when the deeds were performed for which they were honored. There are four wars on the list, dating from the citation of Col. Alexander Robert Dunn for bravery in the campaign in the Crimea October 25th, 1854. Col. Dunn was a native of Toronto.

The majority of the Canadian V.C.'s were earned during the First Great War. Four are held by veterans of the campaign in South Africa at the turn of the century, one was given a member of the King's own Royal Irish Hussars for service in quelling the Indian Mutiny in 1858, and another came to Sir Thomas Graham, 1st Battalion, the Rifle Brigade, for gallant conduct in extinguishing a fire in a railway car between Quebec and Montreal on June 6, 1866.

Printers' "Chapel"

Noah Webster says that a printing office was formerly called a chapel, George E. Freemyer writes in The Typographical Forum.

Funk and Wagnalls gives it a more elaborate description: the body of journeymen printers in a printing office, usually organized under a chairman, known in Great Britain as the father of the chapel.

From perusal of the works of the earliest typographers we are led to believe that the term may owe its derivation to the fact that works of a divine nature were the first products of a printing office.

There is another English printer, set up type, also, to make a book in the platform floor and an air space Westminster Abbey in the year 1476.

At this point we wish to discourage the belief that the term "chapel" was applied exclusively to union printing offices—the truth of the matter is that there were no unions in those bygone days. Every shop was called a chapel, the oldest member of the chapel was the "father," or chairman.

For the good government of the chapel there was a book of bylaws, and the penalty for a breach of any of the laws was called a solace.

The judges of these solaces depended upon the plurality of votes in the chapel, it being asserted that the chapel could not be in error.

Air Maps

The coming age of flight calls for new navigation methods declares Dr. Samuel Herrick, assistant professor of astronomy on the Los Angeles campus of the University of California. Most airplane navigators are now taught to use maps constructed on the old Mercator projection, which distorts land masses toward the polar regions. Mercator charts are objectionable because radio bearings cannot be drawn on them as straight lines. Besides, their scale of distance is not uniform. Dr. Herrick has recently completed a series of scientific papers in which he advocates the use of the military grid system superimposed on a map constructed on a conic projection, which maintains accurate scale and radio bearing direction. Such a system combines the best features of both charts. It is possible to navigate a straight line as easily as with the Mercator projection and at the same time maintain the advantages of conics in scale and radio-navigation.

A volunteer despatch rider force, composed of girls drawn from British government offices, has been specially trained to cope with emergency. They wear bottle-green battle-dress, have crash helmets and orange colored gauntlets.

The Indian Army has been increased 12 times, the Royal Indian Navy 13 times, and the Indian Air Force 10 times the pre-war strength.

GREATNESS

How great can men become? No greater than his care
For all nearby of young and old who chance his days to share.
Though gaining excellence of skill, still failure will he be
If, eyes upon the stars, he fails a neighbor's need to see;
And vain are all the selfish heights of fortune and renown
If as a father he should fail, and child of his go down.

How great can man become? Not all a master's art
Can make a gentleman of him who will not live the part.
Not all the wealth beneath his floor can make a miser kind;
The eye that sees the farthest goal to suffering may be blind;
For only they are truly great, of champions
or kings,
Who, striving to attain a dream, take time for lesser things.

How great can man become? 'Tis all a matter of his will,
For greatness true is not alone the gift of strength or skill,
And who wins fame and fortune here, but let's all else be blind
Discovers he has bought success at much to high a cost.
And since there's more on earth than wealth and fame for man to gain,
Real greatness is of heart as well as of the hand and brain.

'Living Monuments' In Form of Parks, Scholarships

Kitchener, March 8 (CP)—Following a recent post-war planning survey conducted in this area, thought is being given locally to the establishment of memorials to the fallen heroes of the present Great War.

If the opinions of municipal leaders, obtained in a general survey, are respected, Kitchener in the Twin City will be "living monuments" in the form of parks, scholarships, and the like.

The consensus of opinions is that parks, scholarships and other things created through public media would be more useful than a granite column set up on a public square.

TO CUT CHEESE RATION

London, March 8 —(CP)— Britain's cheese ration will be cut from three to two ounces weekly April 3 but the two-ounce tes ration will remain unchanged and the milk and canned goods ration will be boosted, Food Minister J. J. Llewellin has announced. The Food Minister told a press conference that the two-ounce weekly butter ration was not in danger. The two pints weekly milk ration will be boosted by a half-pint and the increase in the canned goods ration will be effected by giving 24 points a month instead of 30.

Canadian Scene A Century Ago

By J. L. G.

For a' that, an' a' that,
It's coming yet for a' that,
That Man to Man, the world o'er,
Shall brothers be for a' that.
—By Robert Burns in 1795

Lacking meteorological stations, the pioneers had to be their own weather prophets, or so we rely on the forecasts of the local Indians. Some settlers pinned their faith to Indian lore, and probably it was as wise to do so since the red men had a knack of being right. An hunter drew near the Indians went around looking for signs of nearby weather homes. These cleverly constructed houses provided a clue to the kind of season to be expected. According to the aborigines, the bull-rush foundation was built up to a varying height, depending upon the severity of cold looming over the horizon.

The muskrat built a platform well above water level of the stream or dam, which he used for the site of the winter house. He skilfully flored this platform with the bull rush as a bed, and lined the walls with smooth vegetation. He was careful, also, to make a hole in the platform floor and an air space between this and the bed and he kept an opening through the ice to enable him to climb down into his ingenious transportation and communication system in the water below.

When parties of "white-face" settlers paid visits to the encampments of their Indian brothers, they found much to interest and amuse them. Squaws, busy at their work, were fascinated by the dexterity of the squaws who ornamented clothing and articles of daily use with bead-work requiring cleverness and patience. If the squaws were busy making snowshoe lacings from deerskin, the visitors could hardly believe their eyes, for the Indians used, not knives, but fingernails, to slit the skin into the required long, narrow strips. And they did it with the greatest of ease!

Taken to Hospital By Airplane

Glace Bay, N.S., March 8 (CP)—Flown out from Bras d'Or, seriously ill with fever, Veronica Donohue was under treatment in hospital here.

An R.C.A.F. plane from the Sydney air station brought the girl here last night after an earlier flight with blood plasma had been made to the isolated community.

The plasma, dropped over the north Cape Breton village Sunday, did not prove effective, and yesterday Rev. R. M. MacDonald, Roman Catholic priest at Ingonish, asked that Miss Donohue be flown to hospital.

LAND OF HAN

China is sometimes called the Land of Han, and its inhabitants the Sons of Han.

This name arises from the famous Han or 26th dynasty that began in 206 B.C. and ended in A.D. 220 and in 206 B.C. the date when modern Chinese history commences.

The old empire disintegrated under the later rulers of the Chou Dynasty and the last of that line was deposed in 249 B.C.

Three years afterward a prince of the state or province of Ch'in and one of its greatest political geniuses of China, ascended the throne and began to weld the various states into a united empire.

He styled himself Shih Huang Ti, meaning "the first emperor." His plans, however, collapsed after his death in 210 B.C., and his feeble successor, known as the second emperor of the Ch'in dynasty, was murdered three years later.

Out of the civil strife that ensued Liu Pang of Han emerged victorious in 202 B.C. and founded the Han dynasty, which he regarded as having begun four years earlier and lasted until 220 A.D.

The period of the Hand dynasty, more than any other, was marked by the revival of letters, the introduction of Buddhism into China, and the creation of Chinese rule over Mongolia.

Chinese are sometimes popularly called Celestials.

The term Celestial was often applied to the Chinese Empire at one time and was suggested by the writings found in many of the edicts issued by the Manchu emperors—Tien Ch'ao, Heavenly Dynasty, implying that the rulers of China were divinely chosen for the task.

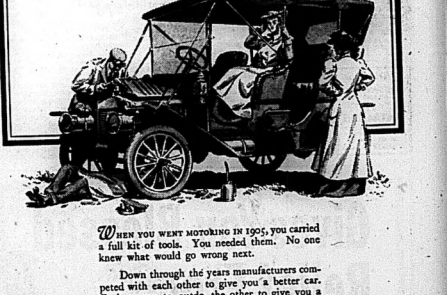
Such names as Sons of Han and Celestials for the Chinese are now obsolete.

The Chinese not only never call themselves Celestials but they resent the application of the term to their people, and consequently careful foreign writers and speakers generally have abandoned it.

There is, however, subject to the application of "celestial" to their nation or race.

For instance, in "East Wind, West Wind" Pearl Buck, who is conversant with all things Chinese, frequently employs the term. She writer: "For you will be altogether of our celestial nation, citizens of the Bright Republic, and heirs of the Middle Empire." And again: "Celestials have come to belong to our ancient and celestial race forever."

PLEASURE DRIVING...1905



WHEN YOU WENT MOTORING IN 1905, you carried a full kit of tools. You needed them. No one knew what would go wrong next.

Down through the years manufacturers competed with each other to give you a better car. Each strove to outdo the other to give you a faster, smoother, more powerful engine, stronger brakes, a more luxurious body. And each year you got a better car for your money.

Under our free way of life business competes with business to give you new and better products, more efficient service. This is true of the company that builds your car, of The Royal Bank of Canada, of the little store on the corner.

What is PRIVATE ENTERPRISE?

It is the natural desire to make your own way, as far as your ability will take you; an instinct that has brought to this continent the highest standard of life enjoyed by any people on earth. It is the spirit of democracy on the march.

The ravaged world needs the RED CROSS

AGAIN, War and his fellow horsemen—Famine, Pestilence and Death—are trampling underfoot millions of innocent victims.

From battle-scarred areas across the world, the piteous cry goes up: Help us, or we perish!

Parents herd sad destitute . . . children orphaned and starving . . . millions of the helpless, scourged by hunger and disease.

The need for food, clothing, medical supplies . . . for the merciful ministrations of the Red Cross . . . is appalling in its starkness and extent.

For these, too, YOUR Red Cross bespeaks YOUR dollars. As war intensifies, its victims multiply. The work of mercy widens. Give Generously.

Cheese Roulades

In France they are called "ROULADINS". Here they are known as "cheese and meat rolls". But anyway you serve them according to this wartime recipe they're delicious.

Make 4 small packets of plain cheese biscuits with 1 teaspoon of H.P. Sauce, 1 teaspoon of minced onion, ¼ teaspoon of salt and a sprinkle of pepper; stir these in a mixture of 2 ounces of grated cheese and enough tasty margarine to bind and work into a paste.

Buy a bottle of H.P. today and try this new economy dish for yourself. There is more "flavour" when H.P. Sauce is used. Serve H.P. Sauce with great British thick sauce—also with soup, stew, meat, meat pies, fish and fowl.

WEDDINGS

RODGERS—MAYNES

A quiet wedding was solemnized recently by Major Marsh at the Belleview Army quarters when Mavis Lorraine Maynes, eldest daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth and the late Frederick Maynes became the bride of Donald Frederick Rodgers, youngest son of Mrs. and Mrs. Murney Rodgers. The attendants were Miss Maud Reddick and Mr. Howard Baldwin.

MOSES—BRANT

Mohawk Reserve—A wedding of much local interest took place in St. Mark's Church, Hamilton at 4.30 o'clock Saturday, Feb. 26th, the rector officiating, when Miss Lillian Brant, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Brant, became the bride of Mr. Sherman Moses, Hamilton, formerly of the Reserve. The bride wore a chic model of pale blue chiffon and matching hat of pale pink chiffon. The bridesmaid was Miss Doris Brant, who was gowned in a pretty frock of pink chiffon and wearing a pale blue picture hat of similar material. Mr. Willard Thompson was groomsman. After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Brant entertained their many guests at a reception. The bride was a former teacher in the Mission School on this Reserve, and has many friends here will wish them every joy and happiness together. Mr. and Mrs. Moses will make their home in Hamilton.

New Coiffures Are Simple

Lucille Ball's new coiffure pleases advocates of both long and short hair.

By HELEN FOLLETT

SIMPLER EFFECTS in all the details of dress are looming up in the offing and basically the coiffure must conform. The scrambled hairdo is decidedly on the out and out. The rather severe high arrangement is not declining. The short crop prevails despite the fact that about every time you get a trim you are due for a permanent. You go to the hairdresser, you pay your money, you take your choice —high hairdo, low hairdo, or a between and between one. There is no standardized arrangement, as there used to be in the past, and that is all to the good. If a woman can't find a becoming mode it is her own fault.

Though fluff bangs put in an appearance now and then and the forhead that is naked and unashamed is a thing of the past, there is an inclination to pull the hair back and then look forward into a future that sorta stop the brow. Very wise. Have it that way if you want

BRIDGE ST. UNITED CHURCH W. M. S.

The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of Bridge St. United Church was held in the ladies' parlors on Friday last. Mrs. R. D. P. Davidson presided and opened the meeting. Following the committees' reports, it was announced that the Easter thank-offering meeting would be held April 26th and Miss Cleaver returned missionary would be the speaker. It was voted to hold the next regular meeting on Thursday, April 6th, instead of April 7th, which is Good Friday. The program for the afternoon was in charge of the executive, with Mrs. E. N. Baker leading the worship service, assisted by Miss Lesslie Brown. Mrs. Davidson introduced the third chapter of the Study Book, "For All of Life." The title of this chapter is "Skill and Joy in Work" and the facts of the chapter were brought out by questions and answers showing what has been accomplished by missionaries in the countries of India, Africa and China. Questions were asked by Mrs. Thomas, Mrs. Borg, Mrs. Massey and Mrs. Ackerman and answers were given by Mrs. Cronk, Mrs. Dixon, Mrs. Adams, Mrs. Hamm, Mrs. May, Mrs. Semple and Mrs. Houston.

The Experts Say

By The Canadian Press

Ottawa, March 5—(CP)—Here's a tip from Nutrition Services for the housewife: iron-rich foods help maintain the blood at the required level for ovulation. Remember that the following foods have special value for all who require or desire additional donate blood: dried fruits (figs are just as rich in iron as prunes and more plentiful in many localities); liver, kidney and heart; dark green vegetables; eggs-yolks, potatoes, whole grain bread and cereals.

VEGETABLE PLATE, always welcome, is particularly important when planning the menu for meatless days . . . the family can get the needed proteins, vitamins and minerals if sufficient variety of vegetables is served and they are cooked quickly with little water.

The Agriculture Departments Consumer Section gives these vegetable plate suggestions for rounding out winter menus:

A well-rounded vegetable plate might be: potatoes cooked in their jackets, shredded carrot strips, spinach, raw turnip sticks.

Everything goes into the oven for this one: Stuffed baked potato, beets piquant, turnips in casserole, baked squash.

Make red cabbage a feature; browned parsnips, hot red cabbage salad, raw carrot curls, hot deviled eggs.

Something raw every day; potatoes in cheese sauce, raw shredded cabbage, pickled beets.

ONION SHORTAGE is being lamented by those who like the nippy vegetable by itself or as a relish and the Prices Board says the shortage will continue until shipments from South America can get here. Victory gardeners who have onions and garlic stored in their cellars will fare best until the shortage ends, and others will find that dishes can be seasoned with other plants.

BONED STUFFED FISH: The Fisheries Department recommends this recipe for stuffed fish. Any variety of Canadian fish may be used, either sea or fresh water. The fish to be stuffed should be one of medium size, about four pounds and very fresh.

How to prepare it: The fish is first scaled (this work is made easier by adding a little salt rubbed on the hands to facilitate scaling, as it will help retain one's grasp on the fish). Remove the eyes and gills. Take off about a third of the tail without changing its shape. Slip off the fins and then the fish should be split for about two-thirds of its length on the under side. Then by bending the body and the backbone is broken near the head and tail, or it can be cut with scissors. Slip a strong sharp knife along the backbone, making the stroke on each side in turn. Then the bone may be pulled out quite easily without removing to a great extent the muscles adhering to the skin. Some small bits of the flesh may come with it and they may be added to the stuffing, which is then put in, after lemon juice and salt have been sprinkled over the inside of the fish. Bake in a moderate oven.

Stuffing: 1 cup of bread crumbs, 1 tablespoon each butter or mild fat, one-fourth cup oyster liquid, 1 cup oysters, one-half cup chopped celery, salt and pepper to taste.

GOOD MANNERS

Luncheon-Shower.

Dear Mrs. Beckman,—

1.—When a luncheon-shower is to be given in a hotel, should it be given in the main dining-room?

2.—Who would take care of the table decorations?

3.—When would the guest of honor open her gifts?

4.—Where would I, the hostess, sit, and where the honor guest?

T. A.

1.—If possible, the luncheon-shower should be given in a private dining-room of the hotel, and practically all hotels are able to offer this accommodation. You'll have much more fun and give your party more distinction if you provide a background more like a home-background.

2.—When you consult with the maitre d'hotel or whoever has charge of party-arrangements about the menu and so forth, you will find that he will, if you wish, supply the flowers you would like to have for a centerpiece. If you have more complicated table-decorations in mind, you supply these and before the luncheon, arrange them (with the aid, he can't) on the table.

3.—When a luncheon-shower is a party it is usually much more convenient to have the gifts opened after the luncheon. The hotel will want to serve the luncheon promptly, and the gifts can be opened more leisurely later.

4.—You, as hostess, would sit at the head of the table, with your guest of honor at your right.

Handkerchief-Birthday Party.

Dear Mrs. Beckman,—

Will you please settle the following disagreement for me and a group of my friends?

A friend sent invitations to about eight of her friends to a "Handkerchief Birthday party", for a very close friend of hers. The guest of honor had met the guests through the hostess at various times, but she had not formed close ties with any of these people. At the party held before the guess's gift, the hostess presented the guest of honor with an embroidered gown. Do you thing this was in good taste? Some of my friends considered it bad taste. The hostess gave many excuses for giving this gift at the party, such as she would not be able to see the guest of honor at any other time, and so forth. The hostess asked me what I thought about her giving the gift at the party, I said I believed she should have given a gift like the others brought and should have delivered the more elaborate gift before the party.

B. D.

I agree with your point of view. Since the hostess had announced that the party was to be a "handkerchief birthday party", she should have abided by her own announcement and should also have given a handkerchief at the party, and sent the more ornamental gift at another time. This was particularly true, I think, since the hostess had asked her friends to bring a gift to a party for a guest of honor they did not know very well.

Conversation Tip.

In conversation: If you show a kindly interest in others, a generous wish to please them, and a friendly willingness to take your share in the give-and-take of the conversation, you'll do all right with even a difficult social ally, gracefully useful in our daily contacts. It lends lightly on a party . . . but doesn't settle down on it.

The Marry-Go-Round

Springtime and Wartime

Don't imagine that a young man's fancy is the only one that turns to love in spring. A new heart-interest is as necessary to the average girl, beginning about Valentine's Day, as a new hat or a fresh permanent.

A Man's "Fervor"

He said, "Goodbye forever!"
With great disdain,
And vowed that he would never
Come back again.

The girl made no endeavor
To have him stay
He said "Goodbye, forever!" . . .
And went away.

Love's path is full of dangers,
Of monsters and of bleak;
And they were utter strangers
For almost one WEEK!

A man has no "marriage problem" nowadays. It is just a choice between being a rich career-girl's darling, a home-girl's provider and a working girl's partner.

Love has hit the toboggan when a man's kisses cease to be spontaneous and unexpected—and become just automatic, like shifting the gears or winding his watch. Hum!

A kiss may last only many seconds. But the memory of it if you don't marry him — and the consequences, if you do—may last thirty years. And there is the non-appearance of the baro, who can look his wife in the eyeat breakfast and tell her that he isn't coming home for lunch—instead of waiting until he gets to the office and telephoning her.

Love is like diamonds. Once you have had the real thing, the imitations not only don't appeal to you any more—they don't even fool you.

Springtime and wartime — and there are falling in love once more: not just teetering on the brink of it, waiting for some enterprising girl to come along and shove 'em in!

Badge of Honour

In 1943—109,313 Certificates for First Aid and Home Nursing were awarded jointly by the St. John Ambulance Association and the Canadian Red Cross Society.

These certificates are indeed "Badges of Honour". To the recipient they represent many hours of hard study and intensive training; they are symbols of good citizenship and sound practical knowledge.

These certificates are also symbols of the unflagging efforts of the Order of St. John to serve humanity. For it is through the St. John Ambulance Association, controlled by the Order that the public may secure instruction in First Aid and in the elementary principles and practice of Home Nursing and of hygiene and sanitation.

That hundreds of thousands of Canadians have won the St. John Ambulance Certificate is a credit to their fine spirit; the Order of St. John is proud of the part it plays in helping these men and women acquire the knowledge and training which stands back of these "Badges of Honour".

FASHION FLASHES

BIG AND SPLASHY prints are in great demand. Huge floral cabbage roses with trailing green stems and foliage makes a beautiful full foil for a black silk crepe frock made with jewelled buttons and soft bow-tied neckline.

NO MATTER how small or how large, the tricorne is always pretty. A tiny tricorne with a pert-open crown, fashioned of green and white checked taffeta, and edged bordered with tiny jet beads, is one of the hits of the new Spring hats, for suit or frock.

LOOK TO THE BORDER for trimming interest this year. Heavy braid in fine Spring and Summer is a charming little frock of white cotton and rayon marked by deep scooped-out U neckline, ruffle edged, with ruffles on the short sleeves. At the hem is a border of simply enormous red strawberries with bright green hulls.

INTRICATE DETAIL marks the neckline of some of the new collarless models. Example: A Spring model in bright red woolen has novelty six sided diamond shaped decorative effect to simulate a collar and notched revers. Diamond is outlined down to the slip pockets.

Long Distance Calls Increase In Past Year

Some 306,851 out-of-town telephone calls were passed by Belleville in 1943, as compared with 268,564 in 1942, according to the C. O. W. Procter, manager of the Bell Telephone Company here.

"The sharpest rise in the volume of long-distance calling as a result of the war indicates the importance of urging the public not to telephone out of town unless it is absolutely essential and then to try to place the call at other than the busy hours at mid-morning, mid-afternoon, and in the early evening", Mr. Procter pointed out.

Local calling, on the other hand, shows a slight decrease. Last year, Belleville subscribers made 7,994,-000 telephone calls, or an average of 24,126 every day. In 1943, 8,206,-460 calls were put through, or 25,866 on the average day. "This decrease", Mr. Procter commented, "doubtless marks the effect of the government order banning telephone orders for goods costing less than a dollar, and of the telephone company's request that users make sure of the number by consulting the directory before placing calls to help reduce unnecessary calls to wrong numbers".

The Belleville figures follow the trend shown throughout the Bell Telephone system in Ontario and Quebec. During the past five years, the number of inter-city calls handled by the company has nearly doubled, from 17,000 average daily connections in 1938 to 30,000 a day during 1943.

An increase of 1,946 telephone installations have been recorded in the Belleville district since 1940. Deseronto leading with a rise from 77 telephones in 1940 to 104 in 1943. Picton records an increase of 51 per cent and Trenton 36 per cent since 1940. There are at present 4,559 telephones in the city as against 3,849 in 1940. A net gain of 415 was registered for 1941, 191 for 1942, and a considerable drop to 72 for 1943. The total number of telephones in the district is 11,344, this includes Belleville, Brighton, Campbellford, Deseronto, Madoc, Marmora, Napanee, Picton, Stirling, Trenton, Tweed and Wellington. Belleville's 1940-43 increase is 18 per cent.

Father's Question 'Stuns' Daughter

Kitchener, March 8—(CP)—Cpl. Stith Potts was among the guard of honor when her father, Maj.-Gen. A. A. Potts, inspected the No. 3 C.W.A.C. training centre here. He asked: "Do you like the army?" She answered emphatically, "Yes, sir!" Then he asked: "Better than home?" Cpl. Potts said later, "I was stunned." But her father kept a straight face by down the line before she could think of an answer.

Japs No Match For Fiji Islanders

By FRED HAMPTON
(AP War Correspondent)

Bougainville, Solomon Islands, March 4 —(Delayed)— The score now stands at 125 Japanese killed to 10 Fijians killed and two wounded.

That was the way Lt.-Gen. Millard F. Harmon, commander of army forces in the South Pacific, figured today in the presence of Fiji Islanders in the fight to drive the Japanese off Bougainville Island.

The stealth and courage of the Fiji soldiers in becoming something of a legend in Bougainville's dense jungles.

Their most sensational action involved a platoon commanded by 2nd. Lieut. Bruce Bent of Tiraru, New Zealand.

The patrol's vanguard encountered sniper fire from trees so the Fijians deployed and silenced the enemy. Their fire aroused Japanese in a nearby village who tried to escape, but were caught in the patrol's crossfire. Bent ordered the warriors to cease fire and he led. Presently, the Japanese thought the attackers had retired and cautiously returned to the village, whereupon the Fijians opened up again and wiped out practically the entire force.

Pte. Joiame Balu, a Fijian schoolboy warrior, crept into the village for closest grenades into a hut believed to have been the Japanese headquarters.

On another occasion, a native lieutenant, named for his rank's prowess, crept within 25 feet of a Japanese machine-gun position and watched the enemy camp for 40 minutes. When he turned to leave, he discovered his entire platoon had followed and were watching. They withdrew, laid attack plans and returned to wipe out 26 Japs who were doing their laundry.

Recently the Fijians served a small airport out of the jungle for their Cub spotter planes which keep the Fiji outposts on the east coast of Bougainville informed of enemy movements.

The Fijian battalion now is commanded by Maj. Geofrey T. Upton, Cambridge University graduate and former London Daily Telegraph journalist.

Further "Adjustments" In Newsprint Prices Under Consideration

Ottawa, March 8—(CP)—Further "adjustments may have to be made" in newsprint prices, a Prices Board official said here yesterday. He said newsprint manufacturers were seriously affected by rising costs of pulpwood production as well as by increasing unit overhead costs in 15 mills with curtailed newsprint production.

He revealed that a $14 a ton increase had been granted in March, 1943, and a similar increase is now effective Sept. 1, 1943.

He added: "Both these increases were authorized after full consultations with the United States Office of Price Administration which authorized similar price increases in the United States. Increases in them was considered by the Board to be sufficient to offset the total increase in costs and further adjustments may have to be made."

CONFERENCE CALLED

Toronto, March 8—(CP)—Health Minister Dr. R. F. Vivian, in a statement issued to the press said his department has called a conference of medical specialists, and administrators in the field of venereal disease control from all parts of the province as one step toward control of this scourge. First session of the conference was held yesterday and today at the University of Toronto and discussed methods of treatment.

Colorimeter Will Be Used to Grade Maple Syrup

London, Ont., March 7 (CP) Announcement that the Wartime Prices and Trade Board has made maple syrup will be sold on the grade basis, and that a device to be known as the colorimeter" approved by the Dominion government or Agriculture—has aroused considerable interest in the district. Farmers and consumers alike as to the nature of the gadget.

One has only to visit the office of the county agricultural office here, writing letters from maple syrup producers of their maple syrup. Those who have sold their pure sugar dust graded, and to mark the container accordingly, may lose as much as a dollar a gallon.

The colorimeter was perfected in Quebec. It consists of a wooden frame, much like a test tube holder, through which a light is projected, but only two or three inches in depth.

In the frame are four holes, through which are placed four tube-capped bottles. The first one is empty. The second contains a standard of pure maple syrup, after which, according to W.P.T.B. regulations, it is rated as No. 1 grade.

The third slot holds a bottle of syrup, the colorimeter price of which is set at $2.26. In the fourth is a sample of "standard light" or cheaper graded variety, which will retail at $2 per gallon.

The sample brought in by the producer is placed in the empty container, and graded according to which of the other three it most closely resembles.

Bracken Praises Correspondents

London, March 7, (CP)—Brendan Bracken, minister of Information, today praised the authenticity of front line news dispatches and the courage of the men who write them and said they keep the public in "far closer in touch with the troops than the war office".

"A dispatch from a war correspondent from the battlefront is a hundred times more valuable than all the handouts of the Ministry of Information or the War Office about campaigns", he told the Press Club. "The stuff from the field of battle bears the mark of truth".

The British government and public owe the correspondents a very great debt, he said, adding:—"Correspondents take even greater risks than soldiers because all they have is a pen or a camera".

Flow of Welsh Coal Dwindles

London, March 8—(CP)—The flow of coal from Welsh mines on which British war industries are largely dependent dwindled to a trickle today as wage strike spread steadily throughout the area and there were indications that production might be halted entirely by nightfall.

Best estimates said 60,000 or 70,000 out of 100,000 miners in the South Wales field walked out.

With the situation hourly growing worse, Britain looked hopefully to a meeting of owners and miners in London this afternoon under the chairmanship of Fuel Minister Evelyn Lloyd George to produce some solution for the labor problem, on which the miners say needs a general overhauling.

In the Rhondda valley, a highly productive area, was tied up by the strike and almost 7,000 men were idle in the Aberdare valley, where every pit was closed.

Included in the pits which closed yesterday was the Aegergurl Mine, where word from Fuel Minister Jack at the pithead for 40 consecutive hours in recognition of its quota-exceeding record during that period.

Gov't Invited Quebec Conference Prime Minister Says

Ottawa, March 8, (CP) —Prime Minister Mackenzie King, answering a question in the Commons yesterday, said the Quebec Conference was held at Quebec on the invitation of the Canadian Government.

Maxime Raymond, leader of the Bloc Populaire Party, asked Mr. King: "Out of the sums expended by the Canadian Government for the holding of such a conference, what amount was paid for liquor to the Quebec Liquor Commission?"

Mr. King's answer was: "The representatives attending the historic conference were the guests of Canada. It is not the practice of countries which have the honor of entertaining heads of states and distinguished representatives of other nations to make public such details".

MARKHAM JUNIORS WIN

Toronto, March 8 —(CP)— A bigger, faster and more experienced Markham junior team defeated Victory Aircraft 10-5 last night at Ravina Gardens, eliminating the Toronto representatives from the junior "B" playoffs 16-13 on the round knockout basis. Up to the first game on ice 8-7.

In netting 10 goals, the visitors gave a fine display of unselfish passing in contrast to that of the Aircrafters, who, time and again refused to pass to mates in scoring position.

900 Warships In U. S. Navy

Washington, March 7, (AP)— Navy Secretary Frank Knox said today that the United States fleet has grown in every respect and now consists of more than 900 warships. "This doesn't include any small craft", he added at a navy conference.

Turning to the subject of German U-boats, Knox quoted an announcement in London that less than one ship for each 1,000 sailing Atlantic convoys was lost in the months activity in the last half of 1943. He warned, however, that the war isn't over. The Germans have a tremendous number of submarines in reserve and at any time may decide on a fresh foray."

Find Cosmetics in Grave Of Woman Buried In 650 A.D.

Kingsworthy, Hampshire, March 8—(CP)—Many lovely women long to be caught with her rouge off—not even in the life after death. She lived sometime around 650 A. D., and when she died she was buried near here with the cosmetics beside her.

Just recently her grave was opened by archaeologists and the discoverers found a small skeleton a clay utensil, stained with coloring, which they described as a "make-up pot."

They said it was their belief it had held cosmetics and was placed in the grave "so the owner could make herself more presentable in the place to which she was going."

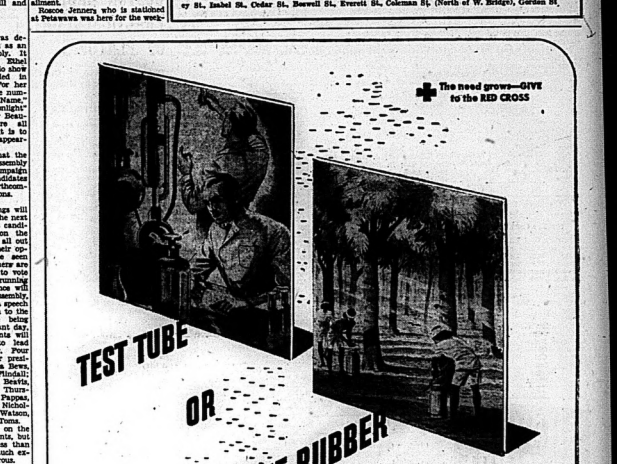
The need grows—GIVE to the RED CROSS



IT'S TECHNIQUE THAT COUNTS!

Today, it's true that all leading tire makers use synthetic rubber from the same source.

It is also true that before the war they all used the same natural rubber. Yet . . . there existed then, as today, a wide difference in tire quality.

Obviously, it takes more than rubber to build a tire. It takes steel, cotton, carbon black and compounding. Yes, and it takes still more to make a great tire.

It takes engineering to figure stresses, strains and proper balance. It takes chemistry to properly blend ingredients. It takes skill and experience to build flawlessly. Test tube or tree rubber . . . it's technique that counts.

These are the things that have made Goodyear "The greatest name in rubber" . . . the factors that give you the plus in Goodyear Tires.

As always, your best assurance of quality is this fact, true for 28 successive years . . . "More People Ride on Goodyear Tires Than On Any Other Kind."

WARNING: The rubber situation is still critical. Synthetic rubber tires are now being produced, but they are for the armed services and essential civilian vehicles only. Your needs will be taken care of just as soon as humanly possible.

As your next tires probably will be made of synthetic, the following information is important to you. Synthetic rubber tires are comparatively new, they do not yet match natural rubber tires in all-around performance. The continuing laboratory and road-testing work will, undoubtedly, hasten improvements.

In the meantime, however, synthetic rubber tires will meet present needs and see us through the emergency. GUIDE is exercised AT ALL TIMES. Driving at reduced speeds (35 M.P.H. or under), no overloading, accurate inflation, regular rotation (switching tires from one wheel to another), immediate attention to tire damage and frequent inspection by a Goodyear Dealer will enable you to get satisfactory service from synthetic rubber tires.

Compare your shoulders with your face. Isn't it true they look years younger? Yes, yes, shoulders may smooth, soft, slender—while faces have pores clogged with makeup, unable to breathe for hours at a time. And when pores can't breathe, skin loses fullness and prematurely aged. But this needn't happen to complexion. Palmolive can help your complexion young.

Look younger in 14 days! Each time you wash, with a face cloth massage Palmolive's lather into your skin for extra full minutes. Then, a quick rinse and pat dry! It's the second Palmolive "massage"—that is just 14 seconds—that gives your complexion the classic smoothness of shoulder skin.

Jim Bagby and Gus Mancuso Only Hold-Outs in Majors

(By The Canadian Press)

As the Major League baseball clubs, keen on the brink of spring training as Associated Press survey reveals that virtually the only known hold-outs as the result of the Cleveland Indians and Detroit Tigers Gus Mancuso of the New York Giants.

Washington and Pittsburgh are the only teams with complete squads so far, but none of the remaining outfits anticipate any trouble, signing its men—except Bagby and Mancuso.

Bagby seems determined not to play another season, under Manager Lou Boudreau, and that little problem may be solved any day now because only a physical examination stands between Bagby and the maritime service, while Boudreau himself is 1-A in the draft.

Mancuso said at Houston, Texas, last night that he won't report for spring training with the Giants unless he gets a little more than he's offered better terms. The 36-year-old Mancuso has been a Major League catcher since 1930, and figures he should get the same salary as Bill Dickey, who he says his contract has been slashed by $1,500.

KINGSTON AIR CADETS DEFEAT LOCALS BY 5-1

Bellesville Scored the First Goal of the Game but After Held in Check.

BANQUET HELD

Kingston Air Cadets defeated the Bellesville Juniors 5 to 1 in an exhibition hockey game played at the Items Arena on Tuesday night. Annually these two groups of Canada's hockey fans gather for the future meet in friendly sports competition and although the Kingston City Air Cadets have managed to win the majority or decisions in the various sports, the Bellesville men concluded is to create the true Canadian sportsmanship into the minds of growing Canadians, something the heads of the various Air Cadet groups, throughout Eastern Ontario in particular, are souring to encourage. It was also presented in the commendable spirit of clean sportsmanship in the game.

Bellesville scored first, when Kiley Ross Hurst, in the Kingston Net, for the only goal registered in the initial period. However, the Kingston men soon showed better combination play and were rewarded with three goals. Ross Hurst, scored from Anderson early in the second period and then Bailey and Anderson visitors in the lead on a pass from Murray.

Immediately Murray was the chief goal-getter for Kingston, scoring in the last period on the strength of solo efforts, while Shepherd rammed home the last goal on Limestone City "Kaydets" scored three times in the final period, but the period goal was the only Bellesville count. The game was clean with only a few minor penalties being called by Referee "Barney" Smith.

Kingston Air Cadets, officials and officers of both corps were entertained at the Y.M.C.A. where F/O. D. C. Boyd, officer commanding the Juniors, and Flight Lieut. Ed Jeffers, head of the Kingston corps, acted as joint chairmen. The banquet was ably cooked by Herb Burley with Pvt. Bill Wilson, assistant.

The Kingston Air Cadets, No. 58, are sponsored by the Kingston Military Club, while the Bellesville Air Cadets, No. 133, are sponsored by the Bellesville Rotary Club. A return game is being considered.

The lineups:

Kingston Air Cadets: Goal, Hunt; defence, Murray and Harrison; centre, Potts; wings, Devonshire and Anderson; subs, Murray, Shepherd, Attwood, Lee, Good and Shaw.

Bellesville Air Cadets: Goal, Pratt; defence, Bailey and Cook; centre, MacDonald; wings, Strahan and Christie; subs, Ross Hurst, Gardiner, McCaw, Kiles, Button and Gibson.

PROVIDENCE REDS GAIN 10TH WIN

(By The Canadian Press)

The American Hockey League's cellar-dwelling Providence Reds gained their 10th victory of the season last night when they trounced Buffalo Bisons 8-4 after scoring four goals in the first five minutes of play.

Buffalo stood a good opportunity of tieing Hershey Bears at the top of the Eastern Division section in last night's game but the loss crimped their chances.

It was Reds' first victory over Bisons this season.

Harold Cooper paced Reds' attack with three goals—one in each period. Lloyd Bombell, John Gagnon, Bill Whittet, Bill Stewart, and Roland Forget with two were other Providence scorers.

Pete Horeck, Larry Thibeault, Bob Wallace, and Roger Leger scored for Bisons.

Hockey's Big Seven

(By The Canadian Press)

Detroit's Carl Liscombe got four assists last night when Red Wings trounced Boston Bruins 8-4, to put himself in third position in the National Hockey League's high-scoring list. Herb Cain, Boston, drew one assist to make a total of 77 points—three more than Chicago's Doug Bentley, who occupied second place.

BOSTON BRUINS PRACTICALLY OUT OF PLAYOFFS

Detroit Red Wings Clinch Second Place by Defeating Bruins 8 to 4

ROSS DIRECTS TEAM

(By The Canadian Press)

Nothing but a major form upheaval will enable Boston Bruins to reach the Stanley Cup eliminations.

Unable to win against any team but New York Rangers in recent weeks, Bruins lost what may be their last chance to gain ground last night when they dropped an 8-4 decision to Detroit Red Wings.

The loss left Bruins five points behind Toronto Maple Leafs, who now hold fourth place in the league's last qualifying berth. Bruins must play six games to Toronto's four in their remaining four games while Leafs go pointless to oust the Boston team.

Manager Art Ross, back on the Boston bench for the first time in more than a month, used four defencemen the first time this season in an effort to check the Wings, but gold sideline general didn't bother the champions. They outscored Bruins by two goals in the first period, by four in the last two with Murray Armstrong and Don Grosso each scoring twice.

Adian Brown, Syd Howe, Cully Simon and Grosso also scored for Detroit. Pat Egan grabbed a pair for Boston with Cowley and Dit Clapper getting the other scores for the Bruins. One disallowed goal brought the crowd of 7,200.

Victory ceremonies clinched second place for Detroit.

Baseball Roundup

New York, March 8 —(AP)—With the start of spring training only a week away baseball activity has picked up everywhere.

Yesterday, for instance, came news that Bob Klinger, right handed pitcher for Toronto Maple Leafs and Dick Bartell, veteran shortstop of New York Giants, had passed their pre-induction physical examinations while Joe Gordon, star second baseman of the Hollywood Stars of Pacific Coast League and Cleveland Indians, was signed by Manager Lou Boudreau of the Indians.

On the other hand Dixie Walker, star outfielder for Brooklyn Dodgers, was rejected for military service because of an old shoulder and elbow injury.

Here are the latest developments:—

National League

Brooklyn — In addition to Dixie Walker's rejection, Manager Leo Durocher learned that Lt/g. Dodrigues Olmo, star rookie outfielder, plans to leave San Juan, Puerto Rico, March 10 to come to New York and confer with Rickey over 1944 salary.

Philadelphia — Robert R. M. Carpenter, president of the club named Bibie Jaye, ordered to report for army duty March 17.

New York — After learning Bartell expects to be assigned to Navy, Giants' head Harry Prothonotary pitcher, will report to Lakewood, N.J., camp to complete contract negotiations. At Houston, Tex., however, veteran catcher Gus Mancuso said he would not report "unless offered better terms."

Pittsburgh — In addition to Klinger, Pirates learned catcher Bill Baker has been inducted in Navy. Pitcher Xavier Rescigno - signed contract, however, and outfielder Johnny Barrett sent word from Lawrence, Mass., he had been classified 4-F.

American League

New York — With Joe Gordon slated for his physical examination next week, Yankees received word from Pittsburgh that catcher Bob Collins, catcher for the Yanks' Kansas City farm last year, may stay at work in steel mill now.

Washington — Hillis Layne, infielder, sent in signed contract from his Oklahoma home.

Chicago — Bob Okrie, 19-year-old sandlot outfielder, signed with White Sox. He lives in Detroit and is 6-4-7.

Toronto, March 8 —(CP)— Customary closing surge of Chicago's high-calibre offensive unit from National Hockey League's scoring race is an awesome spectacle. Doug Bentley did it last year, coming from behind to win the crown by one point over Boston Bill Cowley with a record-equalling 72. That was Bentley's second try to repeat. While the leader, Herb Cain of Boston, collected only five points in seven games, Bentley accumulated 13 in the last six games to vault into a contending position only two points off the pace.

Chicago's other two forehemen, Clint Smith and Bill Mosienko, are also hot. In their last six games Smith collected 15 points and Mosienko 11 while they are tied only three points behind Bentley with 66 apiece.

Consistent with the Bentley upsurge last season and this has been the fade-out by Toronto's Lorne Carr. On Jan. 24, 1942, Carr led the league with 46 points by 31 games. At the game time Bentley was 10th with 28 points. Lorne finished the year with only 60 points, 13 behind Bentley.

On Jan. 24 this year Carr is with 54 points for 33 games while basketballer Bentley was sixth with 43. In his last 13 games Carr has collected only four points, and, with only four games remaining has practically no chance of finishing on top.

Incidentally:

Doug Bentley has three brothers playing in top-flight company—Reginald with New Westminster Lodestars, R.C. champions, Reg with Trail Smoke Eaters and Max with Calgary Army. Alf (Vancouver Sun) Cottrell quips: "Next school I'm in I'll pass the other guy which didn't have a Bentley playing on it."

Across Canada:

Orange Judd, where Vancouver wrestling shows have been held since 1936, has been taken over by Wartime Housing for conversion into a hotel. Judd, at the corner of Hastings Street and Gore Avenue, was chosen for wrestling shows by Jack Whelan, former British Empire heavyweight champion now chairman of the Vancouver wrestling commission . . . Winderer Kennedy Collegiate which produced two of Canada's greatest football stars, Tony Golab and Joe Krol, has another on its list of sports greats. He is Bob Krol, a cousin of Joe and an outstanding basketballer.

Looking of the International Hockey Hall of Fame in the Canadian National Exhibition, Stanley Simmons suggesting the Kingston Army-Navy play the Montreal's Navy "Bombers" an exhibition game here Saturday night. Now the Army-Navy play the pick of hockey talent and former N.H.L. stars in the Kingston senior O.H.A. race when forced out of competition by the many Headquarters Staff ruling out of Ottawa last January. They boast of such stars as Red Randall, Bas Beaton, Gus Marker, Buck Jones, Jack Church, Vic Grigg (Maple Leafs), Jim Cupcher, Chuck Corrigan and others. As a matter of fact the Army-Provinces trotted out 13 former N.H.L. stars when they beat the Navy 12 to 7 in their last night. However, the big fly in the ointment was the suggestion from Kingston that Mr. Burrows assists the Limestone City senior O.H.A. entry against them as "play the Bombers and Pliers here. A goodly percentage guarantee will have to be received considerations for such a game.

Tree Sportsmanship

Another touch of Canadian sportsmanship was exemplified at the Ithuna Arena last Saturday night when basketball teams representing the Kingston and Belleville Air Cadet groups played their annual exhibition game. The fact Kingston won 5 to 1 didn't make much difference, although naturally the local kids would have preferred to have won. However, the spirit of Canadian sportsmanship, which the trend to be moderating in this war into these youthful minds, is present in the kids of the future. No undue roughness was seen, although the kids displayed a standard of basketball in the game and played the game for the game's sake.

F./L. Jack Wilson, training manager of the local Air Cadet team, and Flight Lieut. Ed Jeffers, head of Air Cadet hockey league taking in much of the Eastern Ontario terri-tory.

Remember When—

Howie Morenz, numbered among the all-time hockey greats, died of a heart attack in a Montreal hospital room where he was carried in his 14th National Hockey League year, the 35-year-old Montreal Canadiens' star having played a great comeback, cut short January 28th, 1937, when he suffered a broken leg in a game at Montreal. His hockey career was one of the most colorful in the annals of the N.H.L.

Italian Managers

The Pacific Coast League has a host of players of Italian descent—the DiMaggios, Tony Lazzeri, Ernie Orsatti, Gene Mauch, Don Dallesandro, Frank Crosetti, Dario Lodigiani, Dixie Walker, Frankie Gravagetto and Ernie Lombardi, to name a few—but only Gilmore Dobbs, Oakland catcher never had a pilot of that nationality.

Gilmore Dobbs who took over at San Diego late last summer and is now the Padres' manager, Lombardi and Dolph Camilli, who will pilot the Oakland Acorns, will be playing skippers the coming season.

As He Closes Deal Learns House Burned, Seller Refunds Money

Mr. and Mrs. Pelletier came here from Campbellton, 74 miles away, for the birth of their ninth child, while Mr. Pelletier looked for a home he had bargained decided to buy the house of Joseph Lee. He is Mrs. Longley.

He had just closed the deal with the owner here, and made a down payment, when he received a long distance call saying the house had burned down and that the eight children were left with no place to shelter by neighbors.

There was a short listing for the Pelletiers. When the original owner of the house heard what had been paid, he tore up the purchase agreement and refunded the down payment.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 322

By SAM GORDON

The Syllabus

Sit on a tack and you will temporarily forget your headache. By the same token, a thorough system of bidding keeps bridge players from realizing how poorly they play the cards.

Horse Sense bidding is so much easier, it gives you more time for the play department. And its method of teaching how to play one hand is quick and efficient. Let's dabble a little in it.

Most players learn to play the cards without any basic training. They follow instinct and haphazard methods. Until they become expert, they flounder through a deal like a fish with a wounded tail.

Follow the simple routine I show you for the play of any deal. The result will soon astonish you. Within a short time you will know what good players learn through years of experience.

If you are an expert player already, don't turn up your nose at these routine methods. All of them are what you, yourself, follow up without always knowing why.

Park yourself in the south seat of this pair of hands:

	SOUTH
	♠A K 6 3
	♥A K 6 3
	♦6 5 4 3
	♣A 6 3
♠ 10 9 8 7 2	NORTH
♥ Q 10 9 7 2	♠Q 5 4
♦ K 7 2	♥J 8 5
♣ 10 7 2	♦A Q J 10 9
	♣K Q 5

You are the declarer at a small slam in trumps. Assume that the opening lead from west is the spade five. When that lead is made, your partner's dummy—hand is spread face up on the table.

Stop! Don't you dare play a spade from the dummy. First, see that the dummy suits are re-arranged so they are opposite the same suits in your own hand. The better to study their joint texture.

Then, sit on your hands, if necessary, until you have studied the combined cards in each suit. Determine what you will be afraid of in each suit separately.

Refuse to be hurried. Do it deliberately; and slowly, if necessary. Then, look for a plan or play that looks, as if it can help you make the contract. Any plan is better than none.

AT THE McCARTHY

"The Strange Death of Adolph Hitler"

Hollywood ingenuity will never cease to amaze. William Trenk, Austrian story and humorist who gave Adolph Hitler and Paul Joseph Goebbels satirical spankings and made enough visits to concentration camps for so doing. While making his most recent movie at Universal City, in California, Trenk rubbed his eyes in astonishment. What he saw was the Vienna airport from which he made his daring escape from the Nazis.

It was an exact replica of Aspen Field, located near Vienna. The movie counterpart is the background for scenes in "The Strange Death of Adolph Hitler" daring dramatic thriller now at the McCarthy Theatre.

Trenk is featured in the picture as a Gestapo aide to Der Fuehrer. The Aspen airport is the one from which Trenk in real life made his escape from Austria after he bribed his way out of the concentration camps.

Trenk made his successful escape from the Gestapo in his real career when a friend obtained for him fake Nazi papers containing the personal seal of Adolph Hitler. With him and assisting in his escape was Harold Ramond, now a film player in Hollywood.

Appearing with Trenk in "The Strange Death of Adolph Hitler" are Ludwig Donath, Gale Sondergaard, George Dolenz, Fritz Kortner and Ludwig Stossel.

The second feature attraction on the program is "Invitation to Happiness," the grandest love story that has ever reached the screen starring Irene Dunne, Fred MacMurray and Charlie Ruggles.

The latest edition of the British Associated News rounds out an excellent program.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Ship Ahoy"
(Musical Comedy.)

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer reflects America's jive jitters by starring Tommy Dorsey and his band with Eleanor Powell and Red Skelton in "Ship Ahoy", musical comedy opening at the Capitol Theatre next.

The band leader, who arrived in Hollywood for the musical after an extensive cross-country tour, estimated an increased interest of about 95 per cent over his tour of the years. According to Dorsey, jive, jitterbug and swing have gone on an upward swing during the past six months.

Six Tuning Tunes

"Ship Ahoy" provides the band with six numbers, among them "I'll Take Tallulah", "Poor You", "Last Call for Love", and "Moonlight Bay", in which both Frank Sinatra, soloist, and the Pied Pipers are featured.

Miss Powell is seen in four elaborate production numbers, assisted by twenty-seven of Hollywood's most glamorous showgirls. Red Skelton, in the role of a hypochondriac mystery writer, plays the male romantic lead. More fun-making is contributed by Bert Lahr and Virginia O'Brien, with William Post, Jr., following his screen debut in "Mr. and Mrs. North", as "the G-Man."

It was up to Director Eddie Buzzell to untangle the music, dances and laughs from the story plot which concerns a group of foreign agents attempting to land a magnetic mine in Puerto Rico.

"Shine On, City Raiders"

The added western stars Russell Hayden in his latest western "Silver City Raiders", opening next at the Capitol as the added action hit. He rides, he shoots, he thrills you, as excitement mounts to a high in Russell's best and fastest picture.

A colored cartoon and the serial "Secret Service in Darkest Africa" complete the grand double bill.

AT THE BELLE — William Bendix, Preston Foster, Lloyd Nolan are featured in the imposing cast in 20th Century-Fox's picturization of Richard Tregaskis' "Guadalcanal Diary", a picture about men that has captured every man's heart.

AT THE BELLE

"Guadalcanal Diary"

Victory!

That is a word, is the keynote of "Guadalcanal Diary" 20th Century-Fox's picturization of Richard Tregaskis' best-selling book, which comes today to the screen of the Belle Theatre as "Guadalcanal Diary" is the film story of America's opening offensive against Japan — when they first swallowed defeat and we first learned victory.

Here indeed is the picture we've all been waiting for—the story of U.S. Marines in action, thumbing their noses at desperate odds, wrecking the Japs' conquerors' bubble...yes, and dreaming of dames during the intervals of jungle warfare.

20th Century-Fox has faithfully followed in line and detail Tregaskis' sensational best-seller. It has selected the cream of the film characters to an outstanding cast headed by Preston Foster, Lloyd Nolan, William Bendix, Richard Conte, Anthony Quinn, and including Richard Jaeckel, Roy Roberts, Minor Watson, Ralph Byrd, Lionel Stander, Miantae Gray and Reed Hadley. With his inspired direction of the stirring film, Lewis Seiler has cut a new niche for himself among Hollywood's directorial aristocrats. With his inspired direction of the stirring film, Lewis Seiler has cut a new niche for himself among Hollywood's directorial aristocrats. Pay has given the film a lavish production.

In outline, "Guadalcanal Diary" is the saga of the campaign against the Nips—of the day, several days, several weeks and months that marked the first land offensive by the Yanks against the Japs. But most of all, it is the story of the men behind the guns—heroes all, and all great in their victory.

A Swell Featurette

Three swell featurettes have been assembled for exhibition on the same program including the Canadian News of the day, several famed screen and radio stars in "Stars Entertain At War", a timely and thoroughly entertaining multiple-reel novelty and "Patriotic Poochie," a funny Terrytoon color cartoon.

LONDON LETTER

By DOUG HOW
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, March 8. (CP) — The city that had hoped to forget the terrors of assault, from the air, found itself suddenly with new flames and new fears.

The guns that had sounded so strong when the enemy seemed so weak now vomited their hellfire and still the foe came through to spew his deadly destruction.

The city that had so much to remember wondered if it would find new memories in the nights ot was that lurked ahead.

London wondered as night built upon silent winter night whether the Germans would attempt another blitz and whether the guns and rockets and lights and nightfighters could stop them if they tried.

Like a fighter out of trim, London waited no more of war in its vicious, modern entirety. Dour, Cockaigne, keeper of the inner confidence of those who have learned the hard way, she was sure of her strength and her courage but she looked with no anticipation on the possibilities of the year.

And yet it seemed to be coming, flagging, blatant but still an instant blits, at first. But London wondered what was to follow.

You wondered, yourself, what lay beyond as you stood there in the darkness in the fifth-story room of your friends flat, the curtains pulled back, waiting for the sound to the alert that had already sounded.

For minutes, the silence was a sombre, possessive thing. The city lay below, awaiting the first savage act of conflict.

Then it came, out beyond the east end, and the grey of this moody night was lifted and torn by the guns aought into prey.

The skies became a battleground of death that went up and death that came down, of flares that hung suspended and taunted the tracers that beat a labored course to their direction.

The guns barked and roared their surly defiance. The planes came low in defiance of their own. The shelters gathered to themselves more and more people.

Two blocks from your window a roof gave birth to a fire and its growing strength threw the neighborhood into embarrassing relief. For minutes it burned, and in one minute it died at the hands of fire fighters who had learned their business under stress far greater than this.

From another window you could see the source of a new glow, a fire which raged than and for hours after in a block of flats three blocks away.

In the hall on the ground floor people were gathered. A tall, austere man paced the floor. A young couple sat on the steps and the girl sobbed quietly on her husband's shoulder.

Their's was a fear obvious and human. They were people from Warsaw and Amsterdam, the people of Europe. They were fugitives from the man whose planes drone overhead.

They, too, must have wondered what lay beyond. They could remember so much that lay behind.

$1,086,298 Spent To Equip Civil Defence Workers

Ottawa, March 8—(CP)—The Federal Government has spent an estimated $1,086,298 to equip Civil Defence workers with steel helmets, firemen's coats, rubber boots, antigas equipment and other supplies, it return tabled in the Commons shoved today.

The return, for George Cruickshank (L—Fraser Valley), listed the amount of clothing and personal equipment issued and the number of article distributed on a unit basis. It also listed the cost of each of the articles. Unofficial calculations set the total value of the equipment at $1,086,298.

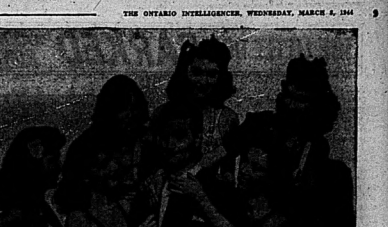
The number of Civil Defence workers in Canada was not listed in the return but a year ago Government officials estimated that there were 225,000 such workers. Among them, air raid precaution restrictions have been lifted in Ontario and Western Quebec. This relieved an estimated 10,000 workers of their duties.

The return said the equipment was distributed by the Government to Civil Defence workers in Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, Quebec, Ontario and British Columbia.

These organizations provided their members with personal equipment, but not with the equipment issued on a unit basis. Such equipment was kept at Organized Relief Headquarters for use in an emergency. The anti-gas equipment was in this category.

SENTENCED TO BE HANGED

MacLeod, Alta., March 8—(CP)—Peter Ambrowicz, 49, of Lethbridge and Coleman, was sentenced by Mr. Justice T. M. Tweedie to be hanged at Lethbridge, May 25, when he was found guilty of murder in the Supreme Court jury here yesterday. Ambrowicz was found guilty by the jury of the murder, in Oct., of Veronica Zahorejko, 35, of Lethbridge and Coleman.



AT THE CAPITOL—Red Skelton finds himself surrounded by a group of Hollywood's most beautiful chorus girls in this scene from the M-G-M musical, "Ship Ahoy," in which he stars along with Eleanor Powell. The new film opens next at the Capitol Theatre. On the same program "Silver City Raiders" with Russell Hayden.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

By ALLAN NICKLESON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, March 8 (CP)—The Canadian Army Mustangs who whipped an American Army unit 16-6 in the first Canadian-American rugby game in Britain, took things so seriously they didn't even board the train for more than two weeks before the game.

The practice locale was a rugger field near Aldershot where the high-priced talent that made up the Mustangs demonstrated to American rules one-half the day, and Canadian regulations and plays for the remaining half. At night there were chalk talks.

When the big day came a crowd of 30,000 in London's White City Stadium watched the Americans held to no score under their own rules in the initial half, although pre-game betting strategy allowed for two American touchdowns. Then the Canadians came back with a vengeance in the final half.

The American forces were master-minded by Maj. John Donovan of Boston, Mass., for 10 years line coach at Harvard University and chief scout for Columbia and LaSalle Universities. Against 30 players dressed by the Mustangs, the Americans had 36 of whom the best known was Frank Dombrowski, an Austrian and formerly quarterback with University of Detroit.

Outstanding player on the field was 26-year-old Orville Burke, Canada quarterback and former Ottawa Rough Rider star, who arrived in England a few months ago. He previously had been instructing in armored warfare at Camp Borden, Ont.

A small looking fellow who weighs in at a deceptive 165, Orville heaved all the forward passes, two of which went for touchdowns.

Maj. Denny Whitaker, Hamilton Tiger ace who won the D.S.O. at Dieppe, acted as the coach and playing captain and confined most of his field activity to the second half when he was used at halfback forwards for a major score. He played a great game.

What's Doing in Sport

Atlanta—(AP)—Frankie Sinwich, former All-America back at the University of Detroit and star of the Detroit Lions last fall, will report to Ft. McPherson, Ga., today for an army pre-induction examination, the Atlanta draft board said last night. He is married and the father of one child.

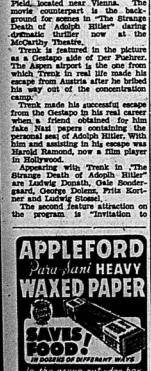
White Plains, N.Y. (AP)—Johnny Price, 160 lb. White Plains boxer, won an unanimous eight-round decision over Jimmy Connell, 164-1-2, Hartford, Conn., at the Westchester County center last night before 2,500 boxing fans. Price took five of the eight rounds with his sharper hitting.

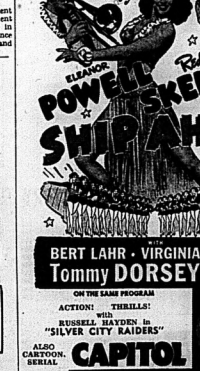
Vancouver (CP)—Charge against Coley Hall, manager of the St. Regis Hotel hockey team, of having assaulted Carl Robertson sports editor of the Province, was withdrawn in police court here yesterday. She charged Robertson struck her when the sports editor of the province refused to pay a bill.

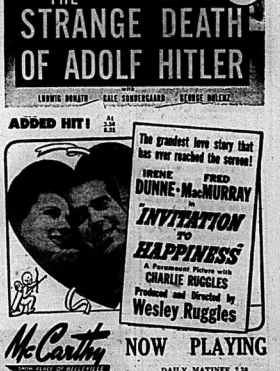
Hurled Thru Window By Explosion, Dies

Washington, Mar. 8—(AP)—Mrs. Lorena B. Chandler, 21, a navy bride of eight months, died at a hospital after being hurled through a second story window by an explosion at the Bureau of Standards.

Four other persons were injured. The Bureau director, Dr. Lyman J. Briggs, said the group was working on "an urgent war project to make better aviation gasoline better." Details of the project were not disclosed.







THE LITTLE DOG BARKED

by ANNE ROWE

CHAPTER I

To say that my arrival at North Harbor was disappointing would be an understatement. Not that I had expected brass bands and flower girls to meet me at the station, or as the author of the new "attraction" of the near-by Fern Cove Theatre—a comedy to be tried out there before an early fall opening on Broadway—I had counted on being met by someone. Tom Linwood, the director of Fern Cove, perhaps.

He had seemed highly pleased at having been offered the direction of my first stage effort, when we'd been introduced in the producer's office in New York. Had complimented me profusely and promised all kinds of co-operation. If he had been too busy to come himself, why hadn't he sent one of his assistants, someone from the fun, connected with the theatre?

Whatever the reason, he hadn't. There was no one. Not even a uniformed footman to passenger. The train—a mere two coaches—disgorged around a wooded curve with her half-hearted toots and the clanging of a slightly hoarse bell and I'd been standing on a deserted platform feeling piled up baggage, staring in dismay at the tumbledown building where a summer theatre should have been and was not, then at the empty road, which ran into the distance between high walls of dense green foliage.

I am thirty-seven, happily married, reasonably successful, not too hard on the eyes, and red-haired. Especially red-haired. After ten minutes of waiting and listening—and hearing nothing but the deep silence of the Maine woods—I wasn't only red-haired; I was see-red, too.

Most of my anger was directed at myself, as was kicking myself-mentally, of course-for being a sap, having let professional vanity and ambition, or contracts, come between me and that flying fish of South America with Les. Lee is my husband.

It served me right. I thought bitterly. I should have been more discriminating as a magazine writer, that in no way interfered with my career as a forward-looking, married lawyer. But no! I had to be ambitious and fall for the "lure of Broadway."

If only Lee had put his foot down when Stuart Aintree—not the best, but the most popular playwright of the last few seasons—had suggested that I dramatize my latest serial. In collaboration with him!

But Lee hadn't. He'd been pleased and tickled at the idea. Had actually urged me on.

And so the great author and I had settled down to work, and within two months my story "Jackass Alley Comes" had become a play—a "hilarious comedy of tomorrow's manners," according to the theatrical publicity. I had met Tyler McVane, the producer, and Tom Linwood, the director. And had signed a contract for the New York production to be handled by a tryout.

A scant week later Lee's South American trip had come up and I'd congratulated myself on just having to say good-by to him and be back for the rehearsals in September, completely forgetting the summer tryout on the Maine coast.

But the producer had lost forgotten it.

"Out of the question, Mrs. Turner," the heretofore jovial Mr. McVane had said firmly when I'd told him of my plan. Aintree was up in Hollywood for a picture, and your contract says one of you had to be at the tryout rehearsals. No use trying to get out of it. I'm sorry, but there always are last-minute changes—no telling ever-

"Sorry to keep you waiting, ma'am," the old man announced

how a line will sound on the stage —and only the authors have a right to make them."

And so—here I was. Thousands of miles from where I wanted to be, waiting on a lonely station platform in the middle of nowhere, for someone to meet me. And my baggage.

It was rude and insulting to forget my arrival. For all I knew I'd have to spend the rest of the day here, perhaps the night. Unless I abandoned my bags and walked, goodness knew how many miles, to Fern Cove . . .

No one could expect me to do that, or blame me if I took the first train back to New York, contract or no. Provided there was such a train before tomorrow, and that it stopped at this godforsaken place!

I didn't stop. I decided. I'd sit, step right in front of it and wave my arms, if necessary.

But no such train did—at least around the curve. I wouldn't have those nightmares of that sweet Lee so much, if I'd been able to carry out my intention.

But no train came. Instead, a distant chirping of a motor, a distant chirping of wishful thinking, grew louder and more authentic as I gazed hopefully down the road. After a minute or so a perfect Noah's ark of a car emerged from behind the station; an ancient Chrysler, patina-ed with age, and driven by an old man in overalls, with a face like a shriveled russet apple and a head of coarse gray fringe around a sunburnt pate, and shaggy eyebrows perpetually on the tip of a peeling nose.

He quite definitely had come for me, for he didn't display the slightest surprise, or make any inquiries as to my identity. Halting his antediluvian vehicle before me, he jumped out and began gathering up my bags, apparently forgetting the same long arms for his short height.

"Reckon you was waitin', ma'am," he announced while stowing my luggage in the back seat.

They only recollected you was coming on this train, when they heard how busy you was. The cars was busy too. So I come in my Bertha. She don't never mind. The road Couple springs is broke and she don't like shakin' nothin' awful. You better sit front with me."

Bertha—the high blue Jalopy, the gnome-like driver and his quaint vernacular—was as fantastic, if not as perky, my just anger and I climbed obediently into the recommended front seat.

"Who's they'?" I asked when my strange chauffeur had climbed in beside me.

"Mis' Kilborn. And him," he enlightened me.

Kilborn was the name of the proprietor and manager of Fern Cove, so "Mis'" Kilborn probably was his wife or daughter. But who was "him"?

"You mean Mr. Linwood, the director'?" I probed.

He had his hands off the steering wheel and blinked at me over his glasses. "No, ma'am. Him's Frank Kilborn," he said reproachfully. "This is Monday. Opening night. Mr. Linwood's mostly busy and he up to worry who's met to the station and who ain't."

"Oh, I see. Mr. Linwood's busy with the cares of getting all about my coming." I wanted to make sure who was responsible for my neglect.

Old Mack—I found out later that was my driver's name—let out a brief cackle and then became solemn again.

"Frank Kilborn ain't no owner," he explained seriously. "Got his name on top the writing paper, but it don't mean nothing. The owner' land the bank's what you call a corp'ration. Mr. Parrie and Mr. Alden and Mr. Vickery all own it together. Mr. Loring got a share too, him being a friend of the other. And they give a little bit of it to Mis' Kilborn, for a present. Mr. Vickery did, or Mr. Alden. Don't matter which. They's like two peas in a pod.

This was unexpected information and might or might not account for my lack of a reception.

Two of the names in old Mack's speech rang a bell in my mind: Ames Alden and George Vickery were both playwright team of World War I, the revival of whose one great hit, "Shadows on the Wall," had flopped dismally the previous winter. Also, there had been rumors of a feud between them and Stuart Aintree over a bit of his refusal to bring their play drive" up-to-date.

Could it be that my collaborator's stay in Hollywood was not so much an unavoidable delay as a clever way way out of an embarrassing situation—which had been handed on to me?

It wouldn't hurt to find out a few things.

"I didn't know all those famous men were going to be at Fern Cove," I said as casually as I could manage. "Are they all playwrights, aren't they?"

Old Mack had just coaxed Bertha into snorts and shaking—a sign of her willingness to get going again but he stopped his efforts readily at my question and let the engine die down, with a last long wheeze.

"No, they ain't, ma'am," he corrected me. "Mr. Parrie and Mr. Alden and Mr. Vickery is. Mr. Loring makes out he's one, too, I guess, but Mr. Loring. Almighty rich too. Bin sick. Got one foot in the grave, they say. Only you wouldn't notice it when Mister Marshall's around."

Then he roused Bertha back into action with a swift kick against the dash, and presently we were careening wildly along the road. Not the wide highway I had watched longingly a short while before. A narrow dirt road, hemmed in by dense forest, after plunging straight through the woods and joining the main road again opposite the entrance of Fern Cove.

There Bertha stopped for a breathing spell before going on at a more sedate pace and less danger. Through a tall gate bearing the legend "Fern Cove Inn and Theatre" above its top. Past a huge parking lot. Through a short arterial of tall pines, elms, and into an open square with a gorgeous view of the bay and the white pinnacles of the islands.

The Inn—a sprawling, three-story Colonial brick structure with rows of gay flowerboxes to the sides. And the pillared, substantial looking theatre at the right.

Old Mack said nothing as I stood there, dumbfounded with fear—and was dumbfounded when Bertha, with a right on, with greatly accelerated groans and moans, lurched forward, shuddered and stayed, passant an open kloak that seemed to be a magazine stand and soda fountain and a low, elongated log cabin proclaiming, in yard-high letters that it was the "Snack Hutch." Then we turned left, ascending a gentle slope to the Inn and following a road above the shoreline, between overgrown, boulder-strewn beach sheerly down to the water and widely spaced small cottages, log cabins and two-storey frame structures, until the road turned inland and uphill, with houses on the right instead of the left side.

There we veered sharply, diving into a gap between the first two and coming out into the open again through a tunnel formed by the interlocking branches of low-growing trees. And then we stopped.

The road's end, I thought, dazed by the furious shaking. Had they are we stopping here?

Then I admire the view? It was worth looking at: in fact, it was enchanting: A large, cup-shaped clearing hemmed in by dark woods lay before me, knee-deep in ferns luxuriously green and studded with a few huge old elms, seemingly growing out of immense, moss-covered boulders.

(To be continued)

Little Benny's Note Book

I was eating a apple with small holes in front of our house and Sam Crow came up with a bloody nose holding a handkerchief over it and I said, G. good night, what happened to you, Sam? I bet I know did you get in a fight?

Two fierce gangsters got in to me before G mornin after, that's how, Sam said. And boy, you better get in the house right now quick while you still got the chance, you're not safe out here with that apple, believe me, he said.

Why, why not? I said, and he said, Because, they're libel to come back again if they think I'm out around, any time, cause they're going to take fruit away from anybody they see eating it. That's what I was doing, eating a banana, and they tried to grab it and they gave me this bloddy nose before I finely scared them away by reaching my back pocket and claiming I had a pistol in there and I'd shoot them if they were still there by the time I counted three. So you better scram with that apple if you want my advice, he said.

Me not knowing whether to believe him or not on account of him being the most famous liar around, and I was wondering whether to finish my apple quick just for safety first, and just then pop came home, saying to Sam Crow, I haven't you gone home yet? Go on home and get your mother to help you stop that thing from bleeding. Now scram and tell your mother I said so, now you better scram than any kid I ever saw, he said.

And he started after him with a push, saying, I caught the little chump playing that game with me a couple of other little clowns, all bumping their noses together and I licked them easily, of course. I should of taken him right home instead of stopping to sit the rest of the day.

Proving liars never reform and it's a good thing to look for proof before you believe all the atrocity stories.

Says Vichy Authorities Plan to Invoke Protection When Invasion Comes

Algiers, March 5 — (CP) — Vichy authorities plan to jump on the Allied bandwagon and invoke protection of American and Canadian troops when the invasion begins, Interior Commissioner Pierre Pucheu de la Vigerie said yesterday on the eve of his return to London to continue directing the French underground movements.

Kiwanians Hear R. B. Morley On Accidents

"Why Prevent Accidents" was the subject of a talk before the Kiwanis Club at their weekly luncheon at the Quinte Hotel on Tuesday by R. B. Morley, manager of the Industrial Accident and Prevention Association in Ontario. The members had a more reasonable outlook on why accidents are prevented because Mr. Morley showed by facts and figures that accidents cost the province a considerable sum each year. Jack McVeigh presided with Jack Black collecting the fines and Hazen Carruthers leading in the community singing. Leo B. Riggs presided at the piano.

New Member Inducted.

Jay Doyle was initiated into the club membership in the ceremony of installation being performed by Cliff Hamilton, district lieutenant-governor. Edward Grenville, Rotarian of Napanee, appeared before the club to explain "The Dimes for Victory" campaign in that town and which has netted a considerable sum for the continuance of the work of the club during the club's coffers. The local Kiwanis club has been encouraging this plan in the city but more will be done in the near future. Over 5,000 magazines have been sent to the boys in the Overseas Centre. The affair will take the form of a bridge tea and every one of the members and their wives are invited to attend.

First Eight Claims Given.

The speaker was introduced by Jack Trudeau and Kiwanis appreciation was expressed by Emile Logan. Mr. Morley read the first eight claims that came before the committee formed in January 1916 when that board was organized in the province and he said that the 1,800,000 which have followed since that time were generally one of the same nature of the first eight. "Accidents do not happen", he said, "they are caused". Mr. Morley stated that 55 millions of accidents can be avoided", said the speaker, "and if we knew the cause we can prevent them. In industry men must be taught how and it chances have to be taken there must be something worthwhile as an object to live". Mr. Morley stated that every person was hurt by explosives than by fires combined and that floors was the cause of nearly 80 per cent. of the accidents. He stated there had been a great advance in protective clothing in the past 25 years and everything was being done to protect the man working in industry. In conclusion he stated that you do not get something for nothing ever.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, March 8 —(CP)— Industrials were slightly stronger and other groups steady this afternoon on Toronto exchange. Turnover was small at 225,000 shares.

Utilities looked better, gains appeared for Union Gas, Gatineau and Canada Steamships and in Senior Oils, International Petroleum and B.A. gained narrowly. Abitibi Pfd. and Consolidated Paper added fractions.

Malartic Gold Fields, Upper Canada, Pamour, Preston East Dome and Negus were stronger Golds against losses for McIntyre, San Antonio, the Powell Rouyn issues and Springer Sturgeon. Nickel and Waite-Amulet were stronger Industrials.

NEW YORK EXCHANGE

New York, March 8. (AP)—Continued broad buying of Steels, Motors and Rubbers highlighted today's stock market and prices of leaders generally moved up fractions to around a point.

Rails and specialties attracted selective support.

Pivotal issues attaining new highs for the year included General Motors, Chrysler, Goodyear, U.S. Rubber, and Du Pont.

Canadian issues showed only minor changes, with Dome Mines and Distillers Seagram up fractions, Hiram Walker down a fraction and Canadian Pacific unchanged.

A major part of the buying in the big board today was credited to Tuesday's display of strength which was taken among market followers as a sign of a favorable technical position within the market.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

Toronto, March 8—(CP)—Prices were firm on medium and good quality sides in cattle trade on the livestock market here up to noon today. Trade in calves, hogs and lambs were steady. Sheep were firm.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Stockyards Service were: cattle 230, calves 160, hogs 300, sheep and lambs 80. Unsold from yesterday were 400 heads of cattle.

Prices included:

Cattle: Butcher steers and heifers $10-$11.75, a few weighty steers $11-12.50, butcher cows $7.25-$9, canners and cutters $5-$7, fed yearlings $12-$13.

Calves: $16-$17 for choice, common $8 down.

LIVESTOCK

Montreal, March 8 (CP)—Receipts: Cattle 41; sheep 8; hogs 166; calves 172.

Cattle receipts consisted of one car load of good quality steers which were not sold.

Prices quoted were made up of common to just medium quality steers and heifers in mixed lots between 14-14.50. Lambs were of common quality and brought 8-9. Hogs sold at 17.15 for 5-1 dressed. Cows were 13 dressed.

HOGS

Toronto, March 8 (CP)—Price were unchanged at bacon-hog markets reported today.

Dressed weight: Bacon, Lambton, Hamilton and Stratford, $17.85 delivered, Chatham $16.40 plus transportation, Brantford $16.50 plus transportation, Toronto $16.30 delivered.

U.S. BOMBERS RAID BERLIN FOR SECOND DAY IN ROW

125 Enemy Fighter Planes Downed In Yesterday's Assault

No Indication of Number of Bombers Taking Part in Raid Today

38 BOMBERS LOST

By GLADWIN HILL
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, March 9—(CP)— Berlin was bombed today for the second day in a row by heavy American bombers.

The German capital was first attacked by American forces last Saturday and again set fire Monday.

Strong forces of fighters from the 8th and 9th Air Forces escorted the bombers.

The first announcement gave no hint as to how today's bomber formations compared in strength with yesterday's raid on the German capital by at least 850 four-engined bombers.

First Berlin announcements did not mention "great aerial battles" as during the previous American raids and today's operations may have resulted in the city with comparatively minor resistance from German fighters. It was certain that the German air arm was experiencing one of the most exhausting weeks of the war.

30,000 Tons Bombs Since Nov. 18.

Berlin has been shaken by more than 30,000 tons of bombs since the first big R.A.F. raid Nov. 18.

In smashing furiously at the capital, the American forces have followed the pattern proved successful in their operations against Germany. Instead of spacing the raids over long periods and giving Britain's air force a chance to rest and recuperate, they have pressed on a furious assault on the enemy within less than a week.

Experience has shown that German resistance grows weaker the longer raiding continues while the bombers' operations themselves consequently grow easier.

Enemy's Strength Dispersed.

In a concentrated operation like the series against German aircraft plants this month, Britons and Americans had the additional advantage of being able to choose the enemy's forces. Against Berlin, however, there has been a sweeping drive over the same route day after day with the American dispersing on shattering blows to get through more easily each time.

The Berlin radio acknowledged that the Americans struck again at noon, but this time the poor weather in contrast to the fairly clear skies earlier which led to the previous blows had been struck.

Another Berlin broadcast acknowledged that "in the residential quarters of some parts of the town there was considerable, there were some losses among the population."

"In spite of unfavorable weather, German anti-aircraft defences duly opened a number of four-engined bombers and fighter formations," it said. "Enemy formations on the return flight are still ceaselessly engaged by German aerial and ground defences."

Yesterday's operation, involving more than 850 to 1,000 bombers meaning was clear, to have taken a toll of 136 planes of the enemy's fighter forces.

42 Shot Down by Bombers.

Forty-two of these were shot down by the bombers and 83 by the swarm of American and Allied fighters.

This tally brought to 301 the number of enemy planes accounted for in the two battles against the Nazi German capital, Monday and Wednesday.

Thirty-eight American bombers were lost, together with 38 on Monday, while fighter losses totalled 15 instead of the 18 at first reported yesterday. Twenty-four fighters were lost Monday.

In addition to the damage done Hitler's force in the air, U. S. headquarters announcement said all four of the main buildings of the V. K. F. Ballbearing factory at Erkner in the suburbs of Berlin were bombed yesterday. At least one was set ablaze and was still burning, while smoke so obscured the other three that the damage could not be disclosed.

Three Buildings Set Afire.

Three buildings of a factory making torpedo parts also were set afire.

The German High Command in its communique today admitted that damage was suffered from the attack but asserted 113 Allied aircraft, including 66 four-engined bombers, were brought down.

"Our very strong fighter escort defeated them again," a U. S. communique broadcast by Berlin said.

The announcement said the enemy attempts to disrupt the bomber formations were "without success."

Exclusive of the enemy fighters destroyed yesterday by bomber gunners, not yet officially tallied, American airmen claimed a total of 259 Nazi planes shot down in the two great punches at Berlin, Monday and yesterday.

Berlin radio Monday knocked 82 enemy planes for a full-day toll of 259.

While five more escorting fighters fell yesterday, the raid on Monday the bomber loss was almost halved —from 66 to 38 of a force of possibly 800 to 900.

Ballbearing Factory Hit.

Among the U.S. air divisions hitting Berlin in the third U. S. heavy-bomber attack on the capital can fighters made their pioneer sweep over the capital last Friday, concentrated attacks against the "second results" on a ballbearing factory and railway yards, the communique said.

In this and other industrial targets in the city the bombers poured more than 10,000 higher explosive bombs, these set the conflagrations with more than 250,000 incendiary bombs.

Stockholm dispatches to London morning newspapers quoted the Morgon Tidningen as reporting from Berlin that "thousands of persons were killed" and hundreds of fires started.

FINLAND SENDS REVISED REPLY TO RUSSIA'S TERMS

May be Satisfactory Basis for Furthering the Negotiations

SENT ON TUESDAY

(Associated Press Staff Writer)
By EDWIN SHANKE

Stockholm, March 9—(AP)—Finland has sent a revised reply to Russian armistice demands which may be a satisfactory basis for furthering the negotiations, it was strongly indicated here today.

Aftonbladet said the reply should be acceptable from the Russian viewpoint and declared it had the backing of Field Marshal Baron Carl Gustaf Von Mannerheim and other high Finnish military officers.

The reply was prepared for delivery last Friday, but apparently because of its sharp tone it was held back for revision and modification and the final draft was not transmitted to the Russians until Tuesday.

Aftonbladet said the modification was the result of objections raised in certain Swedish circles which persuaded the Finns to adopt a milder tone.

The new note was said to seek further explanation and a more precise statement of aims, whereas the first draft rejected Soviet demands for the internment of German troops in Finland, withdrawal of Finnish troops to the 1940 frontier and reparations. It also made demand for repatriation of some prisoners, particularly those residents of the Baltic states who went to Finland when the Russians occupied those countries in 1939.

The Morgon Tidningen reported that the Finns had limited the principal Russian demands "in their present form" but this apparently was a reference to the earlier draft. It understood the Finns have proposed negotiation for a "free retreat" for the German troops in Finland.

NUMBER OF IDLE WELSH MINERS TOTALS 90,000

165 Pits Are Closed Depriving Britain's War Industries of Sorely Needed Coal

STRIKE SPREADING

London, March 9—(CP) — The coal strike in the rich South Wales field spread in more alarming proportions today when a fresh wave of walkouts boosted the number of idle miners to 90,000 out of a total of 100,000.

One hundred sixty-five mines now are idle, depriving Britain's war industries of sorely needed coal and threatening to cripple the transport system.

The strike spread to the Swansea anthracite district this morning when 14 pits closed there.

Hope of negotiations dealt a severe blow to optimism engendered last night when it appeared that one of the chief obstacles to settlement of the dispute was removed as Government and mine owners' negotiators presided over by Fuel Minister Gwilym Lloyd-George met.

The Fuel Minister accepted an offer whereby mine owners and miners operators permitting extra pay for those working in excessive dust areas.

At the same time, the son of David Lloyd George—the "Welsh Wizard" who was Britain's leader in the First Great War—agreed that "certain other matters concerned" in the miners' demands to South Wales would be considered" after the men have gone back to work.

Except in isolated instances, however, the miners refused the Fuel Minister's appeal to return to the pits pending a full review of the wage problem. Two collieries resumed operations and two or three others were working with skelton crews, but there was no general "back-to-work" move.

Editorial comment in the press reflected grave concern over the consequences of a strike at a time when the Allies are calling about a coming Allied offensive against western Europe.

Ignore Ministry's Appeal.

Union leaders said they were joining the government in appealing to miners to return to the pits but declared the men had demanded a "full discussion" on the fuel department's intentions.

There seemed little chance of a break in the deadlock—at least until a meeting of the strike leaders Monday when the Fuel Ministry Officers' Council will meet Friday and is expected to make a new recommendation that work be resumed pending talks.

Not a pound of coal was being mined in the Aberdare Valley, where 6,000 men struck.

In a further effort last night to end the strike, the Fuel Ministry proposed a broad new basis for wages, which was hailed as a step to place workers a better deal and to simplify the complex system of wage rates in the coal mining industry. Representatives of the miners and mine owners met with Lloyd-George and report back to the Fuel Ministry Monday.

The miners are protesting against the Government's implementation of the Porter Award which was an official guarantee of a minimum of 5 shillings ($1) weekly for underground workers. The government recently had limited that award to pay for miners in difficult conditions in localized in West Scotland. The miners, however, contended that conditions in the pits of the entrance since the current weekly wage amounts to about 12 shillings ($3) and that plus about 10 shillings

Took Part in Wolseley Expedition To Relieve Gordon at Khartoum

Peterborough, March 9 (CP) — Fourteen lumberjacks from Peterborough and a large number of Peterborough men were included in the battalion, first Dominion unit to serve on the firing line from Britain.

Arriving in Egypt in the fall of 1884, the volunteers were assigned to the Nile Expedition base at Cairo, to guard supplies to Khartoum, died here Tuesday after a long illness.

JAP OPPOSITION IN ADMIRALTIES, N. GUINEA CRUSHED

Small Barge Fleet Trying to Land Near Airdrome Smashed

EXTEND PERIMETER

Allied Headquarters, Southwest Pacific, March 9 —(AP)— United States forces fighting on three inland fronts around the Bismarck Sea have crushed Japanese opposition in New Guinea and the Admiralty islands and are holding against strong enemy counter-attacks, it was announced today.

Japanese troops aboard a small barge fleet failed to dent the 1st Cavalry Division's positions north of Momote airdrome on Los Negros Island, in the Admiralty group Tuesday night. Not one barge reached shore.

Marine invaders of Willaumez peninsula on the north New Britain coast had consolidated their holdings and were slurging it out Monday night with counter-attacking Nipponese, who had recovered from the surprise of the almost unopposed landing the morning of that day.

The third Dominion division troops have seized complete control of the northwestern New Guinea coast for a distance of 50 miles, in their drive for the enemy base at Madang now 120 airline miles away.

The Japanese barge movement against Los Negros followed a weak night aerial attack on American positions around Momote airdrome, now under full Allied control.

The Americans extended their perimeter 1,000 yards northwest of the airfield when they occupied Pelilalu mission plantation. The marines on Willaumez peninsula, New Britain, were facing stiff fire from Japanese positions in a ravine parently from Talasea. The marines' landing on the West coast of the peninsula was about five miles northwest of Talasea, where there is an airstrip.

PREHISTORIC TOOTH FOUND

Toronto, March 8—(CP)—A resident of nearby Lake Simcoe has unearthed a four-inch tooth which he believes is part of some prehistoric mammoth which once roamed the countryside. The tooth was found in a gravel pit in the woods near his home, weighed four ounces and as the jaw was broken off, it is believed the tooth originally was more than 18 four inches.

CANADA HOLDS HIGH CARDS IN GLOBAL AVIATION

Dominion Prepares Most Comprehensive Report Not Yet Made Public

MAY HOLD CONFERENCE

By C. R. BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, March 9. (CP) — Preliminary planning for international control of commercial aviation today seemed to be developing into a United Nations poker game —a game in which the cards held by Canada will have an important bearing.

Officials here were considering the value of Canada's cards as American plans for a preliminary conference to be held late this month ran into difficulties.

The extent to which global air routes may be flown without using Canadian ground facilities, or without flying over Canadian territory, will govern the value to be placed upon Canada's position.

But there is no tendency to discount the importance of Canada's stake in the game of her right to fly low level routes in all planning.

The Dominion is known to have prepared a most comprehensive and complete draft of procedure that might be adopted to set up an international authority to license and regulate international air transportation.

But that report, believed to be the most complete of all those prepared by any country, has not been officially released. It is also understood here, has not been submitted to the United States government.

An unconfirmed report circulated today was that if the United States government finds it impossible immediately to arrange for a conference it proposed some days ago that the United Kingdom, Canada and Russia, it would invite representatives of those countries to meet in Washington singly-starting with Canada.

Even if the proposed preliminary conference ran into a snag, Canada's report in the matter of air trade Journal (American Aviation), when Britain, learning that Canada had been invited, said it would be embarrassing unless other British Dominions were invited.

Fine Geographical Position.

That raised the question this report said, of similar representation for other western hemisphere countries.

LEAVE DISPOSAL OF ENEMY FLEETS UNTIL END OF WAR

Churchill Says Entire Situation Can Best Be Decided When Japs, Nazis Defeated

PROBLEM DISCUSSED

London, March 9.—(CP) —Prime Minister Churchill said today that disposition of "enemy or ex-enemy" fleets had been left until the end of the war, but confirmed President Roosevelt's statement that consideration was being given to reinforcement of the Soviet Navy by Italian or other warships.

Answering a flood of questions some of which showed if such announcements should not be made in the House of Commons, Churchill said in the future, Mr. Churchill indicated in the House of Commons that the Italian warships still were being operated by the Italians under old arrangements.

"As President Roosevelt has said the question of the future employment and disposal of the Italian fleet has been a subject of general discussion and in particular consideration has been given to the immediate reinforcement of the Soviet Navy, particularly their theatre of Italian resources", he said.

To Decide What is Right.

"I may say that I found that the general question of enemy and of ex-enemy fleet disposal should best be left over to the end of the war against both Germany and Japan when the entire situation can be surveyed by the victorious allies and they can decide what is right and just to be done", he continued.

He added that he endorsed President Roosevelt's statement of March 5 that negotiations were about half completed for transfer of roughly one third of the Italian fleet to Russia except to say that no change was contemplated at present in the arrangements with Italian naval authorities under which Italian ships and crews take part in the common struggle against the enemy and the bases where they now operate.

The Prime Minister was plied with several questions concerning the Roosevelt announcement.

Wants General Announcements.

The Russian forces which took Chervonoye Znamya, 10 miles from main counter-attacks. In the north the Germans counter-attacked after attacking Germans were repelled when they lunged at the Nazi Narva bridgehead.

Main Fighting in 9 Sectors.

Main fighting appeared to be in the southern Ukraine where Germans started a new offensive Saturday. The biggest battle was in the area of Odessa-Lwow railway. The hold on the railway was strengthened by the capture of Chervi-Ostrov, 28 miles east of Volochisk.

This drive was being contested stubbornly by the Germans and Soviet troops are fighting.

Capture of Chervi-Ostrov was announced in Churchill's report of victories, four miles farther east and only seven miles from Volochisk, which would mean the seaside corridor for the Germans fighting in the Dniester-Kodyma area, a 30-mile-long gap between Grushevitsa and Volochisk.

German Tanks Thrown In.

Front dispatches said Field Marshal Erich Von Manstein threw great reserves of tank forces and infantry against the surging Red army advance, Moscow said, but was hurled back on all sectors.

Basic English As Auxiliary Is Encouraged by British Govt.

London, March 9 —(CP)— Basic English—a vocabulary stripped to 850 essential words—will be encouraged as an auxiliary international and commercial language, Prime Minister Churchill told the House of Commons today.

A committee which has investigated the language field had discussed Basic English with the inventor and its use as a method of promoting the English tongue. It would be better to teach good Soviet pronunciation than Basic English, the fluctuating and irritating noises generally made by the English."

"So far, however, as concerns the use of basic English as an auxiliary international language His Majesty's government are impressed with the view that such a method would ensure from its development not as a substitute for established literary languages but as a supplement thereto."

William Gallagher, communist member from West Fife in the House of Commons, asked why it would be better to teach good Soviet pronunciation than Basic English.

GERMANS SUFFER 9,000 CASUALTIES AROUND CASSINO

Except for Two Minor Stabs on Beachhead Fronts Remain Quiet

BETTER WEATHER

By EDWARD KENNEDY
(AP-War Correspondent)

Naples, March 9 — (AP)— Fifth Army forces have inflicted 9,000 casualties on the Germans in and around Cassino since the end of January, bringing total enemy losses in Italy for that period to approximately 40,000, Allied Headquarters announced today.

The Cassino casualties, including 1,500 captured and the remainder killed, wounded or missing, were suffered by German troops against Allied beachhead fighting southeast of Cassino.

German losses on the beachhead have been announced as about 34,000. In addition, the enemy has suffered other casualties at the hands of the Allies around the Garigliano, at the bands of the French in the mountains north of Cassino, and on the 8th Army front.

Except for the two minor stabs on the beachhead, all fronts remained quiet today with patrols active aside from routine patrolling. Artillery duels and a German night air raid on the beachhead in which 12 planes were destroyed dropped.

On the Garigliano sector British artillery got two direct hits on a house which the Germans were observed occupying.

Allies Make 500 Flights.

The weather was fair to cloudy and cold yesterday and today and off on approximately 500 flights, including those of Gen. Sir Harter of Santo Stefano 80 miles northwest of Rome and bases against the Pisa area and the Rome area of the capital.

Fighter-bombers hit rail and road targets at Montalto di Castro on the west coast, about 40 miles above Rome while Spitfires and Kittyhawks hit rail and road traffic in the Rome area, destroying 21 enemy vehicles and damaging 10.

Light naval forces attacked enemy attacked targets in the beachhead area and fighter and bomber aircraft swept over both the Adriatic and Tyrrhenian Seas. Nine Allied planes were lost during the day and six enemy craft were destroyed.

It was announced meanwhile that the recent heavy rains had caused heavy damage to the Volturno, Liri-Garigliano and Tiburtina railyards in Rome. Crews who debarked from the rail line to Proskurov, said the yards were blanketed with debris and twisted wreckage including stock and pocked with craters.

fence system in the area. It has been outflanked by the capture of Volosovtsy, 16 miles to the southeast, but the rail line to Proskurov is still in German hands and is a vital supply route to Nazi lows holds.

The Russian communique failed to mention the progress of Red army troops converging on the junction city of Tarnopol, 60 miles west of Proskurov on the Odessa-Warsaw line, which was reported within nine miles of that city.

CAR STOLEN FEB. 12TH RECOVERED IN OSHAWA

An automobile stolen in Belleville on Feb. 12th, last was reported recovered in Oshawa on Wednesday night. The vehicle was a Studebaker coupe bearing 1943 Ontario license plate number 5-C-60 which is the property of F. R. Dulmage. The sedan car was stolen from the premises of the Quinte Motors situated on West Moira St.

Cobourg police reported they apprehended one William La Rose, of Belleville, in possession of the automobile and allegedly attempting to sell the coupe in that city. Chief Walter Probert instructed the Oshawa authorities to hold La Rose and a warrant for his arrest would be immediately forwarded to the Motor City.

POLICE COURT

Federal law enforcing officials pointed out in County Police Court here today there apparently has been some confusion misunderstanding between the National Registration regulations and the National Selective Service Mobilization regulations.

Constable Wm. Beatty, of the R.C.M.P., pointed out in the court that registration for National Registration has to be made directly to the Dominion Statistician at Ottawa, while persons designated or liable for military service in this area must keep the National Registrar of the National Selective Service Mobilization section at Kingston acquainted with any change of address of such a person.

The explanation came as the result of two cases heard before Magistrate H. L. Lloyd today when Bert Willis, Springbrook, and Delbert Brough, Crookston, were convicted or failing to notify the sectional registrar of the National Selective Service at Kingston. Fines of $25 and costs were imposed in each instance. In Mr. Bronson's case, however, Assistant Crown Attorney S. G. Robertson pointed out there had been a misunderstanding in the matter, as the accused was in no way attempting to avoid military service.

ONE IS INJURED IN GUN BATTLE

Police at Hamilton Seek Second Man for Questioning

Toronto, March 9.—(CP)—Police at Hamilton sought today they were told by 13-year-old Lorraine Scott of Hopewell, N.S., who escaped from a moving car last night when she heard Abraham Lyons a strange man and woman who gave her a ride.

The girl told police she was walking in the Queensway area when the car stopped and the driver, a man, offered her a ride. She said the driver struck her violently when she asked to be let out and the woman attempted to prevent her from jumping.

Miss Scott suffered body lacerations and bruises in the leap from the car.

Red Cross Drive Lags in Trenton

Trenton (Special)—With only another week to go the campaign for Red Cross campaign has barely reached the one-third mark of the quota for this year, the same as in 1943, has only reached the one-third mark of the quota for this year, the same as in 1943, has only reached over $2,000. However, officials and organizers of the campaign feel sure the objective will ultimately be reached if every citizen does his part willingly. It has done in the past, and gives every dollar he can to the great cause of the many worthy of all causes.

"The need grows as Victory Nears" indeed is what all should be considering when not only the men and women in the services are fighting and needing the aid of Red Cross, but many more civilians will be in the war zone. Only today over the air came word of some sixty or more survivors of the Canadian merchant ship, which was broken in two by a torpedo, being landed at a Canadian port. These are the heroes who so bravely and unselfishly aided with survivor's bundles by the Red Cross, in which are warm clothing and all the personal needs supplies for such an emergency.

Red Cross Week.

At the work rooms in Trenton on Tuesday a considerable amount of work was accomplished and several large schoolgirls were busily knitting one to every overcoat "Trenton-ian," consisting of quilts, afghans, etc.

One very pretty quilt, the top for which was pieced and donated by Mrs. Craw and which was quilted by voluntary quilters in the rooms, was raffled and was won by Mr. Joe Mapp, 63 Queen Street. $27.05 was realized from this venture.

On display during the afternoon were many fine articles including hooked mats, cushion covers, tapestries, etc. made by Pte. Pete Harrington, brother of Miss Clara Harrington, Wragge Street. Pte. Harrington has been in hospital in England for almost a year, following a serious accident while still recuperating was taught through the Red Cross to make these useful articles, which he eventually sent home to his sister.

He has now left the hospital, and though not yet very strong, has been posted to a convalescent camp where in England where he is engaged in light duties.

Cloverdale Factory Produced 696,317 Pounds Cheese in '43

A total of 696,317 pounds of cheese was manufactured by the Cloverdale Butter and Cheese Company during the past making season from 7,991,015 pounds of milk, it is shown in the company financial statement which was presented by auditor R. G. Bishop at the annual meeting. This shows an average yield of 8.69 pound cheese per 11.3 pounds of milk.

Total receipts of the factory for the year were $87,978 with receipts from cheese sales amounting to $136,922. Twenty one thousands pounds of butter made at the factory sold at 46.7¢. Ontario board amounted to $13,775, and the Dominion bonus on high scoring cheese was $7,260. Fluid combine milk subsidy during October and November amounted to $2,966. Average price per pound cheese was 19.8 cents.

Payments to patrons for milk amounted to $140,888 with $10,054 being expended on patrons hauling. Cheese making cost $11,534. A. H. Lloyd is president of the company with Clayton Tice acting as secretary treasurer. H. S. Channell is the cheesemaker.

No Enemy Action Was Involved Says Admiral

Halifax, March 9 —(CP)— Rear-Admiral L. W. Murray, commodore-in-Chief, Canadian Northwest Atlantic, said last night no enemy action had been involved in the sinking of a United Nations' vessel whose survivors were landed by the East Coast Canadian port Tuesday.

Members of the crew had local newspapermen the freighter was torpedoed at night and broke in two after the "explosion," with the forward half sinking first.

The ranking officer did not state the cause of the sinking. However, it was recalled by survivors said the mishap occurred in a fierce storm, leading to suggestion the vessel may have broken in halves under stress of weather.

In the community Mr. Rose was highly esteemed and his death has brought much regret to many friends. In religion he was a member of the United Church, at Holloway and fraternally he was a Past Master of Hillier Lodge No. 69, A.F. & A.M. and also a Past Master of Halloway Loyal Orange Lodge, No. 351.

Surviving him are his wife, the former Emma Rodgers; one daughter, Mrs. Elmer Wilson, Halloway; one son, Mr. Ernest Tweed and G. Donald Rose at home; one brother, Thomas Mc. Thurlow Township.

Resting at the Martin Funeral Home, Church St., until this Thursday evening, then at his late residence where the funeral announcement is made in this issue.

Stingy Traveller

Very often newspaper publicity is given to persons who have returned the "meanest" man but this week in Belleville, the incident occurred which might rate the principal as being the "meanest" in the history of Canada.

Through some lapse of memory a traveller at the local hotel had forgotten but what time his train left the city and having the desk clerk with the information that the train was ten minutes late, thus permitting just time to make connections, making the transportation to the station could be arranged. A series of telephone calls were indicated no taxis were available but finally one was secured and the connection but before boarding his train he tipped the bunman all of 10 cents.

16 Japanese Ships Sunk by U.S. Subs

Washington, March 9 — (AP)— United States submarines have sunk 16 more Japanese ships in enemy-controlled waters.

The Navy announced today by the navy, included one large tanker.

The toll brought to 627 the number of Japanese ships sunk, probably sunk or damaged by submarine action.

A recapitulation of the damage done by Japanese shipping by U.S. submarines shows: Definitely sunk, 477 craft of all types; probably sunk, 36 and damaged, 114.

The totals for all types of action, including submarines, planes and surface attack are 1,065 sunk, 107 probably sunk and 817 damaged.

Britain Increasing Production Specialized Invasion Equipment

London, March 9, (CP)—Declaring that 1944 is "a year of challenge", Production Minister Oliver Lyttelton told the House of Commons today that Britain's production is being modified to meet the new needs of attack by increasing bomber fleets, but a great measure to "amazing secret devices" which enabled the R.A.F. to go out in all types of weather and his aircraft targets and bombers.

British designers and scientists remain second to none, he declared, in the last year's production in the whole field of munitions reached the highest level yet, despite many change overs to meet the strategic needs of the armed forces.

Must Maintain Level.

The outstanding problem this year is to maintain that high production level and in some industries, Capt. Lyttelton said, "Naval construction is still of the highest urgency".

Capt. Lyttelton said that record successes in the battle of Berlin were due not only to growing strength of the great bomber fleets, but to great measures to "amazing secret devices" which enabled the R.A.F. to go out in all types of weather and his aircraft targets and bombers.

British designers and scientists remain second to none, he declared, in the last year's production in the whole field of munitions reached the highest level yet, despite many change overs to meet the strategic needs of the armed forces.

D'Albiac Named Deputy Cmdr. In Mediterranean

London, March 9 —(CP)—Air Vice Marshal John Henry d'Albiac, commander of the Canada-based Eastern Training Air Force of the R.A.F. for the last year, has been named Deputy Commander of the Mediterranean Allied Tactical Air Force.

His appointment, announced last night, follows the five hundred shifts of British officers to new posts, another being the transfer of Air Vice Marshal Harold Lee-Swayne from the Southeast Asia Command to Headquarters Staff for India.

In other changes, Lt.-Gen. Edmond Charles Action Schreiber was moved from the Western Regional Command to the Southeastern. Lt.-Gen. Sir Edwin Logie Morris was called home from India to take over the Northern Command, and Maj.-Gen. Basil Gerard Watson assumes the Western Command.

Yugoslav King May Go to London

Washington, March 9 — (AP)— Reports that British government is about to back Marshal Josip Broz Tito's partisans instead of Yugoslavia military support multiplied here today with the disclosure that King Peter of Yugoslavia is expected to go to London soon.

Diplomatic sources said the Allies have gone as far as they can in sending their military aid without prejudicing their relations with King Vugoslavia's Cairo, toward which the Partisan leader has declared his hostility.

The government has been headed by Premier Bozidar Purich and its War Minister is Draja Mihailovic, leader of the main Serbian Chetnik guerrilla.

For some time, however, the Allies have been sending supplies to Tito, who is actively fighting the Germans, rather than to the sporadically stalemated Mihailovic forces. There are Anglo-American missions with Tito.

Indications here are that the main project is the schooling is to obtain some kind of rapprochement between Tito and the young King Peter, Yugoslavia's titular head. To solve dropping at least some of the members of the king's government in Cairo.

Operatic Tenor Dies on Stage

San Francisco, March 9—(AP)— "Laugh then, Pagliacci, for your love has left you."

"Laugh for the pain . . ."

Then the song ended.

For Aroldo Lindi was dying.

The noted European opera tenor collapsed last night on the stage in the crowded San Francisco Opera House.

He died backstage as the audience, unaware of his death, applauded his singing of the unoperatic line which is the title role.

Only a few moments before Lindi collapsed face downward on the stage, friends asked him about his health.

"I'll tell you in five minutes," Lindi replied.

In five minutes he was dead.

Physicians ascribed his death to a heart attack.

The 55-year-old operatic tenor was born in Sweden.

Lloyd Bilow Given 15 Months In Ont. Reformatory

Lloyd Bilow, 21, of Winchester, Ont., was sentenced to 15 months in the Ontario Reformatory after being convicted on three charges before Magistrate H. L. Lloyd in County Police Court here today. Pleading guilty to charges of stealing motor vehicles belonging to Wm. Dennis, of this city and PO. White Thursday, Bilow was given 15 months each, while on a third count of assaulting a police officer while in the execution of his duties a six months term was given. All sentences meted out by Magistrate Lloyd were concurrent.

However, the maximum term of 15 months imposed by Magistrate Lloyd will run consecutively with a two-year-less-one-day term given Bilow by Magistrate Gagvin in Kingston last week.

Bilow was a companion with Roy Weaver, Belleville, during a running gun fight with police that occurred north of Belleville, when Constable N. A. McNairn of the R.C.M.P., sustained arm wounds, when shot by Weaver, who received a six-year term in the Kingston Penitentiary at the hands of Magistrate Carvin after pleading guilty to six charges, including the three read to Bilow today.

Bilow was suspected to ask this court to break up the Weaver-Bilow combination by sending Bilow to the penitentiary when Weaver is now serving six years," informed Crown Attorney S. G. Duncan K.C. upon a request from Kingston.

Assistant Crown Attorney S. G. Roberison, who prosecuted the charges here today, said he agreed but warned Bilow this was his last chance. His Worship ordered that the 15 months maximum term imposed upon Bilow would commence at the expiration of the term meted out to Bilow in Kingston. The accused will also face other charges of learning a trade.

THRONE SPEECH DEBATE NEARS CONCLUSION

Drew Warned He Holds Key as to Whether There Will be Early Election

HOLD NIGHT SESSION

Toronto, March 8. (CP)—Another night sitting of the Ontario Legislature tonight is expected to see the conclusion of the three-week debate which started Feb. 23. Five members, the mover and seconder, three major parties, were heard in day and night sessions Wednesday.

Highlight of the night debate was the declaration by R. A. McBeing (Wellington South, Liberal) leader Drew holds in his own hand the key to whether or not there will be an early election. He said he could not vote for the Progressive Conservative Government, despite the fact on an election day, hardly, could not be governing for some time. Then he added: "But if the (Premier) Hepburn Government is introducing legislation which is in accordance with sound principles, I will support it, also I will cause an election, and I would warn them that the people are not in any temper at present for an election."

Mr. McBeing urged the government to drop the term "religious education" in its proposed program in the schools and substitute "the teaching of Christianity".

There were many religions but only one christianity.

He urged continuance and enlargement of Youth Training schools in preference to the critics of the C.O.T.P. efforts to speak for the farmers when they had only about four farmer representatives in their group.

He said Dr. T. T. Shields, minister of Jarvis Street Baptist Church, Toronto, "does not teach Christianity as I believe it".

He added: "If we had a Canada full of men like Dr. Shields, we would never have a United Canada. He teaches sectionalism. What I want taught is Christianity and to my mind he is not teaching it".

Urges National Unity.

An Eastern Ontario veteran, Aurelien Belanger, (L-Prescott), interjected a plea for national unity between the French and English-speaking Canadians. He described the origin of the French-Canadians and spoke of their great attachment to Canada.

"We want that Canada in common with an integral part of the British Commonwealth of Nations shall be treated with fairness," Mr. Belanger declared. He pleaded for an end to what he called the "tyranny" increasing disintegration of the family—the cell of society". He described birth control as "a murderous, horrible octopus".

He said children should be taught in English schools and said that in the province "we have no more than the technical training of agriculture necessary."

Two C.C.F. speakers were William Ross (Riverdale, St. David) and Leslie Hancock (Wellington South) Mr. Donnelson urged the passage of unemployment insurance, declaring in connection with the government's proposed post-war health services bill that "a health plan without that fact provide for more doctors, more nurses and more hospitals is not going to be adequate."

Soil Conservation Urged

Mr. Hancock suggested creation of a soil conservation service under the personal superintendent of planning and development. "The new department," he said, "must draw up a plan, and not become a general debating ground, for a thousand unrelated schemes. I know of no problem in the province of such duration than that of reclaiming surface soil anywhere that is in danger of being carried away by the rivers and the sea".

The Welsh speaker yesterday was S. L. Hall (PC-Halton) who said he proposed to create a planning and development department was a much-needed step. He expressed thanks that British industries could be brought to this province after the war.

The Halton member urged that every member of the House and every citizen in the province should "so conduct themselves as to be worthy of the sacrifice that our men are making overseas for free speech and democracy." The province should strive for the lasting peace for which we all pray."

Gives Ontario's Position.

Before the debate resumed Attorney-General Blackwell gave the House a brief statement on Ontario's position in regard to beer rationing. He said the Federal restrictions were "entirely responsible" for reduction in supplies.

Mr. Blackwell answered criticisms of a notice recently posted in hotel rooms concerning the purchase, which says that the amount of beer available is restricted by "reason of the Federal Order-in-Council of 1943. "Our decisions were brought about by a decision of the Federal government over which we had no control," he declared.

The legislature gave second reading to amendments to the Power Commission Act and also passed through committee stage a measure which permits alterations in the Hydro service charge in Ontario.

May Conserve New Lines.

Hon. G. H. Challies, chief commissioner of the Ontario Hydro Commission, told the legislature that the commission this year may construct 300 miles of new lines in rural areas all over Ontario compared with 44 miles of lines last year.

Speaking during the committee stage of his bill to permit alteration in the service charge, he said that since some slight modification in regulations governing metal supply had been made, some 4,000 rural and 2,000 urban applications for new installations had been accepted.

The commission hoped to act on these as soon as possible but the progress would depend on how soon labor and materials were available.

The commissioner also disclosed the commission plans to have superintendents or rural power districts so placed that they will be readily available to farmers for advice and consultation.

Germans Attack Allied Convoy, No Ships Lost

Algiers, March 9 (AP)—A strong force of German aircraft attacked an Allied convoy off the coast of North Africa, it was announced today, but Allied airmen knocked down five of the attackers and damaged two others.

French fighter pilots destroyed one another—98 in the first wave and R.A.F. Beaufighters entering the fray thereafter accounted for four more.

Algiers was put on the alert and a heavy anti-aircraft barrage was cast up.

It was said authoritatively that about 60 German planes participated in the attack but failed to damage any ships. Two Allied aircraft were lost.

650 Japs Killed By U.S. Troops

New Delhi, March 9 (CP)—United States troops have killed 650 Japanese soldiers since entering the Burma campaign against a loss of seven killed and 37 wounded, it was announced today.

Total Japanese casualties in the Hukawng Valley fighting have reached a total of 2,300 killed, a communique said. More than 300 were killed during the night of March 6 alone, when a Japanese force facing entrapment north and east of Walawbum attempted to break through American lines.

American positions in this sector of the north Burma front have been further extended, the communique said, while the Chinese 22nd division, captured the town of Minghiu Ga., southeast of Maingkwan, March 7.

Fast Postal Service From Cairo, Egypt

Toronto, March 8—(CP)—What appears to be a record for high-speed postal service was revealed by Mrs. A. J. Zavitz of Alvinston, Ont., now visiting Toronto.

Mrs. Zavitz received a letter postmarked March 2, Cairo, where her grandson, Pte. George Mann, is serving with the R. C. A. F. The letter was forwarded from Alvinston yesterday, which adds up to five days from Cairo, Egypt, to Alvinston, a distance of approximately 6,000 miles.

Orange Grand Lodge Of Ontario West Protests Govt. Bill

Toronto, March 8—(CP)—A petition from the Grand Orange Lodge of Ontario west protesting a government bill which would prohibit publication of matter considered likely against any race or creed was distributed yesterday to Ontario legislature members.

The petition termed the bill, introduced in the legislature last week, an "insult to the intelligence of Ontario citizens." The petition was signed by L. H. Saunders, chairman of the Orange Order's Legislative Committee.

Under terms of the bill, said the petition, "any constant page could lawfully discuss or propound its own faith or belief."

Bulgarian Guerilla Army Growing Fast

Istanbul, March 9—(AP)—An extensive guerilla army is growing in Bulgaria, where by springtime it is expected to be large enough to give considerable help to any Soviet or Anglo-American thrust into the Balkans.

Recruits have been drawn largely from communists in Unions, and from army deserters. The Bulgarian guerilla, who call themselves Slef Shumastai (Outlanders), are numerically weak and lack leadership, but by them the Allied hope that at the decisive moment the Bulgar army may be persuaded to turn against the Germans.

The Shumastai are expanding at the rate of 3,000 to 5,000 recruits a month. They have an estimated 15,000 to 20,000 members, mostly in outlying villages or mountainhideouts. Organized action awaits the development of suitable leadership.

The War Today

Berlin Vast Military Target With Industries and R. R. Lines

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press War Analyst)

When the great American and British air fleets had dumped 900,000 incendiaries and 2,000 high-explosive bombs into an all-night-and-day battle of vengeance on Germany's capital, they were bombing the implements of the protest by some groups in Belgium and France against the Nazi "obliteration" bombing of German cities.

What's the justification for the assault on Berlin?

Well, there are two prime reasons, either of which is of vast military importance. One is that the capital is among Europe's greatest industrial cities and therefore one of Hitler's chief centres for war production. The other and even more important reason is that Berlin is the hub of Germany's huge network of railways, and prior to the war the Reich was operating on a better railroad than any other country in the world, in proportion to area.

Berlin Settlement of R. R. Lines in Europe.

Berlin is more than a railway "hub." It's a buttress. Most of the main lines running across not only Germany but Europe, converge there. The outreach reaches Hitler highly vulnerable. He must maintain the Berlin railroad installation for his supplies and troops he is using.

An important point about Berlin and other big cities—other cities—is that the entire city is filled from circumference to centre with military objectives. If you wipe out these objectives you must just about wipe out the town.

Transportation is one of Germany's bottle necks. That's Hitler's fault. When he was preparing for war he allowed his inflatable industries to expand, and to neglect the railroads in favor of the mighty military highways which he built. It never occurred to him that the time would arrive when he would lack gas and rubber tires to keep his motor transport speeding over his beautiful highways.

Railways and Canals.

He finally was compelled to place his main dependence once more on the despised railways and canals. By that time the roads had run down and their rolling stock was in bad shape. So the Allied bombers went after the railroad yards, and the locks and other vulnerable parts of the canals. Those canals are important, for Germany has been one of the world's greatest users of this form of transport.

So with its railways and with its other industries Berlin is one vast military target. When bombers attack the Nazi capital they aren't trying to bomb objectives which aren't of military importance.

Berlin Key Position.

If civilians and historic monuments are in the way in Berlin—that's the way the wind blows. Hitler, forced upon the world Berlin is the key position from which he has caused the slaughter of millions, millions of civilians—from which he literally has enslaved many millions more.

Berlin is the chief citadel which stands between the Allies and Victory.

CLOTHING TO BE KEPT

Ottawa, March 9—(CP)—An increase in the numbers of items of military clothing which may be retained by soldiers and C. W. A. C. members after discharge was announced yesterday by the Defence Department. A soldier now will be allowed to keep one battle-dress blouse, one pair of trousers, his greatcoat and his field service cap or beret. A discharged member of the C. W. A. C. may keep one beret, one jacket, and skirt, her greatcoat, field cap and tie and one pair of gloves.

Success of Convoying

The great work of the Royal Navy and its success in winning the war against enemy submarines was made clear by the First Lord of the Admiralty, A. V. Alexander, this week with losses in Allied convoys reported running less than one in 1,000 during the last half of the year 1943. The other figures he presented are equally informative and indicative of the power of the Navy to guard against sea raiders and air raiders on the ocean.

In 1941 one ship was lost out of every 181 that sailed, in 1942 one out of every 233 and in 1943 one out of every 344, with the losses in the convoys in the last half of last year being less than one in 1,000. The average loss for the last eight months is below the 1918 level, when the U-boat had been whipped in the First Great War. This is important owing to the fact that combined shipping of the United Nations is today far greater than it was in 1918, thus showing that the U-boat in the last half of 1943 was far more thoroughly crushed than it was in the last war. This is encouraging news. But he says that this victory cannot be looked upon as final yet because Germany has at least as many submarines as she had at the start of 1943 though her navy has been battled and battered and he warned that Germany has not abandoned her intention to try to cripple British communications by sea.

The official revelation that the Mediterranean route is now fully open to the East is another fact that he brought to the public notice. This shows that the reopening is worth about a million gross tons while the liberation of Italy and North Africa brought in half as much tonnage again in actual ships.

This war which has been unique in the development of the air power to unprecedented heights and in the strength of the British Army, finds the British Navy stronger than it was when France fell in 1940.

His speech was further of interest as revealing that 88 per cent of all cargoes had got through safely to Russia and that the goods, bought at so high a price in ships and blood had in the battle of our Russian Allies been turned to great effectiveness on the eastern front against the German armies.

The keen eyes of the Royal Navy have prevented nine out of eleven Japanese blockade runners on the way from reaching Germany in the past year and the two that did reach Germany were damaged.

The Navy has had a record history and its high honors have been more than equalled in this war. And the Navy will continue to play a big part during the remainder of the present struggle and in the assault upon Japan.

New Type Silk Guarded

So precious is a skein of white artificial silk made from nettles that after it was exhibited in London it was taken to a police station for safe keeping. The exhibition showed results of three years of experiments on stinging nettles at Kew. Dr. C. R. Metcalfe, head of the laboratories, said that the skein was produced for laboratory purposes only. "Whether nettle fibre will be used to make artificial silk depends on our economic situation after the war," he said. "At present other products are more readily accessible in bulk form."

British War Effort

Britain's great industrial achievement in the production of aircraft was disclosed by Production Minister Lyttelton, who named the total output of planes, mostly of the combat type, as having reached 90,000 to last December 1st.

Britain has more than replaced naval losses and has now greater naval strength than at the beginning of the war in most types of vessels.

What this "tight little island" has achieved in other production is measured in staggering figures which show how thoroughly the British people have devoted their efforts to the salvation of democracy and freedom of the world, they built 23,000 tanks, armored cars and carriers, more than a million wheeled vehicles or unarmored types, more than 115,000 guns of calibres larger than 22-millimetre and nearly five and a quarter millions rifles and machine guns.

The Minister did not give exact figures of British aircraft production but he said enough in actual figures of production to show the magnitude of Britain's war production.

One of the striking statements is that more than three-quarters of the structure weight of the new aircraft delivered to the R.A.F. and Fleet Air Arm in 1943 was manufactured in Britain with 18 per cent coming from the United States and six per cent from the rest of the British Commonwealth.

Men and women in Britain have been a model of achievement in production of war equipment as they have in other fields of the war effort.

Juice of Canned Vegetables

The "juice" of canned asparagus, green beans, lima beans and peas is a vitamin B-1 cocktail, according to L. E. Clifoorn and D. G. Heberline in Industrial Chemistry. Liquid in such canned vegetables contains from twenty-seven to forty-five per cent of the total thiamin (B-1). From sixty-four to 100 per cent of the thiamin is retained during commercial blanching or scalding of asparagus, green beans and Alaska green peas, during commercial processing, from 58 to 79 per cent of the remaining thiamin content is retained by the vegetable. This emphasizes the dietary benefit of utilizing the liquid portion, which, on the average, represents approximately one-third the weight of the canned product.

Homesick Hara-Kiri

(Montreal Herald)

The sizeable number of Japanese prisoners taken in the Marshalls indicates that the fanatical fight-till-death battle zeal of the little yellow men may be cooling off.

There is also a report from China that Japanese prisoners admit many of their comrades in the occupying army are inflicting gunshot wounds upon themselves in order to be sent home.

The boys seem to be taking even such an old, staple national remedy as hara-kiri in much more temperate doses.

Patent Pool

(Montreal Herald)

Allied victory is being aided greatly by the little-known British-American patent pool, under which war manufacturers on each side of the water have free access to every talent and invention on both sides. Thus the full capacity of both nations' productive capacity can work with the full measure of both nations' inventive genius.

Already, radio and ordnance have benefited particularly from the arrangement. Some of the devices thus made available are fairly well known, while others are still on the intimate secret list.

After the war there will have to be a general unscrambling that will pose many problems. But for now, it is good to know how completely the two English-speaking nations can co-operate to beat the Nazis and the Japs.

Norwegian Girl Commits Suicide

A young Norwegian girl, Solveig Bergdien, recently died at the hands of the Gestapo. Her crime was enjoyed as a clerk at the police offices in Stavanger, Norway, and her death deeply stirred the inhabitants.

It is now disclosed that three courageous girl committed suicide in prison for fear that she might not be able to withstand further Gestapo torture and thus endanger the life and liberty of others.

Thousands of citizens turned out for the burial of the patriotic heroine, but the German and Quisling police surrounded the graveyard and only the nearest relatives were admitted to the ceremony.

On every occasion in which virtue is exercised if something is not added to happiness, something is taken away from anxiety.—Bentham.

JUST FOLKS

FAVORS

The first is granted with a smile;
The second brings a lifted brow;
The third in just a little while
Is answered with: "Too busy now!"

Then by and by the clerk is told:
"I'm out, remember, for the day!"
The office atmosphere is cold,
Where "Come again" they used to say.

And so, my boy, of favors small
I beg of you always beware.
Do not be one too quick to call
For help along life's thoroughfare.

Stand up to care as best you can.
Upon your own good strength depend.
Pay life's full tariff as a man,
And scorn to lean upon a friend.

SPLIT COMING

With Uruguay and Paraguay reported ready to join Bolivia and Chile in recognizing the Argentine government of General Edelmiro Farrell, some observers fear that a split in Pan-American solidarity may result.

CANADA HOLDS

Reports that Canada would insist upon rigid international control of international air traffic as against the American idea of a certain measure of private initiative and competition, brought comment as to the power of Canada to impose her ideas.

In most discussions of post-war International Aviation, it has hitherto been assumed to hold the highest cards because of her geographical position which makes the Dominion the cross-road of global aviation. Recently, it is said, has been raised unofficially here that it might be possible to "by-pass" the United States to European and Asiatic points without flying across it, or at least without using Canadian land facilities.

If that proved to be correct in any substantial degree it would have given the stand of the Dominion to some extent but would not remove the fact that certainly that, from a strategical point-of view at least, Canada will play an important hand in the complex game of apportioning and regulating the world air routes of the future.

Memorial Service Held in Stirling For Cpl. Stapley

Stirling, March 8 (Special)—Residents of the high school district which the late Cpl. Ralph Donald Stapley had left in the Stirling district, a large gathering of relatives and friends attended the service held in his memory at the memorial service held in St. Paul's United Church, Stirling, on Sunday afternoon. Rev. David Gray, pastor, conducted the service, assisted by Rev. J. F. Lane of Wellington and also Mr. Kenneth Stewart, present pastor at Eggleton church where Cpl. Stapley had attended as a boy. Rev. Lane is a former pastor at Eggleton Church.

Members of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, Cpl. Stapley enlisted early in the war and saw action both in Sicily and in Italy where he was killed in action on Jan. 6th, 1944.

A special address was given by Rev. Stewart during the memorial service he choosing as his topic "Blessed are the Dead." Well-loved hymns were sung by the full choir with Mrs. Percy Hobbs rendering as a solo "Under the Flag." Two minutes silence in honor of the boy who had given his life for freedom's cause was observed, being followed by the bugle notes of the Last Post and Reveille.

Marshal Zhukov Now Doing Work He Loves Most

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, March 8.—(AP)—Russia's leading professional soldier, Marshal Gregory K. Zhukov, is back today where he is happiest—in the field.

As assistant commander-in-chief of the Red Army, second only to Marshal Stalin, the energetic Zhukov has been doing desk work coordinating the complicated manoeuvres of the vast Russian forces.

Now he is heading the west Ukrainian drive in his first active command since the 1941 battle of Moscow, replacing Gen. Nikolai Vatutin, who is ill.

Once there, Zhukov not only is doing the work he likes best. He is doing it in one of the regions he knows best.

Before the war Zhukov was in command of the Kiev district, the Red army's most important military unit in peacetime outside Moscow. This now is the scene of his thrust to the southwest.

Zhukov returned to Moscow in 1940 as chief of the general staff. As the Germans approached in September, 1941, he turned the general staff over to Marshal Shaposhnikov and went to command the western front, succeeding Marshal Timoshenko. There he led the Red army in its first great victory of the war, driving the Germans from the gates of the capital.

Overshadows Associates

From then on, he overshadowed Marshal Timoshenko, Budenny and Voroshilov—all original trimvirate of Russian defenders.

He co-ordinated the operations of three fronts or army groups in the battle of Stalingrad in the autumn of 1942. From there he went to Leningrad to break the siege in 1943.

Last summer he co-ordinated the campaign which broke the German summer offensive in the Kursk sector, which was followed by the great Russian advance to the Western Ukraine. He returned to Kharkov soon after the capture of that city and has been concentrating the efforts of the southern half of the front.

The fact that he has taken over the 1st Ukrainian front indicated the importance attached to the new offensive and the possibility of new and major victories.

Members of King Peter's Cabinet Now in London

London, March 8 (CP)—A showdown in the relations between the Allies and the Yugoslav government in Cairo, appeared imminent today with the arrival from Cairo of two members of King Peter's cabinet to discuss the possibility of the latter's co-operation with Marshal Josip Broz (Tito) leader of the Yugoslav army of liberation.

It was disclosed that Finance Minister Dr. Ivo Citich and Communications Minister M. Grisogono came to London at the "urgent invitation" of the British government, and there were indications that unless the Cairo regime agrees to back Tito and rid itself of its anti-Tito elements it may forfeit Allied recognition.

British annoyance over the refusal of King Peter and Premier Bozidjar Puric to co-operate with Tito, and their continued support of Gen. Draja Mihailovic, is mounting, informed quarters said. They have maintained this attitude, it was pointed out, despite Prime Minister Churchill's declaration in the House of Commons on Feb. 22 that Tito, "formidable champion of those who strike for freedom," was Britain's and the Allies' choice over Mihailovic, who has been accused of dealing with the Axis.

Cheese Producers Surprised by Change In Subsidy Rate

Toronto, March 8.—(CP)— President W. R. Montgomery told the annual meeting of the Ontario Cheese Producers Association yesterday that Agriculture Minister Gardiner had assured the Association executive last year that the federal subsidy on cheese would be continued at 2c cents a hundredweight through 1944 but recently it had been reduced to 2c cents.

Mr. Montgomery said the reduction came as a surprise to the members of the executive.

S. L. Jess, secretary, said that during the last 75 years Ontario has produced 696,784,077 pounds of cheese. In that period, federal and provincial subsidies totalled $4,118,975 for the estimated 35,00 cheese producers in the province. He estimated that the bills paid to the Association by the producers during that period averaged 2.5 per cent on 350 pounds of cheese while subsidies averaged 97.80 per 100 pounds.

WEDDINGS

JUNKIN—FORD

Picton, March 9—An all-military wedding of much interest was solemnized at St. Mary's Church, Allston, England, when Lieut. Robert M. Ford, Nursing Sister with the R.C.A.M.C., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ford, Wellington, Ont., became the bride of Lieut. Cpl. Samuel F. Junkin, U.S. Army, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Junkin, Natchery, Mississippi.

The bride was given in marriage by her uncle, Dr. Ford, of Watford, Herts. Her attendants were two Ottawa Nursing Sisters, Lieuts. D. Brennan and A. Carrington. The bride and bridesmaids were in full blue uniform of the R.C.A.M.C. and carried colonial nosegays. The groomsmen was Capt. Ed. Marshall, U.S. Army, of Honolulu, while the ushers were both formerly of Wellington. They were Major T. Sutton and Capt. T. Alton of the Medical Corps.

A reception was held at the nurses' residence at Roman Way of Convalescent Hospital. The wedding cake was sent from the bride's home in Prince Edward County. Capt. and Mrs. Junkin left to spend a honeymoon at Tregenna Castle, St. Ives, Cornwall.

Women of Beaver Club Pinch-Hit For Boys' Mothers

By MARGARET ECKER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, March 8—Just a boy's best friend is his mother, or his wife, when he's got a button off, a hole in his sock or a seam to stripe to be sewn on and the Beaver club knows it. In the realm of London is pinch-hitting for Canada mother's who can't be home to do the little jobs themselves.

Upstairs in the club's cozy room where there's always a fire burning in the grate. And usually in the club dressing room as well as in the Canadian serviceman with a sock off having it mended or his jacket off having a button put on.

"I call this Mother's room," said Mrs. Mortimer Appleby, formerly of Victoria, as she looked over a khaki jacket on which she was sewing a dyspeptic patch.

"Officially, they call it the 'Field Comfort Room,' but there we do more for the boys are the little things they'd ask their mothers to do—sewing on a new stripe when they get a promotion. And when they're sewing I know how many mothers would feel if they could have my needle in their own fingers.

"Quite unconsciously a boy often calls me 'Mother' as I work."

That gives Mrs. Appleby a warming glow but her most prized is the last war. Her daughter and son-in-law are now living in Japan in Borneo. In Victoria, Mrs. Appleby was the regent of an Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire chapter.

She has three assistants in the Comforts Room—all women who have lived in Canada, Mrs. Percy Shaw, who used to live in Kingston, Ont., Miss Ella of Penticton, B.C., and Eileen Elwood, of Tuscon.

Women's Christian Association Meets

The monthly meeting of the Women's Christian Association of the Old People's Home and Home for the Aged, was held on Tuesday afternoon in the auditorium of the General Hospital with the president, Mrs. R. J. Abrams, in the chair. Following the business period with the reading of the various reports, Mr. Gordon Barclay, Hospital Administrator, gave an interesting and comprehensive annual review of the activities at the hospital. The lady on duty at the Home for March will be Mrs. T. R. Dolan.

Miss Dorothy Douglas, 19 years, sweetheart of Army Lieut. Robert C. Swarzuit who suddenly went berserk at an officers' dance in Campagnes, Calif. She died from the bullets of the revolver held by the 21-year-old lieutenant. Three were killed and five wounded before a police officer halted the wild shooting spree.

Women's Activities

HOLLOWAY ST. W.M.S.

A combined special meeting of the W.M.S. and Circle Girls was held on Monday evening in Holloway St. United Church. There was a very large attendance. Mrs. L. Reid, president, of the W.M.S. was in the chair, after the opening service. Mrs. Reid gave a very cordial welcome to the girls of the Circle and to Ida Yeiffing (Cora). During the business period which followed, Marion Wood was elected as the delegate to the coming Presbyterial. The program for the evening was in charge of the Mission Circle, under the direction of Miss Dorothy Hamilton, the president. The worship service included a hymn and a reading on Africa, which gave the story of Sabeno, a blind leper, who was healed by Dr. Gilchrist, a Canadian missionary doctor in Africa. The Scripture lesson was read by Jean Robin. A poem, "I Meant to Pray," was given by Dorothy Phillips. Prayer was given by Mrs. Anderson. The offering was received and dedicated by Miss Heasman. Miss Mary Wood sang the gospel solo. The speaker for the evening was Mrs. J. A. Dills. The subject of her speech was "The Abundant Life." She said: "The abundant life will be purposeful, will have vision and a goal. A purposeful life is never a dull nor uneventful. It will also have struggle in it, for only as we struggle does one become strong and sound higher." This point was illustrated by stories of many noble men and women. Mrs. Campbell moved a vote of thanks to the Circle Girls for coming and for the fine program they had given. A social hour of games and lunch was enjoyed under the direction of Mrs. Hubbs and her group.

Hospitality Clubs Fete Air Officers

The Astra Theatre of Trenton R.C.A.F. Station was the scene of a great gaiety and revelry on Wednesday night when a number of Air Force officers, who are availing themselves of courses at the Belleville Hospitality Club, St. Michael's Hospitality Club and the Belleville Hospitality Club at a gala dance and social evening. The officers had arranged to visit the city and the hundreds of girls from the hostess clubs had a real time for themselves. Very regretfable was the fact that a large number of the officers failed to attend the affair and as a result, some of the young ladies were without dance partners. Nevertheless, most everyone was heard to say that they had a "real good time"—and who could blame them with such a fine band as that graced by the band of Buff Estes! For those who like the "hot and swing" melodies, the band "cut out" and for those who prefer a softer and more romantic tempo, it gave it to them also. And what affair would be complete without a lunch to top it all off? Long buffet tables had been set up in the dining hall and were heavily laden with food with tall red tapers in silver candelabra and attractive bowls of delicious refreshments. Hostesses for the evening were Mrs. E. R. Van de Water, Mrs. A. E. Purdy, Mrs. E. O. Kennedy and Mrs. F. Deacon.

Members of the Belleville Hospitality Club and Mrs. D. Doyle, Mrs. H. Michael Club, Mrs. Carter-of-ceremonies for the occasion was the W.M.C.A. Supervisor, Miss MacArthur. Nor was that all that lent to the charm of the evening. A birthday party dance was conducted by the M. C. and was enthusiastically received by the merrymakers. The lucky winners were Mrs. Fred Deacon and P/O. Hilliard Crown, from New York City. At the conclusion of the party, Bob MacArthur extended a vote of thanks to the hostesses, to the hostess' committee and to everyone who had contributed to the success of the evening.

War Strategies Commonplace To H.Q.Charwomen

By MARGARET ECKER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, March 9—(CP)—Military secrets to the right of them, military secrets to the left of them, 100 London charwomen go about their cleaning and polish amid the thunder of preparations for the Second Front, in the secret invasion headquarters somewhere in London.

Hitler himself would give her life probably to stand by the well-worn shoes of one of these women. But Buckingham Yard is very sure there isn't a Nazi Hari among them. Each has faced days of scrutiny and examination before she was given the job that gives her nightly freedom of the offices where the plans for the United Nations' offensive are laid.

But the Second Front Mrs. Mopp sees every night is merely background to be receiving the supper-time orders of the generals an hour.

If a reporter were allowed to interview these custom of the charwomen they'd probably admit it was as exciting as the movies, this chatting and sweeping in the early hours of the morner, Tedder, Montgomery and Eisenhower.

When each Mrs. Mopp sets out from her home for her day's work she is armed with a special identification card, for which she must produce finger-printed and photographed.

Right to Challenge

This passport gets her into the headquarters and she must carry it with her to the room where she works. At any hour of the day or night a guard with a rifle and bayonet may challenge her to produce it.

Before she walks into any room in the building she must knock and wait for permission to enter before she must reply "Cleaner." Before she enters the office of a really important leader, she must push her passport through a slot in the door before she is admitted.

Two guards armed with pistols let her in and stand by her while she scrubs.

Ivy as hard to get out of the building when their job is done as it is to get into it. Any large waste-paper baskets or dustbins must be examined before the woman may leave the gates.

The Mrs. Mopps say the police have no worries about them. Most of them have a son or husband in the forces who may be carrying out those very dangerous things made behind the closed door—a breach of which by a single slip might mean disaster for whole armies.

MISS LORETTA CARROLL PRESENTED WITH GIFTS

Miss Loretta Carroll, formerly office manager of the Peterborough branch of the Canada Steamship Lines, and latterly with the Belleville branch, has resigned to accept a position with her brother, Mr. J. W. Carroll, owner and publisher of the Peterborough Examiner. On the departure from Belleville, the staff presented her with a beautiful pearl necklace and matching earrings, in addition to the many gifts she received from her associates.

No Squabbles Among Wrens In Navy Show

Forty Girls on Trans-Canada Tour Are Proud of Their Record On and Off the Stage

By ENID MEAY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Winnipeg, March 8—(CP)—The Wrens aren't fighting. They've been "scrubbing" but to the male members of the show it's the sights worthier of the world.

"Forty women and no squabbling once I've seen everything," murmured one handy sailor, shaking his head in amazement.

"We've really become experts in the art of give and take," smiled petite, blonde Jean Macdonald of Toronto, while Barbara Chauvin, of Montreal, added: "We're quite proud of our perfect record and we intend to keep it that way."

The Wrens have had special 15-car train and is a veritable "home on wheels" complete to the last detail." Sub-Lieut. Rosemary Youle of Ottawa is in charge of the Wrens' quarters and, dressed in navy uniform and tricorne hat she acts as hostess, hostel friend and confidante.

"I see that the girls dress warmly enough, don't stay out too late and do a variety of other things," she said. "It really hasn't been difficult for they are just as co-operative. So far there has been very little discipline. It's amazing what a group We're usually so busy there isn't much time left to brood."

Girls Have Mascots

The girls, from all parts of the Dominion, ranging in age from 18 to 35, have with them a mascot, a teddy bear named "Junior" is one of the troupe favorites. Betty Shaw of Edmonton is devoted to her and she shares her stage act and two goldfish "that just appeared" in a goldfish bowl left by one of the girls.

"Once they plopped out onto a bunk," recalled Laura Cookman, who calls both Saskatoon and Vancouver home. "They were flopping around helplessly when someone discovered and rescued them. That cured us of carelessness."

Gwen Haight Tease, of Toronto has a problem on her hands to show her husband Jack, a survivor of H.M.C.S. Weyburn, now travelling with the convoy. Many battle was the first show someone.

The group had its cosmopolites, too. Anna Leigh, who sings in five languages, is from Poland. Joyce Hardwick of New York has lived through South American revolutions. Louise Burns, of Toronto, the Wrens' dancing instructor, was a member of the famed "Rockettes."

"The girls adore that touring the country with the show," is an expert's opinion. "They never forget. It's marvellous," said Frankie Curtis of Sarnia. "Perhaps, although I don't see how I'll ever be able to settle down in one place."

Red Cross Benefits From Press Interview

Toronto March 8—(CP)—Mike Swanchyn, repatriated war prisoner now at Christie Street Military Hospital for treatment of wounds he received at Dieppe, feels today that his personal part in the Red Cross National Campaign Feb. 26 to March 10, is bearing fruit. Photographed and interviewed several times in the campaign, Mike yesterday received from Pleasantville, N.Y., a letter containing a clipping of one of his interviews. Attached was a $20 cheque for the Red Cross.

HAVE QUICK-SERVE BEANS FOR SUPPER TOMORROW

HOME-BAKED BEANS WITH TANGY CATSUP

In your own taste—in just 30 minutes!

3 slices bacon or 2 tablespoons bacon dripping
½ cup tangy catsup
1 to 2 teaspoons dry mustard
3 tablespoons sugar
1½ teaspoons salt
½ teaspoon pepper
1 can Van Camp's Quick-Serve Beans

METHOD: Fry bacon and remove from pan. To bacon fat, add water, sliced onion, catsup and fat and bring just to the boiling point. Add to boiling mixture into a casserole dish, pour in boiling water. Cover and bake in a slow oven, 300° F., for 25 minutes. Remove cover and cook an additional 5 minutes. (Remove lid earlier if you prefer beans with less sauce.) For a meatier dish, add cooked bacon and bacon dripping.

YES! YOU CAN HAVE HOME-BAKED BEANS IN JUST 30 MINUTES!

Don't Neglect Beauty Rules

Larabee Day advocates following a daily beauty routine

By HELEN FOLLETT

KEEPING UP with the good looks grade is surprising some busy duties, sticking to a strict health schedule makes a woman stronger, happier in better spirits for doing these endeavors even for a brief lapse, and you may not be able to catch up again.

We're learning more and more each day about the need of mental hygiene, keeping a firm rein upon devastating emotions. A woman should know that if she gives way to tears because the peas does not come home for dinner she will look like a hag when her spouse arrive and will be a complete wash out the next morning. Instead of having words with the papa she should ask him if he has a good time and will insist that she enjoyed having dinner alone with her new servant girl. She will see her fuse papa who may be expecting a lawsuit and is disappointed because he didn't get it.

The host of the commissary department is going to find a way to plan balanced meals despite rationing; too much protein, so much carbohydrates, so much fat. Plenty of fruit and vegetables for vitamins and minerals for the body.

The daily bath is a beauty measure; the busy woman finds it a means of complete relaxation which, goodness knows, we all need more than we ever did before.

If she's going to get through the household treadmill without undue fatigue she must carry her body in the manner in which nature intended—abdominal tissues as flat against her back bone as she can hold them, chest lifted high so that breathing will not be shallow, shoulders with an easy poise.

Good posture keeps the body young and resilient. Throw the shoulders forward, let the abdominal muscles sag and you're a candidate for the meal bag figure. Not only that but you'll soon be elected to that unlovely estate.

HEALTH CHATS

DIABETES

Diabetes is a disease due to lack of a secretion Known as insulin that is made in a gland in the abdomen called the pancreas. When a person has diabetes, he is unable to use sugar as energy energy in the body so that the amount of sugar in the blood increases and sugar is eliminated in the urine. In persons over forty-five years of age it is not uncommon for hardening of the arteries and high blood pressure to be present in the patient who has diabetes.

In treating diabetes, injections of insulin are often employed to reduce the amount of sugar in the blood. The insulin makes it possible for the body to use the sugar. It, however, too much insulin is given the amount of sugar in the blood will be reduced to too low a level. This is called hypoglycemia, it the should happen in a patient who has hardened arteries and high blood pressure it may result rather seriously, since it may lead to slowing of the circulation and the formation of blood clots in the diseased blood vessels, such as those supplying the brain or the heart. On the other hand, diabetes in older persons is usually milder than in younger ones so that smaller doses of insulin are required.

Hypoglycemia may develop because too much insulin is given. Unusual activity, such as golfing or mountain climbing may cause a sufficient amount of sugar to be used up by the body and to lead to a low blood sugar. In such cases a failure to absorb and utilize food may also lead to the same sort of condition. Thus the diabetic must take care that he follows the diet which is planned by his physician, that he eats all of the food prescribed and takes only that amount of insulin which the physician has figured out to be proper.

Acknowledging Hospital Gifts

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Recently I had a baby. When I was in the hospital, friends sent me lovely cards, and gifts for the baby. Will you please suggest an appropriate note of thanks for the cards, and one for the gifts?

Mother.

For the cards . . . somewhat like this would be appropriate:

Dear Sue,

Your lovely card, sent to me while I was in the hospital, made me very happy. I kept it where I could look at it often, and I'm saving it to show my new offspring what kind of friends she and I have. Thank you for your sweet thought.

Please come in sometime soon to see "us".

Devotedly,

And for a gift:

Dear Sally,

There's great rejoicing when the adorable little white mitten you knitted for my baby arrived! They were beautiful, as of course they would be, for no one can knit as beautifully as you. They are just so soft, and Cynthia is going to be so comfortable in them, and so proud too, the little dear.

Please come to see her soon—perhaps some day next week, if you can, between four and five. We'll be looking for you.

Dearest love and appreciation to you, Sally dear,

Affectionately,

Attendants at a Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Is it ever considered proper and in good taste to have only one of a married couple as attendant (of either the bride or groom) at a formal church wedding? Does the bride's style of dress change then?

To home weddings? To marriages at a parsonage?

2. Who buys the flowers for (1) the bride, (2) the bridesmaids, (3) the boutonnieres for the groom and the ushers?

E. V. L.

1. Yes, it is entirely proper to have one of a married couple or an engaged couple as an attendant to either the bride or the groom, in a formal or informal wedding, in church or in a home, or at a marriage in a parsonage. And this is entirely reasonable too, since the bride has the privilege of choosing her attendants, and the groom chooses his best man and ushers. Each is independent of choice, and there just isn't any reason why the bride or groom should forego choosing whom they wish to have as attendants. And this should be taken for granted by a husband or fiance of a bride's attendant and by a wife or fiancee of a groom's attendant.

2. (1) Usually the bride's bouquet is sent by the groom. (2) Usually the bridesmaids' bouquets are supplied by the bride's family. (3) The groom buys the boutonnieres for himself and for his attendants.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Choice Between Two Beaux—

Not Much in Love With Either

Marilyn is charming. She has sent me her picture so when she writes "people think I'm not bad on the eyes," I can't see any reason to take a second glance.

Among those who find her not hard to look upon are two boys, and she wants my advice as to which she should marry. One's a young soldier overseas and the other, because of a geographical cut of fate, here doing essential war work. Marilyn don't love with either of these boys. She's in that state known as "much or less" and just then what's a girl to do when all of her friends are getting married?

Well, my dear Marilyn, the war isn't going to last always and this rush for war-time marriage licenses is bound to slow down. And the cold gray dawn of the morning after it bound to set in all over the world. Marilyn, and her young friend aren't old enough to remember the cold gray dawn that set in after the last World War. It wound up in a depression, and there wasn't much glamour left in anything.

So, unless this girl happens to be what is known as "madly in love" with either of these boys, it's not sensible for her to consider marriage at this time at all.

Eighteen has been called the most heavenly age for a girl. By that time she has probably developed what the French call "beauty of the devil." If the gumdrops and ice cream sodas she has consumed in the grade schools have given her plump she's probably called a ballet on these delicacies and her figure is young, supple, charming.

Her hair has the sheen of a chestnut. Her complexion is at its best. Years of happiness are dawning; years she should be able to remember as the best of her life, an enchanting picture taken of herself at 18, she'll probably tell her daughter "I looked like that once."

Yes, that's the age for a girl if she's so desperately in love she feels she won't survive if she doesn't get the beloved—but she usually isn't waiting. But when it's a case of a choice between two boys, and she can't decide which one to take, she's very foolish to take either.

There'll probably be a long prosaic life ahead, a round of domestic duties, washing, bottle sterilizing, and the young husband instead of paying her compliments may have an eye out to pay compliments to someone else. And the evening paper is full of a serious domestic rival—think well, Marilyn, before you marry. Is it just because everyone else is getting married.

BEAUTY By Helen Jameson

Noses That Blush Like the Rose

You would think that any self respecting nose would stay decently pale. But no, it has to put on its act, play a role in the tragedy of beauty griefs that beset the distressed. Blushing is not its business. When it throws a vermillion rage it becomes coldest—and detestable. There are complexion troubles that a girl can bear with a certain degree of fortitude; the flamboyant beak is not one of them.

There are various reasons for redness. One has to do with the circulation of the blood. A girl with cold feet and clammy hands usually has a red nose. In some cases of malnutrition the facial surface is chalky white and raw for the nose that takes on coloring. It just doesn't make sense, but there you are. The big question is what can you do about it? In such a case, go sit in the doctor's office until he can have a word with you, find out if you are under par. He will probably order vitamins, make you eat dietary products and attend to your health needs generally. You belong to that large multitude of individuals who are not getting what they are not well.

Then there's the lotion on physicians now, but in peacetime a physical checkup once a year is an excellent investment.

If the diet is at fault, you should avoid all spiced, highly seasoned foods. Heavy eaters are likely to have red noses. In some cases of blushing, there aren't so many of them among us—those who go in for drinking, for example. Now that they have to fill up on vegetables instead of meat they will get less protein, more vitamins and mineral salts, their complexions will improve. What the balanced diet does for good looks is not to be under-estimated.

In the matter of local treatment, it is necessary to avoid hot and cold water, both of which excite the tiny capillaries that are close to the surface of the skin. The water must be warm enough to form a suds. Rinse with tepid water, dry, apply ointment of zinc oxide.

Why piling the powder pad, be it ever so fine, vigorous manner in which some women grind on powder makes the nose resentful. Also if the pad is not scrupulously clean it can carry germs that will set up an infection.

Small red veins on the wings of the nose can be removed by means of the electric needle. They are ruptured capillaries through which act that have broken out of bounds. The needle invades the tissue, burns away the vein and, if the operator is conscientious and qualified, no scar will result.

Casual Charm

Smart dinner dress.

By VERA WINSTON

A LONG SLEEVE and short cap sleeves are a combination that appears frequently on spring dinner dresses. This particularly casual model is of navy blue crepe with white painted dots and has a large white taffeta bow above the deeply cut V neckline. There is rhinestone trimming on the blue suede belt to give a touch of extra sparkle. The skirt is simple with a few gathers above and below the waistline.

and takes it at the times outlined by the doctor.

Before any insulin is given, it is often a good idea for the patient to have a careful study made to determine just what amount will be required to keep his blood sugar at the normal level. If the patient suffers from heart disease or hardening of the arteries in the brain, it may be a good plan for him to take small feedings of starchy foods at frequent intervals, particularly at night before retiring.

Doctors also know that as a rule it is also a good idea in these elderly persons to have the insulin given in small doses several times a day rather than once to give the kind of insulin that can be given in just one single dose each day. The patient must also bear in mind to recognize the symptoms of lowered blood sugar, such as a feeling of faintness, dizziness and headache. Should any of these symptoms appear, the patient must be instructed to take fruit juices or sugar followed by milk and then to call the doctor for further instructions. The following of these simple rules will do much to keep unnecessary reactions from occurring in the diabetic patient.

B.C.I. Senior Cagers Come From Behind to Snatch Win From Albert College by 35-33

Winners Were Trailing Students 21-07 With Three Minutes to Play

WIGGINS SCORES 11 PTS.

In a "crimson tide" from the Belleville Collegiate Institute rolled last night to overwhelm Albert College with just more than behind to beat Albert College 35 to 33 in a senior City of Belleville Interscholastic basketball game.

COBRA, basketball fixture on the Belleville Y.M.C.A. program last night, Coach Fred Thurnwell's "crimson tide" from B.C.I. overwhelmed senior cage foes with Albert at two games each in a best-of-five series. Scores of fifth and deciding match to decide which school will represent the COBRA, playdowns in the senior cage division.

Coach Pepper's Albert College quintette let the procession at the playoff start in the tune of 31 to 14 and seemed certain winners when they, were out in front, 31 to 07, with three minutes to full time. But, when, suddenly the Collegians roared through in the most spectacular Merriwell finish in the history of the Intermediate and senior schedule. Actually the "crimson tide" occurred during the last half, but it was in the last few moments of play, that the Albert defence faltered slightly and headed by Jimmy Wiggins, Belleville boy, the Collegians proved prolific opportunists to score eight points in the last few minutes of play to the lightened up to keep Albert from their scoring sheet for that heidt three minutes, except for Fulford's free ball.

Close Checking.

The game was one of thrills and close checking featured with Albert College gaining five of their 21 points in the first half by virtue of free shots after foul. In the same period B.C.I. scored four points over that period. Checking was not too horrid in the last half, as the box score indicates.

Don Mason led the Collegians on the attack scoring six baskets and a foul shot for 13 points, nine of which came in the last half, while the elongated B.C.I. centre ran mate Neal Bowerman, who finished with six points and then Bankier and Wiggins. For Albert College Jack Fulford paced the attack with ten points, the remaining eight Albert players following with seven.

A filled gallery rent the air in the dying moments as the "crimson tide" moved to within striking distance and then raced through with the season's most spectacular rally by making 21 points before the first had faced them but a few moments previous. Stan Wiggins' plunging shots from all corners of the floor was another feature of the game, as was from Mason's great scoring display.

COLLEGIANS WIN JUNIOR TITLE FROM ST. MIKES

Harold Mott's Squad Rally in Second Period to Edge Out Victory.

SCORE IS 3-2

Belleville Collegiate Institute won the Junior Red Cross Hockey Championship in the city series by defeating St. Michael's Academy. Yesterday afternoon at the Arena Gardens, the Collegiate B. C. I. team came from behind to defeat St. Mike's 3 to 2. Scores in the best-of-three series in successive games were 3-2 and 4-3. This is the first scholastic hockey title of the district.

Twice the Church St. "Collegians" had to come from behind before finally winning out. In the first game scores stood at two-all at the end of regulation time. It was at the end of the second with no further scoring registered.

Harold Mott's "Collegians" held the edge in territorial play in the initial game, Goalie Jack Pearson's "Irish" opened the scoring midway through the period, when Pat Mc-Grath flashed the red light by beating Dodson cleanly on a pass from centre. At the end of the first period the lead was withheld down to even by Maurice Vollick, who was in position to take Liddle's corner pass-out to knot the count.

Again in the middle session the red-shirted "Collegians" dominated the play and it was the "Irish" who forced in the fore once again, Bill Lorimer shooting home perfectly with Bennett to score, this latter teaming together for both St. Mike's goals in the B. C. I. net, their hockey backs to the wall and their goalie, Dodson, playing a hard two-solo rush to stint the Irish defence and stop what the equaliser behind Scanlan. It was Maurice Vollick's second goal that clinched the piece. Mark Steel, Don Mason and Vollick in front of St. Mike's goal and Dodson in home for Mott's squad the winning counter.

There was no scoring in the last period, although both teams muffed chances, but over-anxiousness on the part of the Irish proved their junior players. The Irish held a territorial edge in the third but could not beat Dodson for even the tying counter and a happy setting of circumstances for the B. C. I. district.

The line-ups:—

Belleville Collegiate, goal, Dodson, defence, McCreary and Liddle, centre, Mason, wings, Steel and Vollick, spares, Bennett, Lorimer and Mott.

St. Michael's Academy, goal, Scanlan, defence, Moher, and Duffy, centre, Semark, wings, Lorimer and Bennett, spares, Pearson, Meagher, Barrett, Upper, Cooper and Bone.

Referee, "Spooky" St. Louis.

Canadian Soldier-Boxers Lost Out in British Finals

(By The Canadian Press)

Canadian soldier boxers lost out in the British army boxing finals when seven came last night at Blackpool, England, one of the entrants, Cpl. Anthony Madigan of Canadian Japanese of Fort Macarthur, Ont., getting a hand from the uniformed audience although he lost out in the flyweight final of a decision to L. Bdr. Billy Foghall, an English artillerysman. Gnr. Dougie Marsh, former Montreal newspaperman, also lost on a decision in the welterweight class to Sgt. B. Parker of England.

Spr. Art Butler, Kingsville, Ont., featherweight, could not continue in his bout because of an eye injury and Spr. Ross McCarthy of Ridgetown, Ont., was unable to enter the ring in the lightweight final because of an injury. Sgt. Jack Ennis, Windsor, Ont., lightweight, was disqualified for holding tactics in the second round of his final with Lt. Bdr. Johnny Clayton of England. Gnr. Jack Billings of St. Marys, Ont., was decisioned in the bantamweight class.

Five Hamilton rinks and five from other Ontario centres remained undefeated last night in the Ontario Tankard Hamilton curling bonspiel.

W. R. Wheeler of Guelph, Dr. H. C. Brereton of Toronto High Park, F. G. Wilson of London, William Lochead of Forest and Dr. S. T. White of Orangeville have yet to be defeated while Hamilton victors were R. M. Cassels and R. W. Crooks of the Thistle rink, Hamilton, Dr. A. E. Waikley and S. F. S. Jones of the Victoria club.

One of the surprises of the day was the defeat of Joe Tomlinson's Toronto Granite rink who dropped a 13-10 decision to Dr. Cassels' Thistle four. Tomlinson held a two-point edge for nine ends but the Thistle squad packed in two on the final end to take the decision.

The group has four events, the Spectator trophy, Weston Lumber trophy, Seagram trophy and Hanlons trophy will start tonight.

Toronto, March 8—(CP) — G. Crawford Hood, city of Scarboro, Ont., one of the grand old gentlemen of Canadian sport, tells of one of the Dominion's early sports promoters in the June issue of Maclean's magazine.

Mr. McClean was secretary-treasurer of the Hamilton Cricket Club in London, Ont., in 1879-1883. Headquarters for cricketers were those who promote sports attractions but Mr. McClean created a sport of his own. He connected with Canada's first bicycle track meet at Toronto July 1.

"I have no data in regard to this meet," he writes, "but have very vivid memories of the morning of that day as the rain was coming down in downpour of rain lasting until shortly after noon. And by a combination of circumstances I was responsible financially for the expenses incurred, amounting to upwards of $800.

"However, while at the dinner table, a member of our club came in with tidings that the sun was shining and by 1.30 p.m. not a cloud was in sight. At this time a procession was formed at the Toronto Cricket Club with more than 100 riders in line. The races were a great success. We took in upwards of $1,700, a great relief to my bank account."

HAMILTON MAJORS WIN

(By The Canadian Press)

Hamilton Majors went into a three-games-to-one lead in the Senior O.H.A. playoffs by trimming St. Catharines Saints 5-4 Wednesday night on Hamilton ice but the Saints were in the finals, an overtime was necessary before a decision was reached. Johnny Gottselig was the hero of the game, not only for scoring the payoff goal in 1:06 minutes of extra play but for notching four of the Majors' total. Doug Runions got the other.

Jud Mateer of the Saints, tied the fray at 4-all with a goal in the closing time after Majors had led 4-2 and 4-3. Then came the extra session that ended the series in two straight wins for their first Interscholastic title in some time. "Maybe we couldn't win at football, but we are veterans at hockey," the 1944 junior champs chanted after the game. Maurice Avilluck's two goals, coupled with Johnny McCreary's solo effort were good enough to win for the Church St. champs, as Don Semark and Bill "Lorimer reversed Belleville's form of two Irish counters.

Friday afternoon an important senior Interscholastic game brings St. Mikes seniors up against Albert College, when a loss for the latter would eliminate Dodo. May Be Last.

Tonight's grudge game between the Trenton "Flyers" and No. 6 Repair Depot may be the last hockey game local fans will have the opportunity of seeing for the duration of war personnel these two squads have proven to be equal opponents. Each gained the upper hand of victory in two meetings. They played a one-all draw in their first game and then repeated with a four-all tie late in the season. Of course the Flyers didn't boast of their famed Lt. McAdam-Eagleson second line as a combination in either of those games. Regardless of this, tonight's game is bound to be a fast skating puckfests and a fine evening of hockey can be assured.

Good Coaching.

We forgot to mention the fact that Cpl. Murdo Martin's Senior Ontario Made Yard downed now stationed with the Canadian Army at Kingston, in charge of the Engineers' Air Cadet team that beat the local Air Cadet lads here Tuesday night.

Interesting, What!

In 20 seasons with the White Sox, Ted Lyons faced the Cleveland Indians his softest touch, defeating them twice for every time they beat him . . . The figures show 22 victories and 22 losses . . . Tris Speaker's batting slump, including block, whipping him 46 times while pitching for his pitching staff in 10 games . . . Nifty comments: Ray Hayworth, after 17 years . . . Louisville of the American Association has signed Lou Novikoff, 5-F championship with 12 rejections on its 1944 roster . . . With 18 players, 17 of second veterans in the fold, Chicago White Sox are likely to be one of the teams the Yankees will have to beat in the American League this season . . . Certainly they appear to have a lot more in the way of all-around speed than in Tigers, Athletics, Red Sox or Browns.

A Real Thriller.

When it comes to last-minute thrillers in the sport field to provide breath-taking thrills, yesterday's Albert College at Belleville Collegiate senior Interscholastic cage tussle was tops. Here are a few of the game's statistical gleams: Down to 14 at half time; Coach Pepper's men and white clad lads seemed certain to win with the count standing 31 to 07 with less than three minutes to play—but they didn't.

In the most spectacular Merriwell finish seen in local Interscholastic basketball in years the "crimson tide" from B. C. I. really rolled in for that last few moments to snatch victory right from the mouth the Albert players' mouths, as they rallied to win 36 to 33. It was incredible, but there are the plain facts. Coach Thurnwell's Maroon and white clad lads seemed certain to win with the count standing 31 to 07 with less than three minutes to play—but they didn't.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 105

By SAM GORDON
The Bridge Expert

Bridge is a scientific game. But it is sprinkled liberally with horse sense. Like getting paid for holding honors. Every bridge player knows the rule.

An honor is any one of the five highest cards in a suit. So an honor is a card higher than a nine. An honor is a ten or a jack or a queen or a king or an ace.

It makes no difference if you know not how to bid. Nor does it make any difference if you know how to play the cards. It makes no difference if you are dumb, you still get paid for holding honors.

You get paid for holding honors any old honors, or any number of them. Only for certain groups of honors, all in one suit. And at a no-trump contract, the only honors considered are aces.

The book counting the contract bridge laws has the scoring table. It quotes merely: Premium points for honors. In one line. For four trump honors, 100; five honors, 150; for four one-no-trump, 150.

The law book does not explain what it means. Further details are given. Consequently, all is not clear to the uninitiated. So, let me think to cut a trick.

If the contract is played at no-trump, any one player who holds at least three honors, and his side gets 100 points.

If he holds all four honors, his side gets 150 points.

It makes no difference who is declarer. Only the player who holds the honors gets credit for the points for his side. It may be declarer, or dummy, or one of the defenders.

Take the case in this deal:

	NORTH
	♠ J 8 5 3
	♥ K 7 4
	♦ J 7 5
	♣ 9 8 3
WEST	EAST
♠ A 10 4 2	♠ 7 6
♥ A 10 9	♥ Q J 8 6 3
♦ A 10 4	♦ K Q 9 6 2
♣ A J 7	♣ 10 6 5 2
SOUTH
♠ K Q 10
♥ 5 2
♦ K Q 7
♣ K Q 4

South played the contract at two no-trump and took eight tricks. So, South and his partner got 70 points on their game score for odd tricks.

But west held all four aces. And in spite of South being the declarer, west and east got 150 bonus points for holding all four aces in one hand.

Then that has, gita.

"Guadalcanal Diary"

The glorious story that was written in the smoke of the battle for Guadalcanal, the first great human picture of this war—the story of the U.S. Marines on Guadalcanal, thumbing their noses at desperate odds . . . wisecracking to the crack of snipers' bullets . . . yes and dreaming of dames amidst the terrors of jungle warfare. It is a throat-clutching epic of victory told in heartbreaking story of "just guys" America will always remember.

20th Century-Fox has faithfully followed its line and detail. Treadgold" sensational best-seller. It has entrusted the production to Lewis Milestone for an outstanding cast headed by Preston Foster, Lloyd Nolan, William Bendix, Richard Conte and Anthony Quinn, and including Richard Jaeckel, Roy Roberts, Minor Watson, Ralph Byrd, Lionel Stander, Reed Hadley and John Archer. With his inspired direction of the stirring film, Lewis Seiler has cut a new niche for himself among Hollywood's directors, while Byron Foy has given the film a lavish production.

In fiction, "Guadalcanal Diary" is the saga of the campaign against the Japs through Guadalcanal and Tulagu that marked the first land offensive in the war against the Japs, but most of all, it is the story of the men behind the guns—heroes all, and all great Americans.

You'll meet them all in this picture as great as America itself, all in all their rich profusion. Father Connolly, All-American from Notre Dame—and all hero—who never missed a many flight, now adds to his record of "Mack" Malone, the redoubtable sergeant whose men revere him as often as they swear at him; "Stan" the Brooklyn cabdriver, who longed to see "dem beautiful bums"; "Goose" who was proud of his "initial" blow in the first blitz of triumphant transference of great literature to screen master-pieces.

Swell Featurette.

The whole swell featurette has been assembled for exhibition on the opening day, featuring martial America's glory in action—the brilliant, hard-won action that gave the Japs their first bitter taste of defeat.

With "Guadalcanal Diary" it can be said that 20th Century-Fox has truly added still another to its long list of triumphant transferences of great literature to screen master-pieces.

The students demanded "satisfaction."

Philadelphia, March 9—(AP)—Bob Carpenter, president of the Philadelphia National League Baseball club, came right back last night at the student council of John Hopkins Univegsity, Baltimore, which accused hill "knife of Phillies" the nickname—Blue Jays—which the collegians have used as their tag for 6 years.

"Why, they haven't won a ball game in 20 years, have they?" said Carpenter, "I saw their football team once, and boy, what a ragged outfit."

New York—(AP)— Because of a dearth of signed contracts, the New York baseball writers' association announced a change in policy through which all players would be allowed to report for Spring Training whether they had come to terms or not. The writers said only 16 ball players had signed 1944 contracts. Training is scheduled to start at Atlantic City next Monday.

Kingston —(CP)— Sgdn. Ldr. F. Fraser's Kingston rink yesterday won the Dominion Curling crown and the Whig Standard tankard by defeating R. E. Dalby's Toronto rink four 12-9. Semi-finals were reached in consolation events.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, March 9—(AP)— Baseball isn't the holdouts as much as the holdups that are worrying baseball club owners . . .

The demands of players have risen so that some minor leagues across the country pay salary limits so that they can load their squads with the player limit . . . At Buffalo John Stiglmeier recently figured that if he paid 19 players all they wanted, he'd have a monthly payroll of $10,000 in a league with a $6,500 top . . .

And for that matter, the international league is full of minor holdouts . . . The Houston, Tex., Gun Club, which ran the shoot every Sunday for 28 years, has shut down. No ammunition.

Winner Determined Not to Fight in United States Again

GOES TO MEXICO

By FRANK FEAWLEY
Associated Press Sport Writer.

Hollywood, March 9—(AP)— Displeased by a split-decision loss to Luther (Slugger) Wilde here last summer and inability to get a lightweight championship bout, Juan Zurita returned to his native Mexico City, determined not to box in the United States again.

Today, the bolder Mexican Boxing Association title. He whipped the clever, rugged Sammy Angott last night in Hollywood Bowl Park. It marked the first time in Sammy's long career that he had lost a fight at the lightweight limit and he lost by a wide margin.

It was not a lively fight but it was not Zurita's fault that there were not more exchanges. Angott clinched after nearly every lead, and in the fighting, which was usually be sneaky, he came out second best.

Angott is the only man in the champion who came out face last fall and slammed Slugger White all over the ring in the same ball park to win every one of the 15 rounds. He was away off in his timing and he landed few solid punches.

That was partly due to Zurita's southpaw attack and his ability to keep Angott off balance, block his left hooks and uppercuts, and counter with rights to the head and body. The fight followed that pattern all the way from the second round to the finish and there was little doubt of the outcome as early as the 10th.

Angott was belittled only a few hours before the fight that he must take his pre-induction physical examination here today. His Draft Board had just reclassified him 1-A. He is married and has two children.

HERSHEY BEARS DEFEAT BARONS

By the Canadian Press

Hershey Bears launched a scoring spree that right-winger the American Hockey League's Cleveland Barons 9-2 in the loop's only scheduled encounter.

It was the final game of the season between the teams, leaders of the Eastern Division, and Barons, who had won the Calder Memorial as well as the league.

Tom Forgie started the scoring for Bears early in the first period. Hec Pumo added another 16 seconds later, and Cleveland's Bert Hutchinson got his team's first goal at 11:38.

Pumo scored again at the opening of the second and made it a third in the final. Pat Patterson and Peg O'Neil tallied two more goals in the second period.

The third period saw Harms, Bud Jarvis and Frank Daley chalked Bears' total to nine by each bagging a counter. None to Cleveland's second goal after the Hershey team had their total added up to seven.

2 DEMANDS SEEN AS BARRING PATH TO SETTLEMENT

Questions of Finn Withdrawal to 1940 Border and Interning of Nasi Troops at Issue

FINNS CONCILIATORY

London, March 9 (CP)—Soviet demands that Finland withdraw her troops to the 1940 Russian Finnish border and intern all German troops now in Finland appeared today to be the chief stumbling block barring the path to peace between the two countries.

British press dispatches from Stockholm said that the Finns had advised Moscow that they are prepared to accept all the conditions imposed by the Russians as a prerequisite to negotiations but that they cannot accede to these two demands.

The Finns were said to have taken the stand that compliance with the demands to which they took exception would mean civil war, result in a revolt of Finnish pro-German elements and action by German troops themselves leading to hostilities within Finland between the Finns and Germans.

On the other hand, it was said, the Finns explained that if negotiations were pressed to a satisfactory conclusion and a peace would be signed, it would be possible to escape the German troops out of Finland and withdraw Finnish forces to the border without incident. It is estimated there are about seven German divisions in Finland.

(A Berlin broadcast recorded in New York last night by CBS) quoted a German commentator as saying that only military force could dislodge the Nazi forces from Finland. He recalled that the German had done in Italy and added: "Independent of anything the Finnish government does, the German troops are in Finland to defend Finnish territorial integrity."

Russia remained silent on the situation.

SEND DELEGATION TO OTTAWA

Toronto, March 9 —(CP)— The Ontario Cheese Producers' Association, in 11th annual convention here yesterday decided to send a deputation of dairy farmers to Ottawa next week to protest the delayed failure of the Dominion Agricultural Commodities Board to reach association regarding recently-announced milk subsidies.

Little Benny's Note Book

Today in school Miss Kitty told us about something good coming out of everything, even war, saying, "Thousands of good men are already planning how to improve human relations when this war is over. Charles, are you paying attention? she said.

Meaning Pods Simkins, and Pods said, Yes ma'am.

Then tell me what is meant by the expression human relations, Miss Kitty said, and Pods said, Human relations are all relations except family relations.

I fear that it sometimes all too true, Miss Kitty said. Well as I was about to say, when the war is over it is hoped, for instance, that there will be work for everybody, so that poverty will be unknown, and where there is no poverty there is very little of the dissatisfaction that leads to trouble between various classes of people. Now if you can suggest some other practical way to improve human relations, please raise your hand. Well, Pumfrey? she said.

Meaning Pumfrey Bond, and Humfrey said, A lot of people have trouble with each other just because they dont like each other's face, so after the war there ought to be an invention to sprinkle on babies to make them all look exactly alike when they grow up, and then you couldn't object to anybody else's looks without objecting to your own, and who's going to do that?

That's hardly practical, to say the least, Miss Kitty said, and I waved my hand, saying, Even if people look alike, that dont say they wont have different views, and I betcha they were always fighting, so after the war the government ought to give a prize every day to everybody that's been good natured to everybody, so then everybody would be kind and thoughtful all the time, because nobody makes people feel better than winning prizes.

Oh dear, now who would say Benny's suggestion is practical? Miss Kitty said.

Which everybody waved their hands and Miss Kitty quick started arithmetic.

Sudbury Takes Lead in Playoffs

Timmins, Ont., March 9 (CP)—Sudbury Open Pit last night took a 3-2 lead in the Northern Ontario Hockey Association senior play-off final, quelling Porcupine All-Stars 4-2 in the first game of the best-of-seven series played here. The first two games were played at Sudbury.

Jim Bower, star Sudbury centre, broke loose with one goal and fired another on two other. Gallant Wisher, and Goaltender Ott Stanfield completed the Sudbury scoring.

GIVE GENEROUSLY TO THE RED CROSS

Red Cross Campaign Needs Over $15,000 To Reach Quota; Only 5 Days' Canvassing Left

Although no great concern over the size of individual donations is the current Red Cross drive was expressed at campaign headquarters this morning, the total of money contributed was less than 40 per cent of the $38,000 objective for the Belleville district. Only $15,000 has subscribed to the campaign to date by a total of 430 subscribers, most of them the Special Names list. With five days only left to go in the drive it will be necessary speed up if the other 60 per cent needed is to be reached.

It was hoped today that payroll receipts might bolster the final week total and put the campaign closer to its objective, but the committee who have placed their pay-roll collection facilities in the charge of the Red Cross did not solicit donations from the employees until this week and so the cash returns will not be available until next pay day.

Even at best, it was declared by the Red Cross headquarters staff, pay roll returns would not be sufficient to guarantee the success of the campaign. If industry did not realize that the Red Cross was far from "having its money there" that it faced an actual shortage of funds if small contributions were not stepped up to the greatest amount that could possibly be subscribed.

Probably the finest example of an earnest endeavor to help is shown by the act of ten-year-old Beverley Meek, of 37 Dundas street west, who several of her little playmates who met Saturday, held a "play" for the benefit of the Red Cross and turned over the total proceeds to the Red Cross campaign.—[illegible] cents cash.

ITS Canvassers.

ITS canvassers are working in the district which comes within the Belleville district radius. There will be no actual canvass made at this Air Station but Red Cross workers in nurses uniforms will be at the station one day next week and the boys will be given the opportunity to contribute to the campaign if they wish, to do so.

The committee in charge of the campaign announced that there are still some two thousand people who will want to repeat their generous and patriotic gesture of a year ago

If your canvasser has called and you have not given to the drive yet, now is the time to telephone 780 and you will be given an opportunity of being included in this most worthy work.

Churchill Still Repartee Master He Shows House

London, March 9. (AP)—Prime Minister Churchill proved himself still a master of House of Commons crossfire today.

To one questioner asking who would speak for the government in the event of conflicting statements of various ministers, Mr. Churchill commented "drily, "it is the worst course to assume I might have a shot at it myself."

Another question as to the implications of a recent speech by Herbert Morrison, Home Secretary, MP, Churchill checked quickly with the comment, "I gather he was embarking on a philosophical disquisition on a hypothetical and conjectural situation which might never arise at the war".

To a protest against one or his own replies came the plump "the matter is under constant review". Mr. Churchill chuckled and commented that "a certain amount of latitude in the use of Shakespeare always has been accorded to every government as long as I can remember."

B.C. LEGISLATURE DEFEATS BILL

Proposed Measure Would Have Compelled Newspapers to Publish Replies Without Deletion

Victoria, March 9.—(CP)— The British Columbia legislature yesterday defeated, 27 to 17, a second reading bill which would have compelled newspapers which publish statements about an individual to publish on request replies of reasonable length without deletion or alteration.

The measure, in the form of an amendment to the Libel and Slander Act, was introduced by former Premier T. D. Pattullo (Lib.-Liv.-Prince Rupert), and the only other supporter was Tom Uphill (Lab-Purnie) and the bill was defeated on a voice vote.

Harold Winch, CCF. Opposition Leader, said he had found that in the majority of cases the press "play fair" and that in the few cases unfair it will carry a statement or correction without argument.

Mrs. Nancy Hodges (LC-Victoria), a working newspaperwoman, said it was fortunate for newspapers to do not always print everything that is said in the legislature, for if they did, she said, members often would be shocked at publication of their own words.

Nazis Use Tanks Against Strikers In Milan, Italy

By EDWARD KENNEDY
Associated Press War Correspondent

Naples, March 9.—(AP)—The Germans are using tanks against strikers in Milan and other industrial centres of northern Italy, the Nazi radio said today, as the national committee for Italian affairs called on all Italians under German rule to take up arms against the Nazis as well as participate in the general strike.

German - controlled broadcasts from Northern Italy admitted that more than 200,000 Italian workers had responded to the general strike call.

These broadcasts said that M. Ercoli, chief of the Italian Communist Party, had slipped into Milan from Switzerland in January to organize the strike.

Italian communists say that Ercoli, whose real name is Palmiro Togliatti, has been in Russia. The communist party convention in Naples in February issued an appeal to the Allied governments for the return to Italy of Ercoli and "other militant and anti-Fascist still in exile."

GOT FOUR WOLVES

Toronto, March 9—(CP)—Elmo Maina of Toronto is home from his annual hunting expedition to the Burwash district near Sudbury, richer by four wolves. On his trip he felled a 378-pound bear and four wolves. Pelts from the wolves netted Maina, one of 625 each and he sold the bear fat to a cosmetic manufacturer for $75 and the gall bladder to a doctor for $25. In addition he has a bearskin rug for his living-room floor.

Collection of Fat Salvage Continues In Certain Areas

When you hear the bell, it is fat collection time!

This is the slogan of the local branch of the Canadian Legion which is sponsoring the fat salvage collection campaign being conducted by the city. Collections will be made each week with certain streets in the district being designated for each night's collection. Fats are vital to the war effort and Belleville householders are urged to conserve every bit possible and have it ready for the collector when he arrives.

Collections are being made this week on Thursday and Friday evenings. Tonight the district to be canvassed will include Foster Avenue, (north of Dundas St.) Alice Street; Emily Street (from C.N.R. tracks); Albert Street, Charles St., and Ann Street.

On Friday evening Octavia, Murney, Cedar, Cedar, Everett, Coleman (north of Bridge) and Gordon streets will be canvassed.

Householders are advised to place containers of fat at the front entrance of the residence so that it is clearly visible from the street. When you hear the bell, it is fat collection time!

Design for Mural In Union Station Has Been Accepted

Toronto, March 9—(CP)— A design submitted by Mrs. John Squire, 30, a recent bride, has been accepted by the writers broadcasters, artists and musicians council for a mural now being painted in Toronto's Union Station. The design shows war achievements of the R. C. A. F. Mrs. Squire is the former Nancy Burton.

Art director for the mural is William McCrow and artists are Pte. Joy Mann, a member of the C. W. A. C. from Winnipeg, Helen Ford, George James Anglis and Allen Wargen.

Minimum Fine For Violation Of Oil Control Act

Differences of legal opinion were heard in the County Police Court here today when a case of alleged violation of the Oil Controller regulations was heard before Police Magistrate J. F. Lloyd. The case had been entered by Controller of Wartime Prices and Trade Board Arthur Ellis and Constable Upshall as an investigator reported that he had discovered some coupons in the possession of a motorist when gasoline was being purchased from a local gasoline station recently.

"I have no knowledge of how person who has nothing else to do but stand around service stations looking for technical cases like this. It is nothing short of dirtiness," commented A. R. Colling, K. C. counsel for the defendant.

"My friend says this is a disputable act. After all the Oil Controller's regulations may be adhered to in fact it was not the Board's investigators we might just as well charge the Deputy Minister of Justice at Ottawa," replied K. C. Butler special prosecutor for the case.

His Worship admitted the matter was debatable and a decision had been made and he imposed the minimum fine.

Four Provinces Pass Objective In Red Cross Drive

Toronto, March 9—(CP)—Four provinces have passed the half-way mark and one has exceeded its objective in the Canadian Red Cross national appeal for $10,000,000, it was shown in returns received today at the society's headquarters here.

Over the 50 per cent. mark were Quebec, Manitoba, Alberta and British Columbia. Prince Edward Island, with an original quota of $100,000, topped the list on March 3 and the executive doubled the objective.

At the end of the ninth canvassing day last night, the official total was $4,307,633 or 43 per cent. of the objective, against $2,595,170 or 26 per cent. of the quota in the 1943 drive. The campaign will end March 18.

Ontario returns to headquarters last night with objective in hand, were $1,795,962 ($5,000,000) 36 per cent.

Artificial Insemination Of Dairy Cattle to be Introduced in County

Toronto, March 9—(CP)—A program of artificial insemination of cattle soon will be carried out in Ontario, Agriculture Minister Kennedy said today.

Approval was given artificial insemination in a report from the provincial agricultural Committee of Inquiry, said the minister, adding that the province will have to obtain assistance from the federal government in putting it into effect.

The commission recommended the establishment of centres in Renfrew, Lenark and Victoria Counties and Algoma, Kenora and Sudbury districts for beef cattle and in Hastings and Frontenac for dairy cattle. This would provide a high type of breeding in sections where there now are none, it said in the report, and would improve cattle and milk production as well as reducing breeding costs.

Col. Kennedy said an official of the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph is going to New Jersey to study the methods which has been in operation there for some years.

'Fags' Always Welcome To Boys Overseas

"We look forward to your parcels of cigarettes and you can be sure they are always welcome" — H. Denyer replied from overseas upon receipt of cigarettes recently received from the Kinnpot Pag Fund in a letter to Chairman "Doctor" Lalber.

"Again I want to thank the Kinnpot men and people of Belleville, who have taken such a great interest in sending us cigarettes over here. Nothing is more welcome right now," wrote A. "Frankie" Mahhews, who enlisted in the 34th battery.

Your organization is doing a large and commendable job that will long be remembered," wrote R. A. Winters from mid-Atlantic, while Charles Anderson, of the R. C. A. overseas, even goes further in his praise. "It is hoped one for the people of Belleville be proud of and reflects well the fine spirit of the boys overseas. The city, it is sured," Bdr. Anderson. Scores of such replies have returned from overseas urging an increased tempo of fag funds in Canada.

Again, the workers at the Recreation Alleys came to bat for the fund this week with a donation of $10, supplemented by several personal con[illegible] assist in keeping the flow of cigarettes to Belleville boys serving overseas functioning.

Synthetic Fibres Help Textile Trade

Montreal, March 9 —(CP)— Synthetic fibres, far from threatening to have helped the textile industry, E. O. Fox, President of Canadian Cottons, Ltd., yesterday told the Advertising Club here.

"So far," he said, "there new synthetics are proving themselves to be not only useful supplementing to the natural fibres, but as time goes on more about them we are able to mix them with the natural fibres and produce new, attractive and useful fabrics."

Speaking of the Canadian textile industry's future, Mr. Fox said "a very much larger proportion of this country's needs will be supplied by Canada to become of age textile-wise."

SNARED BY CABLE BETWEEN HILLS

While flying on a strafing operation overseas, P.O. Jack Daly, of Crystal City, Man., flew into heavy cable stretched between two hills. He recovered with 50 feet of cable entwined about his flighting gear. Here beating against his elevators but he made a satisfactory landing. Here he examines his trophy with Sqdn. Ldr. Bert Houle, D.F.C., of Massey, Ontario, who recently commanded the R.C.A.F. City of Windsor squadron in Italy.

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

By LOUIS V. HUNTER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

With the R.C.A.F. In Britain, March 6 (CP)—Doctors are doing a spot of "detective" work among Canadian flying men waiting for the pilot whose keenness leads him to strain his powers beyond the limits of human endurance.

Their clues are fatigued bad temper, cynicism, criticism of fellow airmen or aircraft, and changes in eating and drinking habits. When these signs are found the pilot is grounded, whether he likes it or not. Generally, he finds out what it's all about.

"It's no good asking a pilot if he is tired," said Wing Cdr. (Doc) Arthur of Toronto, a medical officer. "He will hotly deny it, and contest the idea that he be taken off operations."

"We sit among the crews at meals and watch their appetites," Sqdn. Ldr. Macdonald said. "If there is any deviation from the normal we check the case. Manifestations of fatigue are when an easy-going lad becomes quarrelsome and draws into himself."

Two main tasks of fighter squadrons in the early period of the European invasion will be to establish air superiority and to support the army by attacking by other tactics, Air Vice-Marshal W. F. Dickson of the R.A.F. told fighter pilots and other personnel of a base.

(Canadian airfield when he presented the Canadian Wolf Squadron with a crest personally approved and signed by the King.

The A. V. M. referred to the outstanding achievements of the squadron in destroying 63 enemy aircraft over sixthy territory at a time when you had to seek out the enemy and he was doing his best to young action." He said conditions in a "beginning period" of the invasion would be different, that the first fighter squadrons overseas would find themselves outnumbered.

"You will have no difficulty in finding combat," he promised pilots in the fighter wing led by Wing Cmdr. Hugh Godefroy, D.F.C. and Bar, of Toronto.

A. V. M. Dickson was accompanied by Group Capt. W. R. McStein of Ottawa in taking the salute during the march past led by Wing Cmdr. Mannifrank Bryan of Winnipeg, the airfield commander.

The squadron crest includes the crown, a wolf with bared fangs and the motto, "stalk and strike."

The equivalent of a road 30 feet and 9,000 miles long has been laid down in airfields and landing grounds for the R.A.F. in Britain. Some 20,000,000 tons of cement and ballast have been carried to the sites in addition to the requisitioning of 1,000,000 tons of steel and the building of more than 1,000,000 sq. feet of hutments.

P.O. John B. Mill Prisoner of War

Trenton, March 8. (Special) — Missing for more than a month, following air operations over Germany, Pilot Officer John B. Mill is now reported a prisoner of war according to information received here by his uncle, Mr. Dougall Meacher.

P.O. Mill was born in Belleville, and attended school there but spent much of his time with his relatives in Trenton. His parents now live at Watson Lake, Yukon Territory. He enlisted in Vancouver and following his graduation was posted overseas in February 1942. His sister, Mrs. Helen E. Howe, lives in Linden, New Jersey.

In a letter to his parents from his Squadron Commander, P.O. Mill was described as fast becoming an "Ace" Pilot, and with the remainder of the crew, all of whom are missing, had a great future mapped out for the Squadron.

He was known to all his friends on his station as "Johnnie" and was loved by everyone, and known to all fearless and always ready for duty.

Plane-Load Rifles Given King Saud

Cairo, March 8—(AP)—A 2,000-pound plane-load of rifles, ammunition and helmets has been delivered directly to King Ibn Saud at an isolated Saudi Arabian oasis as token of larger deliveries of modern war materials, United States Army Headquarters announced.

The same delivery was preceded by a shipment to Ibn Saud of $1,500,000 in Saudi Arabian coins minted in the United States under contract.

Discussions are under way on a contemplated United States-sponsored oil pipeline from Saudi Arabia to the Mediterranean.

Defence Major Item In Union's Budget

South Africa Expects to Spend $461,250,000 on War in 1944

Cape Town, March 9. (CP)—J. H. Hofmeyr, South African minister of finance believed that the Union can best be confident toward the future.

Mr. Hofmeyr in presenting his budget statement recently said South Africa proposes to spend £102,500,000 ($461,250,000) on defence this year and the estimate for the coming year is the same. Half of this amount will be met out of revenue and the balance by loans.

The expenditure for 1944-45 is estimated at £111,900,000 ($503,850,000) and revenue on the basis of existing taxation at £107,000,000 ($481,500,000). This together with loans to the amount will cost £1,100,000 ($4,950,000) a year".

"The face of war has considerably reduced the output of mining industries and their profits which are the mainstay. Happily these war conditions will not persist".

The gravest public duty, the finance minister continued, after having been raised from one hardly be increased further.

The super-tax will become payable at £1,795 ($7,957.50) instead of at £2,000. The cigaret tax is to be increased one penny per 10 and the pipe quality pipe tobacco two shillings (48 cents) per pound. The tax on matches is to be doubled.

18,000 R.A.A.F. Men Serving on War Fronts

By LOUIS V. HUNTER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, March 9—(CP)—Because the activities of the R. C. A. F. and R. A. F. are featured in the press of Canada, it should not be forgotten that the "8 double-A F"—or, more properly, the Royal Australian Air Force—is in there, too, and "its strength in the commonwealth is more than 18,000 R. A. A. F. men, mostly air crew, are serving in the Middle East, India and other theatres of war besides the southern Pacific. Some are in R. A. A. F. squadrons, but most are in R. A. F. units with airmen from all parts of the Empire and a few are in Canadian squadrons. In addition to R. A. A. F. personnel serving with the R. A. F., there are 14 Australian squadrons serving outside the commonwealth.

In the Southwest Pacific, the number of Australian squadrons on operations is only slightly less than a dozen, with several transport squadrons.

In four years of war, Australian airmen in the R. A. A. F. and R. A. F. in all theatres have won 1,000 awards and decorations including three V. C.'s and 39 D. S. O.'s. Casualties in all theatres included 1,843 dead or presumed dead, 1,377 missing, 513 prisoners of war, 1,648 wounded.

Australia has its counterpart of the R. C. A. F. Women's division. The W. A. A. A. F. was established in March, 1941. In two years it grew to an organization with 15,000 members in 53 trades.

Board of Health Report Is Given Village Council

Tweed — (Special)—The regular meeting of village council was held in Council Chambers Monday evening, March 6th, with the following present: Reeve R. W. Jones in the chair. After the transaction of all routine business, the M. O. H. Dales, Medical Health Officer, presented his annual report of the local Board of Health. Out of a population of 1275 there were fourteen births and eight deaths during the year. The deaths were principally among the aged. Contagious

Total expenditures of the Board were $241.26.

The schools are satisfactory from a sanitary standpoint and tonsil is being administered regularly. Vaccination was also presented on communicable diseases.

A few nuisances were reported to have been eliminated and a number of installations were ordered in homes where they were considered necessary.

A grant of $35.00 was made to the Salvation Army.

After a lengthy discussion the Council decided to seek a grant on the Crier property situated near the bridge on Victoria Street from the Federal Department of Public Works. The building which was originally purchased and intended for a Post Office has been a dead loss in taxes as far as the village is concerned since 1936 and a request will be made to have the village compensated for this loss in taxation.

The housing question was also discussed at much length and it was felt some people should be encouraged to build their own homes but few people appear to know much about functioning of the National Housing Act under which they can borrow money to build.

The monthly meeting of Council of the Hungerford Township was held Monday afternoon, March 8. The members present were C. Rush, Reeve, H. Coulter, Deputy Reeve, and Councillors E. Bateman, K. Calvan and S. Hodgins.

The regular routine of business was passed with a number of bills for relief being presented at this meeting.

THE LITTLE DOG BARKED

by ANNE ROWE

CHAPTER 1

It sloped down all the way to the nearest shore of a cove that looked more like a lake than a branch of the sea, with the opposite shore quite close and tiny islands, isolated rocks with a few trees on them, dotting the picture.

Close to the shore, at the very tip of the cove, an unpainted two-storey clapboard building was nestling back into the landscape. Below one side to the waves, its long, enclosed covered porch, actually over-hanging the water. It looked as though it had grown out of the ground and was about to return to it.

"This here's the Fern Cove give the place its name. And over there is the old Fern Cove Inn," old Mack brushed the spot, pointing with a gnarled finger. "They call it the 'doghouse' now, except they only put people there what they don't like and don't want around." He paused and blinked up at me, obviously appraising the extent of my surprise and dismay.

"You thought I was a gabby old woman, telling you all them things of who was boss here," he accused me. "But I warn't. I meant every good by you. And, if you don't know what I mean, shows you ain't to blame. I'm real sorry they put you in the doghouse. You're that young lady actress is coming from New York for your play. Yes, sirree, I am sorry."

With that he started his bloe shoulders angrily and, straightening shoved traces of former distinction in an ornate fanlight and broken stumps of colonial pillars on the wide steps leading up to it. And the lobby behind it, taking up the whole depth of the building, was full of chairs, altogether of another type than the built-in furniture.

There were no clerk's desk or a table. Only in the dead, hugging the bend of a sagging staircase—innocent of any sign of registration book—and the mail rack above it, with cubbyholes that contained a set of letters.

The only attractive part of the place was the view of the cove, seen as three graceful pictures through the floor-length windows in the rear, that plainly doubled for doors in the richly panelled porch I had noticed from outside.

It was all strange and desolate beyond words. And the second floor matched the lobby in every respect.

I looked out when I followed old Mack and my luggage—two small cases, a hatbox, dressing case and typewriter, all clamped under his prodigiously long arms up the creaking stairs and into a wide, unpapered hall. Five doors opened off from end to end.

It had doors down both sides and a smelled unused. And it was quite dark, due to the tightly closed and shuttered windows at each end. What little air and light there was came through two open doors opposite each other and not far from the stair landing.

In the one on the right a woman stood waiting. One of the chairs was turned into the inn, I judged by her neat uniform.

She was a short angular, about my age or a little older and looking and epimetrical. More than a schoolmarm than a hotel maid, I thought, particularly as I turned out to act as if the help had no care. No one else was around here. And perhaps—perhaps you think I'm a sneak and eavesdropper too, for saying they'd put you here to make you leave—

"I don't think anything of the kind," I interrupted her. "I'm truly grateful to old Mack and you, Please go on telling me—what you feel I should know."

"I'm going to," she assured me definitely. "I couldn't, if you were the man. But I think it's a shame, putting two women in this tumble-down old house all alone, when old Miss Barolle who's coming

"Do they expect me to stay here?" I asked angrily.

what a hotel room can be—at its worst. Mildewed wallpaper and spots on the ceiling—so new and wet, they fairly shrieked that they'd leaked from the last downpour—dusty screens at uncurtained windows, one of the most essential furniture, early Grand Rapids cheap golden oak, and a fifty-cent kerosene lamp on the dresser as the only source of illumination. And the bath, a dented zinc tub encased in wood.

What did it all mean—keeping me waiting at the station—sending this lower old man for me in this lackey—banishing me into this lackey—banishing me into this hotel-like old dump at the end of nowhere?

My resentment mounted again as my bewilderment grew. Of all times for my bags and gloves on the bed, dropped on one of the hard chairs and asked myself angrily, and out loud: "Do they expect me to put up with this—to stay here?"

"I think they hope you won't stay," Ada said heavily. Ada answered me unexpectedly.

She had followed me in, was leaning against the foot of the bed and looking at me seriously. And friendly. She had a nice face, in spite of the primness and her voice was pleasant as well, well modulated.

I decided I could trust her.

"Don't make me begin all over again and ask, 'Who's they?'" I requested. "The old man who brought me here has answered that one. By the way, who is he?"

She smiled briefly. "Oh—just old Mack. He's been here for ages. He'd say, 'Mine Inn' was a pun, doing odd jobs for the inn and all right about around the cove."

"Everyone's handyman, tale-bearer and spy?" I asked suspiciously.

She looked shocked and hurt. "Why, no, Miss Turner! Mack's a fine old man. It's simply—" She paused and looked at me, then hurried out: "He hates trickery and underhand and so he doesn't like—well—certain people, and has been warning you against them in his way. That isn't tale-bearing. Really, it isn't. He can't help hearing what's being said either. They act as if he help had no ears. No one's careful around here. And perhaps—perhaps you think I'm a sneak and eavesdropper too, for saying they'd put you here to make you leave—

"I don't think anything of the kind," I interrupted her. "I'm truly grateful to old Mack and you. Please go on telling me—what you feel I should know."

"I'm going to," she assured me definitely. "I couldn't, if you were the man. But I think it's a shame, putting two women in this tumble-down old house all alone, when old Miss Barolle who's coming to act the star part in your play. It's so far from the theatre and the inn. Seven minutes. If you walk fast. And if it rains, or at night when it's dark, that's just seven minutes too many."

She had served with her.

"Mr. Alden and Mr. Vickery are at the bottom of this intrigue, because of their quarrel with Mr. Arnoux last winter. Doesn't that helped matters along?"

She nodded. "Yes, Mrs. Turner. There two and the Parrises. At least, Mrs. Parris is mixed up with them. And the others for tes a couple of days back, with Mrs. Kilburn. And all the rest of them before. And after a while they sent for Mr. Linwood Clark. And then they had an awful ruckus with him over signing the contract to try out in Fern Cove."

"Then Ada was on my side of the fence. Unless he'd been won over—"

"It doesn't sound dreadful at all. In fact, it's sheer flattery, coming from what has-beens." I consoled my informant. "What was the outcome of the ruckus?"

"This." Ada indicated the room and the one opposite. "Mrs. Kilburn had these two rooms cleaned up for you and the other lady. They're planning to make it as unpleasant for you that you'll leave before the play opens."

I had surmised as much. "Charming people!" I commented more to myself than Ada. "But if they imagine I'll quit or stand for their methods, they're mistaken. I'm going to the inn and the theatre this minute, and right this minute." Then a thought struck me. "What about Mr. Parris, the leading man from New York? Where are they planning to put him, particularly?"

"Oh, he! He's a man and lucky. He has friends already regular with the Marleys. And they've asked him to share their cottage. All the others—the leading ingenue, spinsterhood lay in Ada's tone, with Mr. Arnoux had met Owen Paulsen, the leading man McVane had picked out once, and without forming an opinion about him one way or the other. Still, the novelty edge of the set-faced cast of stalwart young manhood, somewhere under the same roof with me and for the young ingenue I hadn't met so far, would have been reassuring.

There was no use crying about it to Ada though.

"I'm glad one of us parishs has friends here," I told her lightly. "And I'm sad he and Miss Barolle are not here so we could have a counter-attack ready to tackle the enemy. You probably know; they are coming together, Mr. Parris is coming from New York and was asked to pick Miss Barolle up at Warren Beach, where she's been playing last week."

Ada did know of the arrangement. Had been ordered to remain in the old inn, still both He luckily, the guests had arrived. In fact, Ada knew a great many things.

Among others that money talked loudly to Mrs. Josie Kilborn, the actual, if not official, boss of the Fern Cove Inn.

It was more than mere information—a timely hint coming in handy a little later, when I stood in the handsome lobby of the inn, facing a stout, flabby-looking woman of indeterminate age around the desk.

I had caught the plotting Mrs. Kilborn only because she had no idea how I looked and mistook me for an unexpected and welcome new arrival. Her pasty face—all saccharine sweet and set—appeared into a stolid mask when I told her my name and expressed mild surprise about the remoteness and awful comforts of my quarters.

"Sorry you don't like your room, Miss Turner," she said with a slight Yankee twang and a flaky stare of her pale eyes. "It's what we have to accommodate actors. This here inn's for the paying customers—not for the actors."

If ever I'd had a hard time keeping my red-haired temper in leash, this was it. But I managed some-how to remain calm and polite.

"That's quite as it should be, Mrs. Kilborn," I assented with a hope, a charming smile. "I don't want something for nothing. I'm more than willing to pay for a room here at the inn, or in one of your lovely cottages at the shore-line."

It didn't work. "Sorry, It's open-ing night. We're all sold out," she answered curtly.

"Of course! I'd forgotten!" I smiled till I hurt. "But how about tomorrow? Surely there will be check-outs in the morning."

"Everything's booked. A man—Mr. Frank Kilborn, the carefree proprietor's husband—stepped out of the manager's office in support of his wife; tall, slender, elegant and pasty looking than she.

"That's all," he told the soot-de-fiant Mrs. Kilborn elaborated, clearly playing two rows of pearls with both her hands in her malicious enjoyment of the situation. "I've two rooms with a bath between in the back wing. They go together and are ten dollars apiece a night. You wouldn't want to pay that much, would you?"

The price was outrageous, but the admission that there were rooms to be had was such a relief, I almost laughed aloud.

"On the contrary, I'll be delighted to pay that much or more," I assured her, delving into my hand-bag and pulling a fat roll of bills—five hundred dollars I had taken along in cash, in case of distrust of a stranger's checks. "I'll take the suite for two weeks. One room for me and one for Miss Linda Barolle, the young actress Mr. McVane is sending. Let me see—two weeks at twenty a night is two hundred and eighty. Here you are—two hundred, two hundred, twenty, forty, sixty, eighty."

There was no answer from behind the desk. Only silence — a deep and long it began to worry me. But in the end the sight of so much of Uncle Sam's currency prevailed.

Mr. Kilborn cleared her throat and said thickly to her husband: "Give the key to Miss—Miss Turner," and to me: "You can move in any time convenient to you."

The first round had gone to me!

Condition Followed Six Years' Suffering With Stomach Disorders. Got Bad Dizzy Spells; Very Nervous and Always Felt Tired; Tells of Grand Relief.

Time and again, many men and women, speaking in the good results cleaned up by Sargol, Herbal Compound have declared; "Physically helped me when I needed it most — It is the first medicine that ever gave me any relief." Evidence of many is the experience of Mr. George Bell, 312 York Street, Lindsay, Ontario, who says:

"For the past 6 years I have had a lot of stomach trouble. I would get so sick after my meals I felt like I could die. I would get bad bilious spells of sick, nervous headache. I would have a heavy, full, bloated sensation and would belch up sick and nauseous. At times I got bad dizzy spells with spots floating before my eyes and was very nervous and tired all the time.

"More recently I developed a dull, aching pain across the small of my back and rheumatic pains settled in my hands, fingers and joints. I also felt stiff and sore all over. I felt run down and tired and sleeping at night I felt all worse. I was constipated at times.

"I had been reading about Syntona, but didn't take it very seriously until some very distressed friends urged me to try it. When I got some and started I saw I was in very good when my stomach felt better. I found my food was digesting without giving me distress. My dizzy spells disappeared, my nerves became steady and more active, my tiredness and spots before my eyes left me, my rheumatic pains began to feel better all over. So, I kept on taking it until I was free from pain from the rheumatic. I now sleep as well as ever and am feeling fine and fully rested. As a result I am able to do my work without discomfort and home feeling all fagged out as I used to.

Go to DOLAN THE DRUGGIST, Belleville, and find out how Syntona can help you too.

Brig. H.D. Graham Pays Tribute To Fighting Qualities, Efficiency Of Hastings and Prince Edward Regt.

Returns to Canada to Take Important Post at Defence Headquarters

FIGHT NOT OVER

"People of the Bay of Quinte district should be very proud of the splendid record that bears the name of the two old counties, Hastings and Prince Edward. His members are second to none in the British Army and have a record which will make the H. and P.E. Regiment immortal in the history of Canada's armed forces".

Thus Brigadier Howard D. Graham of Trenton, D.S.O., M.C. and E.D., paid tribute to the fighting qualities of the members of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment upon his return to Canada to assume the position of deputy chief of the general staff at Defence Headquarters, Ottawa. His appointment to the above position was announced from Ottawa on Wednesday night.

Veteran of both the Sicilian and Italian campaigns and one of the many members of the Canadian forces, who have distinguished their show of valor on the battlefields in the Mediterranean theatre, Brigadier Graham became Canadian brigade commander in 1942, after previously serving early in the war with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment with the rank of major. He commanded the H. and P.E. on the invasion to France in June, 1940, at the time of the collapse of that country.

Praises Canadians

Speaking with The Ontario Intelligencer in the comforts of his home in Trenton, Brigadier Graham today was full of his praise of the work of the Canadian forces particularly of the men from the Quinte district. But he warned that the fight in Italy was far from being over; that the Germans are still good soldiers and that in the words of Hitler, the forces captured are still of the opinion that Germany is going to be defeated.

As an indication of what the Allies might still expect in Italy, the Brigadier pointed out, "Germany is still very formidable, although the terrain of the country and the weather had retarded Allied progress to a very great extent.

Germans Well Disciplined.

"The German soldier is well disciplined," assured Brigadier Graham, "And most of those met in Italy were young, tough, well-trained and resourceful. In addition to the Germans, we had to watch for the Canadians, Americans and British troops, and the Allied Army for the bad weather and difficult character of the country. Allied forces would have been now far north of Rome.

"The Appenines running down the centre of Italy, leave only a narrow coastal plain on the east and west which prohibits manoeuvring," he explained. "This makes it necessary to fight on a narrow front and for every yard of ground gained."

Equipment being used by the Canadian forces in Italy is excellent according to Brigadier Graham. He was high in his praise of the versatility of the army jeep for many purposes and transportation over rough terrain. "They are certainly a wonderful conveyance," he said. "When I was in Italy I used one and with chains, they can go almost anywhere." And from his description of Italian mud it was appreciated that transportation problems on the fighting front would call for the best.

Praises His Men

Brigadier Graham's personal driver, Pte. Earl Baker of Napanee, came in for praise. "He is a splendid driver and probably saved my life on several occasions," he said. The other Quinte district soldier on an episode of the Italian fighting, which was a bit on the lighter side, and which he regarded as a bit as a compliment to his driving capabilities, it seems the jeep in which the two were riding killed a chicken which belonged to an Italian farmer. "Pte. Baker cleaned the chicken and presented it, but it was rather rubbery. The chicken had possibly been around a bit before the German occupation of Italy," he said.

Tribute to Montgomery.

Tribute to General Montgomery, former commander of the British 8th Army in the Mediterranean battle area, was paid by Brigadier Graham. "He is a splendid man and an efficient officer," he said. "Everyone well liked by his men".

At present spending a brief but well-deserved rest with his family in Trenton, Brigadier Graham will shortly report to Ottawa to assume his new position as deputy chief of general staff at Defence Headquarters. For the time being, Mrs. Graham and daughter, Joan, aged 11, will continue to reside in Trenton, but plans for the future are indefinite.

Russians Open New Offensive On Ukraine Front

London, March 9—(AP)—Premier Joseph Stalin in a special order of the day broadcast from Moscow announced today that the Russians had opened still another offensive on the Ukrainian front near Cape Rodion Malinovsky.

Under the offensive launched across the Ingulets River, which flows into the Black Sea, German defence bastions of Nikolaev and Kherson on the lower Bug and Dnieper rivers were outflanked from 19 to 37 miles along a 195-mile front, Stalin's order declared.

Kazanka and Most Bug, 36 and 19 miles respectively west of Krivoi Rog, have fallen before the Russian forces in the new advance, said the announcement, first heard here by the Soviet Monitor.

Thus, German flank and six infantry divisions, probably totalling more than 150,000 troops, have been routed in the course of the new advance, Stalin said.

Next Thursday's capture placed the Russian forces across the main railway and line from Odessa to Black Sea base of Nikolaev and threatened to flank the route to the north.

Today's Russian advance also places Soviet forces only six miles east of the Ingul River, which flows into the Bug at Nikolaev and forms the last natural barrier to a drive on Nikolaev from the east, Stalin said below Most Bug.

Nikolaev, his other populated places had been captured in the new offensive, and captured 234 others, Stalin said to boom out 20 salvos tonight to celebrate the major victory.

Says Inquiry Lent No Support To Doctor's Thesis

Winnipeg, March 9 (CP)—Hon. James Allison Maclaughlin, Provincial Attorney-General, said in the Manitoba legislature yesterday that investigations by a group of two doctors of the University of Manitoba failed to find any medicine with vitamin treatment of cancer by Dr. E. R. Buchanan of Winnipeg and the results "lent no support to Dr. Davidson's theories".

Hon. Maclaughlan said that by employing the same techniques as Drs. Davidson and Buchanan, Professor of Bio-Chemistry, and the Hon. Dr. Ross, Provincial Secretary.

"Our results lend no support to Dr. Davidson's theory that a diet rich in certain vitamins lessens the incidence of carcinoma (cancer) in mice. This effect noted does not seem to be specific."

Hon. Mr. Maclaughlan also read a letter from G. H. Ettinger, Honorary Secretary of the Cancer Committee of the National Research Council at Queen's University in Kingston, which stated that a decision in the matter of making public Dr. Davidson's and his research work would be made March 17.

King George VI Visits, Inspects Canadians

By ROSS MUNRO
(CP War Correspondent)

Somewhere in England, March 9, (CP Cable)—Thousands of Canadian lumbermen were inspected today by the King who walked among the ranks through long lines of soldiers drawn up on both sides of roads in their big Second-Front manoeuvres.

Wearing Field Marshal's uniform, His Majesty made the inspection in mid-morning. He spent one and one-half hours with the troops.

"SLEEPY NOOK" IN NEW YORK HAND OUT REAL TERRIBLES

New York, March 9. (AP)— A "sleepy nook"—replete with steamer wheels and blankets—will be opened by the Travellers' Aid Society of the Grand Central Terminal tonight for sleepy service men wishing to catch a snooze between trains or unable to find hotel accommodations.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, March 9. (CP)— Base Metal stocks were generally firm with slightly weaker in the early session of the Toronto Exchange. Noranda, Falconbridge and Consolidated Volume was comparatively light at 1,000,000 shares for the first three hours.

Dominion Tar, Dominion Foundries, Canadian Marconi and Brazilian were in demand at better prices while Base Metal weakened with Pamour and Aldibis Pfd was off 1-4 to off 3-4.

Preston touched a new top for the year at 4.50 and smaller gains were netted by San Antonio, Sullivan, Macassa and Wright Hargreaves. Gold was an conspicuous trader and it gained 20 cents to $6.00. Other Gold Stocks were firm but a bit soft. Smelters, Hudson Bay and Nickel were down points. Industrials and Paloridge lost 5 cents.

Moderate weakness was shown in the Western Oil Group by Calgary and Edmonton, Mid-Continent, Anglo-Canadian and British Columbian. Ajax gained 15 cents to $1.60.

NEW YORK EXCHANGE

New York, March 9 —(AP)—The stock market took a light profit taking attitude today after its three-session sprint to the highest average level since July. Volume was about half that of the preceding day. While scattered issues managed to extend their advance moderately, numerous leaders were generally lower near the fourth hour.

Chatterers cashed in here and there on the idea a technical reaction might enable them to repurchase commitments at cheaper prices. Lack of real selling urgency, however, left professionals a bit skeptical who felt that the recent rapid upswing had carried its investment demand.

Among an armful of favorites while Rock and Johns-Manville scored tops for 1944. Losers, including Southern Railway, U. S. Steel, Montgomery Ward, Monsanto, United Aircraft, Douglas Aircraft, Goodyear and Kennecott.

Canadian issues were steady with Hiram Walker up a point on fraction and Canadian Pacific, Molsons and Distillers Seagrams unchanged.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

Toronto, March 9. (CP) —Prices were steady on slaughter cattle of medium to good quality in sales on the Hunters' market here up to mid-session today. Butcher cattle and heifers brought $10.50 to $11.75, bulking around $11.00 to $11.50 a few bulls $7.25 to $8.25.

Hogs sold steady at $17.15 to $17.25 dressedweight with sows $12.25 dressed.

No veal calves, lambs or sheep were offered.

HOGS

Toronto, March 9 —(CP)— Prices were unchanged at becoming marketed yesterday and today.

Dressedweight: Chatham $18.40 plus transportation, Barrie and Stratford $17 delivered, Hamilton $17.85 delivered, Bell $16.85 delivered.

Federal Govt. Is Commended On Liquor Policy

Toronto, March 9 — (CP)—The federal government today was commended for its liquor policy and expressed opposition to any refusals from unfair criticism" in a resolution passed by the Ontario Temperance Federation, United Church of Canada meeting in convention here.

Premier Drew of Ontario also was commended for his views and declaration that the authority to grant licenses for liquor sales should be vested in a special branch of the judiciary.

The resolution added however: "This commendation in no way prejudices our position that beverage rooms in Ontario should be abolished."

Pocket-Picking Pig Eats $64

South Hadley, (AP)—Police Chief Walter Bardwell of this Massachusetts community was called to a district farmer, while feeding pigs, decided part of a $60 note protruding from a hogpail mouth. A frantic search of the pen revealed the whole he had been carrying $180, revealed the money was missing. Fragments of bills were found in the pocket-picking pig, which vomited, coughed and accompanied by an affidavit for bank presentation, brought the farmer $76. Cost of the animal's lunch $64.

National Advertising Hits High Peak

Toronto March 8—(CP)— Volume of National Advertising Arrange in Canadian Daily newspapers was greater in 1943 than in any year since 1930, it is reported in the March issue of Canadian Daily Newspaper Publishers Limited. Advertising in 1942 totalled $6,861,160 lines in the 57 daily newspapers reporting. Comparable total was 68,382,424 lines in 1942 and 67,594,000 lines in 1930. Estimate is expected that total advertising in the 97 papers, representing 84 per cent. of the total daily newspaper circulation, increased 5 per cent.in 1943 from 1942.

Liberation
— WILL IT MEAN LIFE TOO?

As the tide of war rolls across Europe, sick and starving millions will look to the Red Cross for food, clothing, medicine . . . for life itself. This is just one of the works of mercy for which the Canadian Red Cross is asking $10,000,000 this year.

Only the Red Cross can do Red Cross work—supplying food for prisoners of war; refuge for homeless war orphans; lifesaving Blood serum; medical supplies and dressings; hospitals and surgical instruments.

The need grows as victory nears. Your Red Cross depends on your mercy dollars.

NAZIS ABANDON UMAN IN WESTERN UKRAINE

City Is Strong Base, Rail Head East of Bug River

Enemy Falling Back On 340-Mile Front From Tarnopol to Black Sea Defences

RETREAT 'DISORGANIZED'

London, March 10.—(CP)— The German radio announced today that Uman, one of their strong bases in the western Ukraine, is [illegible] rail head, lies about mid-way between Vinnitsa and Kirovograd about 25 miles east of the Bug river. It is at the hinge of the Russian drive toward the Dniester and the other Soviet southern offensive into pre-war Poland on the west.

Aerial Activity Main Operation On Italian Front

Naples, March 10.—(AP)—Activity on all battle fronts in Italy dwindled to minor patrol operations yesterday in the face of severe weather, Allied headquarters announced today.

Allied aircraft managed to get into the air, however, for 900 sorties. Medium bombers again attacked shipping and other targets in Santo Stefano and Monitalto di Castro northwest of Rome. Light bombers hit enemy gun positions at Campoleone back of the Anzio beachhead and the railway at Cagnanica.

Approximately 30 enemy aircraft were sighted over the battle area during the day, the announcement said. Two Allies planes are missing.

Alexander Voices Confidence.

Renewed confidence that British and American soldiers will hold the 100-square-mile beachhead at the south of Rome has been voiced by Gen. Sir Harold R. Alexander after a tour of the beachhead where activity has bogged down in mud.

"Things are quiet on the beach on the beachhead than when I was here last time," the Allied supreme commander in the Mediterranean told correspondents.

Correspondents said somebody inquired he was an "ewmiss man" to say on the beachhead and that the new bonding behind the enemy main front would be good. Gen. Alexander was, however, "absolutely confident."

He was confident, firstly, because we have a magnificent men, British and American; secondly, because we have a magnificent equipment; and, thirdly, good leadership.

"What is going to win is toughness, determination, guts and confidence.

"I am quite confident that it will be all right now. It has not, of course, gone as we originally had hoped. We have been able to break out, it is difficult to say, but other things are happening."

Fighting Is Severe.

Alexander excerpted war correspondents' reports of the flooding of the beachhead forces from all blame of the plans of causing unexampled to public opinion in the United Kingdom and the United States for position cannot be censured them three weeks ago.

10 EMPLOYEES FIRED

Detroit, March 10.—(AP)—Apparently with full sanction of union officials, the discharge of 10 Ford employees who participated in a demonstration by 2,000 Rouge plant aircraft building were blotted permanently from the payroll today.

Rocket Flare Guides Minesweeper To Rescue of Drifting Sub-Chaser

Ottawa, March 10 (CP) — The Canadian minesweeper H.M.C.S. Guysborough, leaving the quiet peatmoss seas of the North Atlantic, lowered into the United States coastal navy sub-chaser and her 30-man crew after the sub-chaser had been set by the navy for the sea for 23 hours, drifting without communication, steerage or motive power.

The American ship's steering gear had jammed in a hurricane when a drifting log smashed into it, driven by a giant wave. The radio and communication system then went out of order. The sub-chaser, trying to head into the wind without ramming into her but Charles Barnett of Vancouver, finally fired a gun gun that carried a towing line to the sub-chaser.

Signalman Robert Bishop of Calgary and Leading Seaman Lorne Lundquist of Toronto, both of the Royal Canadian Navy Volunteer Reserve, who helped direct towing operations at the stern of the ship.

Lieut. Findaly Gordon Findaly of Toronto said Guysborough took "quite a beating" during the rough sea as she worked toward the flare.

Lieut. Findaly, however, said he never expected to see Guysborough again after the crew experienced the height of the storm.

Lieut. William Findaly of Toronto said Guysborough took "quite a beating" during the rough sea as she worked toward the flare.

Lieut. Findaly, however, said he never expected to see Guysborough again after the crew experienced the height of the storm.

"But in my 12 years of sea service I don't recall a rougher or colder night than the one we experienced in the height of the storm."

TWO DISTRICT BOYS R.C.A.F. GRADUATES

Two Bay of Quinte district airmen had the wings of R.C.A.F. flying officers pinned on their breasts at graduation ceremonies at Edmonton, training stations No. 2 and No. 9 respectively, this week. One graduated as a pilot officer and the other as a navigator officer. They are: Leading Aircraftsman A. M. Ainsworth of Trenton presented his wings as a navigator on graduating from No. 9 S.F.T.S. and Aircraftsman 2nd Class R. A. Kearney, R. R. 4, Picton graduated as a pilot from No. 19 S.F.T. S. school at Stettler, Alta.

ACRID FUMES FROM BURNING LACQUER DRIVE OUT WORKERS

Workers in the paint spraying department of the Massey-Harris plant were driven from their jobs and out on the open air Thursday afternoon when a lacquer spraying machine in some manner caught fire, filling the room with lung irritating fumes and smoke. Firemen said last night that had cans of the blaze and intimated that considerable heat and pressure was necessary to extinguish the flames. They were confined principally to the paint spraying machine and the assessment of the damage as yet having been small.

All the girls in the department and many of the men were forced to leave their jobs and the fumes of the acrid fumes arising from the burning lacquer, but when they had got back on the job when the building was cleared of the smoke.

CITY, MADOC AND PICTON BOYS GIVEN PARATROOPER WINGS

One Belleville soldier and two Belleville district soldiers were among the 24 Ontario men booked among Canadian soldiers who graduated recently as paratroopers at the Mid Canada Parachute Training Centre at Camp Shilo, Manitoba. The class members were presented with their paratrooper wings at their new traditional "Wings Parade" held at the centre.

The Belleville soldier in the graduate was C. J. Frawley, 106 Dundas St., while the two district graduates were S. D. Shaw of Madoc and P. O. Stark of Picton.

Mrs. Harry Rollins Named to Launch HMCS Belleville

The H.M.C.S. "BELLEVILLE" Corvette Committee held its final meeting in the Council Chamber of the City Hall Thursday afternoon at which time it was with the unanimous approval of the committee that Mrs. Harry W. Rollins was named as the lady who will christen the ship at the launching in April at Kingston. Mrs. Rollins will be the first Belleville lady, as far as the records of The Ontario Intelligencer show, to be given this distinction. Details of arrangements will be made at a later date for the ceremony.

It was revealed by Mr. H. D. Bateman, treasurer and secretary for the committee that approximately $6,000 would be the amount obtained from the campaign. This amount includes the donation of weather-jackets by the Deacon Brothers, Limited and employees, a library by the St. Julien Chapter, I.O.D.E., and other equipment donated in lieu of cash contributions. Public Thanked

The thanks of His Worship Mayor H. W. Rollins to the chairman, Mr. C. H. Bonter, executives and the citizens of Belleville for their splendid support of the drive and for the fullest co-operation in putting over successfully a campaign that was anticipated, was expressed by the city chief magistrate during the meeting.

Official information received from the secretary of the Naval Board confirms the naming of the corvette and places Belleville as the official sponsor of the H.M.C.S. "BELLEVILLE". By a majority of votes it was decided to maintain the committee as a "whole to be published in the City Hall" honorary chairman, Mayor Rollins.

Robert Bailey Pleads Guilty To Charge Laid

Following an alleged disturbance in a Point Anne home early Thursday evening Robert Bailey, of that village, appeared before Magistrate A. L. Zwicker in Belleville this morning and pleaded guilty to a charge of assault on Mrs. Janet Whittaker, the owner of the premises. Bailey was fined $10 and costs or 10 days in jail.

Crown Attorney R. C. Donnan, K. C. informed the court that Frederick Whittaker, husband of the lady had been summoned to Toronto during the night on flight sergeant duty, as reported. Upon the arrival of the officer during alternating counselling in Constable O'Brien having to exercise force to apprehend the accused. Bailey, in the presence of drinking surrounding the matter?" Mr. Donnan asked the officer. The reply was in the affirmative.

'The Marriage of Figaro' To Be Presented Here

Mozart's enchanting comedy "The Marriage of Figaro", will be presented here in English Tuesday, at the Belleville Collegiate, by the Belleville Opera Company, the group of young, gifted American singing-actors whose two transcontinental tours of 125 appearances have been the sensation of the concert world.

Critics have agreed that this exciting, streamlined production of the 18th century operatic masterpiece, in a crisp idiomatic English translation and in attractive modern dress, has done more to popularize opera in America than anything else.

The performance is sung in a notable translation by the gifted contemporary English librettist and critic, Ruth Pitter, who has made a translation which Grove's authoritative Dictionary of Music and Musicians declares "has finally set a new standard in English translating."

By substituting a narrator in the character of Beaumarchais for the usual cumbersome operatic sets the Figaro troupe can "travel light." As a result they have brought the acknowledged masterpiece of opera buffa, to places where it has not been only a name before.

When this production was first done in New York three years ago Gotham's hardboiled critics were united in their enthusiasm for a Figaro which could be as hilarious as a George Kaufman comedy and yet fulfill the highest standard of musical excellence. James Whittaker in the New York Mirror hailed it "an utterly disarming and delicious performance of the same opera which set the town afire in Metropolitan Opera performances last season. It is recalled that, in the Mirror, Mr. Whittaker listened gravely while the first song farce. As

Commoners Unite in Tribute To Work of Canadian Navy

By JAMES McCOOK
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, March 10.—(CP)— The Commons parliament in straight democratic back in a respectful bow to the Navy.

What might have been a prosaic discussion of Navy Department estimates—$410,000,000 for the fiscal year 1944-45—developed into a United tribute to the men who go down to the sea in ships.

Members thumped their desks as Pte. J.A. James Sinclair, (L—Vancouver North), sporting R. C. A. F. uniform and recently home from service in North Africa, said the Navy had a tough job and had done it superbly well.

Pte. J.A. Sinclair said he thought he could speak for every soldier, sailor and airman overseas when he told of the admiration they had for the Royal Canadian Navy. When German canal ships escaped the North Atlantic they felt it a "shaky experience" and then suddenly realized that the Navy had to do it, made the crossing again and again.

Then the story of the war in Africa and the Mediterranean was written the greatest share of credit would go—the Royal Navy, not the 8th Army or the Desert Air Force, Pte. J.A. Sinclair said. That was the R. C. N. fighting in their little ships, faced conditions more exacting than the "pretty desperate conditions" faced by airmen and soldiers in Libya.

Echoed by Other Speakers.

What Pte. J.A. Sinclair said in appreciation of the Navy was echoed by other speakers after Navy Minister Macdonald reviewed the Navy's achievements during the year.

Mr. Macdonald told of Canadian Navy men serving on every part of the world, of the vast expansion in strength in the war years and of the two modern cruisers likely to be acquired this year to give the Dominion a "large-style" Navy.

No Political Contests.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King said that Canadian diplomatic representatives in Buenos Aires have been instructed to refrain for the present from any official contacts with the administration of Gen. Farrell, "pending a clarification of what remains a most confused and obscure situation".

Recent government changes in the Argentine had caused "considerable anxiety" to the United Nations. The Canadian position in respect to the Farrell administration was in line with a position taken by the United States and British governments.

The Prime Minister announced that the government proposed an Easter adjournment from March 31 to April 11.

In the Senate Senator J. W. de B. Farris (L—British Columbia) said that failure of John Bracken, Progressive Conservative National Leader, to seek a seat in parliament was contrary to "the best constitutional procedure."

If the absence of the Opposition was absent from the House for any length of time, it was a breach of procedure second only to the absence of the Speaker, Mr. Conservative Leader Replies.

Senator C. G. "Ballantyne, Progressive Conservative Senate Leader, said he had been in the Senate House for 17 years and the address by Senator Farris was the first time he had heard a Senator "make politics" al speech". He said the discussion was out of order and should never have been introduced.

Senator Farris spoke for more than an hour, dealing particularly with the fact Mr. Bracken had made no attempt to gain a seat in parliament.

Senate Leader Dr. J. H. King was the only other member to speak. He said opposition members appeared over sensitive and there should be freedom of discussion on such matters in the Senate.

Senator Farris said he had been accused of "petty politics" for introducing the subject, but he considered it a matter of public importance.

Speaker Called Prime Donna.

The British Parliamentary system gave an important position and prominence and salary for the opposition leader.

That salary was not voted for a substitute leader or an understudy", he said. It was voted for the prime donna".

The contribution to be made by the opposition leader to the well-working of the Constitution was one only to that of the Prime Minister himself, he continued. Rt. Hon. Sir Arthur Meighen had recognized the importance of the party leader being in parliament when he resigned his seat in the Senate and sought a seat in the Commons on assuming leadership of the Conservative Party.

Senator Ballantyne took exception to a comment by Senator Farris that there were some who thought the style of Mr. Bracken's parliamentary speeches was not his own. Only Leader of Party.

Referring to the address as being out of order, Senator Ballantyne said the subject was irregular and not in connection with the work of the Senate. Mr. Bracken was leader of a party and not opposition leader. Such a discussion, concerning only the Commons, served no purpose but to lower the prestige of the Senate.

In the Commons, Mr. MacDonald, besides telling of Navy expansions, said that opportunities must be provided for men leaving the service after the war. He had no fear they would back "wild-eyed revolutionaries" and he believed they would play a role in peace as fine as that they had played in war.

Gordon Graydon, Progressive Conservative House Leader, said there had been significant changes in the top-ranking Navy officers, with Vice-Admiral Percy Nelles sent to the United Kingdom, and there should be an explanation.

Mr. MacDonald replied that the number of Canadians serving in wars near the United Kingdom and the importance of impending events in that area made it desirable that an officer of senior rank be sent there. Changes in officers "are taking place all the time".

$9,000 Mail Wanted.

Mr. MacDonald also gave a picture of the anticipated drain on Canada's manpower pool to the services for the 1943-44 fiscal year and a compilation shows a total of 98,000 men are wanted compared with the last fiscal year's total of 164,000—a decrease of 66,000 men.

Mr. MacDonald said he wanted 1,000 men a month—a total of 12,000. This is the same figure he asked for last year.

Defence Minister Ralston had previously told the House he intended to draw a draft of 60,000 men—48,000 of them for overseas service. The difference between the last fiscal year was 100,000 with 76,000 of them for overseas.

Air Minister Power asked for 26,000 men this year compared with his last fiscal year total of 52,000.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King said that the amounts of war materials to Spain are being made by Canada. He was answering Stanley Knowles, (CCF-Winnipeg North Centre), who said in the House earlier this week there were rumors of such shipments.

DO YOU KNOW—

There are over 36,000 persons in Ontario whose licenses to drive are under suspension because of their inability to secure insurance or file other proof of financial responsibility? They were convicted of offences against the motor vehicle laws following accidents.

It is better to drive safely and avoid accidents than to find yourself unable to drive at all.

Farewell Party At Cherry Valley

Picton, March 10 — The home of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Brunnell, Cherry Valley, was the scene of a farewell party Wednesday night when sixty friends of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Dougherty gathered to bid them adieu before they leave for their new home at Wartime Corners. Buchan formed the amusement with prizes being won by John Collins, R.A.F., Kenneth Ostrander, Mrs. Douglas Moore and Ethel Fraser. A address, paying tribute to Mr. and Mrs. Laundry as good neighbors and friends was read by Mrs. I. Pennebole. Reeve Earl Brummell, Jack Haggerty and Harvey Sherman, who served with the party, presented the couple with two occasional chairs and an end table.

The social hour was featured by a special celebration to mark the 62nd birthday of Mr. John Bentley. Mrs. Bert Brunnell presented this grand old man with a box of chocolates. His daughter, Mrs. Wilkinson Haggerty, had made a lovely birthday cake bearing 62 candles. The event was a complete surprise to Mr. Bentley, who continues to enjoy good health. For many years he farmed at Bentley's Corners and has long been a valued member of Cherry Valley church. Hearty felicitations were extended to him on this auspicious occasion.

War Prisoner.

A former resident of Sophisburg Township, Sgt. Neil Martin, is now reported a prisoner of war in Germany. He failed to return from all operations over Magdeburg, Germany, January 22nd, and was reported missing. His parents reside in Toronto. For some time he lived with his aunt, Mrs. W. Williams, on Big Island, where his grandmother, Mrs. C. Martin, also resides. While here he played hockey and baseball.

Hockey Play-Offs.

In the County Hockey League play-offs the R.A.F. defeated Picton town team, 7-4, Wednesday night. It was a sudden death game as both teams had each won a previous game, the R.A.F. will now meet Bloomfield in the finals.

86th Birthday.

Mrs. Mary Ellen Hubby celebrated her 86th birthday at her home here yesterday. She enjoys fair health but some time ago lost her sight. Most of her life has been spent in Prince Edward County.

Suffers Injuries.

While working at the Ward apartment house, another house fell and struck one of the workers, Richard Cannon. The falling brick and his neck were broken and he was admitted to Prince Edward County Hospital here.

94th Birthday.

Mrs. Louise Miller marked her 94th birthday this week at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Emorey Walker. She has been ill recently but is improving. Several gifts and many cards were sent by friends.

Memorial Service.

A memorial service for Pte. Russel Wilkinson is being held at St. John's Anglican Church, Sunday morning. Rev. J. Cantrell will be in charge and Legion members will attend. Pte. Wilkinson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Wilkinson, was killed in action in Italy Feb. 9th, last. He was with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment.

Poet Whittier.

The works of the poet, Whittier, formed the topic of an address at the Tennyson Club meeting at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Wilmot B. Lane. The speakers, wa Flying Officer L. M. Lewis of the R.A.F. who read a number of the poet's poems. Different members for the new year were, Miss Verna Rutledge, president; R. L. Perkin and G. E. Sharpe, vice presidents; L. B. Calnan, secretary, and R. S. Thacker, treasurer. Committees are, literary, Dr. Lane, Rev. J. T. Reynolds, Mrs. T. Leonard, Mrs. W. L. Madden, Miss Helen Hubbs; musical, Mrs. R. S. Thacker, Mrs. F. Hoscas, Frank Bronskill; hostess, Mrs. A. T. Brown, Mrs. H. Whiteman.

Donations of $25 to the Red Cross, $15 to the I.O.D.E. Hospitality House, $10 each to the British War Victims' Fund and the Chinese Relief Fund, were made.

Musical numbers were, piano solo by Miss Evelyn Boyd and duets by Miss Boyd and Mrs. E. S. Thacker.

the United Nations.

Home time after the surrender, the Russians made an inquiry which was, in effect, "what about our share of the loot?"

At that time it seemed likely that Turkey would come into the war. Turkish belligerency probably would have resulted in clearing the Eastern Mediterranean. That would have permitted the Russian-Italian ships to move into the Black Sea where the Russians could have used them to great advantage. But as Turkish negotiations dragged on, the fleet problem dragged with them.

As a "practical" Russian mind, the military leaders concluded that best results would be had by keeping all the fleet in the Mediterranean and transferring to Russia an equivalent amount of Anglo-American ships.

Russia Asks For Share.

Finally about two weeks ago Russian Ambassador Andrei Gromyko called on the President and asked again about the Russian share of the fleet. It was in comment on this diplomatic inquiry, Gropper, the President last Friday broke the news that under the surrender terms Russia had a right to, her share of Italian naval tonnage.

Publicly released figures on the exact number of Italian warships surrendered are vague, but they show approximately five battleships, some of them old and damaged, eight cruisers, 27 destroyers and one aircraft carrier. In addition the Italians probably surrendered about 60 submarines and a number of torpedo boats and other small craft.

Under the basis of the main fleet types surrendered the Russians might get nine destroyers, two to four cruisers, and one or two battleships. In addition they might get a share of submarines or an equivalent value of destroyers, as well as various small craft such as torpedo boats.

Would You Help?

A Message from the Canadian Director of the UAW-CIO

A drive to raise $18,000,000 for the Canadian Red Cross is now under way. The work of the Red Cross in providing parcels for prisoners of war, and blood plasma, is too well known to require any elaboration.

With a European invasion imminent, it is vital that the Red Cross be given utmost support. No one can say with assurance now, how greatly the resources of the Red Cross will be taxed in the undertaking, but we must be prepared for whatever happens.

The membership of our union is urged to give the fullest support to the present drive. It is the least we can do. The UAW members in Canada have helped to put these drives over in the past, and I am confident they will not fail to do their part in the present drive.

George Burt.

If a prisoner of war in an Axis camp appealed to you for comforts?

You'd give all you could, wouldn't you?

If a soldier bleeding on a muddy roadside in Italy asked you to get him the blood plasma to save his life?

You wouldn't spare expense to see he got the necessary blood transfusion in time, would you?

Our fighting men, held prisoners of war or wounded and needing blood plasma can't ask you directly for help but the Canadian Red Cross is asking for them.

Day in and day out the Red Cross brightens the lives and raises the morale of Allied fighting men held prisoner in Axis countries. Only the letters of thanks from the men themselves can adequately tell what the Red Cross parcels mean to prisoners of war.

Day in and day out, on every front on which our forces fight, the Red Cross is saving lives through getting blood plasma to wounded service men. At the battle of El Alamein 9,000 of our men who were about to die, lived, because of blood transfusions.

It is not the Red Cross that asks your help but the airforceman who looks out through the barbed wire of a German prison camp or the soldier bleeding on an Italian battlefield. Will you fail them?

Brigadier Graham

Hastings and Prince Edward Counties take particular pride in the latest honor which has come to a Boy of Quinte citizen, and soldier, Brigadier Howard D. Graham, D.S.O. and Bar, of Trenton, who recently returned home on leave and has just been appointed Deputy Chief of the General Staff at the Headquarters of the Department of National Defence, Ottawa. The people of this district offer him congratulations on this merited mark of the importance of the service he has rendered and is rendering Canada at this time. Brigadier Graham has been very intimately associated with the Hastings and Prince Edward Counties Regiment since before the war broke out, and went overseas as major and second in command. The regiment he led to France just before the collapse of that country in June 1940. He became brigadier in 1942. He has served in the campaigns in Sicily and Italy and has been awarded the Distinguished Service Order and Bar. He saw service in the First Great War and was associated with local units.

The brigadier from his long association with the people of this district and the regiment and his personal interest in the men and the part they have played in the war in the Mediterranean is able to speak with deep personal feeling in praise of the members of the counties regiment. "People of the Bay of Quinte District should be very proud of the regiment which bears the names of the two counties, Hastings and Prince Edward," he said. "Its members are second to none in the British army and have a record which will make the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment immortal in the history of Canada's armed forces."

He is also able to bring back the cheering news to relatives and friends of men who are sick or wounded that in modern war hospitals they are receiving the most devoted attention and nursing.

The counties have been honored in the noted service which Brigadier Graham and the H. and P. E. Regiment have been able to give the cause of the Dominion and Empire and the United Nations.

Brigadier Graham has shown himself the typical civilian soldier of British democracy. He has served his community well with his leadership, he received the municipal honors of Trenton where he served as mayor and in other capacities and for over four years on active service he has been serving Canada and the Empire and the free world nobly.

The people of this wide community pay him a tribute he justly merits.

Berlin Vast Military Target

The well-known war analyst, Dewitt Mackenzie, whose views are widely read on this continent, outlined very clearly why Berlin should be bombed and why it is being relentlessly struck by the greatest air raids in history.

The bombing is of the greatest military importance for he points out that Berlin is one of the world's greatest industrial cities, and that Hitler has therefore made it of greatest importance in his production of the weapons of war. Joined with this is the fact that Berlin is not only the railway hub of Germany but is largely the bottleneck of most of the railway lines running east and west on the Continent. Mr. Mackenzie points out that Germany had before the war the greatest mileage of railways. Hitler has been able to use that fact in his war of aggression against Europe and he has also been using it as he takes measures for the defence of the Reich and overrun countries in face of advance of the Allied armies of invasion.

The analyst notes that Hitler undertook nourished the German railways under his plan and has concentrated a great deal of attention to the building up a vast system of military highways, which however have proven not so important as railway lines because highways require oil and gasoline which as well as rubber tires if they are to be used. He has been compelled to go back, or try to go back to the use of the railways and canals and this naturally the Allied bombings cannot overlook, for they are military targets. Berlin is therefore full of military objectives whether industrial or those associated with transportation.

Berlin also is the citadel of Hitlerism and Nazism, the key position from which Hitler sent forward the agencies of death to reinforce in Poland and other countries. It is the seat of the evil agencies that Germany has loosed upon the world. Berlin Hitler undoubtedly intended to make the core or centre of a slave world. It is thoroughly marked with the swastika or crooked cross in every respect, socially, industrially, nationally and from the standpoint of Nazism.

More Salvoes of Victory

The Russian armies are sweeping forward in a new offensive despite the obstacle of mud which has played havoc with the German armored divisions in the southwest Ukraine. The new drive is under General Malinowsky and has scored a deep advance in five days along an extensive front of 105 miles. Three German tank divisions and six infantry divisions making up a total of 125,000 troops have been routed, Premier Stalin stated late Friday.

Familiar words last evening greeted the Russian people and the United Nation people. They were the words of Stalin. They were words that told of two hundred more populated places and communities having been swept clear of the enemy. There were the other familiar words, that guns were to boom at Moscow, 224 of them in twenty salvoes, last night to set before the world the newest achievement of the Russian armies.

Thus victory after victory has come to the Russians. The past year has been one of the greatest progress and one of unbroken victories. The Reds have seen hard battles but they have fought with the greatest tenacity, brilliance of strategy and tactics and heroism by their soldiery. The result has been a continued story of successes.

Premier Stalin looks for this year to tell an even greater story, the story of final triumph over the invader and the aggressor.

Bank Built by Mail

Built of brick which was sent entirely parcel post from Salt Lake City, the Bank of Vernal, Utah, is one of the most unique monuments in the annals of postal history. Keith Barrette writes in Coronet. It was constructed in 1919, when freight rates were $2.50 per hundred pounds and parcel post but $1.05. The building was literally mailed to Vernal in fifty-pound packages. Five hundred pounds was the maximum shipment allowed. Packages with the packages being mailed to a variety of residents, who in turn delivered them to the building site. Mail trucks in Vernal and Salt Lake City were often loaded to capacity with bricks for a single letter. Postal regulations were soon changed, limiting the size of shipments to any one addressee, but not before the Bank of Vernal was nearing completion with "parcel post bricks."

According to the first all-India rice forecast, India's total rice crop will be a record one, exceeding 28,500,000 tons, as against her pre-war consumption figure of 27,500,000 tons, made up of 26,000,000 tons produced in the country, and 1,500,000 tons imported from Burma.

PICKER-UPPER

Since men a-wooing act and dress
As if no blemish they possess,
And till the honeymoon has flown
Let one single fault be shown,
'Tis obvious the woman must
Consent to take us men on trust;
Nor can they know till months have gone
Exactly what they've taken on.

I'm sure when Nellie married me
She never dreamed that she would be
From morning until evening after,
"Till death should part," a picker-upper;
A gatherer up and down the stairs
Of hats and coats tossed onto chairs.
A hanger-up of things on hooks,
A putter-back of treasured books.

I didn't say when oft I'd call:
"I leave pajamas where they fall;
I strew the room with shirt and hose;
An open drawer I seldom close;
That morn and night whene'er I dress
I leave the bathroom in a mess."
I knew beyond the slightest doubt
That soon enough she'd find it out.

Now when the women sit to chat
I hear the men are all like that;
That all husbands, just as I,
Leave garments where they choose to lie;
That every wife, though lean or stout,
Until at last her strength gives out,
From breakfast time till after supper,
Is doomed to be a picker-upper.

Canadian Scene A Century Ago

By J. L. G.

Old-timers often allude to the quiet and orderliness of river traffic today as compared with the hurly-burly of the early nineteenth hundreds. Then great timber rafts swept down the streams and lakes to the accompaniment of rousing songs, loud laughter and triumphant cheering. At times, and often a dangerous business, rafting attracted the most picturesque and carefree type of men. A raft was usually composed of several cribs of logs; and fourteen men—thirteen and a pilot—formed the crew.

The most primitive rafts were poorly equipped and constructed; without anchors, chains or snubbing ropes, nothing but withes to lash the cribs together. There were two kinds of wooden anchors, one with a large stone fastened round with split pieces of wood and tied with hempen rope, the other made from the fork of an elm tree and used to fasten the raft ashore when it became necessary to effect a landing.

Annalists disagree as to the date on which the first raft of square timber floated on the surface of the Gatineau River; some vow that the memorable year was 1806, others that it was 1807. ..... Experience gained on this first launching showed that oars were not required, at the side of the raft but only at bow and stern..... The summer of 1850 stands out as a terrible time for raftsmen. A large number of rafts were wrecked and the greater part of the crews lost in violent storms that flared up on Lake St. Peter.

Washington Spotlight

Washington, March 20.—(CP)—Establishment of a Finnish 'empire' in Alaska which would be "an outer bulwark of the defence of the world," is the vision of Republican Senator Alexander Wiley of Wisconsin.

He made the suggestion in a speech on American post-war security planning, urging that Alaska may be displaced by the Peace Treaty with Russia be invited to settle in Alaska.

Wiley urged the necessity of the United States acquiring and fortifying island bases for the American share in both the Atlantic and Pacific.

He said there was nothing to fear from the British Empire but did not specify the countries against which the United States would have to be on guard.

Wiley commented with approval on the Simon proposal that Britain strengthen her post-war position by gathering certain European states under the protection of the crown.

He said he too had urged, in 1939, that Norway and other Scandinavian countries get under the wing of Britain, that they refuse to allow Hitler to honor their neutrality—and they had paid the penalty.

Finland, he said, was and now faced the permanent loss of some territory. "Why not invite the Finnish people, all who are willing, to go into Alaska as a happy sanctuary? They would make Alaska an empire worth while.....fully developed, magnified in wealth. That is the place for them. They know how to take care of conditions as they are in Alaska."

Any such movement is made between Russia and Finland and Finland has to give up territory, let us offer to those fine people a home in Alaska where they would build an empire worthy of them and a great rampart on the skyways of the world."

Strong Opposition To Govt's Attempt To Get Out of War

Stockholm, March 10. (AP) — Assertions of Russia's original armistice demands might precipitate civil war in Finland, Eric Lindquist, foreign editor of the Swedish newspaper Stockholms Tidningen, reported today after a trip to Helsinki.

While Finland was reported awaiting Moscow's reaction to a revised Finnish answer to the Russian terms, Lindquist reported Finnish public opinion was so unprepared for peace that only one person was capable of uniting the people in their present dilemma. This person, he said, was Field Marshal Baron Carl Gustaf Mannerheim, the Finnish commander-in-chief.

There is strong opposition to the government's attempts to get out of the war, not so much because of any feeling of friendliness for the Nazis as because the long blackout of information had left a great number of the population unaware of the nations' true position, Lindquist said.

Latest reports from Finland indicated the Finns in their revised answer to the Russian terms made more precise information on the Russian terms. The original answer, flatly rejecting Russian demands for internment of German troops in Finland and withdrawal to the 1940 frontiers was reported to have been withdrawn for revision.

The Ordnary Seaman

He doesn't wear a uniform
Or a tailored navy blue,
He never sees the world from
But he's loyal, fine and true.

He's the stoutest, bravest fighter
That the world has ever seen,
He's the Ordinary Seaman
Of the Merchant Marine.

He's the lad upon the tanker
With its precious load of oil,
He's the one who man's the freighter
With the products of our toil.

He's the one who dares the raider
And the luring submarine,
He's the Ordinary Seaman
Of the Merchant Marine.

Let's give credit to our Air Force
And the boys in Khaki too,
Let's give credit to our Navy
And wherever it is due,

But don't forget the vital cog
In Great Britain's war machine,
It's the Ordinary Seaman
Of the Merchant Marine.

Canadian Plane Crashes Into House

Buffalo, N. Y., March 10—(AP)—Two Royal Canadian Air Force members escaped death when their month training plane from the Caistharies, Ont., crashed into the roof of an East Buffalo Home yesterday.

Then men, P.O. William Knowles, 19, of Oshawa, Ont., and LAC. Edward Balderston, 18, of Toronto, Ont., gave no cause for the crash. Knowles received lacerations and was dismissed from emergency hospital after treatment. Balderston, who received a possible fractured skull, was admitted.

Mrs. Elizabeth Wurser, only occupant of the House, was uninjured.

INFLICT SEVERE CASUALITES

London, March 10. (AP)— Tuguslav Partisans are making a determined offensive in Slovenia have inflicted severe casualties upon the Germans and are continuing a steady advance, Marshal Tito (Josip Broz) announced today in a communique broadcast from his headquarters.

The bulletin credited additional successes to units smashing at the Nazis between Ljubljana and Novo Mesto.

Sharp fighting also was reported in Macedonia, where the Partisans said they were carrying the battle to German and Bulgarian troops.

THE DIAL OF AHAZ

The sundial is the only timepiece mentioned in the Bible.

All the books of the Bible, both those of the Old and New Testaments, were written before the invention of mechanical clocks.

Even the sundial is referred to only twice in the entire Bible, and then in connection with a miracle.

It was on the occasion when King Hezekiah was sick upon death, and the word of the Lord came to Isaiah saying that the king was to be healed and would go up to the house of the Lord on the third day.

II Kings 20:8-11 says:

"And Hezekiah said unto Isaiah, What shall be the sign that the Lord will heal me, and that I shall go up into the House of the Lord the third day? And Isaiah said, This sign shalt thou have of the Lord, that the Lord will do the thing that he hath spoken: shall the shadow go forward ten degrees or go back ten degrees? and Hezekiah answered, It is a light thing for the shadow to go down ten degrees: nay, but let the shadow return backward ten degrees. And Isaiah the prophet cried unto the Lord: and he brought the shadow ten degrees backward, by which it had gone down in the dial of Ahaz."

This same incident is alluded to in Isaiah 38:7-8, which uses the term "sun dial" and which reads: "And this shall be a sign unto thee from the Lord, that the Lord will do this thing that he hath spoken; behold, I will bring again the shadow of the degrees, which is gone down in the sun dial of Ahaz, ten degrees backward. So the sun returned ten degrees, by which degrees it was gone down."

It is believed that the sun dial was developed by the Babylonians about 3,500 years ago, and it was only natural that the ancient Israelites should have known of it and used it.

The sundial was the earliest instrument for measuring the time of day.

Even before the invention of the sundial, primitive man no doubt learned to keep track of the time roughly by his own shadow or that of some other object.

Officers of R.C.N.V.R. Start Training at I.T.S. to Become Pilots of Fleet Air Arm

Previously a centre where the fighter blue of the Air Force predominates with hundreds of R.C.A.F. officers, trainees and other personnel from nearby and district stations being seen daily, the dark blue of the Royal Canadian Navy Volunteer Reserve is gaining its temporary supremacy at Belleville search as naval officers are seen more frequently by local residents.

Thus, with this city having one of the highest naval establishments per capita in the Dominion, the appearance of navy ratings on Belleville streets is common enough, but not until the past few weeks had there been an influx of naval officers. The officers seen quite frequently about the streets wearing navy uniforms are here for a two-months course in pilots with the view of ultimately becoming members of the Fleet Air Arm.

To date eight lieutenants of the R.C.N.V.R. have arrived in Belleville to begin their training as pilots at No. 1 Initial Training School. They are the first two of other four men groups, who will come to this city at the week intervals to begin their air training. A few months hence they will have the wings of Fleet Air Arm pilots pinned on their dark blue naval uniforms.

Receive Air Training in Canada.

It is the first time that flying personnel of the R.C.N. Fleet Air Arm has been trained by R.C.A.F. instructors. Previously this had been done by Royal Navy and Royal Air Force instructors. The naval officers, who come to Belleville will receive their complete flying training in Canada. While in training they will be under Air Force discipline but will continue to wear their naval uniforms.

Traditional naval "scurvy" surrounds the ultimate role which the range of naval lieutenants will assume with the navy when they gain their "Wings". With customary naval reticence the officers merely indicated they were "volunteers for service in the Fleet Air Arm with the Royal Navy in the role of pilots." Air Force pilots' standards apply for navy lieutenants volunteering for training as pilots with the age limit. The officers now in Belleville average about 23 years. From All Parts of Canada.

From all parts of Canada have come the first eight naval officers to begin their air training at Belleville, some from as distant Vancouver; three others are from Montreal, while one is from Ottawa and the other from Toronto. All have from two to three years' service with the navy and all have had sea time aboard corvettes, Bangor minesweepers or Fairmiles.

One of the officers, Lieut. V. Wilgress of Ottawa, is the son of Dexter L. Wilgress, Canadian Ambassador to Moscow, while another is Lieut. E. H. R. Finlayson of Moncton, formerly of Winnipeg, who took elementary training at Western Tech, in Toronto. He was nine months aboard a corvette on Atlantic patrol before volunteering for the Fleet Air Arm service.

Other officers are at Belleville are Lieut. J. B. Grinnell, Vancouver; Lieut. J. G. Fulkerson, Cumberland Street, Toronto; with Lieut. J. J. Feeney and Lieut. J. D. K. Greaves, both of Montreal. The other two are Lieut. H. J. Blake of Vancouver and Sub. Lieut. Knox of Montreal.

Social Security Grants Proposed By House Com.

Ottawa, March 8 (CP)—The Commons committee on social security today considered recommendations submitted by financial experts of the provinces for Dominion grants to the provinces to assist in health services.

The grants proposed are:

1. General public health grant of 25 cents per capita of population which would total about $1,127,428.

2. Tuberculosis treatment grants to the provinces $2,000,000, distributed 50 per cent on basis of population and 50 per cent based on the average number of deaths from tuberculosis in each province over the previous five years.

3. Mental diseases treatment grant of one-seventh of the money at present expended by all the provinces, to be distributed on a population basis and not to exceed $2,500,000 annually.

4. Venereal diseases control grant of $1,000,000 a year for 10 years, to be distributed 50 per cent on population basis and 50 per cent on the number of new cases reported in any province during the previous calendar year.

5. Professional training grant of $100,000 a year.

6. Public health research grant of $50,000 a year with provision for additional Dominion assistance in case of epidemics.

Additional to Others.

It was explained to the committee that these grants would be additional to the grants-in-aid and insurance proposals which would continue unchanged, Dominion officials said.

The finance officials' proposal that half the grant for tuberculous treatment should be based on the number of deaths from that disease in any province is the result of the suggestion of the Canadian Tuberculosis Association.

In supporting this distribution, the experts said in their report that the fact that in the province of Quebec and the Maritimes the tuberculosis problem is greater than that of the other provinces would appear to justify the claim for distribution of at least a part of the grant on the basis of provincial needs."

THRONE SPEECH DEBATE EXTENDED IN LEGISLATURE

C.C.F. Member Calls Upon Govt. to Implement Pre-Election Promises

REPLIES TO DREW

Toronto, March 10. (CP) — The Ontario Legislature today dealt with matters relating to legislation. Interrupting the Throne Speech debate which is in its third week and now seems likely to run past the week-end.

However, if time permits at today's short sitting the debate will be resumed with C. H. Millard (C.C.F.—York East) completing a speech he began last night.

Mr. Millard, ninth speaker at the Throne Speech sitting, urged the various political groups represented in the Legislature to forget their differences and work together for the common good. The people would like that election promises be implemented, he said.

He was conspicuously disappointing and disgusting to the people of Ontario, he said, that his party failed to implement its pre-election promises to bear 50 per cent of the cost of unemployment relief. Millard, National Director of the United Steelworkers of America, is also C.C.F. Fuel Controller.

Four other C.C.F. speakers took part in yesterday's debate—George Bennett, Beaches; Harry Nixon, Brantford, Toronto, Woodbine; Gardfield Anderson, Port William; and George Lockhart, Kingsville. The others who made addresses were T. L. Kennedy, Toronto, Eglinton; Roy Downie (L—Lambton East), R. J. Fleet, Port Arthur; Northur North; and William Goodfellow (PC—Northumberland).

Bennett criticized the Progressive Conservative government for spending only $30,000 on unemployment in the Throne Speech. He said that "if it is possible to find money for emergencies of war, we can unbalance it for the emergencies of peace."

Replies to Premier.

Mr. Leavens, replying to a point of order raised by Premier Drew, said that he thought the C.C.F. would take farms away from the farmers. The party would merely take the farmer's land and would make farming sure no one else took it.

Mr. Timmins would automatically pass from one generation to another on the family farm.

Mr. Anderson, mayor of Port William, urged action in the government's forest policy to protect timber lands in the Thunder Bay area which he said were being depleted at an alarming rate.

Mr. Lockhart criticized packing plants as the enemy of the farmer. He suggested that agriculturists "take over the packing plants themselves and operate them in a co-operative manner."

Mr. Murray said the C.C.F. wanted to "put everything into politics. He expressed belief the Drew government intended to give good government and recommended features of the Throne Speech—particularly the proposal for increased religious education in the schools.

Pupils Aid Farmers.

Mr. Downie said farmers would better aid the war effort by running their farms than by operating the stockyards. He said farm labor camps for high school pupils had proved helpful to farmers in southwestern Ontario and urged that they be continued in 1941.

Mr. Hunt said that, as a farmer, he "resented the leaders of labor coming into this House and telling us what we should do". Post-war planning was perhaps the most important item before the legislature. The Government had accepted a challenge to "make this province fit for heroes to live in".

Mr. Goodfellow urged an end to "petty political quibbling". He said agriculture had reached a "depressing state" and predicted Ontario farm production would drop off this year because of a labor shortage. He urged the Agriculture Department to do all it could to provide help for farmers in 1941.

Give Third Reading.

The House gave third reading to a bill to amend the rural power distribution service charge act and reported from committee a bill raising the sugar beet subsidy from $7.55 to $8.55 a ton and a bill creating an Advisory Council to direct the Ontario Research Foundation. Second reading was given another bill providing that all commissioned officers may take affidavits.

Thomas N. Duff, (L—Bruce) asked the government about the Canadian Exhibition in the London, Ont., Free Press predicting the government would introduce legislation providing subsidy.

Premier Drew asked that the question be held over until today since Agriculture Minister Kennedy was not in the House.

FIRST CONVICTION

Kingston, March 10. (CP)—In the first conviction for violation of a by-law approved by the Prices Board for the Kingston area, George Gaunt, yesterday was fined $100 and costs for charging 35 cents per trip from Kingston Station to nearby Barriefield Camp. Under the by-law the fare is $1.

ALUMINUM PRICE REDUCED

Ottawa, March 10. (CP)—Munitions Minister Howe said yesterday in the House of Commons that he had table a letter from the Aluminum Company of Canada regarding a price reduction.

He said the reduction was a voluntary one on the part of the company and was effected by letter, not by a formal agreement.

AIR RIDE FOR RESCUED HUSKY

The War Today—
German Cities Now Within Range Of Attack From Red Air Fleet

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

Karl Zeppelin Hilterian air expert has exposed to his satisfaction the undraped fact that the Nazi reteats on the Russian front make it possible for the Red Air Fleet to attack cities within the Reich—and the German man-in-the-street, his belly full of bombs from Britain.

It's as simple as that.

Fresh disaster would indeed be heaped on the Fuehrer if the muscovite bombers should start blasting raiding of Eastern Germany in conjunction with the Allied assault from the West and South. Thus far this part of the Reich has been comparatively free of intensive bombing because of its distance from British air bases. Consequently Hitler depends greatly on land area for his war production.

Great Air Strength of Russia.

The fact that the Russians haven't embarked on a wholesale bombing offensive against Naddon doesn't mean they lack air strength. At present Russia's aerial strength, but ever since the beginning of the war they've been hoarding their aircraft for the titanic land battles on the long fighting front.

Several of these engagements are under way now, Marshal Stalin's offensive around a fresh offensive in the Ukraine last night. The Red artillery is making a furious onslaught to cut German Marshal Von Manstein off, and either annihilate his forces or batter him down into the crater of the Balkan volcano.

So long as this intensive fighting continues, the Reds likely will want to concentrate their air power on the battle-front. However an early spring has turned the steppes into lakes of mud which greatly impedes operations. April 15th is possible that there will be a slackening off of fighting by aerial attacks, though it's unsafe to assume this in view of the way military traditions are being shattered.

May Be Expected to Bomb Germany.

However, if there's a lull it presumably will permit the Russians to participate in the reduction of Hitler's strength by bombing. The Muscovites keep the figures of their aerial strength to themselves, but we know they are capable of hurling a great force at the Nazis as witness their recent attacks on the Finns. Certainly the Red air fleet may be expected to do intensive bombing of railroads, canals and communications in Poland and Czechoslovakia.

WEDDINGS

REDDER—TENNEY

Bridge St. United Church was the scene of a wedding of wide spread interest at 2:00 p.m. Saturday afternoon, March 4, when the Rev. Dr. J. Semple united in marriage Marjorie Yonna Tenney, of the W.R.N.C.S., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Frederick Tenney, Bridge St., Trenton, to Stoker Edward Ralph Redder, of Shallow Lake, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Forster, Demorestville.

Forming the pretty floral background for the bridal party was a setting of white gladioli and calla lilies with a V formation of clags of the R.C.N. Flanking each of the bridal aisles were white tulle ribbons marking the guests' pews. Mrs. Ralph Forster, mother of the groom, played the wedding music.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her father to the strains of the bridal march from Lohengrin, wearing a floor length gown of white satin, with lace yoke tapering from the waist to the neckline. A full length veil of delicate lace fell from a coronet of orange blossoms and she carried a shower bouquet of pink American Beauty roses and carnations. She also wore a string of pearls, the gift of the groom.

Mrs. Kenneth LaPalm, her sister's matron of honor, was elegantly dressed in white chiffon, with a neck and bracelet-length sleeves of lace. She was wearing a shoulder length veil of bridal tulle with halo effect bound with orange blossoms and bouquet of pink American Beauty roses.

Mr. Donald Harvey, of Demorestville, was groomsman and the ushers were Mr. Albert Thrasher, cousin of the bride and Mr. Douglas Redder, brother of the groom.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of Capt. and Mrs. Kenneth LaPalm, Bridge St., Trenton. Mrs. Frederick, mother of the bride, received the guests wearing a shoulder length veil of bridal tulle with halo effect bound with orange blossoms and carried a bouquet of pink and white carnations and sweetheart roses. Mrs. Foster, mother of the groom, who received wearing an effective gown of powder blue matching blue hat, black accessories and corsage of pink roses.

The table was lovely, centred with a three-tiered wedding cake, adorned with the figures of a bridal couple under an arch and tall pink lighted tapers. The table was attractively decorated with baskets of white calla lilies and vases of pink and white carnations with a large white bell descending from the archway. A delicious buffet luncheon was served on about thirty-five guests with Mrs. Henry Foster and Mrs. Jack Milligan in charge of the bride, presiding over the tea table, assisted by Mrs. Lorence Reeves, Mrs. Wm. Follwell and Miss Harold Milligan. Grace was given by Mrs. Edith Woodhouse.

The bride and groom proceeded to cut the wedding cake with an African Christmas bell brought from Africa by Capt. K. LaPalm. Later the bride and groom left for a wedding trip to Toronto and points west. The bride wore a black wool suit trimmed with silver fox, a white straw hat with shoulder length veil, matching accessories and corsage of Butterfly roses.

Gifts from the groom to the matron of honor were a lovely gold pendant and matching bracelet, to the groomsman, a genuine calf-skin wallet, to the ushers, gold cuff links and tie clips.

KINGSMILL — WYNNE-ROBERTS

The marriage took place quietly in Toronto recently of Catherine Gay Wynne-Roberts to Jack Arthur Kingsmill, son of Mrs. Lynne-Roberts, was formerly Gay Shannon, of Belleville, daughter of the late W. W. Shannon, manager of the Dominion Bank and Mrs. Shannon, who moved from Picton to Chatham.

HUGHES—HILL

A wedding of interest took place in the Parish Church in York, Essex, England, recently, when Audrey Phyllis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. U. Hill, became the bride of Sgt. Geoffrey Hughes, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. G. Hughes, Green St., Deseronto.

The young bride was becomingly attired in a gown of white clogue satin and embroidered veil, headdress of gardenias and orange blossoms and carrying a bouquet of deep red carnations, white heather and trailing fern.

Two friends of the bride's were bridesmaids and both were gowned in Canadian silk with pink feather headdress and small veils and carried bouquets of pink chrysanthemums. The young niece of the bride was flower girl and was dressed in white satin with pink trim and carried a nosegay of pink mums. A small nephew of the bride was page boy and was dressed in white satin.

The groom was attended by his brother, Sgt. William Hughes. Both the groom and early in the war were belong to an anti-aircraft battery.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at 136 Heath View Road, Heath View. Flowers were present. Among the many messages of congratulations received by the groom's parents which arrived during the wedding breakfast, the groom's mother had the wedding cake made in Canada and sent over to England.

The groom is now taking a course at an AGTU training-centre somewhere in England.

SEALE—HEGADORN

The Chapel of St. Barnabas Anglican Church, Trenton, was the scene of an interesting wedding at 4 o'clock on Saturday, March 4, when Vera, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. Hegadorn, of Connorton, Sidney, Brian Edward Cossley, was united in marriage to Edwin J. H. Seale, son of Mrs. Mary Harrison, of Cambelle Ave., Toronto. Rev. Canon Bell officiated.

The bride wore a purple crepe dress with purple flower hat and matching accessories. Her corsage was Tea roses with purple sweet peas.

Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Parker, of Toronto, were bridesmaid and usher. Mr. and Mrs. Seale will live in New York City where he is employed.

HARDER—WAY

Frankford—An arch decorated with pink and white paper formed the setting for the marriage of Thelma Bell Way, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Way, to Mr. Blake Way, of Frankford, R.R. 1, to James Byron Harder, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Harder, R.R. 5, Trenton. Rev. H. E. Lackey, of the United Church in Frankford, officiated at the ceremony which was attended and was played by Miss Helen Way, cousin of the bride. During the signing of the register Miss Marjorie Sang "Because."

The bride looked charming in a gown of dusky rose crepe with a yoke of pink chiffon and she wore her mother's wreath of orange blossoms in her hair. The groom's mother wore a her only silver lace. Miss Bernice Way, who wore a gown of turquoise blue, had a corsage of red roses. Mr. Douglas Harder, of Trenton, brother of the groom, was best man.

Following the ceremony, a buffet luncheon was served to about thirty-five guests. Receiving with the bride and groom the bride's mother wore a two-piece ensemble of mid-blue and corsage of red roses. The groom's mother was attired in a two-piece gown of powder blue with corsage of red roses.

The bride's table was decorated with pink and white carnations and pink and white candles and with pink and white streamers and white candles.

Later the bride and groom left for a honeymoon trip to western points. For travelling the bride chose a two-piece dress of heavenly blue, tweed coat and navy accessories. On their return they will make their home in the 2nd concession of Sidney township.

Women Teachers Hear Talk on W. Cumberland

The regular monthly meeting of the Women Teachers' Association was held on Wednesday evening in the Y.M.C.A. rooms. The splendid dinner served by the ladies of the Y.M.C.A. was much enjoyed by the good attendance of teachers.

The president, Miss Jane Smith, welcomed the visitors and members. The April meeting, in charge of Queen Alexandra School, is to be held on the first Wednesday, instead of the usual second Wednesday of the month. Miss Olive Elson gave a report on a meeting she attended to the Teachers' Professional Act; there followed some discussion.

The program began with a solo by Miss Norma Arhlin. Then Mrs. Teudale, the guest speaker, gave a very interesting address. Her fine anecdotes and children's story added a great deal to the general enjoyment of Mrs. Teudale's address.

A vote of thanks by Miss Smyth was given Miss Arhlin for her solo, and Miss Ruth Elliott moved a vote of thanks to Mrs. Youdale.

Ration Coupon Calendar

March 8-15.

BUTTER: Coupons 46-58 (Inclusive) are now valid and expire March 31. Coupon 56 (also 57 and 58) is now valid for 8 ounces.

TEA OR COFFEE: Coupons 14-39 and 21-4 (inclusive) are now valid and will remain so. Coupon 39 is invalid. Coupons 88 and 89 fall due March 30. 8 coupons in the ration books of children under 12 are not to be used for the purchase of tea or coffee.

PRESERVES: Coupons D1-D16 (inclusive) are now valid and remain so until March 31st, when a alternatively good for one-half pound of sugar.

SUGAR: Coupons 14-38 (inclusive) are now valid and will remain so until declared invalid. Coupon 39 will fall due March 31st.

CANNING SUGAR: F coupons 1-16 in the No. 3 ration book will become valid on dates to be announced for the purchase of sugar for home canning. Each coupon is good for one coupon. Alternatively, they may be exchanged, when valid, for preserve coupons, at the rate of one P coupon per one preserve coupon.

EVAPORATED MILK: Applications for G coupons for the purchase of evaporated milk or infant feeding or medical cases may be filed by mothers with their local ration boards. Only those over two years of age will be supported by medical certificates.

NEW RATION BOOKS: No. 4 consumer ration books will be issued on March 15th, in the direction of Local Ration Boards during the week of March 6th. Dates and hours will vary and consumers should keep close watch for these applications to their own communities, as notice applications will be entertained before April 1st. No. 3 books should be retained after the No. 4 books have been issued, as canning sugar remaining therein will continue to have value.

Save No. 3 Books

Request of Board

Suspension of meat rationing is only temporary, the Local Ration Board has announced. Meat coupons (though consumers have been asked to destroy the unused meat ration coupons up to and including No. 46, coupons Nos. 47 and 48 will still remain in ration books, presumably for use at a later date. It is accordingly most desirable that consumers should retain their No. 3 ration books even after the No. 4 books have been issued, and there is the further reason for doing so in that the first D coupons contained in them are to become valid at summer date yet to be announced for the purchase of sugar for home canning of fruit, presumably, for the purchase of preserves.

First Coupenless
Thursday is Coming

For the first time for months, holders ration books will soon experience a Thursday without any ration coupon falling due. Because of the suspension of meat rationing, they will draw a blank on Thursday, March 16., when normally one of the series of meat coupons would have fallen due.

WAAF Rankers Go Overseas

London, March 10—(CP)—Ranked in the W.A.A.F., airwomen and N.C.O.'s, will go overseas for the first time in the Spring offensive here. Previously only WAAF officers served on the Mediterranean fronts and in the Middle East.

Destination of the first contingent, who are wireless operators, code and cipher clerks, plotters, clerks, cooks, drivers and equipment assistants, is a military secret. Those who are between 20 and 36, must be unmarried, must remain in the their new post for 'at least three years.

Black Face Makes Bizarre Wedding

Pittsburgh, Mar. 10—(CP)—Irene Gonsowski and William C. Bostjancik went to Squire Arthur J. McGivern's office to get married but learned he was playing end man in a minstrel show at Oakmont high school.

There the black-faced squire stirred in a checked waistcoat, red and white sleeves and striped pants performed the ceremony before the cast, with the janitor as witness. He assured them it was legal despite his makeup.

Coincidence--Would You Say

New York March 10—(CP)—Victoria Cordova, pretty Latin-American singing star of the Good Neighbor radio variety show "Buenos Aires Melody," received frequent requests from an Argentine diplomat to include the bolero "Solo Tu"—in her translated "Only You"—on her programs.

Victoria sent him a note:

"Yes, solo tu, Argentina continue friendly relations with that nasty Nazi Adolf. When you tell Hitler to jump into the Rhine Danube, I sing-sing for you 'Solo Tu'."

The following week Argentina broke with the Axis and Victoria sang the number unrequesting!

"I never dreamed it would work."

Questions and Answers

This column is sponsored by the Regional Office, Wartime Prices and Trade Board. Questions on price control, ration regulations and other Wartime Prices and Trade Board rulings should be sent to the Information Branch, Wartime Prices and Trade Board, Victoria Building, Brockville, Ont.

Q.—Is it necessary for me, as a maple syrup producer, to surrender coupons for the syrup that I consume on my own premises?

A.—No. It is only when the syrup is sold that you are obliged to collect and surrender valid preserve coupons.

Q.—Does the temporary reduction in the butter ration alter the value of the butter coupon?

A.—No. It is still worth one-half pound of butter. The reduction is effected by postponing the due dates of coupons 56 and 58.

Q.—Can you tell me if there is a shortage of canned milk?

A.—Yes, it is one of the imported vegetables recently brought under such control.

Q.—Why is it that evaporated milk is now available in so-called restricted areas only after G coupons have been used?

A.—This priority system of sales based upon need has been inaugurated because the total demand for evaporated milk in Canada is greater than the total supply.

Q.—In our household we are not able to do much canning but we do consume a fair amount of commercial jams and jellies. Is there no way in which we can increase our sugar ration at the latter above the value of the preserves coupons?

A.—Yes. It has been arranged that each of the P coupons which are to be used for the purchase of canning sugar this year may be, if desired, exchanged for one preserves coupon through Local Ration Boards. This will enable you to augment your normal purchase of commercially packed jams, jellies, etc.

Q.—How many D coupons are needed to buy a gallon of maple syrup?

A.—Until May 31, that is, during the production season, one D coupon will be good for 40 fluid ounces, or one quart, and four D coupons will cover the purchase of one gallon. After May 31 the value of the D coupon for maple syrup will be reduced to 34 fluid ounces.

Q.—I live in the country and it is hard for me to get away in order to obtain my new ration book. Is there any way in which I can have this done for me?

A.—Yes. You may hand your No. 3 book to an adult neighbor and have him or her collect your No. 4 book. But be sure that the application card is filled out by yourself in advance.

Diva's Illness Welds Marriage To U.S. Doctor

By ADELAIDE KERR
(Associated Press Writer.)

New York, March 10—(CP)—Thomas King's marriage to Mary-lee Jenkins-Ivey breaks all the rules.

Other men courted the Metropolitan opera soprano in imported cars and French. Dr. King walked her up the Hudson in the starlight and threw snowballs at her.

Lawrence's dates with other men started by dozens of engagements and orchids. She and Dr. King argued on their second date, a quiet one, the third and repeated both performances half the times they met. (They're proud people faced with love in their thirties do not easily give in to each other.) Their courtship was fraught with tears as well as joy.)

Dr. King, a dark-haired Southerner with a gentle manner and lighting-Irish eyes, developed a tendency to throw the opposition's flowers out of the window.

Tawney-haired Lawrence, filled with the fire of a dramatic artiste, sometimes forgot herself and played prima donna in the house.

One of their hottest spats ensued when Dr. King, a New York osteopath, declared: "I'll be darned if I'm going to hang around dressing rooms playing prima donna's husband, I'll stick to my office and be waiting for you when you come home from your concerts."

Two months after the night when Dr. King first walked into the star's dressing room with a broken hand, he and Miss Lawrence were married on stage. She sang now in sweetheart voice, sitting on settees. She also wears sweaters, not creations at teas.

In the course of their battle to rebuild a body and a career the Lawrence-King menage broke all the rest of the rules in the book. The couple who refused to hang around a star's dressing room dropped his own work and devoted his life to the role of helpmate.

Dr. King's help is woven into every part of the fabric of his wife's career since he first treated her. While Lawrence was recalled the fact that she would probably never sing in public again, he insisted that his wife would and made arrangements for her first appearance in a Florida church. He was with her on stage at her first concerts. He makes all her appointments for her concert now, even to giving the final decisions on her gowns.

Before Christmas the Lawrence-King home family finished a 1,000-acre farm during which Lawrence appeared in about 20 concerts and sang at many hospitals and camps.

'BIG SHIP' NAVY IN PROSPECT SAYS MINISTER

Two Aircraft Carriers to be Added to R.C.N. Macdonald Tells House

$410,000,000 ESTIMATE

Ottawa, March 10—(CP)—Presenting his $410,000,000 estimate to the Commons, Navy Minister Macdonald reviewed a wide range of navy activity on the Seven Seas, told of a successful fight against the U-boat a nd spoke of a "big ship" navy in prospect.

Touching all phases of naval effort, Mr. Macdonald spoke of acquisition of two cruisers, eight modern-type destroyers and the assembly of two aircraft carriers and added: "This will add to the strength and effectiveness of the Canadian navy."

His comment that these additions would give Canadians experience in handling larger ships after having served in a small navy, was taken to mean a new offensive program for the future has been prepared, an increasingly successful defensive operation in protecting convoys carrying supplies to the battle fronts.

Other than adding that Canada would operate the carriers with her own officers and ratings with British supplying planes and air personnel, Mr. Macdonald did not disclose how. However, it is known that from Vancouver reported at least one of the carriers, in command of Capt. Horatio Nelson Lay, nephew of Prime Minister Mackenzie King already had left there for a battle zone.

Information Disclosed

His comprehensive review included this information:

1. The estimated expenditure for this year of $410,000,000 is about the same as was spent last year, when $400,000,000 was budgeted.

2. Personnel will be enlisted at the rate of 1,000 a month—the same as last year.

3. The navy now has 300 fighting ships, 400 auxiliary craft, a personnel total of about 80,000, 4,000 Wrens and 2,000 officers and enlisted men of the Merchant Navy.

4. Training has been stepped up and more than 16,000 officers and ratings have been given courses in the R.C.N. Barracks—the new mammoth training establishment at Cornwallis, Nova Scotia, will open this year.

5. Casualties in dead, wounded, missing and prisoners since the start of the war now number 1,900.

No Attempt At Leavenue

6. Not a single German submarine made and left the St. Lawrence River or Gulf last year but U-boats crept close enough to cost coasts to lay mines on convoy routes leading to Halifax, resulting in the destruction of one ship.

7. Last year the navy had a hand in the "definite and certain" destruction of eight submarines and in the probable sinking or damaging of seven others. The "definite kills" include three to the credit of Canadian corvettes in the Mediterranean.

8. Canada's main task last year continued to be escort work on the North Atlantic and the proportion of ships being through safely was twice as great as in 1941. From the beginning of the war the R. C. N. has escorted more than 18,000 ships bearing 114,000,000 tons of supplies and troops.

9. Canadian hose of four flighting ships in 1943 were more than made up by 70 additions to the navy and today the ships of war building in Canadian yards, in their material, machinery, guns and other equipment are 91 per cent Canadian product.

10. With nearly 100 ships already built for the British navy, Canada now is building or has on order the same number of ships for that navy.

Tinged With Caution

Mr. Macdonald's story of success set against the enemy was tinged with a note of caution: "The Atlantic campaign is not yet won, but no one can deny that the tide of that campaign turned decisively in our favor during the year."

Later he said: "I have always held the view that no matter what may happen in any other theatre of war, Germany must continue her attacks on our shipping to the end she may be driven out of Africa or out of Sicily and yet continue to fight strongly. But when it comes to the point that Germany lacks the strength or inclination to attack our shipping then we shall know that she is ready to throw in her hand."

He said the past year had seen the most successful defence ever made against submarine attacks with the greatest number of U-boat destructions—"well over 300"—ever recorded. This allied total was better than the total number of ships destroyed in the full period of the First Great War.

In 1942, when the German submarine made an attack in the Gulf of River St. Lawrence, the Minister added however, that the German submarine strength "is still the great as it was at the beginning of 1942 and we have no assurance whatever that the strength will not again be unleashed against trans-Atlantic shipping. Nor is there any guarantee that we shall not yet have to face attacks on shipping in our own coastal zone."

50-Lira Note Sent From Italy By Soldier

Many Butterfly people will remember the experiences of German mark after the last war. Some were sent to families and friends by men serving with the Canadian Army of Occupation following the Armistice. Others bought them and saw them sink to nothing in value as they were customcer than wallpaper.

Differing only in appearance, a 50-Lira note of the Bank of Italy has been received by Mrs. Florence Smith, 1814 Church Street, from her husband, Sergt. Basil Smith, Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment. The banknote was received in as ineligible they could not be read, the letters which were added as follows: M. S. Rashotte, Pte. R. Crawford, Pte. D. Jones, Sgt. Corporal Sgt. R. J. McCaw, CSM. Storm, Sgt. John C. Coles, CSM. Storm, Sgt. Alexander, John Snell, R. C. Gray, F. B. Kelly, Wm. Cobb, Pte. F. Baker, Pte. F. Bennett, R. McNairn, Arthur Miller, Sgt. A. C. Hall, Pte. Frankford, G. Long, Sgt. Lorne Horsley, Jack Thomas, Joseph Johnston, H. S. Thompson, Pte. Wm. Tate, A. Williman, Pte. R. Young, H. B. Cann, Sgt. S. R. Yearwood, J. Wylie, CSM. R. Spiers and L. Cpl. R. Castle.

The last time the Italian lira was worth about five cents on the Foreign Exchange Market, but today there is no record of its present value, as the Italian people are afraid of these banknotes before the war. Those that were accepted as American and Canadians were the "Tourist" Lira which were used by tourists and valid for the payment of hotel bills, train fares and other expenses involved in travelling.

National Fitness Program Outlined

Toronto March 10—(CP)—After outlining the National Fitness program at Wednesday night's banquet of the 37th annual convention of Canadian Bicycle and Sport Goods Dealers Association here, Major Hugh Bland, director of newly appointed National Director of Physical Fitness in the Department of Pensions and National Health, announced he was leaving immediately on a tour of the Dominion.

In an interview, Major Eisenhardt said his schedule would take him from coast to coast for interviews with provincial authorities, physical directorates and sport supervisors.

The survey tour would be followed by a general meeting at Ottawa April 18 of the recently-named provincial representatives to the National Council on Physical Fitness which was created by the National Physical Fitness Act.

Amazing Story of Sten Gun Deadly Rapid Firing Weapon Well Known As People's Gun

Remarkable Weapon Now Used Extensively by Allied Soldiers Was Conceived Following Evacuation of France When Supplies of All Kinds Were Scarce in British—Simplest Weapon of Its Kind in the World

The exciting interesting story of the invention and development of the Sten gun, that deadly, rapid-firing, lightweight weapon which is so popular with the men of the United Forces and is hated by the German troops, is told in considerable detail by Harvey Day, written for "Popular Mechanics," and reprinted in "Readers Digest."

One of the most amazing stories of the war is the story of Britain's Sten gun—the deadly rapid firing weapon that is the simplest weapon of its kind in the world. Conceived at a time of grave emergency, when Britain stood alone, with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, Some of the names of the Sten gun's parents were so ineligible they could not be read, but those which were eligible are as follows: M. S. Rashotte, Pte. R. Crawford, Pte. D. Jones, Sgt. Corporal Sgt. R. J. McCaw, CSM. Storm, Sgt. John C. Coles, CSM. Storm, Sgt. Alexander, John Snell, R. C. Gray, F. B. Kelly, Wm. Cobb, Pte. F. Baker, Pte. F. Bennett, R. McNairn, Arthur Miller, Sgt. A. C. Hall, Pte. Frankford, G. Long, Sgt. Lorne Horsley, Jack Thomas, Joseph Johnston, H. S. Thompson, Pte. Wm. Tate, A. Williman, Pte. R. Young, H. B. Cann, Sgt. S. R. Yearwood, J. Wylie, CSM. R. Spiers and L. Cpl. R. Castle.

Two sub names were Sheppard and Turpin, the first a major, the other a civil servant. Pooling their ideas, engineering and military, they determined to evolve a submachine gun which, for Britain's defence forces—and later her hiring army—could be supplied.

Feverishly, they set to work. Within thirty days a working model was produced. It was imperfect. Time had been too short to build and test adequately.

The first Sten gun was a crude affair lacking the finish of America's Thompson gun, and the weight and solidarity of the German Schmeisser. Yet only the absolutely essential parts were machined to fine limits. The rest was simple, rough—but sufficient for their purpose.

But the performance of Sten Gun I delighted its inventors. It fired at the rate of 500 rounds per 5mm. ammunition a minute. That was almost as fast as the Thompson—more than the firing rate of the Schmeisser. It could be fired from either hip or shoulder. The weight was exactly six and three-quarter pounds. The gun could be dismantled easily and stowed away in the pockets of a soldier's battle dress.

Naturally, modifications and improvements were called for before the gun became battle-worthy. But from the first it was a practical weapon, and none of the subsequent designs have differed in principle.

It was so sound a weapon that Britain's War Office accepted it officially and asked: "What is the gun called?"

"Sten," replied the inventors.

"But why Sten?"

It was explained that the S and the T stood for Sheppard and Turpin while the E and N stood for England.

The cost of the earliest Sten guns worked out to about $15 apiece, which compared favorably with $150, the price of German and American machine guns of that type. At present, because of efficient mass production, Sten guns turned out for $8 each, and it is hoped that this will be reduced eventually to $6 or even less.

The Sten is the simplest weapon of its type in the world. It has only forty-five component parts, and when taken for packing could be put in space 16" x 3". Any infantryman can carry and handle a Sten and eight magazines of ammunition, holding thirty-two rounds.

* * *

When the blueprints were ready for production a search was made in early twentieth was given the task of organizing output. Because he is in government employ his name cannot be revealed. No one in official circles was prepared for the results he achieved. They were sensational. He made a rapid level-up British artificial industries and discovered that no recognized workshops could accept more than a few infinitesimal proportion of his orders. So he started boldly.

Disused premises were requisitioned, and soon a whole series of improvised workshops hummed into activity. Many, even now, stand out as conspicuous by their side as workshops.

In one case carpentry town he decided on a disused bon house, the floor of which was deep in dust and fluff. Into place were swiftly cleaned and a capstan lathe, a vertical drill and a couple of fitting benches were installed.

Then a fisherman with wide sugi-experience was engaged, and under him a keen young apprentice of eighteen. The next step was for the local employment exchange for married women willing to do part-time work. Soon a gang was volunteered. They were promptly trained in rough turning and drilling, as well as light fitting.

Women with Indian shopping bags could be seen arriving at this ben house throughout the day. They put in a few hours' work, then went off to cook dinner, clean house and welcome home tired war-worker husbands. Within a week the accumulative amount of work they put in is tremendous. And soon they increase their skill and keenness. Most of them have husbands in the Forces, and they know that every Sten gun they help to make they feel proud to be allowed to shoulder their burden.

In this particular workshop the bolt of the Sten is turned roughly and stepadvised to another little shop for the last steps.

The young man who organises production had swept away all benches, cut all red tape from the start. He was given a free hand to establish derelict barns, lofts or former coaching inns, disused warehouses and garages, even a mandered. Machines, some almost "antiques," were handed for as the period Britain was desperately short both of time and labour (Cont. Machines that proved inaccurate for fine work were used for rough work. Fine machines, of course, were equipped with excellent jigs and tools to speed up the advanced operations.

In a few weeks the young organist had got London, reporting that actual production was already in full swing. He quarried out a factory in Whitehall's most optimistic surroundings. Government officials were so impressed that they gave him permission to push ahead as fast as he could.

The gigantic task ahead did not daunt the production organizer. Bombing by enemy aircraft was always in his time, so he decided not to allow any of the improvised factories to turn out complete guns (comprising bolt, pin, spring and barrel) but instead to do a number of small improvised factories. In this way, if operations were calculated to finish a single part, the work was carried out in a many different factories. If one of the factories were bombed out of production, the flow would not dry up.

In some of the miniature workshops only turning or drilling was done, in others, milling and so on.

One foreman said, "I can't make out the final use of the parts I turn out, but I do know that every piece simply because I haven't got exactly the right tools to do it—I still achieve the same result—by bending together strips of metal, riveting and soldering them together. Will that do?"

"Excellent," he was told. "Go ahead. We don't mind how you produce the parts so long as they function effectively."

Today more than three hundred little shops throughout Britain are turning out Sten gun parts. Workers in these shops include wives, sweethearts, brothers and fathers of men in the services, as say nothing of women and girl refugees from enemy-occupied countries. The foremen who control the work range from experts employed on key jobs to men long since retired.

One grand fellow who retired from the naval workshops before the war and settled down to peaceful old-age-pensioners, returned gladly to supervise the production of Sten parts. His shop was making bolt-pins at $40 an hour. Then he invented a machine which pepped up production ten times!

As parts are completed they are sent to government ordnance factories and assembled. Twenty per cent, however, are retained for spares.

When the inventors designed the gun they decided on the same bore as the German Schmeisser, so that when Britain's army invades Europe it will use captured German ammunition. But in order to prevent the enemy using captured British ammunition, they so designed the rim of the cartridge that it cannot be gripped and ejected by the extractor of the German gun at sympathy and city rectify that the Nazis would have to scrap every bolt and design new ejectors. But Sten ejection, on the other hand, would throw out German bullets.

Like all machine guns, the Sten is not an accurate weapon beyond 200 yards, but it will kill at two hundred and injure up to six hundred. It is meant to be a deterrent weapon, to blast an enemy who looms up round the corner; a weapon for spraying. It is ideal for ambushing a jittery enemy and for defending house-to-house fighting. With thousands of Sten guns in the hands of vengeful, down-to-earth subject races, Europe should be unpleasant for the Nazis when the time starts!

Those who see the Sten for the first time and note its lightness and fragile appearance, wonder if it will stand the strain of battle. Well, it has been tested in Commando raids with brilliant success. What is more, the German radio says it has already been dropped in Norway in large quantities, and has warned the population that anyone found in possession of a Sten gun will be shot. The Germans have captured a few of these deadly little guns during Commando raids, and know exactly what they can do. But this does not add appreciably to their peace of mind.

The Sten has one peculiarity. During the first hundred rounds the bullets are likely to jam and when the gun is cold almost. A hot swing on the cocking handle will correct this, and as the gun warms up it will fire more and never repeated. Incidentally, the first Sten made is still in excellent condition although it has fired more than one thousand rounds. There is no record of a Sten wearing out.

Only one complaint has been heard about the Sten. A Canadian Commando used a Sten as a club when his ammunition was exhausted and the slender skeleton butt broke in. He complained that the Sten was not solid enough to be used as a two-handed club!

The Sten is truly a people's gun for almost every part is produced by civilians.

GOES TO KINGSTON

Toronto, March 10—(CP)—Acting Lieut.-Col. H. J. Sheffield, executive officer since last September at H.M.C.S. York here, has left for Kingston where he will assume his new duties as officer commanding the Royal Canadian Navy centre.

Cmdr. Plaxton, a native of Toronto and former Liberal member of Parliament for Toronto Trinity, was on loan to the Royal Navy for some years before becoming executive officer at York.

British Nurses On Burma Front

Arakan Front, Burma, March 10—(CP)—When 20 flying ambulances bring back the wounded from the Burmese jungle battlefront, British nurses wait for them at a casualty clearing station not far from the front line.

The nurses, the only white women for 150 miles, carry on their healing in a hospital built of bamboo which sprawls across abandoned rice fields. They work within sound of mortar bombs and bursting shells. They eat the same bully and beans that is the diet for the Seventh Indian Division which is serving on this front.

Capt. D. M. Field of Peterborough, England, is matron of the group which includes Anglian, Irish and Scottish girls. This isn't the matron's first adventure in Burma. She was with the British Army there at the time of the fall of Rangoon and made the long trek back to India on foot with the soldiers and refugees.

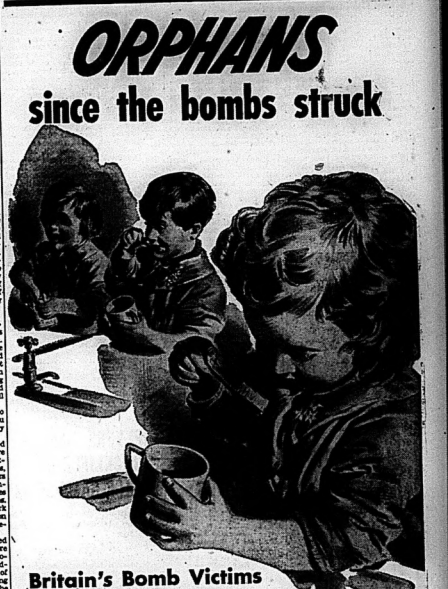
ORPHANS since the bombs struck


Britain's Bomb Victims still need our RED CROSS HELP!
TIME will see the bomb scars erased from Britain's skyline—but never sight or limb restored to many a British "child of the Blitz". Thousands still require hospital care. Thousands will be helpless cripples for life. Thousands are homeless orphans, alone in the world. . . .
Those who bore the battle's brunt when Britain's cities became the war's front line, still look wistfully to you for sympathy and aid. The 857,000 members of the Junior Red Cross help them immeasurably. They maintain 14 War Nurseries in Britain where little bomb victims enjoy Red Cross hospitality, right down to honest-to-goodness Canadian clothing and jam.
But the need is still great—and will grow greater as the sick and starving children of newly liberated lands come within the reach of the Red Cross. Can we deny our help in this merciful work? Your mercy dollars could not possibly be spent more worthily. Give generously!
